LATEST WAR NEWS.

THE INTELLIGENCER'S AFTERNOON DESPATCHES ARE TWELVE HOURS IN ADVVANCE OF THE TORONTO MORNING PAPERS.

Great Battle in Progress on the Banks of the Yalu—Russians Deny that Japanese Have Landed at Port Arthur—Rumors of Damage Done by Vladivostok Squadron Believed to be Untrue.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

Tien Tsin, Feb. 13.—It is reported from Chin Wang Tao, about 150 miles northeast of Tien Tsin, that firing has been heard at sea and it is inferred that another engagement has taken place.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 13.—The report that Japanese troops had landed at Port Arthur with the loss of two regiments is denied authoritatively.

Nothing is known here officially regarding the movements of the Vladivostok squadron, but the reports that it had sunk Japanese transports off Wonsan and destroyed Eakodate are generally discredited, it being pointed out that it is impossible for the squadron to have been in the two places almost simultaneously.

Chefoo, Feb. 13. — That a great land battle is being fought to-day on the bank of the Yalu is the belief of those who have been in constant receipt of despatches from Corea.

More than 90,000 Russian troops have been sent from Mukden towards the Yalu, while the Japanese have been rushing troops aggregating 80,000 from four ports towards Wiju.

WELL-KNOWN AND POPULAR CITIZEN JOINS MAJORITY.

MR. W. H. ADAMS DIED LAST NIGHT FROM COMPLICATION OF DISEASES.

Universal regret was expressed upon the streets this morning when it became known that Mr. Wm. H. Adams had passed away. Although for some days his condition was somewhat serious, a fatal termination was not anticipated. He was the victim of a complication of diseases. Mr. Adams was well-known in the city and vicinity, and was universally respected. He was in every sense of the word a good citizen. For some time past deceased had been conducting a boot and shoe business in the city. In the year 1850 Mr. Adams was born in Wales, being thus in his 53rd year. When a young man he came out to this country, and has made his home in this vicinity for many years. He resided on McDonald Avenue, which is in the Township of Thurlow, just east of the city limits, at which place he died last night. Mr. Adams took great interest in society work, being a prominent member of the Belleville Lodge, A. F. and A. M., and Belleville Lodge, A.O.U.W. Upon many occasions he had been selected to attend the Grand Lodges of these bodies, and his voice was often heard in support of measures which he considered beneficial. In religion he was a member of the Methodist Church and in politics a staunch supporter of the Conservative party. A widow and family of three daughters, Misses Maud, Alice and Louie, and one son, Wm. O., survive. To them will be extended the sincere sympathy of a large circle of friends. The funeral to-morrow afternoon will be under the auspices of the Masons.

OLD MAN DIES AS THE RESULT OF EXPOSURE.

EDWARD WERDEN SOON FOLLOWS HIS CAT—A SAD TALE.

A few days ago an old man named Edward Werden, who lived alone near Plainfield, was found in a deplorable condition. He was suffering from cold and his companion, a cat, was found on the floor frozen stiff. The unfortunate man was brought to the jail, where his wants were attended to, but his condition at the time was such that it was feared he would die, and last night he passed away. The deceased was 78 years of age and had been a resident of the county for many years. He has no immediate relatives here. An inquest was held this afternoon, conducted by Dr. Yeomans, coroner, and the verdict was that the deceased died from natural causes, hastened by exposure.

FORMER RESIDENT LOST LIFE IN SOUTH AFRICA.

ORIN P. DOUGAN, ONCE O. B. C. STUDENT, DROWNED WHILE BATHING.

Word was received in the city yesterday of the death by drowning of Mr. Orin G. Dougan, at Watervaal, South Africa. It appears that the young man was bathing when the unfortunate and sad affair occurred. Several parties saw Dougan's distress and made every effort to save him, but were unable to do so. The body was recovered shortly after. Deceased was a former resident of Madoc, and was known to many in this city, having, some five years ago, been a student of the Ontario Business College.

Mr. Dougan went to South Africa with the last contingent from Winnipeg as a Y.M.C.A. Secretary, and was engaged for some time in missionary work among the natives. He was at the time of his death engaged as a conductor upon a railway, and the letter conveying the sad intelligence stated that the deceased was held in high esteem by the employees and all who knew him.

There are left of immediate relatives to mourn his loss his mother, Mrs. Wm. Dougan; his sisters, Mrs. George Jose, Mrs. Dorland Caverly, and Miss Emma, of Madoc, and Miss Carrie, of Toronto; his brothers, Johnson, of Madoc; Perry, of Balmoral, Manitoba; as well as Harry and Murney, who are students here, the former at Albert College, the latter at Ontario Business College.

CROWN BANK.

Attention is directed to the notice in another column of the investment offered in the stock of the Crown Bank of Canada, which is being freely taken up. Banking, as regulated by "The Bank Act" is universally recognized as perhaps the safest and most profitable business in Canada, having been uniformly successful the opportunity for investment in stock in a new bank in Canada rarely occurs. Mr. John Parker Thomas is the agent here, to whom application for stock, further information, prospectus forms of application, &c., may be made.

Thurlow Resident Dead.

Mr. Alva P. Spencer, a well known resident of Thurlow Township, died last night. Deceased was 70 years of age and was born in Prince Edward County. He had, however, lived the greater portion of his life in Thurlow. Mr. Spencer had been ailing for years. He was a member of the Methodist Church. An aged widow and a family of four daughters and four sons survive.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

A hockey match between the ladies of Lindsay and Peterboro, played at Lindsay, resulted in a score of 12 to 0 in favor of Peterboro. The Lindsay Post starts off its description of the game by stating that "the largest crowd of the season watched the play and the stockings."

Kingston stands a chance for two hockey championships this season, as Queen's victory over Varsity last night gives the Presbyterians a good fighting chance for the intercollegiate championship, and it looks like a good even money proposition that the Beechgroves will capture junior O.H.A. honors. Gracious! With two champions in Kingston the Whig man's chest will stick out like a flour barrel.

There will be an up-to-date hockey match at the rink on Tuesday evening next, when a team picked from the Ritchie Co.'s employees will clash with the Grocers' team. It will be a fast and furious game, and you want to see it even if you have to miss your tea to do so.

The Toronto Telegram seems to agree with The Intelligencer that the intermediate championship, just now, appears to lie between Stratford and Belleville. It says:

"The intermediate race is drawing to a close, and from the way the clubs are running there does not appear to be much danger of the silverware summering in Toronto. And if there's a lot of good hockey going just now, wait a bit. When Stratford and Belleville come together the fur will commence to fly in earnest. And when the dust settles you fellow with the kodak will be able to catch a fair snap-shot of the O.H.A. intermediate champions."

Those Classic City boys, judging by the way they cleaned up the St. George's are fast and clever, and will give our lads a merry time of it.

Just at present, however, we are interested in the game which will take place here on Monday evening next, between the Toronto Marlboros and the Red and White Boys. The Marlboros beat Georgetown handily, and now go into the round with Belleville for home and home games, the first of which will be played here on Monday night and the return game in Toronto on Wednesday. The locals are in fine shape and will have worthy opponents in the "Dukes," who have met and conquered several strong teams this season. The game on Monday should be fast and full of excitement, and it is up to every hockey lover to be on hand at the rink and help the local boys, who have been playing in hard luck this season, and that through no fault of their own.

Hockey lovers in this district will regret to hear of the death of poor "Bobby" Embury, whose death from appendicitis is noted in another column. The deceased lad had a bright future as a hockey player. He was a great dodger, but couldn't dodge the Grim Reaper.

The Printers and Clothiers will come together next Friday, and after the smoke has cleared away the Ready-mades will know how the Russians felt at Port Arthur the other day.

Some results last night were:—Queen's 6, Varsity 1; R.M.C. 8, McMaster 8; Brockville 10, Cornwall 1; Perth 11, Prescott 6.

- Belleville.
- St. Georges.
- Marlboros.
- Georgetown.
- Midland.
- Sudbury.
- Thessalon.
- Watford.
- Stratford.
- Welland.

Two of the above will go out tonight.

The O.H.A. senior series has narrowed down to two clubs, and Perth and the Marlboros will fight it out in home and home games next week.

FORMER RESIDENT DIES IN CLARE, MICHIGAN.

DEATH OF B. W. N. NELSON, FROM PNEUMONIA, AFTER ILLNESS OF ONLY FORTY HOURS.

The Clare, Mich., Sentinel, of January 28, thus reports the death of a former resident of this city:

"The death messenger entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. W. Nelson Sunday and took away to that land from whence no traveller returns their eldest son, B. W. N. Nelson, a young man of twenty-two. Last Friday deceased was at work with his accustomed good cheer in his father's grocery store. In the evening he complained of a cold and retired early. Saturday the symptoms seemed still merely to indicate a severe cold. But late that night he suddenly grew worse. The doctor was called and found pneumonia in its worst form. A second physician was called, but all in vain. The disease was present in its most fatal form and at 3.05 p.m. Sunday the young man expired. The funeral occurred from the home yesterday, Rev. W. J. Hathaway speaking words of consolation to the bereaved family. Interment was made at Cherry Grove.

"B. W. N. Nelson was born at Belleville, Ont., and subsequently moved with his parents to British Columbia and later to Bermidji, Minn. Finding the climate cold there, it was at the young man's request the family moved to Michigan and located at Clare early in December. In Clare he was fast gaining friends and showing marked interest in the work of the Epworth League of the M. E. Church. At a meeting of that society Sunday evening several little incidents were related of his interest in their work and a floral tribute from them on his casket showed their kindly sympathy for the bereaved parents. One brother, Cecil H., survives.

The Success of a Prescription

Depends upon the quality of drugs used. There is as much difference in drugs as there is in other goods. Drugs which have been gathered at the wrong season of the year, or that have stood on a shelf for several years are hardly the best kind to use in a prescription. RUSSIAN TORPEDO BOAT STRUCK MINE

Blown Up At Port Arthur—Four Officers and 91 Men Lost.

ADMIRAL TOGO'S REPORT

Modestly Relates the Fight Off Port Arthur on Feb. 8 and 9.

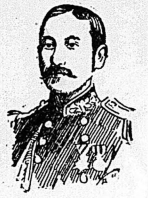
CHINA TO HELP THE JAPS

Confirmation Received at Che Foo That the Forces of Japan and Russia Have Met North of Seoul and Are Engaged in a Fierce Battle—Japanese Loss on Feb. 8 and 9 Was Four Killed and 54 Wounded—Imperial Princes Unharmed —Officers Cool During Action But Elated Afterwards.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 13.—(6 a.m.) —A report has been received from Viceroy Alexieff saying that the Russian torpedo boat transport Yenisei has been blown up as the result of accidently striking a mine at Port Arthur. The Yenisei and Captain Stepanoff, three officers and ninety-one men were lost.

China Will Aid Japan.

Berlin, Feb. 13.—Baron Kurino, the Japanese minister at St. Petersburg, has arrived here. He says China will abandon its attitude of neutrality and aid Japan immediately after the Japanese have gained a decisive land battle.



ADMIRAL URIU,
Who Commanded at Chemulpo.

Fierce Battle in Progress.

Paris, Feb. 13.—A Che Foo despatch says that confirmation has been received there of the report that the forces of Japan and Russia have met north of Seoul, and engaged in a fierce battle.

Three Jap Boats Sunk.

New York, Feb. 13.—The Herald has the following special from Che Foo, dated Thursday:

"Out of four Japanese torpedo boats, which made the first attack on Monday night at Port Arthur, three were sunk with great loss of life. The fourth was a 28-knot boat, and escaped."

ADMIRAL TOGO REPORTS.

Modestly Recounts the Japanese Victory at Port Arthur.

Tokio, Thursday, Feb. 13.—Vice-Admiral Togo's official report of the work of the Japanese fleet at Port Arthur is thus translated:

"After the combined fleet left Sasebo on Feb. 6 everything went as planned. At midnight, Feb. 8, our advance squadron attacked the enemy at Port Arthur. At the time the enemy's advance squadron was for the most part outside of Port Arthur. Of the advance squadron at least the battleship Poltava, the protected cruiser Askold and two others appeared to have been struck by our torpedoes.

"On Feb. 9 at noon our fleet advanced in the offing of Port Arthur Bay and attacked the rest of the enemy's ships about 10 minutes. The result of the attack is not yet known but it is believed considerable damage was inflicted on the enemy, and I believe they were greatly demoralized. They stopped fighting about 1 o'clock, and appeared to retreat into the harbor. In this action the damage to our fleet was very slight, and our fighting strength is not in the least decreased. The number of killed and wounded was 58. Of these four were killed and 54 wounded.

"A report of the engagement of the squadron at Chemulpo has probably been sent you already by Minister Urias. Our advance squadron bore the brunt of the enemy's fire, and after the attack, for the most part, rejoined the fleet. The Imperial Princes on board the ships are unharmed.

"The conduct of all our officers during the action was cool, not unlike that during the ordinary manoeuvres. Since the battle, their spirits have been high, but their conduct was very calm during the battle. This morning, owing to a heavy south wind, there has been no communication between the ships and no detailed reports had been received from each vessel, so I report only the above facts.

"(Signed. Togo."

Want It Kept Dark.

Che Foo, Feb. 13.—The British steamer Fu Ping, when leaving Port Arthur, was fired upon by Russians. Three members of the crew were wounded. The Russians afterwards apologized for firing on the vessel. The Fu Ping upon its arrival at Wei-Hai-Wei filed a protest with the British commissioner. The American consul has reported to the United States Minister Conger that the Russian authorities have refused to allow the American steamer Pleimdes to leave Port Arthur. The Pleimdes sailed from Seattle on Feb. 2 with a cargo of flour.

Will Raise $5,000,000.

New York, Feb. 13.—Consul-General Uchida presided yesterday at a mass meeting in Carnegie Hall attended by about 300 Japanese and many American sympathizers, for the purpose of furthering a plan to raise a fund to aid Japan. Mr. Uchida announced that it was intended to raise $5,000,000. In view of the President's proclamation of neutrality he explained that it would only be permissable for the American citizens to contribute for the support of the Japanese Red Cross Society.

Ordered From Port Said.

Port Said, Feb. 13.—The Austrian collier Java, charted by Russia to proceed to Port Arthur with coal, has been ordered by the Egyptian Ministry of Foreign Affairs to leave here immediately.

MR. MACDIARMID'S BILL.

To Punish Personators the Purpose of the New Measure.

Toronto, Feb. 13.—The Legislature sat half an hour yesterday. Only one bill was introduced. It is an amendment to the Election Act by Mr. MacDiarmid of West Elgin. Its main provisions are: To disqualify persons from appointment as election officials who have ever been reported or found guilty of corrupt or illegal acts at elections; to extend the provisions of the Personation Act so as to give jurisdiction to county and district judges to issue warrants or summonses and to try persons arrested or prosecuted under that act, to extend the act to all municipalities and unorganized territory in the province; to give jurisdiction to county and district judges in prosecutions for corrupt practices under the election laws, the defendant to have the right to elect to be committed for trial before a High Court judge without a jury.

Mr. Eilber moved for a return of correspondence in connection with the appointment of William Coats as registrar of Huron, which had been kept vacant for four and a half years. He will get all but the private correspondence.

To Mr. Preston, the Attorney-General said that there had been complaints that the registrar of Brant was engaged in private business. The registrar said he was not now interested in the Brant Milling Co. The Government is against officials having remunerative salaries engaging in business in competition with others who have not public salaries.

In reply to Mr. Matheson, Attorney-General Gibson said it was not the Government's duty to interfere in the matter of the discontinuance of the Kingston street car service until people from Kingston suggested action.

Mr. Powell and Dr. Nesbitt were told by Hon. Mr. Latchford that it was expected that the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway would be completed by Dec. 31, 1904. The average cost per mile could not be stated until the second lift of gravel had been put on. The rails were laid up to the 57th mile and 80 miles had been graded.

The Minister of Education informed Mr. Hoyle that the patriotic programs issued by the Imperial Order of Daughters of the Empire had been approved by the department, and sent out as requested to several county inspectors, for use in the schools under their supervision.

The total amount paid in railway subsidies since Jan. 1, 1903, was $114,607.32, the Premier informed Dr. Nesbitt.

In reply to Mr. Smythe (Algoma) the Premier said the Government had the registration of voters' lists in the unorganized districts under consideration.

Hon. Mr. Davis informed Dr. Pyne that 2,016 volunteers had received land grants, and that 3,000 applications had been received.

There is Pneumonia On Every Hand

Three Deaths in One Family Recently Arises From Neglected or Uncontrollable Colds.

Pneumonia is second only to consumption in the number of deaths which it causes and like consumption always has its beginning with a cold.

At this season you can scarcely glance over a paper without seeing the record of several deaths from this dread disease.

Cold in the head, fever and chills, a cough which gradually becomes dry and more painful in the chest, difficult breathing, feelings of exhaustion and depression —these are symptoms of pneumonia.

You can prevent and cure pneumonia by the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, the greatest of all treatments for the throat and lungs.

The only safe way is to regard every cold as serious. Think of the dreadful possibilities which accompany every cold. Remember that pneumonia and consumption are the frequent outcome, and cure the cold before it gets beyond your control. By frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine you can quickly break up the cold and guard against dangerous developments. No treatment was ever so successful for this purpose.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 25 cents a bottle, family size (three times as much) 60 cents, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

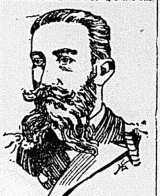
To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every bottle.

THE RUSSIANS SCORE SINK A JAP STEAMER

Five Russian Cruisers Bombard Hakodate, Japan.

Vladivostock Squadron Heard From in Two Different Encounters and Still More to Come—Chases Two Japanese Merchantmen and Only One Steams Away—The Lost Russian Admiral Heard From At Last.

London, Feb. 13.—At last the Russian navy has done something comparable only to the exploit of the United States fleet at Manila—"the greatest sea fight since Trafalgar." On Feb. 11 two Japanese merchant steamers, the Nakanvura Maru and Zensho Maru, were peacefully pursuing their course bound from Sakato to Otara (on the Island of Hokkaido). Off the coast of Herunshi (Okushiri) they were surrounded and shelled by four Russian warships, presumably the Vladivostock squadron, which a few days ago was reported to be frozen up in that harbor. Victory ultimately declared for the Russian squadron—the Nakanvura Maru being sunk. The Zensho Maru escaped with honor and arrived safely at Fukuyama, on the Island of Hokkaido.



CAPT. BEHR,
Who Blew Up the Varlag.

Evidently Japan is not yet mistress of the Eastern Seas, and more will be heard of the daring Vladivostock squadron.

One Steamer Sunk.

Washington, Feb. 13.—The Japanese Legation last evening read the following cablegram, under date of Tokio, Feb. 11: "Two small Japanese ships, Seensho-Maru and Nakon Ouran Maru, while on their way to Otaru, a port on the western coast of Yezo Island, from Sakato, a port on the northern coast of the main Island of Japan, were fired on Feb. 11 by four Russian men-of-war off the coast of Aomori Prefecture, and the latter was sunk, while the former had a narrow escape.

"The Russian men-of-war are still off the coast of Yezo Island. They are supposed to be the first class cruisers which have been shut up at Vladivostock, and tried some time ago to join the main squadron at Port Arthur."

Russians Bombard Hakodate.

London, Feb. 13.—It is reported that five Russian cruisers from Vladivostock bombarded Hakodate, Japan, on Tuesday, the Tien Tsin correspondent of The Standard cables:

Hakodate is on the Island of Hokkaido, the most northern of the three Japanese islands. The harbor there is excellent and the town, containing about 50,000 inhabitants, is well and regularly built. There is a Japanese naval school there.

The Russian armored cruisers Rurik, Gromove and Rossi, the protected cruiser Bogatyr and the transport Lena left Vladivostock several days ago, and their present whereabouts is in doubt.

Admiral Wirenius Found.

London, Feb. 13.—The Russian squadron, under Admiral Wirenius, which vanished into thin air after passing the Suez Canal, about the middle of January, has turned up at Jibutil, the port of French Somaliland. Evidently the gallant admiral is in no hurry to get to the Far East. His squadron has coaled at Jibutil, but will remain there until Feb. 18, for the Russian warships due to Jibutil from Suez. If he then pursues his cruise in the same leisurely fashion, he may be expected at Port Arthur somewhere about midsummer.

Russian Students Called.

Berlin Feb. 13.—The Russian students attached to the technical institute of Carlsruhe, who are subject to military duty, have received orders to return home and join the colors.

Russia Mobilizes.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 13.—An Imperial ukase dated Feb. 10 was issued yesterday. It commands that all the troops in the military establishments in Siberian military districts be placed in readiness for war, that all the divisions in the Far Eastern vice-royalty be brought to war strength, and that the army and navy reserves in the Siberian districts be called for active service. The authorities are empowered to requisition the necessary horses.

It is thought here that the action of the Japanese in flooding Pekin with posters relating to her victories is part of a well laid campaign projected from the beginning to break down Russian prestige in China, and for the purpose of ultimately effecting the union of the races which would make the "yellow peril" a reality.

The Life of Man.

Thousands of people are suffering for the want of life giving current, which nature intended they should possess. They do not live, they simply exist; in the faces of thousands can be read the story of a wasted life and blighted hopes. Joys and pleasures are unknown to them because their vitality is being sapped away by some disease. Many have sought relief in drugs and patent remedies to relieve their mental and physical sufferings. They are soothed for a day or may be for a week, falsely braced up until the effects of the drugs wears off like the momentary bracing up of whiskey. They sink lower in vitality and with the hope exhausted, lose confidence in themselves and decide to abandon all efforts to recover their power, feeling there is no hope for them. All this is caused from a wrecked nervous system or poor digestion, the steam of the system has run down and wants recharging. There is only one thing that will do it and that is electricity. Every nerve in the body is charged by this life giving power and when once lost from over work or other causes has got to be restored before the system works in a healthy state. As we have often said before, don't believe what we say alone, come and get a free treatment to convince yourself. The Gilmour Electric Belt is the only appliance sold to-day which will give the current. A sick person requires to get well. We will show you a list of names of people right here in Belleville who have got cured by the use of this appliance. You can go and see them for yourself, is not that good enough evidence for the truth? You have not got to go to Toronto or any of the other large cities, right here in this city we can refer you to 50. This belt has all the attachments for treating bladder and kidney trouble, varicocele, sexual weakness in any form, rheumatism, neuralgia in the neck and face, sciatica, varicose veins, nervous trouble or paralysis.

EIGHT REASONS

why Scott's Emulsion is an ideal food-medicine.

1. It is partly pre-digested and therefore passes quickly into the blood.

2. It imposes no tax upon the stomach or other digestive organs.

3. It does not cause fermentation such as usually results from ordinary food when the stomach is weak.

4. Its action is mild and even, insuring the greatest nourishment with the least effort.

5. Its quality is always uniform.

6. It feeds and strengthens the bones, blood, nerves and tissues.

7. It is one of the greatest flesh producers known to medical science.

8. It is palatable and agreeable to the taste and easily taken.

Girls Kept in Cages.

It is said that the people of New Britain have a peculiar custom of confining their girls in cages until they reach marriageable age. These cages are built of wood cut from the palm tree and are inside the rude houses. Outside each house is a fence of wickerwork made of reeds. The girls are caged at the age of two or three and are never allowed to go out of the house, yet they seem strong and healthy.

Where Three Is a Crowd.

Tom—I suppose you spent a pleasant evening with your best girl.

Dick—Pleasant? Huh! A fellow can't make love to his girl in a crowd.

Tom—Oh, was there a crowd there?

Dick—Yes, and the chump didn't have sense enough to realize that he wasn't wanted.

GOVERNMENT LAND.

A Plea For Its Reservation For the Actual Settler and Home Maker.

During the last fiscal year, according to the report of the commissioner of the general land office, 22,650,928 acres of the public lands were taken up by private individuals. These enormous figures ought to be sufficient to open the eyes of every one to the fact that our public domain is passing into the hands of private individuals at an alarming rate and convince the people of the urgent need of reform in our land laws. The public lands, it has always been contended, should be for home builders, but it is a fact beyond dispute that but a small portion of the land now passing out of the hands of the government goes to actual settlers or to create homes. This fact, taken in connection with recent exposures of wholesale land stealing by speculaters and syndicates, should arouse the people to demand of their representatives in congress to call a halt in this rapid disposal of the remaining public lands. Repeal the desert land act, timber and stone act and the commutation clause of the homestead act and the stealing of the public domain will stop.

Make it the law that not another acre of government land shall pass to private ownership until the applicant for the same has shown his good faith and real intention to make his home upon the land by actual residence and cultivation for a term of five years, and the occupation of the land speculator and land grabber will be gone. Every bona fide settler who goes upon the land with the intention of making it his home is more than willing to abide by such a law. It is the speculator and public land grabber who have profited by the commutation clause in the homestead act and not the actual settler and home maker. This clause in the homestead law should be repealed without further delay for the protection of the genuine settler who wants to make his home on the land.—Maxwell's Talisman.

First Treasurer of the United States.

On what is called the triangle in the village of Mount Pleasant, in Wayne county, a monument is now being erected over the remains of General Samuel Meredith, the first treasurer of the United States, he having been appointed by President Washington. The legislature at its last session appropriated $3,000 to pay for the monument. As the act required that the memorial be erected over the remains, it was necessary to transfer them to the village green in order to have the monument there, as was desired.

General Meredith was one of the wealthy men of the colonies at the breaking out of the Revolution, and during the progress of the struggle he gave practically the whole of his fortune to the support of the army and the government, and neither he nor his family ever got any of it back.

Names For Peanuts.

Like the American flag, the American peanut is circling the globe, and it is acquiring some queer names in foreign countries.

In England and Scotland peanuts are called "monkey nuts." In Peru, where they are becoming very popular among the natives, they are termed "cacachatas.' In Jamaica, West Indies, the local name is "pindars," and the pindar seller as he goes his rounds sings:

"Pindar dyah, young gentleman;
Pindar dyah, young lady;
Pindar dyah, young gentleman.
Now call you' pindar bwoy."

In West Virginia the country folk call peanuts "gubba peas" and in South Carolina "ground peas."

Lawlessness In Chicago.

An outspoken member of the board of aldermen in Chicago has been expressing his convictions with a freedom and earnestness which are highly refreshing. He talks in this wise: "Chicago is the most lawless city of the country, and a wave of anarchy and outlawry seems to be going over it at present. No one respects the law; no one respects the courts. A few hangings are what Chicago needs. There are policemen enough to patrol the city if they were active. Without more respect for law it would be impossible to preserve order if there were a policeman for every thug."

Resemblances.

"Everybody says the baby looks like you. Doesn't that please you?"

"I don't know," replied Popley. "But I tell you what—I'm glad nobody thinks of saying I look like the baby."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

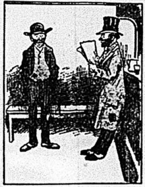
COURTEOUS REPLIES.

He got his big snow shovel
And went out to clear the walk.
Each friend who chanced to see him
Had to stop a bit and talk.
"You're cleaning off the sidewalk?"
The first acquaintance said.
"Why, no," he smoothly answered,
"I'm now asleep in bed."

"Hello, you have to shovel!"
Was the second friend's salute.
"Guess not," he blithely murmured;
"I'm playing on a flute."
"You're shoveling snow, are you?"
The third man had to say.
"Should think you'd see," he answered,
"I'm getting in my hay."

The fourth and fifth were jolly.
"Ah, you've got your shovel out?"
To each he said politely,
"No; it is a waterspout."
To all the bland inquirers
His words were calm and cool.
He thought that they were crazy;
They swore he was a fool.
—Chicago Tribune.

A Definition.



"What's this 'ere word 'ennui' mean?"

"Oh, it's when you're tired of doing nothing and too lazy to do something."

Alleged of Practical Folk.

People who take all things literally are apt to tread on other people's toes. The man who walked in where he saw a sign "Walk In" and who was ordered out was a literal man, and so was he who went into a pawnbroker's shop and demanded 40 shillings because there was a placard in the window that read:

"Look at This Watch For 40 Shillings."

"I looked at it," said he, "and now I want my £2."

The most amusing incident we have heard is that of the countryman who while sauntering along a city street saw a sign:

"Please Ring the Bell For the Caretaker."

After reflecting for a few minutes he walked up and gave the bell such a pull that it nearly came out by the roots. In a few moments an angry faced man opened the door.

"Are you the caretaker?" asked the bell puller.

"Yes. What do you want?"

"I saw that notice, so I rang the bell, and now I want to know why you can't ring the bell yourself!"—Tit-Bits.

A New Candidate.

"Did you see dat talk de Chicago doctor got off de odder day about de danger and de foolishness of bathing?"

"Naw, I didn't see it, Weary. Wot's de guy's name?"

"His name is Robertson."

"Den I nominates him for president of de United States on a no soap platform, and I calls upon de hosts of de great unwashed to rally to his support. Down with de bathtub! Dat's our motto."

"And death to de wash rag! Hooray!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Pleasant For John.

"John, dear," said the sick man's wife, "I'll have to run away from you for an hour or so today. I have to get the material for a new dress that the dressmaker"—

"But," complained the sick man, "do you think it is right to be thinking of dress while I am so sick?"

"Why, John, it will be all right no matter what happens. It's a black dress."—Philadelphia Record.

As He Heard It.

When the Sunday school superintendent read the closing words of the book of Job, "And Job died, being old and full of days," he said to the children:

"Now, can anybody tell me the cause of Job's death?"

And a timid little boy on a back seat piped out:

"He was fully dazed, sir!"—New York Times.

Perverse.

He—Won't you let me give you just one kiss before I go?

She—Will just one satisfy you?

He—Yes, darling.

She—Then I won't give it to you.—Standard.

PETER RYAN'S SOFT SNAP.

(Sarnia Canadian.)

Mr. Peter Ryan is one of the Barnacles who appears to be doing pretty well. It was Mr. Ryan who acted as auctioneer at the recent sale of Ontario timber limits, and for this afternoon's work at the sale the Ontario Government paid him $9,218.34, being at the rate of about $2,000 per hour. In the public accounts of last year Mr. Ryan is shown to have received $5,000 and there is in this year's estimates an additional $4,218.34 set down for the payment of balance of the fee. The Ontario Government is certainly liberal with the people's money to its friends.

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

The game arranged here for to-night with the Marlboros of Toronto has been postponed, owing to certain action of the O.H.A. executive. The trouble, we are informed, is caused by Smith's Falls and Peterboro people, who protest Mr. McMillan, of Belleville, on the residence rule, and for "general reasons." The matter came up for discussion on Saturday afternoon, before the sub-committee of the O.H.A., and things waxed exceedingly warm. Mr. Francis Nelson, sporting editor of The Globe, who is vice-president of the O.H.A., was chairman of the meeting in the absence of Mr. John Ross Robertson, now absent in Egypt. Mr. Nelson, according to our informant, was convinced of the soundness of Belleville's position, and, rather than see an injustice done to this city's club, resigned his office and vacated the chair. The meeting, being thus left without a chairman, had to adjourn till to-night, when Mr. Porter, our representative on the executive, will face the foe in defence of Belleville's rights, and, if what we hear is true, will seriously jar a few other clubs before Manager Trualsch's men go down and out.

People who should know say there is no doubt at all that Belleville will come out with flying colors, and the games with the Marlboros, it is expected, will be played on Wednesday and Friday of this week, instead of Monday and Wednesday. It is hard to believe that Peterboro people are mixed up in a shady affair of this kind, but our informants are positive that such is the case. It is alleged that the Peterboro club is practising hard every night, almost, and whisper knowingly that they have "something up their sleeves." As our informant puts it: "They probably think that, with the Belleville team thrown out, they would be accorded the championship of Group 2.

If the story is true, it shows, on Peterboro's part, a poor return for Belleville's fairness toward the northern town after the first match with their team, when they played a man who was ineligible owing to the fact that he had already played in another league this season. Belleville could have protested the game, but the local club wants to win its games on ice, not on paper. But mark the return for its fair-mindedness!

However, we shall see what we shall see. Messrs. Trualsch and McMillan left at noon to-day for Toronto, and will appear before the full executive to-night. We hope and believe that body will give Belleville fair play, and that's all we ask.

That Stratford bunch must be a fast crowd. They beat the St. George's, on the Mutual St. rink, on Saturday night, by 10 to 0, thus winning the round by 20 to 0.

The game next Friday night, between the Printers and Clothiers, should be a swift affair. Some of the Printers, it is said, can skate from one end of the rink to the other in a little over two minutes. Nothing slow about that.

Toronto Telegram: "What will Stratford do to St. George's II.? said a man who ought to know last night. "Well, they'd do just the same thing to Saints' seniors if they got the chance. They're a great team those Stratford chaps, and look like intermediate champions of the best kind. What will they do to Belleville? Well, Belleville will do pretty well if they got along far enough to meet Stratford. They've got to do with that Midland bunch on their way to Stratford. And when you're talking of championship possibilities, don't forget to mention Midland."

HOCKEY.

"Oxfords" Beat "Happy Thoughts."

The return hockey match between the employees of Lewis & Co. and Wm. McGie or, in other words, the representatives of the "Oxford" and "Happy Thought" ranges was played between 10 and 11 o'clock on Saturday night and the "Oxfords" were again triumphant. Despite the late hour at which the match was played there was a large crowd of spectators present, not a few being ladies. From the applause at times which greeted the players it would be difficult to determine which team had the greater number of admirers in the rink. It was to say the least a great match and from the commencement to the finish the onlookers were kept in good humor. Both teams worked hard for supremacy and at times the play was furious, if not fast. It was a few minutes after 10 o'clock when Mr. John Gordanear, the referee, sounded the bell, and the teams were called to the centre to receive their instructions. At half-time the score was 2 to 1 in favor of the "Oxfords." The final score was 3 to 2 in favor of the Lewis combination, this being their second victory. The teams and their positions were as follows:

Lewis	Position	McGie
	Goal
Bradden		Boyle
	Point
Hawley		Coulden
	Cover point
Hogan		Campbell
	Rover
Barragar		Perkins
	Centre
Deacon		Diamond
	Right Wing
Addison		Robinson
	Left Wing
Geary		Frechette

R. Bell and G. Brown were goal umpires and J. H. Reeves held the time piece.

Mutes Victorious.

On Saturday afternoon a team from the Deaf and Dumb Institution played a team representing our High School. It proved to be a rather one-sided affair, the silent players being altogether too swift and clever for the High School boys. Amongst the visitors were some excellent players. The score at the finish was 7 to 2 in favor of the Mutes who were naturally elated over their victory. Mr. Winchester was referee, filling the position most acceptably.

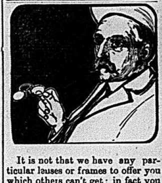
MALTEX BREAD.



It is not that we have any particular lenses or frames to offer you which others can't get; in fact you might get the exact articles from almost anyone "selling glassess." But, we DO lay particular stress upon the superiority of our expert Optician's care and ability. He is just as careful in fitting the frame as the lenses.

Our Glasses are always "becoming" to the wearer, for we make it our business to have them so.

AT DEATH'S DOOR.—DYSPEPSIA CONQUERED.—A GREAT MEDICAL TRIUMPH.—Gentlemen,—My medical adviser and others told me I could not possibly live when I commenced to use Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery for Dyspepsia. My case was one of the worst of its kind. For three years I could not eat meat and my weight decreased from 219 to 119 lbs. All the food I took for thirteen months previous to taking the Vegetable Discovery consisted of milk. I am now entirely cured and have regained my usual weight, can eat anything with a keen relish and feel like a new man. I have sold over thirty dozen Vegetable Discovery since it cured me, as I am well-known and people in this section know how low I was, and thought I could not possibly be cured. They are eager to try this grand medicine. It certainly saved my life as I never expected to recover when first I commenced using it. I am not exaggerating anything, but feel glad to be able to contribute this testimonial and trust it may be the means of convincing others of its merit as a certain cure for Dyspepsia.

Signed, JEAN VALCOURT

The Flagging Energies Revived.—Constant application to business is a tax upon the energies, and if there be not relaxation, lassitude and depression are sure to intervene. These comes from stomachic troubles. The want of exercise brings on nervous irregularities, and the stomach ceases to assimilate food properly. In this condition Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will be found a recuperative of rare powder, restoring the organs to healthful action, dispelling depression, and reviving the flagging energies.

HAD LA GRIPPE.—Mr. A. Nickeson, farmer, Dutton, writes: "Last winter I had La Grippe and it left me with a severe pain in the small of my back and hip that used to catch me whenever I tried to climb a fence. This lasted for about two months, when I bought a bottle of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil and used it both internally and externally, morning and evening, for three days, at the expiration of which time I was completely cured."

JAPANESE ATTACK ON PORT ARTHUR

Mikado's Troops Defeated With Heavy Losses.

400 SABRED BY COSSACKS

6,000 Press On to Dalny, Which Jap Fleet Bombards.

PORT ARTHUR IS CLOSED

Japanese Take a Russian Coaling Station at Chinghaiwen—Railroad Behind Port Arthur Has Been Blown Up—Eighty Japanese Officers and Men Captured By Russians—British Vessels Unlawfully Detained at Port Arthur—McCallam, Special Correspondent of London Daily Mail, Arrested at Port Arthur.

London, Feb. 15.—The Daily Mail's Port Arthur correspondent, under date of Feb. 12, says:

"Official advices state that the Japanese landed 600 soldiers near Talienwan with disastrous results, 410 being sabred by Cossacks. The remainder escaped to their ships. It is further stated that the Japanese landed at Dove Bay, where 30 of them were killed and the remainder retreated."

Japs Defeated.

The Daily Mail's Newchwang correspondent, under date of Feb. 11, cables.

"According to official Port Arthur telegrams, the Japanese landed a force yesterday at Pigeon Bay, West Port Arthur. They were then attacked by troops and by the batteries and were defeated with heavy losses."

Port Arthur Sealed.

The Tokio correspondent of The Times, cabling under date of Feb. 12, says: "It is said that the Japanese squadron has sealed Port Arthur."

The Daily Telegraph's Shanghai correspondent under date of Feb. 12, says it is reported that the Japanese have bombarded Dalny and landed marines.

"The Times' Weihaiwei correspondent says that on the morning of Feb. 10, the Japanese occupied Chinghaiwen, a Russian coaling coaling station, close to Masampho.

Alexieff Isolated.

The correspondent of The Daily Express at Pekin, in a cablegram, dated Feb. 12, reports that Viceroy Alexieff is practically isolated, direct communication between Port Arthur and Vladivostock being suspended. He adds that the railroad behind Port Arthur has been blown up, and that 6,000 Japanese troops have landed near Dalny.

Eighty Japanese Captured.

New York, Feb. 15.—The American's correspondent at Cho Foo cables: Outpost fighting on the Yalu has begun and the Russians have captured eighty Japanese officers and men. The Japanese army at present gathered at Wiju, or within a few miles of that point, is said to number 80,000. The Russian force which is being rushed across Manchuria to meet this force consists of 90,000 men of all arms.

Port Arthur Closed.

Port Arthur, Feb. 15.—The Russian Consul here gave notice to-day that Port Arthur was closed to merchant ships. Great excitement was caused by the report that the steamer Wenchow, with 200 Japanese on board, on attempting to leave the port was fired upon and seized.' She had awakened the suspicions of the harbor police a fortnight ago, and Russian soldiers kept close watch upon her.

A strong protest has been lodged by United States Minister Conger in the case of the steamer Pleiades. This vessel has been virtually seized and an application for her departure refused. British vessels are being similarly treated. McCallam, the special correspondent of the London Daily Mail has been arrested at Port Arthur.

Port Arthur Will Fall.

London, Feb. 15.—The Nagasaki correspondent of The Daily Telegraph expresses the conviction that Russia is quite unable to hold the Liaotung peninsula and that Port Arthur is bound to fall in time, even without an assault.

A statement that China will maintain neutrality is published in Pekin.

It is also reported that the Siberian Railroad has been wrecked in six places, covering a distance of seventy miles.

The Tien Tsin correspondent of The Standard, under date of February 11, says the British, American, French, German and Italian Ministers have jointly notified the Russian and Japanese Ministers that no hostilities will be allowed on Chinese soil, outside of Manchuria.

19,000 Japs at Chemulpo.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 15, 2.45 a. m.—A communication from Viceroy Alexieff just received confirms the report of the landing of 19,000 Japanese troops at Chemulpo. The Viceroy adds that reports have been received of attempts to cut the telegraph wires along the Chinese Eastern Railway, and also to destroy one of the abutments of the Sungari bridge. These attempts, he adds, were immediately detected and decisive measures taken to guard the railway.

The mobilization of troops is being successfully carried out. Gen. Bazilewski, chief engineer, reports that the Port Arthur forts were not damaged during the bombardment.

Martial Law in North.

Valadivostock, Feb. 15.—Martial law has been proclaimed here. Those Russians who have no provisions must leave within two weeks. Russians with eight months provisions may stay in the meantime, but if the port is blockaded, every one must go beyond the forty verst zone. One thousand Japanese, including the commercial agent, leave to-morrow in the steamship Batavia. The remainder will go to Khabarovsk, in Eastern Siberia.

10,000 Chinese Fighters.

300,000 Called to Colors.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 15.—The mobilization of the reserves in Siberia and the Kazen district calls to the colors 300,000 men. All men who have served five years in the army and are under 43 years of age must report. This will result in the disorganization of daily life in this part of the Empire, and it will have an ill effect upon every profession and calling.

France Is Neutral.

Paris, Feb. 15.—The French Government has declared its neutrality in connection with the war between Russia and Japan.

Japs Beaten Back.

Che Foo, Feb. 15.—It is reported that 12,000 Japanese troops were landed at Dove Bay last Wednesday morning and that they were met by the Russians, who engaged them in a hand-to-hand fight. The reports say the Japanese were driven back. It is reported that Japanese troops have been landen 40 miles further west. All foreign steamers that have left Dalny have heard nothing of the Japanese fleet or army.

Orders Dictator's Arrest.

Seoul, Feb. 15.—The Japanese Consul has advised the Emperor of Corea to arrest Yi Yong Yik, who has been practically a dictator, and who was very friendly to Russia until there was a danger of Japanese predominance. Two thousand Russians have arrived at Kapsad, at the headquarters of the Yalu River. The Japanese are constructing a telegraph line from Seoul.

Fear For 400 Japs.

Che Foo, Saturday, Feb. 13.—There are 400 Japanese still in Port Arthur, it is said, and there is some uneasiness concerning their safety. Refugees who have arrived here assert that they were thrown into prison and their money and clothing taken.

Head of Russian Army.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 15.—A telegram from Khakarovsk announces that Gen. Linevitch has been appointed to the supreme command of the Russian army in Manchuria.

Traffic Suspended.

Yokohama, Feb. 15.—All traffic between Hakodate and Aemori has been suspended, owing to Russian raiders.

Corean Emperor With Japs.

Tokio, Feb. 15.—The Japanese Minister at Seoul yesterday had a protracted audience with the Emperor of Corea. The events of the last few days have had an enormous effect upon the Emperor, who has been living at home for weeks past, in an agony of indecision. He is now convinced that Japan is going to win the present war, and has suddenly become pro-Japanese and ranged himself definitely on the side of Japan.

BOODLERS IN LAMBTON.

Mr. Hanna, M.P.P. Declares There Is Evidence to Prosecute "the Machine" After the Election.

Petrolea, Feb. 15.—Victoria Hall was packed to the doors to hear R. L. Borden Saturday night. Mr. Armstrong, the candidate, and Mr. Borden, were given fine receptions.

Mr. Hanna made a big impression on his hearers by deliberately stating that boodlers were working the machine in Watford and Petrolea, and that the proper parties had the evidence in their possession and that they will be prosecuted after the election.

Mr. Gamey at Cookstown.

Cookstown, Feb. 15.—One of the largest political meetings ever held in the County of Simcoe gathered to hear R. R. Gamey Saturday, and the audience included many ladies. The Young Conservative Association gave Mr. Gamey an address of welcome read by Dr. Alex. McKay. Mr. Gamey spoke for three hours and was listened to attentively throughout.

F. A. Ross For Monck.

Wellandport, Feb. 15.—The Conservatives of the electorate district of Monck Saturday tendered the nomination for the next provincial contest to F. A. Ross of Wellandport, who contested the county in the last election, and it was accepted in the course of a fine address.

Skated Down the Lake.

Toronto, Feb. 15.—Two venturesome skaters yesterday accomplished the remarkable feat of skating down the lake from Hamilton beach to Toronto. They were W. Smith of Hamilton Beach, who had waged that it could be done, and W. Jarvis of Burlington, who accompanied him on the spur of the moment. They left at 9.20 a.m., reached Oakville for dinner at 11.30, and arrived at Port Credit at 3 p.m., reaching the Toronto docks at 4 o'clock. The voyageurs went back by train last night.

France and Siam.

Paris, Feb. 15.—The danger of a conflict between France and Siam has been dissipated by the signing last evening of a treaty delimiting the frontier between Siam and Cambodia, a French protectorate in Indo-China, securing substantial territorial and economic advantages to France and an increase of her political influence in the country.

New York, Feb. 15.—Michael Davitt, who arrived yesterday, declares that home rule for Ireland is sure.

Murdered in Low Resort.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Feb. 15.—Joe Callahan, a bartender in the Fallsview Hotel, a low resort, near the cantilever bridge, was stabbed to the heart by James Tyson during a fight in the place about 3 o'clock yesterday morning. The hotel is run by John L. Frank and his wife. The murdered man's wife is a Canadian from Stamford township. She was a domestic in the hotel and witnessed the stabbing.

Three Deaths By Fire.

Montreal, Feb. 15.—A small fire which took place late Saturday at the corner of St. Gabriel and Notre Dame streets was attended by the loss of three lives. The dead are: Frank Clow, aged 18, residence 1,816 St. Lawrence street; Louis Desjardins (supposed to be aged 45), and Miss Chauvin, a typewriter. Several were injured.

Died From Exposure.

Belleville, Feb. 15.—Edward Welden, 78 years of age, died at the jail Saturday. He lived near the village of Plainfield and was found by the neighbors a few days ago in a destitute condition, his only companion, a cat, being frozen to death alongside his bed.

Guarding the Pontiff.

Rome, Feb. 15.—The arrest of a crank seeking an audience with the Pope has caused precautions to be adopted to insure his safety. Armed men now watch over him during his walks in the Vatican.

Hanna Can't Recover.

Washington, Feb. 15.—All hope of Senator Hanna's recovery has gone. Mr. Dover stated at 8.45 last night that there is no chance for life.

No Man Or Woman Can Have Dyspepsia

And Still Be Agreeable, Attractive and Popular—Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Are a Certain, Safe and Natural Cure.

THEY WILL MAKE YOU LOOK PLEASANT

There is nothing that will put you to the front so rapidly in the business or social world as a cheerful disposition and a pleasant appearance. Other things being equal people will go out of their way to give the fellow a lift who always wears a cheerful countenance. The man or woman with a cranky disposition and a sour face will always meet with an indifferent if not a chilly reception. The commercial traveller, who is the recognized business barometer, appreciates better than anyone the value of this rule and governs his actions accordingly.

Dyspepsia destroys all the agreeable qualities that enter into a man or woman's make-up. It is almost a human impossibility for anyone with a severe case of dyspepsia to look pleasant. The continuous, miserable, cast-down feeling is bound to make itself shown in the appearance and conversation.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the sufferer's certain cure. They are so recognized all over the world. The cures they have brought about and the happiness they have caused and the suffering they have relieved has made their name a house-hold word in all the English speaking world.

The reason that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are a certain cure is that they are a natural cure. There is nothing to prevent them curing. They contain the essential ingredients of the digestive fluids of the stomach and simply do the identical work of the stomach, relieving that weakened organ and permitting it to rest and recuperate. Could anything be more simple or natural? They are bound to cure. They cannot help themselves. It is just like putting a new stomach into a man — if that were possible—and letting the old one go off on a vacation. Rest is what it needs. Nature will do her own work of restoration, never fear.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by all druggists at 50 cents a box.

All druggists means all druggists. They have become so necessary to the people that the druggist simply has to keep them anyway. There are other remedies that he can make much more money on if he could sell them, but he can't. He will not take chances on losing his customers by not always having on hand a supply of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

MAKE PEACE WITH YOUR STOMACH

You Are Certain to Lose if You Attempt the Use of Force and Violence.

You cannot force your stomach to do work that it is unable and unwilling to do. It has been tried time and time again with always the same result. The stomach is a good and faithful servant; but when pushed beyond the limit it rebels. Some stomachs will stand much more abuse than others, but every stomach has its limit; and when that limit is reached, it is a very dangerous and unwise proceeding to attempt to force it into doing further work. The sensible and reasonable course is to employ a substitute to carry on the work of digestion and give the stomach an opportunity to recuperate and regain its lost strength.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the only perfect substitute to take up and carry on the work of tired, worn out stomachs. They are natural and easy in their work and cause no disturbance in the digestive organs. They contain all of the essential elements that make up the gastric juice and other digestive fluids and will digest any food that a strong, healthy stomach will, and do it in the same way. They work independently of surrounding conditions, and the fact that the stomach is weak or diseased does not influence them at all in their useful and effective work. They will digest food just as well in a glass jar or bottle as they will in a stomach. You can see that for yourself by putting one of them into a jar with a square meal and some water to enable it to work.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, by thus relieving the stomach of its work, enables that organ to rest and recuperate and regain its health and strength. The process is perfectly natural and plain. Nature will heal the stomach just as she heals a wound or a broken limb, if she is not interfered with and is permitted to do her work in her own way. All interference is prevented by Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by druggists everywhere at 50c a box, and if you are afflicted with dyspepsia, one box will make you feel fifty times better. You will forget you have a stomach and rejoice in the forgetfulness. No druggist would be so shortsighted as to try to get along without Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, for they are so popular and also so well known for the good they have done and the happiness they have caused that any druggist caught without them would lose the confidence of his customers and be regarded as below the standard. His business would suffer as a result and his patrons would go to other stores and buy their other drugs there as well as their Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

DO NOT WEAR A LONG FACE.

It is a Great Handicap in All Business and Social Relations.

The man who looks as if he had lost his last friend is in no danger of being crushed by the jam of the new ones unless he "cheers up." People are not going out of their way nowadays to associate with the man of mournful and melancholy appearance. They are, afraid he will tell them his troubles and they will steer clear of him as they all have plenty of their own.

The most universal cause of the forlorn and hopeless appearance today is dyspepsia. It unfits a man for every duty of life and causes him to become despondent and gloomy and necessarily his looks do not belie his feelings. He appears cast down and dejected and becomes a burden to himself and humanity in general.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the dyspeptic's certain relief. They do the work that his stomach is unable to do and by relieving that organ of its burdens, permit it to regain its health and strength and again become useful and active in its functions. They contain all the essential ingredients that enter into the digestive fluids and secretions and they actually take up the work and do it just as a healthy, sound stomach would.

By this means a man can go right ahead with his work and eat enough to keep him in proper working condition. His system is not deprived of its necessary nourishment as it is in the case of the "starvation cure" or the employment of some of the first class chicken foods now on the market. Starvation, even if it were a good thing, could not be continued long enough to effect a cure; for a disordered and worn out stomach is not going to become strong and healthy in two or three days.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets act naturally because they contain natural digestives. The principal component parts are aseptic pepsin, malt diastase and other ingredients with like properties that do the work regardless of the condition of the stomach. There is no unnatural or violent disturbance of the digestive organs as the result of their action. In fact, the existence of the stomach is entirely forgotten as soon as they have had time to begin their operations. They also possess very curative and healing properties and assist the stomach in getting well, while relieving it of its work. They perform the duties of both nurse and physician.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by all druggists.

IS YOUR STOMACH ON A STRIKE?

There is Nothing to Prevent You Employing a Substitute to do Its Work.

There is such a thing as forbearance ceasing to be a virtue even in the case of one's stomach. There is no question but that some stomachs will stand a great deal more wear and tear and abuse than others but they all have their limit and when that limit is reached the stomach must be reckoned with as sure as fate. The best way and really the only effective way to treat your stomach when it rebels is to employ a substitute to do its work. This will give the weakened and worn-out organ an opportunity to rest and regain its strength and health.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets relieve the stomach of its work by taking up the work and doing it just as one set or shift of workmen relieves another. They actually digest the food in just the same manner and just the same time as the digestive fluids of a sound stomach do. In fact when dissolved in the stomach they are digestive fluids, for they contain exactly the same constituents and elements as the gastric juice and other digestive fluids of the stomach.

STARVING

In the Midst of Plenty.

That's what people with poor digestion are doing every day. They have no appetite or if they do have an appetite and eat what they require it does them no good, because the stomach does not digest it and the fermenting mass of food becomes a source of disease, of headaches, sleeplessness, languor and the thousand and one symptoms of disordered digestion.

...Stuart's... Dyspepsia Tablets

promptly relieve and cure all forms of indigestion. They have done it in thousands of cases and will do it in yours. The reason is simple. They digest the food whether the stomach works or not and that's the whole secret. For sale by all druggists, 50 cents a package. Address,

England's "Underpaid" Clerks.

English government clerks do not serve an unappreciative nation. A chief clerk in the estate duty office at Somerset House receives $4,000 a year for his work during the seven hours of each lawful day (except Saturday) from 10 o'clock till 5. He has lately enjoyed in addition the valuable privilege of working overtime at double rates, and the opportunity has been turned to most profitable account. One chief clerk in six months earned $1,500 extra. For this addition to his emoluments he remained on duty till 8 o'clock instead of going home at 5. Two principal clerks, with salaries of $3,500, received $725 each extra, while two assistant principal clerks, with salaries of $2,800, had $625 each.

Athletic Senator Aldrich.

There is not a more athletic figure in all the senate than that of Mr. Aldrich of Rhode Island. He is always trained down to fighting weight, his step is as quick and elastic as a boy's, his bearing that of a muscular man. So easily active and unconsciously strong is the Rhode Islander that there is a fascination in watching him on the senate floor. The secret is said to be in his devotion to the ancient game of golf. Near his residence in Providence he possesses expansive acres on which are his own private links. Many a morning during the long summer and autumn months finds him bright and early whacking the elusive ball and chasing it up hill and down dale.

Taming of Diphtheria.

The hospital report of the metropolitan asylums board of London upon the percentage of cases of diphtheria that result in death shows what a marvelous result has been wrought by the introduction of antitoxin. The case mortality for twelve years has been:

	Per cent before antitoxin.		Per cent after antitoxin.
1889	40.74	1895	22.55
1890	33.55	1896	20.80
1891	30.63	1897	17.50
1892	29.55	1898	15.50
1893	30.42	1899	14.05
1894	29.64	1900	12.01

Careful nursing had done its best by 1894. Antitoxin has more than halved the rate in six years.

A New Milk Tester.

Milk varies in viscosity with composition and temperature, and a new apparatus called the "lacto viscometer" is regarded by French physicists as solving the problem of a simple test for milk. It consists of a tinned copper reservoir mounted on a tripod, with a fine glass tube as outlet. When the reservoir is filled with a sample of the milk the stopcock is opened, and the time required for the escape of the liquid is noted in seconds, with the temperature, and reference to a table shows the exact character of milk corresponding to these data.

TENDENCY OF THE TIMES.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

SELECTIONS

EACH COLOR TO ITSELF.

How the Cherokee Nation Gets Over the Race Problem.

The race problem in the Cherokee Nation is solved to the general satisfaction of the three races concerned and the intermediary mixed bloods. In the location of homes the Cherokee full bloods and negroes are mostly in settlements. The intermarried whites largely are in the towns and territory contiguous to each other. The Cherokee speaking citizens much prefer to associate together.

In the nation there are thirty schools attended by full blood Cherokee children and seventeen by negro children. The negro blood schools are not so by legal requirement, but as a corollary of their preference to live near each other. The Cherokee and negro do not intermarry or socially mingle. Two seminaries and an orphan asylum are attended by full bloods and mixed bloods only, the colored high school by negroes only.

In the incorporated school districts whites and Indians attend the same schools, and race prejudice and undue feeling on either side are being lost in fellowship and friendship cultivated in the class room and on the playground. Both sides are better satisfied in the combined schools than when they are kept separate. Full bloods seem to mingle as freely with white renters and their families of good character as they do with mixed bloods.

Of the 38,500 citizens of the Cherokee Nation the best statistical information gives about 8,500 full bloods, 3,200 intermarried whites, 22,800 mixed bloods and 4,000 freedmen.

The "Scrapple."

The Philadelphia scrapple season is now at its height, and in the three or four big scrapple factories of the city about 50,000 pounds of the delectable compound are produced weekly. Each factory prides itself on the peculiar flavor of its scrapple, just as breweries pride themselves on the flavor of their beer. There are, indeed, scrapple connoisseurs in this city, men who, when a dish of scrapple is served to them, can say unerringly, "This is Brown's" or "This is Smith's" or "This is Jones' scrapple." Many Pennsylvania farmers, too, make their own brand and take a pride in it and have a host of followers who declare there is no scrapple like Farmer Alburger's or Farmer Schultz's or Farmer Diffenderfer's, as the case may be. Scrapple is shipped in refrigerator cars to many distant states and in many different cities. Philadelphia scrapple is a favorite dish upon the breakfast menu.

WHAT IS WORN.

Wide Cuffs on Coats—Chinese Lamb the Latest In Fur.

The very widest possible cuffs are used on coats, and these are lined with white satin slashed and filled in with yellowish or cream white lace.

The three-quarter loose coat and the little loose coat reaching to the waist line and merely belted in at the back are both very smart.

Most of the trimming of hats seems to be on the underside of the brim or drooping on the hair.

Cluny lace and moleskin are mingled in fancy neckwear to go with rather severe tailor made suits, and white chiffon neckwear is decorated with touches of ermine.

CLOTH TAILOR MADE.

Some beautiful evening gowns are carried out in royal blue net trimmed with sequins of the same color, and an equally good effect is obtained in brown net having bronze sequins. The waist of the latter gown would be smart enlivened by a few shaded orange flowers.

White Chinese lamb is the latest thing in fur. It is very effective, closely resembling the baby lamb, but is of a much flatter description. These coats are usually made three-quarter length and lined with delicately tinted Persian brocades.

The picture shows a fine cloth tailor made. The blouse has an inner vest of spotted panne, and the skirt is tucked on the hips and finished with three bands around the bottom.

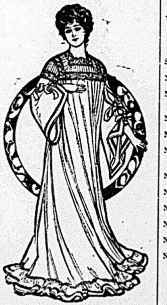
Costumes For the House and For the Street.

Afternoon reception gowns are made in all the lighter clinging fabrics trimmed with tiny gaugings, plaitings, ruchings and entre deux of lace.

Very attractive little ties are made of fur in sable, ermine or moleskin.



UP TO DATE NIGHTGOWN.

These fasten in a loose knot around the throat and are finished off in black and white or with fringe or frills of chiffon to match.

Although some people do not like them, dressmakers continue to trim frocks with ruchings of taffeta or satin. On the heavier gowns some of these are very broad and have an edging of fur. Between these ruchings there are bands of gauging two or more inches wide, and in many cases velvet is used as well. So dresses are quite elaborately worked up.

The three-quarter length coat still continues to be the favorite because it is easier to walk in and because it shows an attractive glimpse of the gown underneath. These three-quarter coats are particularly becoming worn with a much frilled skirt, the frills just showing below the coat.

The picture shows an extremely up to date nightgown made of white china silk. It has a yoke of tuckings and insertion and very wide sleeves held together by ribbon bows. The ruffle at the bottom is a pretty addition and gives a flare around the feet.

CHAPTER I.

HE MAN WITH THE STRANGE EYES.

eing more or less of a dutiful son s with no little compunction that I in this narrative, for it nearly con- ns my father, and I fear he will e none too well out of the ordeal. what I have to relate is so remark- e that for its singularity alone I hope to be pardoned any lack of l piety. And perhaps, when all is l and done, my father, though he not cut an irreproachable figure, appear not quite a contemptible It must not be forgotten that I knew the wreck of him; the stout that had battled with so many pests in so many seas was to me ctically unknown. Yet, from what I e since heard, there was a time n the name of Captain Bob King- was respected in very strange pany—when his mere entrance into ublic place caused men to nudge other and whisper low, when n Hakodate down to the Torres it his name was common proper- But that was long ago, long before Terror had seized him.

y personal knowledge of him up to seventeenth year was extremely t, for, with rare intervals, he spent whole of that period at sea. Some- s he was away for two or three s together, and once he staid ad for five years at a stretch. To his absence meant little or nothing. l it not been for my mother's talk im I should have forgotten his very tence. And though at first I did not what her hasty closing of the meant, I have still a vivid recol- on of her great, sad eyes as she ed them up to me—eyes full of a ul, inquiring pathos. Sometimes I ght the scrutiny satisfied her, at s she turned away with a sigh ch I failed to read. Perhaps in e days I did not try very hard—for t has a boy to do with the inner ghts of women?—but it all comes now, and I read the meaning of e looks as I would a written page. t, boy as I was, I soon knew that long absences preyed upon her l. n Belleville by J. S. McKeown.

Then came the parting, and for days before a melancholy fell upon the house, while for days after she would move about like one in a dream.

At first the letters came with commendable regularity, and with a glad face she used to read extracts to me. Now he was in Japan, now in Java and now at Thursday Island. It seems he had a boat of his own and used to trade between the China seas and the northern coasts of Australia. That he was a shrewd business man as well as a capable sailor I had no doubt, for, though we did not live in luxury, we had never a monetary trouble. No, it was not the want of money that gradually paled my mother's cheek and gave her that wistful, faroff look; it was not for money that she watched the postman come down the road week in and week out.

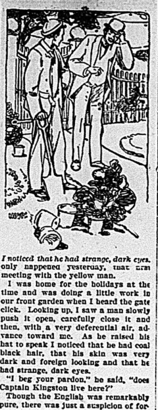
As the years slipped on the letters came at rarer intervals. Once we did not hear from him for ten months, and then it was only a short note to say that he had just returned from a long voyage in the Pacific and that he was about to undertake a mission in the interior of China. We were not to expect to hear from him for a long time, and sure enough he kept us waiting for 18 months. Then came a letter inclosing a draft for a very large sum of money and the intimation that we might hope to see him shortly. But his next communication, received some months later, informed us that he had changed his mind and that he was about to set out on a voyage to Fiji. Then at varied intervals came short notes from the most unexpected places. He seemed to have become a man with no fixed trading route, but bobbed about hither and thither, a victim to a most fantastical caprice. Uncle Jim growled. He saw the gray sorrow saddening his sister's face.

And so the long months ran into years—long months for her who watched, but for me months of youth and health and general contentment. I went to a capital school, at which it was rumored that I succeeded famously with my studies, but I regret to say that I grew so accustomed to the sad faced woman who watched the postman go by morning and evening that I failed to notice those signs which an older eye would surely have observed. Moreover, pale or not, she was just the sweetest, dearest woman in the world.

About this time we saw a lot of my Uncle Jim, and I think I lavished on him all that love which should have been given to my father. He was my mother's only brother and in his soft, kind way was as like her as it was possible for a man to be like a woman. He had reached the age of 40 and was still a bachelor, a love trouble in early life having caused him to eschew the sex. Mother told me all about it one day, and, loving her brother as she did, you may be sure she did not spare the girl who had trifled with his affections. It was the old, old story. The girl threw him over and married a brewer. Jim hated beer ever after and tried hard to persuade himself that he loathed the sex.

I never exactly knew what he was beyond the fact that, like many thousands of his countrymen, he was "in the city." I rather imagine he had something to do with promoting companies, he used to talk so much about directors, prospectuses and that sort of thing, and I have seen him laugh heartily as he read out the names on the front page of a prospectus and grin consumedly at the gullibility of the public. All the same, I am inclined to think that he had done his share of the gulling and that the smart dogcart he drove and the hunter he rode had come out of the capacious pocket of the public. Be this as it may, he had been wise in his time and retired before Nemesis overtook him. He used proudly to proclaim that he had bidden adieu to all worry and strife and that the future opened before him a long, smiling vista in which there was no shadow of a cloud. He foresaw nothing but a peaceful, uneventful life. He thanked heaven that he had no wife to worry him, no selfish children to darken his few remaining years. That is what the professed cynic used to say, what he hoped for, no doubt, but what he was not fated to enjoy. Sundry incidents were about to happen which would knock all the smiling self complacency out of Mr. James Davie and plunge him into a very sea of trouble.

For fully seven years I had not seen my father in the flesh, and I was now a big boy of 15, somewhat tall for my age, but giving promise of doing well in the future. And it was in this year that my troubles began, and I remember now, as distinctly as though it had only happened yesterday, that first meeting with the yellow man.



I noticed that he had strange, dark eyes.

I was home for the holidays at the time and was doing a little work in our front garden when I heard the gate click. Looking up, I saw a man slowly push it open, carefully close it and then, with a very deferential air, advance toward me. As he raised his hat to speak I noticed that he had coal black hair, that his skin was very dark and foreign looking and that he had strange, dark eyes.

"I beg your pardon," he said, "does Captain Kingston live here?"

Though the English was remarkably pure, there was just a suspicion of foreign intonation in his voice.

"Yes," said I.

"And is the captain at home?"

"No, sir; he is in China."

The strange eyes peered up from under the strange lids, lids of which the skin seemed to be drawn up in the corners in some peculiar manner. I noticed that the man had scarcely any eyebrows and no eyelashes.

"That is very strange," he said. "I thought he would have been home long before this."

He seemed to doubt me somewhat, though he did it in a quiet way with which I could not quarrel. After all, the man would naturally be a little disappointed. It is poor fun to travel a good 20 miles to see a man and then not find him at home. And yet where could he have seen my father and how did he know he was coming home?

The man, looking at me very hard, said, "Pardon me, but are you Captain Kingston's son?"

"Yes, sir."

"His only son?"

"His only child."

"You are not much like your father."

"You know him well then?"

"Very intimately. Indeed, we were great friends in Australia."

"But you are not an Australian?" I knew well he wasn't, but his nationality puzzled me, and I hoped that he might vouchsafe the information.

"No, but I sometimes have business there."

He regarded me intently, measuring me from head to foot, his strange eyes seeming to take in every particular of my face and dress. And this he did without speaking, a proceeding with which I was not at all pleased, which, moreover, was beginning to render me extremely uncomfortable.

"I am sorry my father is not here," I said, "but if you will leave your name I will tell my mother to mention you the next time she writes."

"You have no idea when your father will return?"

"None," I said shortly, a little annoyed at the way he ignored the suggestion that he should tell me his name.

"Ah, that's a pity! Perhaps your mother knows?"

"That is scarcely possible."

"Is she in?"

"I think so."

In fact, I knew so, but the man's questioning was not at all to my liking, and I felt suspicious, I hardly knew why. But he seemed to ignore my restraint and with a calm survey of the garden and the house remarked that we had a very pretty place, and he wondered why Captain Kingston preferred to roam so much abroad. That, I was nearly saying, was my father's business, but at that moment my mother appeared at the door and called to me.

I at once advanced toward her, the stranger following.

"This gentleman has just called to see father," I explained, pointing to the stranger, who raised his hat and bowed very low.

My mother honored him with an uncommonly sharp scrutiny, and then I thought her lips tightened and she grew a shade paler.

"I am sorry to say Captain Kingston is still abroad," she answered, and her voice was cold and distant and startlingly unlike her usual tone.

"I regret it exceedingly," said the man. "I expected to find him here."

She did not answer, but stared at him in a way which I failed utterly to comprehend. So I chipped in with:

"This gentleman met father in Australia."

"Australia!" she echoed, her eyes growing wider.

I may have been mistaken, but I thought the echo was more like a gasp.

"Yes," he said, a curiously familiar smile playing round the corners of his mouth. "We were good friends out there. He gave me his address when he knew I was coming to England. I quite understood from what he said that he would have arrived by this."

He spoke easily and with the same meaning smile, but his strange eyes played all over my mother, and I saw how deeply they affected her.

"I am sorry," she said hastily, giving me the impression of a woman exceedingly embarrassed, and backing toward the door at the same time. "Who shall I say called?"

"Oh, it is immaterial," he replied. "I am sure to meet him when he returns."

With that he raised his hat once more, bowed very politely in a distinctly foreign fashion and sauntered down the pathway.

My mother and I immediately entered the house and shut the door. That done, she sprang through the hall into the dining room and across to the window, I at her heels. The stranger had just shut the gate and was taking a final survey of the house. Seeing us, he raised his hat once more, smiled and then disappeared down the road.

CHAPTER II.

THE SIGN OF THE HIDDEN MEANING.

For a full five minutes after the man had disappeared she stood stock still against the window peering intently through the curtain. Then she threw herself back into the nearest armchair, with a sigh, and as I looked at her I saw that she was very pale and evidently greatly agitated.

"Why, you are going to faint," I said. "What is the matter with you?"

"Nothing, nothing," she gasped. Then: "Davie, Davie, has he gone?"

"Of course," I answered, "long ago. Why?"

But she seemed plunged in thought and did not answer. Presently she looked up at me and said, "Did I betray myself?"

I had to admit that she had acted in a way that was strange to her. It was the first time I had ever seen any one come to our door who had been treated with such scant courtesy. Usually the most hospitable of women, she seemed suddenly to have lost that polite consideration for others which I had always associated with her. And the more surprising was it in this instance, as the man came as a friend of her husband. Upon my mentioning this she suddenly burst out with: "But he is no friend, Davie. Be sure of that."

Surprised, I questioned her, and after some hesitation she drew a letter from her breast and favored me with a curious, confiding look.

"This letter I received from your father this morning," she said. "Read it and tell me what you think of it. You are big enough now to understand."

Her looks and her manner of speaking impressed me so strangely that it was with a feeling of trepidation I began a perusal of the letter. It bore neither address nor date, but the stamp on the envelope showed it had been posted in Ballarat. What he, a sailor man, was doing at that inland town of Australia he did not explain. And, truth to tell, so strange a man was he that a letter from him dated from the north pole or the mountains of the moon would have astonished us but little.

After expressing regret at his unavoidable absence and telling in no uncertain language the intense longing he had to behold his wife and child once more, he became mystic, vague and hinted at certain misfortunes which dogged the steps of the most deserving, from which I gathered he and fate were not on the best of terms. Then from vague generalities he descended to particulars and informed us that he had quarreled with some former friends who had become his bitterest enemies and who had sworn to be revenged on him. He did not fear them himself, but he begged my mother to treat with suspicion any one who said he came from him. After warning her in words which I but vaguely understood he concluded: "Guard yourself well until I come. It will not be long now, as I have finished my last voyage. Be careful whom you entertain, with whom you travel. Suspect your own shadow."

This was sufficiently vague to be alarming. As I handed the letter back to her I saw more clearly the fear in her face, but the questioning look she gave me remained unanswered. What could I say; what advice could a boy of 15 give? To be sure it was plain enough that my father had made enemies, but I had no doubt whatever that he was capable of taking care of himself. How his quarrel could personally affect me or my mother I was at a loss to comprehend. Therefore I returned her inquiring look with one equally uncompromising.

"Perhaps you can understand now why the sudden appearance of this stranger upset me. What if he is your father's enemy, what if he is seeking to do him an injury? Heaven knows," she continued, "what it all means, but your father would not write in this strain unless the matter was one of the utmost importance."

And yet I cannot say that I was unduly impressed, for a few ideas began to buzz confusedly in my brain, and I tried to grasp them and set them in proper order. With this end in view I took up my hat and went out, hoping that I might have another glimpse of the man. My mother made me promise that I would not go off the road, a promise to which I laughingly assented, but I followed the road right into Slough and round to the railway station, yet never saw a sign of the man with the strange eyes.

If I were to say that my father's warning made me very frightened I fear I should hardly be confining myself to the truth. I think my mother's serious face caused me the greater alarm. Once away from it the warning did not seem fraught with much significance, or, if it were, I could not grasp it. Uncle Jim would probably be over that afternoon. We should hear what he had to say. Jim was a man of nerve and practical common sense and as such always knocked the bottom out of my silly, sentimental fancies.

As I returned along the road I saw his well known trap standing before our gate, the big bay stamping impatiently and tossing the flies from his ears. High up on the driver's cushion sat Saunders, the boy, a diminutive rascal with a wizen face. He greeted me with a formal salute and an extensive grin and favored me with the superfluous bit of information that the guv'nor was up at the 'ouse. Then, after asking him sundry questions concerning his rats, his dogs and the chase generally, I turned to open the gate, when I was attracted by something which I saw on one of the posts.

At first I thought that the village urchins had, in accordance with their usual custom, been endeavoring to deface our paint, and mentally expressing the pious wish that I had only caught them at the game I stepped up closer to inspect their handiwork. The gate and the posts were grained so as to represent a light oak, and as the work had only been completed some three months previously I was exceedingly proud of its smart appearance. To my surprise, however, I found that the destroyers had confined themselves to one particular design. This was an elliptical or egg shaped ring drawn with a red pencil. The design was very accurate, the steadiness of the lines proclaiming the adept. That it was meant for an egg there could be no doubt. A little filling in would have made the drawing perfect.

Afraid to attempt a cleansing of the post for fear of making a smudge, I turned toward the house, meaning later on to obliterate the mark with a wet cloth; but as I entered the hall I heard the voice of my Uncle Jim in the adjacent sitting room, and I forthwith forgot all about the sign.

At the time of which I write my uncle was a man just verging on to 40, a well set up, powerful creature, with a good natured face, rather inclined to ruddiness. He was a man who seemed to enjoy every hour of his life, and I don't believe I ever saw him when his blue eyes had not a merry twinkle in them. Therefore the serious look with which he now greeted me was just a little disconcerting. My mother's troubled face also added a chilliness to the reception.

"Well, Davie, lad," said he, "what is all this that has been troubling your mother?"

I told him all I knew, repeating word for word that which had passed between me and the stranger.

"I have heard as much," said he, when I had finished, "and upon my word I can't see any cause for this uneasiness. Your mother has got a fright, my boy, and nothing I can say will convince her of her folly."

"You may call it folly if you like," she replied, "and I wish I could think so, but I feel sure my husband would not have written in this strain without good cause."

Jim shook his head. Out of respect to her feelings he did not say what was on the tip of his tongue. He had not his sister's admiration for my father.

"A man who can leave his wife and child for seven years is capable of writing anything," he growled.

"Ah, but you don't understand," she replied. "You don't know the dangers and vicissitudes of a seafaring life. If he has not come, you may be sure it was for very good reasons."

"Humph!" grunted Jim, but perhaps even he loved her all the better for her loyalty. No doubt it was foolish, but it is that foolishness which endears women to us. I thought she looked her best and her prettiest just then, and if Jim hadn't been there to poke fun at me I would have given her a good kiss.

"Still," said he as he slowly began to fill his pipe, "I consider vague, terrifying scrawls no excuse for such an absence, and if I were you I should try to think that they were written after—I mean under—much mental depression, the result of a systematic squaring of the elbow."

She shook her head.

"I believe it to be nothing of the kind. Do you imagine that the coming of this stranger right on the top of Bob's letter was all a matter of chance? No: he knew my husband was leaving Australia, and he meant to see him. For what reason? Ah, let me know that and I shall know everything. But, tell me, does it not strike you as being very curious that I should receive Bob's letter on the very day that the stranger arrives here?"

"Well, no. The man could easily have come in the same ship as the letter. Probably he was to meet Bob in London and, disappointed in not finding him there, came on here."

"But don't you see if Bob came in the ship with that letter he would not be here yet (unless he came overland from Brindisi) for another eight or nine days. I do not hesitate to say that the last thing he would think of would be to come overland; but those who do not know him so well might reasonably suspect otherwise."

"Well?" said Jim, his blue eyes looking more puzzled than ever.

"Well," said my mother slowly and very impressively, I thought, "what I make out of it is this: That man did not come by the ship which brought the letter from Australia; otherwise he would have known that Bob was not here. But he believed him to be on the ship and, speculating on the chances of his coming overland, gave him time to get home."

"But why should he believe that Bob was on the ship and of what importance was it whether he was or not?"

"Now you get beyond me," she said, "but I believe, why I cannot tell you, that that man knew my husband was coming by a certain ship, that my husband knew of this and for some reason of his own changed his mind."

"Dear child," said my uncle, "you weave quite a pretty romance. That little head of yours is full of surprises. I know a mystery is dear to a woman, almost as dear as a bit of scandal, but don't build too much on it or you will be disappointed. The man had probably done his business with Captain Bob out in Australia. It might have been a serious mining speculation—Ballarat, you know, is a great mining center. If such is the case, what more natural than that the man, hearing Bob was coming by a certain ship, should be anxious to see him?"

"Why did he refuse to leave his name?"

"As he said, it was probably immaterial. I've often enough said the same thing. Trust me, your husband will soon turn up with a glowing prospectus in his pocket describing a marvelous property which is within easy reach of Ballarat. I know those prospectuses. I've drawn up a few of them myself, in which I have described with wonderful fidelity a reef or a region I have never seen. Believe me, your husband will presently blossom into director, possibly the chairman—if they can't buy a lord—of the Great Ballarat Gold Mining company, of which your mysterious foreign gentleman with the strange eyes will most likely be the vender."

My mother immediately recognized that it was no use arguing with him when he affected that mood, and, dear fellow as he was, she always avoided the city in talking to him, for once set going on that topic he was a difficult man to stop. So she went out to see about some tea, and while she was away he informed me that there was a local Christy minstrel show in Maidenhead that night, for which he had two tickets, and that he had driven round to see if I would care to go. Of course it meant staying the night at his house, but he would drive me over after breakfast the next morning. Boy like, I jumped at the offer, though I did not fail to notice that my mother gave her consent with just a little reluctance—a reluctance which I know my uncle failed to perceive. Indeed, it was no unusual thing for me to spend days together with him when I was home for my holidays, and I am sure the thought that she might not want me to go never for a moment occurred to him.

I fancied that she held me longer in her arms than usual when the time came to say goodby. Her great eyes, too, wore a sad, wistful look as they met mine, and I think now, as I picture that scene afresh, that the strange light which I noticed in them must have been caused by unshed tears. And though I knew no cause for tears I recollect well that she touched some point of tenderness within me and that I kissed her again and again, and that even when half way down the little path, moved by some unaccountable impulse, I turned suddenly round, rushed back to her and threw my arms about her neck.

"Come on, you baby," cried Uncle Jim, who stood smiling by the open gate, but as I passed him he laid his hand affectionately on my shoulder, and I saw a great gladness in his eyes. He loved his sister no less than I, and that formed a sweet bond of sympathy between the three.

Then I sprang into the cart, and Uncle Jim came tumbling after me. Saunders, the aforementioned wizened old man of 14, let go the horse's head, and away we went. My mother, standing in the porch, a pretty, pathetic figure in a white gown, waved us a last farewell.

CHAPTER III.

I SEE THE SIGN AGAIN.

That evening was made memorable for two things—one that happened at Maidenhead, and one that happened elsewhere. But how could one foresee? How sad it is that God, who sends us the warning, has not endowed us with intelligence enough to understand it. Much could not be expected from a boy of 15, though even he might have seen something had he taken the trouble to look. But in no way was I the superior of other boys. Power was not given me to peer behind the curtain of the future.

That night passed very pleasantly. We drove into Maidenhead, as arranged; had dinner there and afterward visited the entertainment, over which, I remember, I roared with laughter. I would give something to be able to laugh now over such imbecilities, but I think all the laughter died in me that night. Just as some men dissipate wildly before they blow their brains out or crack jokes in the face of death, so drew I the longest, loudest and last note of laughter out of me on that occasion—that is, laughter free of thought, of intellectual restraint. Sometimes I would like to laugh, but remembering I stop as one who has no right to be merry. The bone clapping Christy is to me a sight as sad as death itself; the jar and jingle of the tambourine set every nerve in me shuddering.

The drive back after the performance was delightful, albeit that the night was very dark. But it was a clear, good road, our horse was a sure footed beast, and Uncle Jim, who was an excellent whip, knew every inch of the way. So we dashed along in fine style, the great lamps projecting their glare into the gloom beyond. My uncle had lit his pipe, and being, like myself, in excellent spirits he chanted snatches of the comic songs we had but lately heard. And yet over there through the darkness, where we could not see, what was happening? Oh heavens!

I slept so soundly that night that I did not wake until close upon 9 o'clock of the following morning, and then it was the opening of my door that caused me to raise my heavy eyelids. There stood Uncle Jim, the inevitable pipe between his lips.

"Now, then, sleepyhead," he cried, "are you going to stay there all day?"

Once awakened it did not take me long to dress, and after a sturdy breakfast I reported myself to him in the stable yard, and about an hour after we set out on our return journey. And still no shadow darkened the sun. The air was fresh and balmy. I drew it in deeply and hummed to the whirl of the wheels.

I was not a little astonished upon driving up to our gate to see that the blinds had not yet been drawn, for my mother was usually an early riser, and I knew that one of her first acts was to draw the blinds and open the windows. My uncle also noticed that something was amiss and made some jocular allusion to the household having overslept itself, then bidding me hurry and wake them up. I sprang from the trap, opened the gate and rushed up the path; but, though I knocked loudly upon the door, I received no answer to my summons. I knocked again and again and put my ear close to the keyhole, hoping to hear the sound of her feet, the swish of her skirts, as she came along the passage, but an awful stillness pervaded the whole house, a stillness which fell like a chill upon me.

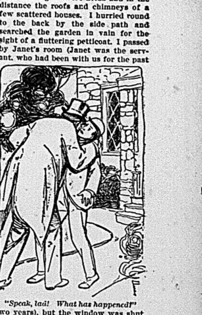
Leaving the door, I went first to the dining room window, then to that of the drawing room, but they were both securely fastened. I rapped on each of them in turn, and still no answer came to relieve the sickening anxiety which had now taken possession of me.

"Can't you make them hear?" shouted my uncle, who, sitting high up in his dogcart, easily overlooked the gate and commanded a view of the pathway.

I shook my head.

"Then go round to the back and see if you can find the girl. I suppose your mother has gone to do her marketing."

Ours was a square, two storied building standing in its own grounds. Before it was a pretty little patch of flower garden which gave on to the roadway; behind was our kitchen garden, inclosed by a low brick wall. Beyond that again were fields and in the distance the roofs and chimneys of a few scattered houses. I hurried round to the back by the side path and searched the garden in vain for the sight of a fluttering petticoat. I passed by Janet's room (Janet was the servant, who had been with us for the past two years), but the window was shut, the blind down. I tapped loudly on the glass and then passed on to the back door. Trying the handle, I failed to open it. I knocked; no answer. I knocked loudly; I beat the panels with my open hands; I even used the toe of my boot. But there came no patter of feet, no unbolting of locks. The echo sounded drearily for a moment and then all was still.



"Speak, lad! What has happened!"

And now the fear which had already seized me paralyzed for a moment or two both limbs and intellect, and a horror of which I could not grasp the meaning turned me cold to the finger tips. I seemed intuitively to guess that

Some Red Saunders Philosophy.

"Of all the worlds I ever broke into this one's the most curious," said Red Saunders, "and one of the curiousest things in it is that I think it's queer. Why should I, now? What puts it into our heads that affairs ought to go so and so when they never do anything of the sort? Take any book you read or any story a man tells you. It runs along about how Mr. Smith made up his mind to do this or that and proceeded to do it. And that never happened. What Mr. Smith calls making up his mind is, when you come down to bed rock, nothing more nor less than what Mr. Smith pleasantly calls his mind dodging to cover under pressure of circumstances. That's straight. Old Lady Luck comes for Mr. Smith's mind, swinging both hands. She gives it a stem winder on the ear, lams it for keeps on the smeller, chugs it one in the short ribs, drives right and left into its stummick, and Mr. Smith's mind breaks for cover; then Mr. Smith tells his wife that he's made up his mind—he, mind you! Wouldn't that stun you?"—McClure's.

Still Useful.

She's getting old, she scarce can see,
She's deaf as any stone,
But still she's popular, for she's
A model chaperon.

Kidney Disease Results From Colds

EXPOSURE OF THE BACK TO DRAFT NOT AN INFREQUENT CAUSE OF THIS DREADFULLY PAINFUL AILMENT.

The kidneys are very susceptible to cold, so much so that a current of cold air on the back is sufficient to cause congestion of these organs.

It is also a very common thing for heavy colds to settle on the kidneys and give rise to the most complicated diseases.

While teamsters, railroadmen and others, whose work subjects them to more than ordinary exposure are especially liable to be overtaken by kidney disease, it is also frequent among indoor workers.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are so wonderfully prompt in their action on the kidneys that they are especially valuable in cases of kidney disease, which arise from colds.

Backache, highly colored urine, pain or smarting when passing water, headache, cramps in the legs, constipation, alternating with looseness of the bowels, fickle appetite, vomiting and general feelings of discomfort are among the most common symptoms.

The record of cures effected by means of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills has not been equalled in the history of medicine. In the majority of the homes of Canada these pills are always at hand as an indispensable family medicine.

Mr. John Orr, lumberman, Trenton, Ont., states: "Through exposure to all sorts of weather in the lumber camp and as a result of the strain of my work, I became a sufferer from kidney disease, which in my case took the form of very severe pains across the back, over the kidneys and down the hips. When in the woods cutting trees these pains would come on me with such force that I would have to give up work and return to camp entirely used up. Finding that a number of the boys in the camp used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills I decided to try them and did so with splendid results, as they thoroughly cured me."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

RUSSIANS FACED CERTAIN DEATH

505 Russian Casualties in Engagement at Chemulpo.

JAPANESE LOST NOT A MAN

Survivors on Board British, Italian and French Cruisers.

12 SHIPS SMASHED, 8 TAKEN

Japan Will Accept French Parole For Russian Prisoners Captured at Chemulpo—New Japanese Cruisers to Watch For Russian Volunteer Vessels At Singapore—Japan Incensed Over the Sinking of the Zensho and Plans Reprisals—Sezarin Damaged By Mine—Russian Cruiser Askold Sank in 30 Fathoms.

Nagasaki, Feb. 15.—The survivors from the Variag and the Korietz, the Russian cruisers that were sunk by the Japanese at Chemulpo last Tuesday, still remain on board the British cruiser Talbot, the Italian cruiser Elba and the French cruiser Pascal. The situation is becoming acute, as the Japanese have twice made demands of the commanders of the three foreign vessels that the Russians be surrendered as prisoners of war. The captain of the Talbot, being the senior naval officer, each time replied that he was awaiting instructions from his Government.

A magnificent episode in the battle was the second sortie of the two Russian cruisers. With bands playing the National Anthem, the international fleet loudly cheering the bravery and gallantry of the Russians, the Variag and Korietz faced the Japanese fleet, which was certain death. The positions of the wrecks appear to be such that it will be easy to recover the guns. The Russian losses were one officer and forty men killed and 464 wounded.

The vessels that comprised the Japanese fleet which attacked and destroyed the Russian cruisers Variag and Korietz at Chemulpo on the 8th inst., were the cruisers Naniwa, Takachiho, Akashi, Suma and the Asama. The Japanese did not lose a man.

According to advices received, the engagement at Port Arthur commenced at 4 o'clock on the morning of the 9th. Altogether twelve vessels were destroyed and eight captured. The captured vessels were expected at Sasebo Sunday.

The Emperor has congratulated Admiral Togo, commanding the fleet, for his splendid victory. It is considered significant that the rigid censorship regarding the movements of the Japanese fleet has been withdrawn.

Cruisers Torpedoed.

London, Feb. 15.—A report originating with a Japanese firm having correspondents in Tokio was circulated here last night that three Russian cruisers, presumably the Vladivostock squadron, were torpedoed in the Straits of Tsugaro Saturday.

The Japanese Legation has heard nothing confirmatory of the report, although it has been received from several sources. The Legation officials received the repert with considerable reserve, it being too good to be true, it is said. The Japanese have a strong naval base at Kotomari, and it is considered possible should the Vladivostock squadron attempt to harass the coast about Hakodate, that they would be met by torpedo-boats from Kotomari.

SANK IN 30 FATHOMS.

Disabled Russian Cruiser Askold Kept Afloat Till Saturday.

Che Foo, Feb. 15.—Passengers who have arrived at Port Arthur say the Russian cruiser Askold was damaged in Tuesday's battle in the roads outside of Port Arthur, but was kept afloat until Saturday, when it sank in thirty fathoms of water.

The Russians have explained their reasons for firing on the British steamer Fu Bing, in which three of the Chinese crew were wounded. They assert that the vessel was leaving port without clearing. The British steamer Wenchow is being held by Russians for refusing to deliver passengers.

Six Coal Vessels Caught.

Nagasaki, Feb. 15.—Six Norwegian steamers, chartered by a Russian naval contractor, have been captured. The vessels are the Lena, Active, Sentis, Seirstad, Argo and Hermies. They carried coal cargoes. The Hermies arrived here Saturday under convoy of a cruiser. It is rumored that 1,800 Japanese soldiers have been killed, presumably by the sinking of a transport. Disturbances are reported in Seoul.

Japs Capture Three.

Seoul, Tuesday, Feb. 9.—The Japanese fleet, which entered Chemulpo last night, escorting transports, captured one Russian volunteer warship and two steamers in the open sea.

Hakodate Bombarded.

Paris, Feb. 15.—The Figaro yesterday morning publishes a despatch from its St. Petersburg correspondent who confirms, without giving the source of his information to do so the reported attack on Hakodate, Japan, by the Vladivostock division of the Russian fleet. This division was commanded by Capt. Reisenstein, who last week replaced Admiral Dietalkenberg, who had suffered a stroke of apoplexy.

The correspondent says that a report is current in St. Petersburg that before bombarding Hakodate the Russian warships encountered a fleet of Japanese transports and sunk several of them.

No Order to Surrender.

Tokio, Feb. 15.—Japan is deeply stirred and bitterly resentful over the sinking of the merchant vessel Zensho by four Russian cruisers. The Foreign Office has issued the following statement regarding the sinking of the Zensho:

"Two Japanese merchant vessels, the Zensho and the Naganoura, tonnage 170 and 700 respectively, while sailing from Kata for Otaru, were suddenly attacked by four Russian cruisers from Vladivostock, on Feb. 11, while ten miles off Jensangta. Fire was opened without an order being given to surrender. The Naganoura succeeded in escaping. The other vessel was surrounded by the cruisers and sunk. All on board were either killed or drowned."

To Watch Russians.

London, Feb. 15.—A despatch to The Daily Express from Singapore says:

"When the Kasaga and Nisshin left here they proceeded south and met a Nippon Yusen steamer, which has been assigned to a rendezvous in the Dutch Archipelago. The steamer transferred complete Japanese crews and officers to the cruisers, and then took their temporary English crews. The cruisers then returned to Singapore, but left immediately with orders to watch for the Russian volunteer vessels Ekaterinoslav and Veronej.

Sogarin Also Injured.

Port Arthur, Feb. 15.—The Russian transport Yenesei, while laying mines near Talienwan yesterday, struck a Japanese mine and sunk. The Sogarin was damaged through the same cause.

To Succeed Wirenius.

Berlin, Feb. 15.—It is reported from St. Petersburg that Rear Admiral Rodshestvenski, chief of the navy staff, has been ordered to proceed as quickly as possible to the Far East for the purpose of relieving Admiral Wirenius of his command.

Placed in Japanese Hospital.

London, Feb. 15.—The Japanese Legation here has been informed that thirty-four of the Russians wounded in the fight between the Japanese and Russian fleets at Chemulpo will be placed in the hospital of the Japanese Nursing Home.

Mongolia Is Safe.

Shanghai, Feb. 15.—The Russian mail steamer Mongolia, which sailed from Shanghai Feb. 7, has arrived safely at Dalny. It was reported the ship had been captured by Japanese.

Russians in Red Sea.

Suez, Feb. 15.—A steamer which has just arrived here reports a Russian volunteer fleet cruiser, a battleship and four torpedo boats anchored at the Island of Jebel Zukup, in the Red Sea, about 90 miles from the Strait of Bab El Mandeb, Feb. 10. The steamer also reports that previously she passed the Russian transport Smolensk and one torpedo boat steaming slowly south.

Japs Want Sailors Back.

Washington, Feb. 15.—Japan through her minister, will appeal to the United States probably to-day to prevail on the Russian Government to release the 100 Japanese subjects reported detained at Port Arthur. Naval opinion here is that the detention of these Japanese at Port Arthur is a strategical necessity to prevent the Japanese gaining information as to fortifications, troops, etc.

France Gets Ready.

Paris, Feb. 15.—Despatches received here from Toulon say that orders have been issued for the mobilization of additional troops for service in Indo-China. It is reported that Minister of Marine Pelletan has given orders that the armored cruisers Gloire and Conde and the cruisers Lavoisier, Coetlogon, Isly and Catinat be put in condition for immediate service.

BLAME FOR CLALLAM DISASTER.

Chief Engineer Loses His License and Captain's Is Suspended.

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 15.—The decision of the Marine Board of Inquiry, which sat upon the Clallam disaster case, handed down Saturday, lays chief blame for the disaster upon Chief Engineer De Launey, charging him with neglect and incompetency.

Capt. Roberts is censured for not having an officer of the ship in the second and third boats that were launched, and for not giving explicit orders to the captain of the Holyoke to take the ship to the nearest shelter.

De Launey's license is revoked, and the license of Capt. Roberts is suspended for one year.

Took to the Boats.

Halifax, N. S., Feb. 15.—Passengers by the SS. Propatria report having had a very narrow escape from an ocean voyage in small boats. The Propatria sailed from St. Pierre, Miq., on Wednesday, and on Thursday, when fourteen miles off Louisburg, the ship careened to starboard, and the passengers and crew took to boats. The captain and engineer returned to the ship five hours later and succeeded in righting her by shifting the water ballast.

Steamer on Rocks.

Victoria, B.C., Feb. 15.—The steamer Tess went ashore on Trial Island Saturday morning and is fixed fast on the rocks. The commander, Capt. Hughes, is ill with pneumonia aboard. There being a case of smallpox aboard, all the passengers have been taken to a quarantine station. All efforts to pull off the steamer have failed. It is feared she has seriously damaged her bottom on the reef.

Fire in Prince Albert.

Prince Albert, N.W.T., Feb. 15.—The Prince Albert Hotel was totally destroyed by fire yesterday. The loss is estimated at $25,000.

LORD ROBERTS DECLINES

Commander-in-Chief Refuses the Inspector-Generalship.

War Correspondent Williams Mourned By the Military—New Zealand Gets Cheap British Postage—Vicary Gibbs Explains How He Lost the Election—Irish May Join Whigs—Britain Advised to Join Colonies.

London, Feb. 15.—There are rumors of friction between the Government and Lord Roberts. It is said that the later declined appointment as Inspector-General, and has been invited by Premier Balfour to remain a member of the Defence Committee, drawing his present scale of pay as commander-in-chief for the unexpired term of two years.

Mourned By Military.

London, Feb. 15.—(C.A.P.)—The funeral of war correspondent Williams at Nunhead was attended by many of the military. Field Marshal Evelyn Wood placed a floral offering on the coffin.

As Cheap As In Canada.

London, Feb. 15.—(C.A.P.)—Premier Deakin says that by means of railway facilities the cost to immigrants to Australia will be made not appreciably more than in Canada. Emigration from the Motherland should be forced by advertising.

Why He Lost.

London, Feb. 15.—(C.A.P.)—Vicary Gibbs was defeated in Midherts division by a majority of 132. The constituency has been Conservative since it was formed. Mr. Gibbs attributes his defeat to tariff changes, the Education Act and his vote in the Commons on the poor law relief and friendly society bill.

Cheap Postage.

London, Feb. 15.—(C.A.P.)—The Postmaster-General has agreed to allow New Zealand newspapers to be delivered in the United Kingdom at a postage of one penny irrespective of weight.

IRISH MAY JOIN WHIGS.

Considerable Speculation on Morley Amendment Tariff Vote.

London, Feb. 15.—(C.A.P.)—To-night's important division on Mr. Morley's free trade amendment is anticipated with the keenest interest. Urgent whips have been sent out to bring up every member. A rumor is current that the Irish party will join the Liberals.

The first public meeting of the Tariff Reform League Women's Association was held at the Duke of Westminster's house Saturday night. Sir Gilbert Parker presided, and many of the nobility were present.

Sir Gilbert Parker said tariff reform was an Imperial necessity, and in the end would result in an Imperial development undreamt by doctrinaires to-day. A telegram was sent to Mr. Chamberlain at Cairo wishing him luck in his cause.

Will Pay More For Bread.

Sir Gilbert Parker said if the Motherland would not unite with the colonies in a great effort towards wheat production, we in ten years would pay more for our bread.

Henry Chaplin said the objects of the proposed fiscal change were to secure better markets and to draw the colonies a little closer.

Mr. Franklyn, M.P., said they had been asked to offer a compromise to the free fooders on both sides of the House before the critical division. He suggested a two-shilling bounty on all wheat grown in the British Isles, with a bonus of two shillings to farmers who keep their corn in stack until Aug. 1; also a shilling bounty on all colonial wheat, and Gladstone's shilling registration duty on all foreign wheat. A bounty on British wheat would supply food in time of war and assist the farmer and federate the Empire. The duties on coffee, cocoa and sugar would be reduced by charging the foreigner market toll on all luxuries from abroad.

Edward Martin, K.C., Dead.

Hamilton, Feb. 15.—Edward Martin, K.C., died yesterday morning at the age of 69 years. For years he had been one of the most prominent men of the city. He leaves five sons, who all adopted their father's profession of law. There are also three daughters. He was educated at Dr. Tassie's school. In 1876 he was made a Q.C. for Ontario, and in 1895 a Q.C. for the Dominion. He was the first Chancellor of the Diocese of Niagara and held the position at the time of his death.

Turks and Bulgarians.

Berlin, Feb. 15.—The Frankfurter Zeitung's Salonica correspondent telegraphs that a Bulgarian band numbering 100 has been attacked at Dchumbala by Turkish troops. The Bulgarians fled at night, leaving 12 dead on the field. The Turkish loss was one man killed and two wounded.

Brakeman Killed in Collision.

Dona, N. Y., Feb. 15.—An eastbound freight train on the New York Central Railroad, in charge of Engineer James Truax of Albany, N. Y., ran into the rear of a freight train in the yards here yesterday, killing James Sterling, a brakeman, of Herkimer, N. Y.

Mr. Borden Goes South.

Toronto, Feb. 15.—R. L. Borden, M.P., was a Toronto guest for several hours Sunday, en route to the Hot Springs of Virginia, where he will remain ten days. He left for the south at 5 o'clock.

Premier Roblin in Toronto.

Toronto, Feb. 15.—Hon. R. P. Roblin, Premier of Manitoba, is a Toronto guest. He arrived at 10 o'clock last night.

STRENGTH
BOVRIL

All the strength of prime beef—that's what you get in Bovril—while the skill in making has produced that rich roast beef flavor which delights the palate and makes Bovril so acceptable to Invalids as well as to the healthy and strong.

These two essentials give Bovril the place at the top.

It has no equal.

So Many People Ask

Why on earth are you selling Wall Papers at HALF PRICE this time of the year.

WELL its just like this—We still have about 3,000 rolls of 1903 Wall Papers left and with our reputation for carrying the very newest in Wall Papers it would not pay us to put this small balance in with our 1904, and call them new.

We don't do that kind of business. We prefer giving our customers who are not so particular about having the very latest, these goods at bargains. So we are selling all 1903 papers this month at HALF of the regular prices, so as to start March with nothing but 1904 papers which are now flooding our warehouse.

All Fancy Goods and China —not Staple—for the balance of the month of February at Half regular price—this makes home beautifying doubly cheap.

Yours In Decorations

During the winter month our workmen have been kep unusually busy decorating some of the best homes of the city.

TO SAY THAT our decor ative work is a success—i putting the matter mildly—you have just to witness this fo yourself in observing any one o the many city homes we hav given decorative attention dur ing the past two years.

Our success is because of knowledge of the decorativ trade begot of study and expe ience both in wall hangings an the decorative art—the two g hand in hand—the one withou the other is absolutely lost.

NO better time for yo than the present for selecting new wall hangings now arriv ing.

No better time to hav your work done than durin the later winter months an the earlier spring.

We are prepared—with liberal staff of experience workmen —the best obtainab in their several branches an our prices will meet with you approval every time.

DANGER OF LIVING WITH CONSUMPTIVES.

Is real danger, because the sputum of affected persons diffuses itself itself through the air and finds lodgment in the systems of others. If exposed to consumption use fragrant healing Catarrhozone, the most efficient germicide known. No case of catarrh can withstand Catarrhozone, which cures this loathsome disease thoroughly. Cold in the head is cured in a few minutes, and bronchitis, asthma and lung trouble are cured to stay cured if Catarrhozone is employed "I don't know any remedy so good for catarrh and bronchitis as Catarrhozone," writes N. T. Eaton, of Knowlton. "It cured me after years of suffering and saved me from consumption." Two months' treatment, $1.00; trial size 25c.

Well Deserved.

Mr. J. P. Purdy, who while residing here was in the Freight Department of the Grand Trunk Railway, being promoted to the Agency of the G.T.R. at Oshawa and subsequently Agent at Napanee, has now received further proof of his abilities and the confidence placed in him by being appointed the Manager of the Oshawa Railway and Transfer Co., at Oshawa.

IS YOUR DOCTOR BILL LARGE?

Best way to keep it small is not to call the doctor, but use Nerviline instead. For minor ailments, like colds, coughs, chills, cramps, headache and stomach trouble Nerviline is just as good as any doctor. It breaks up a cold in one night, cures soreness in the chest, and for neuralgia, toothache and rheumatism you can't get anything half as good as Nerviline. The fame of Nerviline for cramps, colic and pain in the stomach extends far and wide. Good for everything a liniment can be good for and costs but 25c for a large bottle.

THE INTELLIGENCER'S AFTERNOON DESPATCHES ARE TWELVE HOURS IN ADVANCE OF THE TORONTO MORNING PAPERS.

Three Russian Torpedo Boats Sunk at Chefoo—Russian Fleet Now Bottled Up in Inner Harbor at Port Arthur.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

Chefoo, Feb. 14.—A reliable authority says that three Russian torpedo boats have been sunk by guns from the forts. They were mistaken for Japanese vessels.

Tokio, Saturday, Feb. 13.—The Russian Vladivostock squadron is still in sight cruising in the sea of Japan.

A report to the effect that Matsuyama, on the inland sea, has been bombarded by the Russian squadron is untrue.

Chefoo, Feb. 15. — The steamer Wenchow, arriving from Port Arthur, reports that eleven Russian ships were struck in Wednesday's engagement and badly injured. The whole fleet has been taken into the inner harbor and Port Arthur is now depending for protection on her forts, which have been reinforced. There is frequent firing, which is presumably done by Japanese torpedo boats.

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

NOTES OF SERVICES IN BELLEVILLE'S DIFFERENT PLACES OF WORSHIP.

Holloway Street.

Missionary anniversary services were held in this church yesterday, the sermons being preached by a former pastor, Rev. J. A. McCamus, of Wellington. Owing to the inclement weather the attendance was not large. In the morning the Rev. gentleman's text was from St. Luke, 10th chapter and 2nd verse. The theme of the discourse was "The world is the field." The Christian church to-day is commissioned to go into every place where Christ would go and proclaim His gospel. Although the missionaries were doing grand work, there was still a great work to be done, as millions were still heathens. The laborers were few in comparison to the work required to be accomplished, and the words of the text were applicable to-day. The preacher in concluding his discourse made an earnest appeal for aid to assist in this branch of the church's work.

Bridge Street.

At this place of worship last evening a good congregation was present. The Pastor, Rev. Dr. Crothers, preached an able discourse. His text was from Psalms, 8th and 4th verse:

"What is man that thou are mindful of him? and the son of man that thou visitest him?"

Emmanuel R. E. Church.

At the above church yesterday morning, the Rector, Rev. Mr. Gilliland, preached a thoughtful sermon from the words,

"That in all things He may have the preeminence."

Jesus was, while on this earth, the highest type of manhood; in Him there was no flaw. It should be the aim of all men to follow, as far as possible, in the footsteps of the Man of Nazareth, giving the worship of Him the preeminence over everything else.

Archbishop Gauthier at St. Michael's.

The people of St. Michael's were not a little elated yesterday at having Archbishop Gauthier, of Kingston, with them. His Grace explained the Lenten regulations and insisted upon the necessity of doing penance. In a clear, forcible manner, he pointed out how, under the new as well as the old dispensation, fasting and prayer had stayed the arm of God. At Mgr. Farrelly's request, His Grace, after mass, also gave a short address to the Catholic deaf mutes present, the same being interpreted to them by Mr. Denys. He loved all his people, but had a "special affection for those dear silent children," whom he never forgot. It was, His Grace said, a blessing to have an institution where they could be taught their duty, and hoped they would ever be respectful and obedient to those in charge over them.

Lived Here 45 Years.

Mrs. Adalene Blondin, who died rather suddenly in the Township of Hungerford a few days ago, was for 45 years a resident of this city. About a year ago she removed from the city to Hungerford, to reside with some members of the family. The deceased was 78 years of age and was a member of the Roman Catholic Church. Mrs. Frank Caron, of this city, is a daughter of the deceased.

THE SMALLPOX QUESTION.

Any intelligent physician will admit that you don't catch smallpox because some one else has it, but because your condition favors it. Low vitality always encourages sickness and at this season especially everyone should take Ferrozone, which destroys disease germs and makes the system so strong and healthy that sickness can't exist. Ferrozone is a vitalizing tonic that makes rich, red blood, builds up the nerves, cures nervousness and drives away tired languid feelings. To get strong and keep strong use Ferrozone; it assures health and costs but 50c at all druggists.

FUNERAL OF LATE W. H. ADAMS YESTERDAY AFTERNOON—AN IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY.

Despite the storm yesterday afternoon there was a good turnout of the Masons at the funeral of their late brother, Wm. H. Adams. Services were held at the house, conducted by the Rev. G. Brown, pastor of the Tabernacle. The bearers were members of The Belleville Lodge, namely, Bros. S. Burrows, N. Allen, J. McKeown, H. J. Clarke, J. Harris and Walter Alford. The floral tributes consisted of a pillow from the family with the word "Father" in raised letters; wreaths from the A.O.U.W., E. G. Porter, M.P., and W. Alford; bouquets from Mr. and Mrs. J. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Barlow, Mrs. Mills, Miss Mae Mills and two from friends.

THE DEATH LIST.

DAVID R. CLAPP.

Mr. David R. Clapp, who resided in the 4th concession of Thurlow township, died yesterday after a lingering illness. Deceased was in his 70th year and had resided in Thurlow for many years, where he was well and favorably known. He was a member of the Methodist church. A widow and family survive.

THOS. BARNES.

Mr. Thos. Barnes, hotel-keeper at Cannifton village, died this morning. The deceased was born in Thurlow township 54 years ago, and had lived all his life there. He had been proprietor of the Ontario House but a short time when he was taken ill, which proved to be fatal. Mr. Barnes was an adherent of the Methodist church. Mrs. Barnes and a family of one daughter, Mrs. F. C. Fairman, and one son, Harry, survive.

Some Good Shots.

The Militia department publishes the names of the best shots in districts 1, 2, 3 and 4, the 49th Regiment, as will be seen, making an excellent showing:

SNOW STORMS CAUSED ALL SORTS OF TROUBLE.

TRAINS AND STAGES A LONG WAY BEHIND TIME—ACCIDENT NEAR KINGSTON.

The snow storm which yesterday visited this section of the community has again played havoc with the roads. The stages from Tweed and Ivanhoe had not reached the city at 3 p.m., and will probably not arrive here at all to-day.

On the line of the railway there was also trouble. The mail train, which should arrive here at 11.40 a.m., from the west, came to grief near Port Hope, owing to the engine leaving the track and falling partially over on her side.

The Peterboro train made an effort to reach that town this morning. The train started out from here with two engines, but was unable to clear the track, and had to return.

It was reported in the city that the east-bound express, leaving here at 1.30 this morning, struck a freight train near Kingston, doing considerable damage to two cars and causing much delay.

The international express from the east, due here at 1.40 p.m., was two hours late.

OF INTEREST TO LADIES.

The visit of Prof. Dorenwend to Belleville, at Hotel Quinte, on Friday, Feb. 19th, will afford the ladies of Belleville and surrounding country an opportunity of consulting him regarding their hair, its needs and their requirements in all styles of hair goods. Prof. Dorenwend carries with him a large and most varied assortments of his famous conceptions in switches, bangs, pompadours, wavy fronts and wigs. Evangelistic Services.

The theme of Evangelist Shield's address last evening was "The Russo-Japanese War," the text being Luke 14.31-32. Russia's desire for possessions, her seizure of the province of Manchuria and her broken promises to the powers, had been the occasion of the present war, while her delay in replying to the note of the Japanese Foreign Office and her discourteous treatment of the Japanese Ambassador, had precipitated the present conflict. There was a striking parallel between Russia and the kingdom of the evil one. The souls of men were intended to be provinces of God's dominion, and Satan had seized them, even as Russia had seized Manchuria. God had declared war in order to cause Satan's withdrawal from his usurped possessions, and was now laying siege to the hearts of men. They had the alternative of surrendering to God or being destroyed by the force of God. The subject for this evening will be "How Simple Jack Was Saved."

RELIGION'S MYSTERIES

PREACHER DEALS WITH THINGS BEYOND HUMAN UNDERSTANDING.

THEIR ACCEPTANCE BY FAITH.

The Footprints of Truth—Mysteries of the Gospel—A Mystery Essential to Peace—Mystery of the Trinity—Harmonizing Creeds—God Too Big For Finite Mind to Compass.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by William Baily, of Toronto, at the Dep't of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 14.—In dealing with those mysteries of religion that are beyond human understanding and which many find a stumbling block to belief the preacher in this sermon urges their acceptance by faith as the first essential step toward elucidation. The text is I Timothy iii, 16, "Great is the mystery of godliness."

Ignorance is a stunted scoffer. As a dwarf she will ridicule the helping hand of knowledge, which she is too short of stature to reach. As an iconoclastic waif of the street she will hurl derisive missiles at the big square windows of the temple of wisdom, whose walls she is too puny to topple down. "Come," said an aristocratic but very ignorant woman of London to her guest—"come into the front room. I want to show you a poor, crazy, deluded and yet harmless old man. He seems to have an intelligent face, but there he sits in the house just across the street hour after hour, day after day and week after week as a little child, with a clay pipe, blowing soap bubbles." Who was the frivolous hostess who was patronizingly asking her guest to laugh at the old man who seemed to find employment in blowing a few soap bubbles in Leicester Square, London? Not one person of this generation ever heard of her name. Who was the poor, silly old man of intelligent face, with a penny clay pipe, blowing soap bubbles? He was Isaac Newton, whose skull incased the greatest brain of his time. He was Isaac Newton, laboriously, intensely, unremittingly studying the laws of the refraction of light, for which investigations and discoveries he was to be honored by scientific societies all around the world. It is never safe to take public opinion as a guide in estimating men or things. Shallow critics often assume a sapient mien and in supercilious tone deride the wisdom they cannot comprehend. A stuffed owl with spectacles on nose may pose in a museum as an emblem of wisdom, but the winged denizen of the forest hooting in the darkness is no feathered oracle.

How often have the pure white garments of wisdom been bespattered and befouled by blatant, bombastic ignorance! How often has the philosopher and the truth seeker been taunted with his failure to solve the problems of the universe! He does not know everything; no man more conscious of that fact then he. But should he on that account desert the fountain of wisdom and refrain altogether from drinking at the Pierian spring? Should the scientific student be so discouraged at his limitations as to destroy the telescope because it does not reach the limits of space? Should he throw away his microscope because it does not magnify enough? Is he to burn out with senseless passion eyes that are not omniscient and wreck his eardrums because they fail to detect remote harmonies? Isaac Newton, himself the greatest philosopher of his time, was one of the humblest of men. At the end of his life he said: "I know not how I may appear to others. As for myself, I seem to be like a schoolboy playing at the foot of the sand dunes, gathering here a white shell and a smoother stone than ordinary, while the great sea of knowledge lies all unexplored before me." Because a man does not know everything, that is no reason why he should despise the "temple of wisdom." Because here and there a veil or a mist cannot be penetrated, that is no reason why he should become a ground mole and not try to follow in the self revealed footprints of truth.

There are two purposes for this sermon. The first is to talk about some of the great mysteries of the gospel. I would show you that about every church altar there are great Appalachian ranges, great towering mountain peaks of mysteries. So high they are that the mind of man cannot attain to them, yet each bears the mark of divine certitude, the mark of the cross is stamped upon them as the Mount of the Holy Cross in Colorado bears the sign of the cross. To this sign we bow and believe, even though we cannot understand. Peter could not understand; John of the Apocalypse could not understand, and Paul, beholding them, exclaimed, "Great is the mystery of godliness!" What those mighty intellects could not grasp must be a mystery to us until it is fully explained beyond the grave.

The second purpose of the sermon is the practical side. It is to remind you that, though we now "know only in part," that part is sufficient for all the great purposes of salvation and redemption. It is to prove, as E. H. Chapin puts it, that "although we see through a glass darkly, we do see something," and that that "something" is sufficient if we welcome it as a gospel handmaid to lead us into perfect peace and to lead us to that throne of God, where each can say, "I shall know even as also I am known."

The mystery of the Trinity: How can there be three persons and one Godhead? "Three in One and One in Three?" That is an inexplainable mystery. "You must be very careful," wrote a dear ministerial friend to me when I was preaching a series of sermons upon the Holy Spirit. "You must be very careful not to convey the false idea to your people that there are three distinct and separate thrones in heaven." It is a mystery to be reverently accepted beyond the power of the human mind to understand, and that it should be so is not strange, for God himself has declared, "As the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways and my thoughts than your thoughts." We cannot explain the personality of God any more than you can tell why the grass grows or the sun shines. But we do feel and know that, like the grass and the light, the Trinity of the Godhead is a great divine fact. And, furthermore, we do feel and know that as God the Father lives, so Christ was born into this world not only to save us from sin, but also to prove that God the Creator is a God of love. Mystery, mystery, mystery! A high, deep, impenetrable and overpowering mystery! Yet the mystery of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit is a fact revealed to us, to be accepted by faith and bringing to all who so receive it a message of joy and peace.

Consider how near this conception of Christ, the Divine Son manifested in human flesh, brings the Deity to us. If we did not have the manifestation of God's love in Jesus Christ, how would we worship? Even the lowest forms of religious truths cannot exist in the heart of man without some kind of an incarnation. I said some years ago in India to a Buddhist priest: "You do not believe that these hideous idols of wood and clay and stone have any divine power? You do not believe that those bleared eyes and that horrible grin and that twisted body is a god? You know you do not. Why, I could knock him down with my hand. I could crush him with the heel of my foot." "Oh, yes," answered the priest. "What you say is true. We intelligent leaders of the east do not believe those idols are gods. But the common people cannot conceive of a spirit God, as our prophet has revealed him to us. So we give the common people a god of clay and wood, which they can see and touch." Brother, our God has sent us Jesus Christ in the flesh. He came as a revelation of God. He came so that our finite minds might grasp the infinite. He came to show us that God could suffer as we suffer and be tempted as we are tempted, yet be without sin. He came as a God of never ending love. Mystery! Mystery! The Trinity is an inexplainable mystery. Yet it is a mystery we all need, a mystery we should all accept. It is a mystery essential to our peace.

Thus the mystery of the Trinity means simply this: God the Father comes to us and says: "To explain to you all things, my child, would be to set before you what you could not comprehend. Your mind is too weak to grasp it, any more than a little child in his father's laboratory can understand or grasp the chemical principle of the adhesion of the basic elements. But if you see the Godhead veiled by a human form, if you see the Spirit of God animating a being like yourself, if you come in contact with the divine perfections, active in human environment, you will then have a glimpse of the glory of the Godhead and realize something of the supernal mystery of Father, Son and Holy Spirit. All this I will show to prove that I am God, the Loving Father, and ye are my children." To-day we find the Trinity a mystery. But, though a mystery, deep and high and overpowering, it is a mystery so simple that a little child can reverence the majesty of the Father, can realize the love of the Son and can yield to the influence of the Holy Spirit. Great and yet beautiful and simple is the mystery of godliness in Jesus Christ.

The conflicting doctrines of God's omnipotence and man's free agency are an inexplainable mystery. Yes, we know that God is infinitely greater than man. We know that the Creator, who holds the seas in the palm of his hand and at whose touch the volcanoes smoke and the earth trembles and whose voice is the voice of the storm, has supreme control over the creatures he has made. He can say to man, "Go, and he goeth; come, and he cometh; do this, and he doeth it." But, though God the Omnipotent is truly all powerful, I know I can resist his will. I know, as a free agent, I can raise my hand or lower it. I know that I can clinch my fist with hate or have the open palm of love. I know I can walk across this pulpit to the right or to the left. I know I can choose between right and wrong. Free, free! Free am I, gloriously free! A mystery—a great unfathomable mystery! With God the Omnipotent I am still man, the free agent.

These two conflicting facts are true, but who can reconcile them? Therefore, after we have once accepted this mystery we can harmonize all Christian creeds at the foot of the cross. With it we can take down the bars of sectarianism and call all members of the different Protestant churches our brothers and our sisters. "How can you do that?" says some one to me. Simply enough. After this mystery—this great fundamental mystery—is once granted the question of the manner of your service and the church in which you will worship is determined by the aspect from which you view your relation to God. If I begin to argue from God down to man, I become a Calvinist. If I say to myself: "I know God is omnipotent. I know he can foresee all things. He can save me if he will, I know," then I naturally go into the Presbyterian Church. But if I say to myself: "I know I am a free agent. I know I can accept or reject my Heavenly Father," I go into the Methodist Church. Then, instead of arguing from God down to man, I argue from man up to God? It is simply the difference of putting the emphasis of my creed upon God's omnipotence or man's free agency. Yet, though I was born a Calvinist and have been baptized in a Calvinistic church and have received my theological education in a Calvinistic seminary, yet to-day I feel just as much at home in the Methodist Church as I do in the Presbyterian. I could just as logically be a member of a Methodist conference as I am now a member of a Calvinistic presbytery.

The harmonizing of the two doctrines—God's omnipotence and man's free agency—is a task that many have attempted in vain. But it is a glorious mystery that should make of believers of the different Protestant churches brothers and sisters at the foot of the cross. Therefore, my Christian brother, if you are living in a small country town do not make the mistake of trying to run in that village five or six different churches when there are only enough inhabitants to support one. Do not try to run a Congregational church and a Methodist church and a Lutheran church and a Baptist church and an Episcopalian church and a United Presbyterian church. Do not keep on continually talking about "my church." All Christian churches ought to belong to you and you to them. The difference of Protestant creeds is merely that of extra emphasis upon some one of God's great attributes. Remember hereafter that you ought to be able to worship God just as devoutly and earnestly before a Methodist altar as at an Episcopalian chancel or as in a Presbyterian pew. God has many gospel sheepfolds. These sheep are all fed by the same Divine Shepherd, although at times they are separated from each other by the sectarian fences built by man's creed and by infinite ignorance. "Other sheep have I which are not of this fold" applies as much to the Protestant church across the street as to your own chapel.

The mystery of why God ever let sin come into the world: It is an inexplicable mystery. It is a mystery the more inexplicable because, from a human standpoint, if there had been no sin then there would have been no need of a place of future punishment. But, after we have once accepted the belief that a loving God has allowed sin to come into this world for a purpose which we cannot fathom or analyze, then we find that some of the most beautiful sacrifices of Christian heroes and heroines have been inspired from this source to overcome the awful and eternal effects of evil. If there had been no sin there would have been no Moffatts and Whipples and Judsons, no Careys and Taylors, no Wilsons and Brainerds, no Patons and Elliotts in the missionary fields trying to save the ignorant brutal and cannibalistic savages from the awful degradation of their lives. If there had been no sin there would have been no Catherine Booths as "angels of light" laboring among the London slums, no Howards among the prisons, no Williamses to reach out rescuing hands from the Young Men's Christian Associations. If there were no sin there would be no such saving work for us to do for Christ as we can one and all now perform in his name.

Mystery of the resurrection: How is the transformation between earth and heaven to take place? We know not. We cannot explain. The more we study it the deeper becomes the mystery. But though the resurrection is a mystery, though we cannot by human reason understand how these poor bodies of ours can be so transformed that they will live forever, we can when reason halts proceed under the higher guidance of faith and accept the assurance of the Scriptures, that "this mortal shall put on immortality," and that "if our earthly house of this tabernacle be dissolved we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." How can this body which we lay in the grave, giving it over to corruption, ever be revived? We do not know how, but we believe God and exclaim in triumph with the Patriarch, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and at last he shall stand upon the earth, and after my skin, even this body, is destroyed, then without my flesh shall I see God." Nor are we left exclusively to faith, for nature herself gives us a hint of a transformation so significant as to be encouraging. The other day my little girl brought to me a paper box, in which she had confined a caterpillar. This caterpillar had wrapped himself up in a cocoon. The cocoon looked exactly like a shroud. After awhile the caterpillar will emerge from that cocoon transformed into a beautiful butterfly. You cannot explain that transformation. Neither can I. Shall we witness the wonderful process of the caterpillar's metamorphosis from worm to butterfly and yet refuse to believe that God can, if he will, transform the physical body into a heavenly body?

I have preached this sermon on mysteries because I want young people, and especially young men, to fully realize that there are some statements found in the Bible that they should accept in faith, though they may never fully understand them in this life. Oh, man, if you are not ready to accept some facts about Christ and salvation you cannot understand then you are like a foolish man trying to encompass the Atlantic Ocean with a sewing girl's thimble or like a child peevishly sulking because you cannot understand the laws of gravity. God is too big for your finite mind to compass. Heaven is too large a place for you in your study to take apart and put together again as a little girl might play with her doll house.

Brother, sister, for many years troubled with mysteries, wash your eyes to-day in the "water of life" and look and live. Accept Christ as your Saviour and then leave all the inexplicable mysteries to be explained to you in a better world. "We now see as through a glass darkly;" yes, but, thank God, we can see enough to perceive the pardoning love of God in the face of Jesus Christ.

COMMISSION APPOINTED.

To Delimit the New Boundary Line of Alaska.

Ottawa, Feb. 16.—A joint commission has been appointed to delimit the Alaska boundary as determined by the tribunal which sat in London last summer. It will be composed of Mr. Tittman of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Mr. W. E. King, Dominion Astronomer. They will meet at an early date, probably in Washington, to draw up arrangements for the delimitation during the coming summer.

The Telephone Hearing.

Ottawa, Feb. 16.—It is likely that the hearing of applications from municipalities or independent telephone companies desirous of connecting with the C.P.R., which were to have been heard to-day, will be postponed until later. Some objection has been raised that the notice is too short for all the parties to reach here in time.

Deported Back to Canada.

Buffalo, Feb. 16.—Seven Chinamen smuggled into the United States in December last were yesterday ordered deported to Canada.

Winnipeg, Feb. 16.—Fire destroyed Hart's livery and seriously damaged Calder & Christie's stock of hardware at Carlyle, N.W.T., yesterday.

Kingston Will Petition Assembly.

Kingston, Feb. 16.—The City Council last night by a vote of 12 to 8 adopted a resolution to send a deputation to the Ontario Legislature, asking that the street railway charter be so altered that a penalty clause may be attached and that the company be compelled to run their cars throughout the year.

JOHN MORLEY DEFEATED

His Amendment Censuring Government's Fiscal Policy Lost.

Premier Balfour Has 51 Majority on This Vote of Want of Confidence—Irish Members Voted Against the Government Solely to Advance Home Rule—No Test of the Country's Feeling.

London, Feb. 16.—By a vote of 327 to 276 the House of Commons last night defeated John Morley's amendment to the address in reply to the speech from the throne censuring the Government's fiscal policy.

The division took the form of a vote of want of confidence in the Government, which impelled many Unionists who totally disagree with the idea of protection to vote to keep Premier Balfour in power. While Mr. Balfour's absence was keenly felt, it was perhaps a source of strength to his party, as without any defined fiscal declaration from the Premier, many of his supporters felt justified in upholding the Government. Joseph Chamberlain was absent. A general election is expected in the autumn.

John Redmond, the Irish leader, said the Irish party voted against the Government solely to forward the cause of home rule. He added the same action would be taken against every Government until home rule is secured.

Neither the speeches last night nor the division can be taken as accurate indication of the probable trend of the British opinion on the fiscal question. In the lobbies of the House of Commons it was frankly admitted that votes were given to the Government which may be counted on the Opposition side, when a general election on the basis of free trade versus protection occurs.

A large crowd heard the debate.

Scarcely a member of the House who voted with the Government last night did not frankly admit his ignorance of the degree of fiscal reform to which the Cabinet is really committed. The hopeless division of opinion among members has been a feature of the discussion.

20 Unionists Against.

Sixty-nine Nationalists voted against the Government, also 20 Unionists, including Right Hon. Charles H. Ritchie, Lord George Hamilton, Lord Hugh Cecil, Winston Churchill, Sir John Gorst, George Kemp and Hon. Fred W. Lambton. The division resulted in a vote for the amendment of 276 and against it 327, making a Government majority of 51.

LORD ROBERTS RETIRES.

Will Give His Services to Imperial Defence Committee—Duke of Connaught Is Inspector-General.

London, Feb. 16.—It is officially announced that Lord Roberts has retired from the War Office, but that at the special request of Premier Balfour he has consented to place his services at the disposal of the Committee for Imperial Defence.

The Duke of Connaught has been appointed Inspector-General under the new army reform scheme.

MAYOR AVERTED PANIC.

Draperies Caught Fire at an Entertainment—Many Women Fainted.

New York, Feb. 16.—A panic was averted at the annual entertainment of the Anawanda Club in Terrace Garden last night by the presence of mind of Mayor McClellan and Charles F. Murphy, the Tammany leader. While a vaudeville performance was in progress some evergreen decorations in front of Mr. Murphy's box caught fire from a defective electric wire. Mr. Murphy reached out and tore down some draperies that were threatened, but the audience had already risen and a rush had begun for the doors. Mayor McClellan, in the opposite box, implored the audience to remain seated, as all danger was over, and in a few moments order was restored. During the excitement many women fainted.

Collision at Kingston.

Kingston, Feb. 16.—There was a collision of trains at the G.T.R. junction early yesterday morning, but fortunately with no serious results. The belated western passenger train was coming in when it collided with a freight train on the main line. Two men in the caboose had a thrilling escape getting off with cuts and bruises. Passengers ready to debark at Kingston were thrown down by the collision and several were bruised, but not seriously injured.

THE SOO WAGES RETURN

Big Salaries Paid As Well As Wages of Workingmen.

Provincial Secretary Laid the Figures, Some 300 Pages, on the Table of the House—The South Wellington License Inspectorship—Was Inspector Dismissed or Did He Just Resign.

Toronto, Feb. 16.—There was a very short session of the Legislature yesterday, and no topics of absorbing interest were on the boards. The request of Mr. Reid of Addington for the yeas and nays when the Premier moved the adjournment provoked universal laughter. At the time there was a Conservative majority, but the Speaker declared the adjournment. The Government would have been defeated by three votes if the Opposition had insisted upon "catching the Government unawares."

Wellington Inspectorship.

Mr. Downey moved for a return of complaints received by the License Department against W. S. Cowan, formerly license inspector for South Wellington, any reports touching the investigation into such complaints and copy of correspondence touching the dismissal of W. S. Cowan.

Mr. Downey pointed out that the question was: "Did Cowan just resign, or was he dismissed?" The usual methods of the department, he said, had not been followed in this case.

Mr. Stratton said that Cowan was dismissed on the verbal report of the Inspector, and it was common report that the law had not been enforced.

The Premier said License Inspectors held office subject to removal without investigation, and they were so informed by Order-in-Council.

Mr. Smith of Peel, moved the second reading of his bill to permit public libraries to charge a fee to outsiders.

The "Soo Wages Return.

The Provincial Secretary laid on the table of the House the names of the employes of the Lake Superior Consolidated Company, whose salaries were paid by the Government after the collapse of the Soo industries, with the amount received in each case. The report fills about 300 pages of foolscap. There are about 4,000 names and the total amount paid by the banks, on the authority of the Government, was about a quarter of a million dollars. There are some large amounts included in the statement, the high-salaried officials of the company also benefiting from the decision of the Government to pay the money. The amounts cover the period of August and September. Here are the figures:

C. S. Shields, president, $5000 for August and September.

William Coyne, assistant to the president, $1200.

T. E. Donahue, secretary to the president, $450.

J. S. Wynn, comptroller and assistant secretary, $1200.

C. P. Worthington, general auditor, September, $216.

A. H. Chitty, treasurer, for August and September, $500.

W. H. Cowell, purchasing agent, August and September, $500.

C. Moore, real estate agent, August and September, $833.31.

A. Elliott, counsel, August and September, $1000.

J. E. Irving, counsel, August and September, $1000.

H. C. Hamilton, counsel, August and September, $610.

J. R. W. McLean, surgeon, August and September, $209.

William Coyne, assistant to president, $406.

W. H. Cowell, purchasing agent, $177.

C. S. Shields, president, $1693.

D. D. Lewis, superintendent Steel Company, $645.16.

J. S. Wynn, controller Steel Company, $255.

A. H. Chitty, treasurer, $469.35.

J. E. Irving, counsel, $338.71.

A. E. Elliott, counsel, $338.71.

D. D. Lewis, superintendent Steel Company, $2000.

C.P.R. TRAIN DITCHED.

Bad Smash-Up on the Deloraine Branch—One Passenger Injured.

Winnipeg, Feb. 16.—The eastbound passenger train on the Deloraine branch of the C.P.R. was ditched near Killarney yesterday afternoon. One passenger, Mr. Young of Napinka, was injured. The others escaped as by a miracle. The train was a double-header and running fast when it encountered a snow drift. Both engines and every car left the track, several toppling over, including the mail, baggage car and smoker. The track and rolling stock were badly damaged.

A Brandon Tragedy.

Winnipeg, Feb. 16.—The body of a well-dressed young man was found three miles east of Brandon yesterday entangled in a wire fence. He had apparently lost his way in a snowstorm.

Dynamited a Bridge.

Salonica, Feb. 16.—A band of Bulgarians on Feb. 13 dynamited a bridge between Demirhissar and Djumbala. Seven workmen and two soldiers were killed.

WHY CANADIAN FACTORIES SHUT DOWN.

The growth in Canadian imports of iron and steel since 1897 is appalling. During the first year the Liberals were in power the tariff as framed by the Conservative party was in force, and our iron and steel purchases abroad amounted to:

Dutiable goods	$8,666,497
Free goods	1,947,133
Total	$10,613,630

Then, Hon. W. S. Fielding commenced to tinker with the tariff, and foreigners found ready markets in Canada for their wares. The home manufacturers of every article touched by the financial agent of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, immediately found it unprofitable to produce their goods. The ruinous competition from the pauper labor centres of Germany and the trusts of the United States steadily forced native factories to the wall, until in 1903, Canadian iron and steel imports were 400 per cent. greater than in 1897. According to Hon. Wm. Patterson's report of Trade and Navigation, Canada imported in iron and steel in 1903:

Dutiable goods	$30,684,012
Total	$41,880,116

Think what this means! In 1903, with the great iron works at the "Soo," and "Sydney struggling for an existence," the Laurier Government permitted $31,266,480 worth more of iron and steel to come into the country than was imported in 1897. Thousands of idle men bear living testimony to the viciousness of the fiscal policy.

Are Canadians willing to continue sending their money abroad, in order to close home factories and starve Canadian workmen? If they desire such conditions, a vote for a Liberal candidate at the approaching elections will be a demand for more foreign wares and fewer Canadian workshops.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The Ottawa Citizen declares that the Veterans have been goldbricked by the Ross Government. The land set apart for them to locate on is not worth having. Seven thousand have not yet taken up their locations, though they have had two years to do so and seven thousand represents the great majority of both Fenian Raid and South African surviving Veterans for the province of Ontario. That number represents no less than 1,120,000 acres, and as, under the Ross regulations, only one Veteran can locate in every square mile, it represents 7,000 square miles of surveyed territory. As they have to locate their claims by the end of this year, the chance of the bulk of them getting anything at all is supremely slim even if they accept "rock, bog and sand."

The fashionable fad in London just now is to give old furniture as wedding presents. Only rich people can afford to do things of that kind.

It was noticeable this morning that, although Lent doesn't begin till to-morrow, some people have already given up shovelling snow.

Hamilton newspapers have a new casus belli. At a recent wedding in that city, it is alleged, the fair sex of the Ambitious City, in large numbers, thronged the church, stood on seats, stole flowers, jostled the principals and generally conducted themselves like their fashionable sisters in New York are in the habit of doing. One of the Hamilton papers criticized the women severely for their actions, the other papers took up the cudgels for them, and in a brief space of time a war was raging which made the Russo-Jap affair look like a ping-pong tournament. Some of the epithets they are calling each other have the eastern war names beaten a block.

• • •

The belief expressed by this paper yesterday—that the O.H.A. would give Belleville fair play—has turned out to be true. Surely, now, the boys have been badgered and persecuted enough. Will their envious enemies kindly let them alone for the balance of the season? We hope so.

A BURNING QUESTION.

(Simcoe Reformer.)

A Hamilton preacher has been telling his congregation that hell is a place of torment where sinners burn forever in real fire, and that those who reject this doctrine only do so because they wish to go on sinning and escape the consequences of their sin. The reverend gentleman should read up a bit. There is not in the world to-day a Christian scholar of even the second class who believes as he does.

A PRETTY BAD GUESS!

A BUFFALO NEWSPAPER HAD A PICTURE OF A JAPANESE WARSHIP BEING CHASED BY A RUSSIAN.

(Toronto News.)

The Buffalo Courier has been doing its part towards the propogation of international gaiety. It will be recalled that the unfortunate Russian battleship Retvizan was built in Philadelphia, and that the larger Japanese ships are British-built. With a highly intelligent anticipation of coming events near Port Arthur. The Courier a fortnight ago published a picture of the Retvizan chasing the Hatsuse, one of the Japanese battleships. The Japanese vessel is in ignominious flight, and the Russian—which is a full knot slower—is pressing hotly upon her. The "architectural details," we are assured, "are faithfully followed"; which doubtless accounts for the Hatsuse being depicted as firing her forward turret-guns at an enemy astern. The point of the picture is the footline. "The drawing," The Courier says, "represents the American-built "battleship Retvizan chasing the "British-built Japanese battleship "Hatsuse." The exquisite courtesy of this is equalled only by its common sense.

IS YOUR DOCTOR BILL LARGE?

Best way to keep it small is not to call the doctor, but use Nerviline instead. For minor ailments, like colds, coughs, chills, cramps, headache and stomach trouble Nerviline is just as good as any doctor. It breaks up a cold in one night, cures soreness in the chest, and for neuralgia, toothache and rheumatism you can't get anything half as good as Nerviline. The fame of Nerviline for cramps, colic and pain in the stomach extends far and wide. Good for everything a liniment can be good for and costs but 25c for a large bottle.

LONDON TIMES VS. RUSSIA.

A BATTLE ROYAL—THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER HITTING RUSSIA UNMERCIFULLY.

(Toronto News.)

Japan is not the only power with which Russia is raging war. The Tsar's Government has The Times to deal with. Some months ago the officials took offence at some statements as to the social unrest in Russia, made by the St. Petersburg correspondent of The Times and expelled him from the country at short notice, and with considerable harshness. Thereupon the greatest newspaper in the world declared war upon the greatest bureaucracy. It has organized a corps of secret correspondents over the Empire, and steadily publishes despatches of a frankness which must madden Russian officialdom. The most interesting information with regard to Russian military and naval preparations for the war with Japan, appeared in The Times' telegraphic news.

Mr. George Grossmith, England's premier entertainer, appears at the Carman to-night. "The smile that won't come off" is the best description of the faces of a Grossmith gathering. To entertain, unaided, for a whole evening, an audience of several thousand people, needs a touch of genius and magnetism combined with art, possessed by few other entertainers. His auditors show the outward and visible signs of inward enjoyment the moment Mr. Grossmith steps on the platform. His benign and genial cast of countenance seems to draw his audience to him at once. The amused smile, broadening into a quiet and contained, and then a laugh, which runs rippling over the whole house, breaks forth into peals of merriment when the climax of the story is reached.

CAPT. DANCE'S HEROIC DEED 100 YEARS AGO.

HOW A FLEET OF BRITISH MERCHANTMEN PUT TO FLIGHT A FLEET OF FRENCH MEN-OF-WAR.

(Mail and Empire.)

Just a hundred years ago yesterday, as a valued correspondent reminds us, was fought a battle which shed great glory on British arms, and in other respects was unique among sea fights. Strange to say, this engagement has no name to which it might answer in the roll call of famous fights, and having no name, is almost forgotten. Less heroic exploits have had their bards their enthusiastic historians, but Captain Dance's deed has received scant attention. It is on record in the dusty archives of the Admiralty office, and there it has slumbered for a full century. Now, for a day it is to be rescued from its oblivion and held up to the eyes of men. This nameless sea fight in the Indian ocean occurred in the war with France. A fleet of British merchantmen was on its homeward voyage in February, 1904, under command of Captain Nathaniel Dance. As was necessary in those troublous times the ships were armed to resist the possible attack of pirates as privateers. On the fourteenth of the month, before sunset, a French squadron, headed by the Marengo, of 84 guns, was sighted. Instead of attempting to escape the British merchantmen kept close together, determined to fight. Next morning the French opened fire. Captain Dance, with eight of his merchantmen, returned the compliment and bore down on the Frenchmen, whose commander was the noted Admiral Linois. A short but fierce engagement ensued, and at the end of it the astonishing spectacle of a number of men-o'-war being pursued by a fleet of merchantmen was presented to the eyes of the watchers on the ships not engaged. However the British vessels might overmatch their opponents in fighting, they were not their equal in sailing. So they returned and resumed their homeward voyage. Captain Dance received a knighthood for his gallantry, and so passes out of our history. His signal midshipman was destined to win a wider fame as an Arctic explorer. This was Sir John Franklin. Good men! Over a hundred years we salute them.

THEY DROVE PIMPLES AWAY.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

The biggest brave does not always make the best chief.

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

Sleeplessness.—When the nerves are unstrung and the whole body given up to wretchedness, when the mind is filled with gloom and dismal forebodings, the result of derangement of the digestive organs, sleeplessness comes to add to the distress. If only the subject could sleep, there would be the oblivion for a while and temporary relief. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will not only induce sleep, but will act so beneficially that the subject will wake refreshed and restored to happiness.

No prayer ever failed to be heard because it was too short.

A WONDERFUL CURE.—Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly to cure the sore but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle and when I had used about one-half, the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done, it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using 3 bottles of the Vegetable Discovery, the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 69 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a cruise.

THE PUBLIC should bear in mind that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has nothing in common with the impure, deteriorating class of so-called medicinal oils. It is eminently pure and really efficacious—relieving pain and lameness, stiffness of the joints and muscles, and sores or hurts, besides being an excellent specific for rheumatism, coughs and bronchial complaints.

Seven hundred British subjects are yearly born at sea.

These two desirable qualifications, pleasant to the taste and at the same time effectual, are to be found in Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator, Children like it.

Much talk, many lies.

To get relief from indigestion, biliousness, constipation or torpid liver without disturbing the stomach or purging the bowels, take a few doses of Carter's Little Liver Pills, they will please you.

The average watch represents but 12 hours of human labor.

They make one feel as though life was worth living. Take one of Carter's Little Liver Pills after eating; it will relieve dyspepsia, aid digestion, give tone and vigor to the system.

On occasion knowing what one wants is as difficult as getting it.

That tired, languid feeling and dull headache is very disagreeable. Take two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring, and you will find relief. They never fail to do good.

Nothing so suddenly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their afflictions from a neglected [illegible] the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, of exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state.

Have you tried Holloway's Corn Cure? It has no equal for removing these troublesome excrescences, as many have testified who have tried it.

A long portage makes a heavy canoe.

PINCHED AND PUNY

South American Nervine is the Antidote for the ills which are induced by humanity's "mad rush" for an existence. The "eat and run" way of living is accountable for more of the pinched and puny faces than any other cause under the sun.

Dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, sick headache are the prime causes for broken-up nerves. Nature foretold the strain that we would be compelled to live under and has revealed to medical science the favorite formula—South American Nervine—and its daily joy is to put back the bloom of perfect health in the faces of millions who do honest toil 26

THE ISLE OF NOBLES.

A Famous Historic Site, the Cradle of Saxon Liberty.

The isle of Athelney, or the "isle of nobles," as the name signifies, is one of the most famous of historic sites. A thousand years ago it was a low islet covered with willows and alders and surrounded by fens and overflowing marshes, altogether inaccessible except by boats. There King Alfred sought refuge with a swineherd, and there he lay concealed from the invading Danes for the space of a whole year. The resort of his chieftains to this place caused it to be known as the "isle of nobles," which may be regarded as the cradle and stronghold of Saxon liberty. After Alfred regained the possession of his throne he erected a Benedictine abbey on this spot and "endowed it with all the lands in the isle of Athelney." The monastery has entirely disappeared, but its site is marked by a stone pillar erected in 1801 by the owner of Athelney. The pillar bears this inscription: "King Alfred the Great in the year of our Lord 879, having been defeated by the Danes, fled for refuge to the forest of Athelney, where he lay concealed from his enemies for the spell of a whole year. He soon after regained possession of his throne, and in grateful remembrance of the protection he had received under the favor of heaven he erected a monastery on this spot and endowed it with all the lands contained in the isle of Athelney. To perpetuate the memory of so remarkable an incident in the life of that illustrious prince this edifice was founded by John Slade, Esq., of Maunsell, the proprietor of Athelney, A. D. 1801."—London News.

THE MAN WITH THE ADZ.

Outside a butcher shop twenty or thirty persons stood watching a man at work with an adz. He stood on a large oaken block, such as meat is chopped on, which he had taken from its legs and placed on the curb, sloping toward the street. The surface of the block had become scarred and roughened from use. With clean, accurate strokes of the adz the man soon made it as smooth as a mahogany table. It was the wonderful accuracy of his aim that made passersby stop to look at him. He paid no attention to them. A single false blow would have ruined the block. When the job was done, the man helped the butcher mount the block, collected $5 and went off to keep another appointment.

"It has taken me twenty-three years to learn to chop like that," he said to a reporter. "My charge is from $5 to $10, according to the size of the block. A block requires evening off in that way every three or four years. I have customers now that I had when I first began business, twenty-five years ago. In all that time I have spoiled only two blocks, and they were during the two years of my apprenticeship. The butchers can get their chopping blocks put in condition by sending them to the sawmill. But it is more expensive, and they can't spare them so long from the shops. There is enough work of this kind in New York to keep myself and half a dozen others busy."

Korean Men's Hats.

The quaintest feature of the picturesque costumes of the Korean men is their hats. They are mousetrap-like arrangements made from the hair of the wearer's ancestors. This priceless possession is handed down from father to eldest son, who reaches the goal of his ambition at the moment when the family hat is placed upon his head. Another grotesque form of Korean headdress is the mourning hat that is worn in rural districts by the eldest son for three years after the death of either of his parents. This conical shaped affair of rushes or rice straw is as large as a bushel basket and extends to the shoulders.

The Value of Exercise.

The brain that never calls upon itself for work must become dull and stupid, and it is the same way with the muscles of the body. They are filled with blood vessels that should be up and doing. The blood has several purposes, and one is to carry away the waste fluids of the body. The lungs are a sort of refinery, and the blood is a distilling agent. If the blood becomes thick and unhealthy and sluggish the body does not keep its youthful state. Eyes grow dull, lips lose their redness, and the complexion is sallow and unlovely. It is an easy and simple matter to make exercise a habit.

Wart Cures.

Vinegar and cooking soda in solution are said to make a capital cure for warts. If the wart is kept moist with it for ten minutes several times a day it will disappear in the course of a week or so in ordinary cases.

Another cure is to touch frequently with acetic acid or nitric acid, but one must be careful not to irritate the surrounding skin by dropping either acid.

Why They Spoke.

"We had known each other slightly," said Miss Evvy Waite, "but never to speak to until one day while out skating I fell down quite near him, and"—

"Ah, yes!" replied Miss Peppery. "That broke the ice, of course."

Choosing a Minister.

Dean Everett used to say that parish committees had no more ability choosing a minister than a minister showed in buying a horse.

The man who becomes his own doctor has a fool for a patient as truly as the man who acts as his own lawyer has a fool for a client.

A Man is Only as Old as He Feels.

Locomotive Economy.

James J. Hill has introduced a new economy on the railroads which he controls. Each engine has a tab kept on its daily employment, and against it is charged every cent used for oil, fuel, repairs and operation. Thus if engine No. 200 is found to be costing more than engine No. 250 the engineer of the former is asked to explain. The same plan is to be extended to every car on the system. Then the conductor and enginemen who make the best showing are to have bonuses.

Kidney Disease Results From Colds

EXPOSURE OF THE BACK TO DRAFT NOT AN INFREQUENT CAUSE OF THIS DREADFULLY PAINFUL AILMENT.

The kidneys are very susceptible to cold, so much so that a current of cold air on the back is sufficient to cause congestion of these organs.

It is also a very common thing for heavy colds to settle on the kidneys and give rise to the most complicated diseases.

While teamsters, railroadmen and others, whose work subjects them to more than ordinary exposure are especially liable to be overtaken by kidney disease, it is also frequent among indoor workers.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are so wonderfully prompt in their action on the kidneys that they are especially valuable in cases of kidney disease, which arise from colds.

Backache, highly colored urine, pain or smarting when passing water, head ache, cramps in the legs, constipation, alternating with looseness of the bowels, fickle appetite, vomiting and general feelings of discomfort are among the most common symptoms.

The record of cures effected by means of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills has not been equalled in the history of medicine. In the majority of the homes of Canada these pills are always at hand as an indispensable family medicine.

Mr. John Orr, lumberman, Trenton, Ont., states: "Through exposure to all sorts of weather in the lumber camp and as a result of the strain of my work, I became a sufferer from kidney disease, which in my case took the form of very severe pains across the back, over the kidneys and down the hips. When in the woods cutting trees these pains would come on me with such force that I would have to give up work and return to camp entirely used up. Finding that a number of the boys in the camp used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills I decided to try them and did so with splendid results, as they thoroughly cured me."

To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

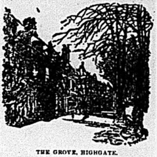
OLD HIGHGATE.

Contains Cromwell House, an Interesting Architectural Vestige of a Day Long Gone By—A Dickens' Echo.

The name Highgate originated from the erection at the summit of the hamlet (350 feet above Thames level) of a gate for the Bishop of London's tolls, the prelate having allowed a road to be cut through his park for traffic between the metropolis and the Northern and Midland counties. Although centuries have passed the circumstance has a memorial in the sign "The Gatehouse Tavern," at the entrance to North road. Within recent memory a toll bar stood outside the hostel, notwithstanding the abolition of levies.

One of the most interesting architectural vestiges of Highgate is Cromwell House, now the Convalescent Home for Sick Children on the hill leading to the town from Upper Holloway. Much altered in the exterior, the red brickwork edifice yet bears witness that it once must have been a stately and commodious mansion. It was built by the Lord Protector for Ireton and his wife, Bridget Cromwell. The stairways, with balustrades full of rich and quaint design, are most handsome, and the gardens and pleasure walks very beautiful. Equally noteworthy is the picturesque building on the opposite side, known as the Andrew Marvell House. There resided the celebrated Puritan gentleman, the friend of Milton, and a statesman, satirist, and political writer. To his many accomplishments Marvell added poetry, and some of his most elegant verses were written at Highgate.



THE GROVE, HIGHGATE.

Other old-time landmarks are Church House, once the home of Sir John Hawkins, who wrote "A History of Music," and the Wollaston almshouse in Southwood lane. In the same thoroughfare the Baptist chapel has interesting associations. It was in long past times Presbyterian, and numbered among its ministers Dr. Williams, founder of the library of divinity and philosophy bearing his name, and the husband of Mrs. Barbauld. Dickens, so often a rambler over the Northern Heights, remembered Highgate in "David Copperfield." There the novelist placed the residence of Dr. Strong.

Canadians often make pilgrimage to Highgate to see the house in which Coleridge lived. It is in the Grove near St. Michael's Church, a peaceful spot with old houses and a row of elms that must remind New Englanders of nooks in their own Concord and Salem. The poet put himself under the care of a doctor, Mr. Gilman, and Charles Lamb in a letter on the subject wrote: "I think his essentials not touched; he is very bad, but then he picks up wonderfully another day, and his face when he repeats his verses has all its ancient glory; an archangel a little damaged." Coleridge was buried in the old chapel, the site of which is coverd by the handsome Cholemely school. Hard by is the green, a pretty little quarter, with a tavern that knew Hogarth and Morland.

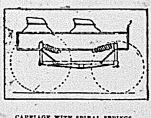
The great mansions have gone like the frolicsome local ceremonial of "Swearing on the Horns," mentioned by Byron. James I. was a guest at Arundel House, and there Ben Jonson produced his masque, The Penate, and the great Bacon died in 1626. Lauderdale House, a residence of Nell Gwynne, stood on ground now part of the delightful park given the district by Sir Sydney Waterlow.

Highgate, in addition to its lofty situation, is fringed with great natural beauty, whether Millfield lane, picturesque in the chain of ponds and view over Caen Wood; or the woods towards Hornsey, opened to the public for ever by the Duchess of Albany in 1898.

FOR ROUGH ROADS.

Spiral Springs to Take the Place of Flat Ones on Vehicles.

The accompanying illustration will convey better than words the idea of a recently patented method of mounting vehicle bodies which allows the utilization of the familiar spiral springs in the place of the flat ones now so generally used for this purpose. The front and rear axles support upright standards which are suitably braced to give greater rigidity to the under frame.



CARRIAGE WITH SPIRAL SPRINGS.

The body of the vehicle is supported from each standard by means of helical springs, which are inclined inwardly toward the centre of the carriage body, thus exerting radial pulls to prevent lateral swaying without interfering with their vertical yielding movement when the vehicle is passing over rough roadways.

According to suicide statistics in this country, the favorite age is between thirty and forty, married people being in the majority.

MEN'S DISEASES

There is seldom a day that we are not consulted in regard to a condition that, if we were to have seen it in its early stages, the sufferer would have been relieved, cured and saved considerable expense. This we consider is due to lack of knowledge on the part of the doctor who has previously treated the case; therefore, we say to you, if you are suffering from any disease or condition peculiar to men, or if you have been a victim and been disappointed in not getting a permanent cure elsewhere, we would ask that you come to our office for personal examination or write us for a Question Blank for Home Treatment. We will explain to you OUR SYSTEM OF TREATMENT, which we have originated and developed after our whole life's experience in the treatment of special diseases of men. We will give you, FREE OF CHARGE, an honest and scientific opinion of your case. If we find you are incurable we will honestly tell you so. If we find your case curable we will give you a written guarantee to cure you or refund you your money.

—YOU CAN PAY WHEN CURED—

We cure NERVOUS DEBILITY, VARICOCELE, STRICTURES, BLOOD and SKIN diseases, PROSTATIC troubles, BLADDER, KIDNEY and URINARY diseases.

The Life of Man.

Thousands of people are suffering for the want of life giving current, which nature intended they should possess. They do not live, they simply exist; in the faces of thousands can be read the story of a wasted life and blighted hopes. Joys and pleasures are unknown to them because their vitality is being sapped away by some disease. Many have sought relief in drugs and patent remedies to relieve their mental and physical sufferings. They are soothed for a day or may be for a week, falsely braced up until the effects of the drugs wears off like the momentary bracing up of whiskey. They sink lower in vitality and with the hope exhausted, lose confidence in themselves and decide to abandon all efforts to recover their power, feeling there is no hope for them. All this is caused from a wrecked nervous system or poor digestion, the steam of the system has run down and wants recharging. There is only one thing that will do it and that is electricity. Every nerve in the body is charged by this life giving power and when once lost from over work or other causes has got to be restored before the system works in a healthy state. As we have often said before, don't believe what we say alone, come and get a free treatment to convince yourself. The Gilmour Electric Belt is the only appliance sold to-day which will give the current. A sick person requires to get well. We will show you a list of names of people right here in Belleville who have got cured by the use of this appliance. You can go and see them for yourself, is not that good enough evidence for the truth? You have not got to go to Toronto or any of the other large cities, right here in this city we can refer you to 50. This belt has all the attachments for treating bladder and kidney trouble, varicocele, sexual weakness in any form, rheumatism, neuralgia in the neck and face, sciatica, varicose veins, nervous trouble or paralysis.

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN

When buying clothing, beware of the man who offers you $10 and $12 suits or overcoats for $3.98 or $4.76 Then again, do not be governed too much by the marked price—look to the value, the worth, the texture, trimmings and make of the goods themselves. A comparison thus made will show conclusively that the prices we quote are lower than goods of equal worth or quality can be bought for elsewhere.

READY TO TAKE FIELD.

Japan Has 300,000 Troops Ready—Merchant Steamers Rapidly Being Converted Into Auxiliary Cruisers.

Nagasaki, Feb. 12.—(Via Shanghai), Feb. 16.—The mobilization of the Japanese army has been carried out methodically. It is estimated that 300,000 troops are now ready to be placed in the field without impairing the national defence. The movements of the troops are surrounded in secrecy. They are being moved at night towards their bases at Essbo, Kure Miji and Yokusuka and the lights of ordinary trains are extinguished when in the neighborhood of troop trains.

Members of the reserve force immediately step into the places of the outgoing regulars. Their organization is perfect and a full equipment is ready for each of the reserves.

All the steamers of Japanese merchant lines are being rapidly converted into auxiliary cruisers, armed with quick-firing guns and fitted with torpedo boats.

May Lead to a Clash.

The Government officials refuse to give out any information regarding their military intentions. They expect to profit by dissentions in the Russian council of state. It is believed that the extraordinary powers conferred on Viceroy Alexieff will lead to a clash between Foreign Minister Lamsdorff and General Kuropatkin, especially as the latter is unfriendly to Alexieff. The result of a disagreement between these two Russian leaders here would end in a military muddle.

The Japanese are convinced that the Russians will be unable to concentrate and maintain 50,000 troops at any important point of military operations.

Dynamiting the Railway.

There is much talk current in regard to the possible dynamiting of the Russian railroad in Manchuria. The bands of Japanese who are practically undistinguishable from Chinese, are working in Manchuria, and would willingly risk their lives to aid their country's cause. A large body of troops is due in Nagasaki on Saturday to embark on transports for Corea.

Nagasaki and Yokohama harbors are protected by mines.

Several Russian merchant vessels, which have been captured, have been taken to Sasebo as prizes. Nine transports for horses are at Moji.

Intense War Feeling.

Absolute reticence is maintained by the Government. An intense war feeling prevails among all classes, although there is an apparent absence of excitement.

Canada and the War.

Ottawa, Feb. 16.—Major Winter of the Militia Department, who writes the weekly military letter for The Evening Journal, expresses the opinion that if Great Britain becomes embroiled in the far eastern trouble Canada may have to send military contingents to her aid.

WHO IS THE AGGRESSOR?

(Toronto News.)

Talk as to which power fired the first shot and then precipitated the rupture can appeal only to shallow minds. The fact of the matter is that Russia is the aggressor, because she forced Japan to attack her. She seized Manchuria, and promised all the powers that she would evacuate it. Then she broke her promise. The other powers remonstrated and she defied them. Japan, being more vitally interested than any other, remonstrated again, and more seriously Russia defied her again. Japan, therefore, attacked. Who is the aggressor?

Suspicious Death.

Windsor, Feb. 16.—Mrs. Addie Gibson, who has been employed as a domestic in the McLaughlin House for the past month, died Sunday. The death certificate gives the cause as heart failure, but as a result of rumors that have reached him, Chief Wills will make an investigation. Mrs. Gibson came to Windsor from Chicago, but her remains have been removed to Wheatley, where she once lived. Her husband is said to still reside in Chicago.

Where the Lights Are Low.

Owen Sound, Feb. 16.—Owing to lack of fuel the lighting plant of the town has been shut down. Freight being snow blockaded there is no coal oil. Thus the town is in darkness after sunset. Those who can dig up their rusty candle moulds consider themselves fortunate.

THE YELLOW MAN.

A THRILLING STORY
OF THE BOXERS
IN CHINA.

BY CARLTON DAWE.

Copyright, 1900.
By Paul R. Reynolds.

I was face to face with some dire calamity, and yet I could form no conception of what it really was. I only know that my inner eye gazed upon an inner chaos, and that the sight was so appalling that it froze every drop of blood in my veins. My uncle's voice calling awoke me from the stupor, and like one in a dream I moved to complete the circuit of the house. But as I passed the scullery window I noticed that it was not locked, though it had been fastened tightly. The catch, pressed against the pane, was plainly visible above the sash. I leaned against the sill and raised the window, and in a voice which startled even myself, it was so full of fear, I cried out: "Mother, mother! Janet, Janet!" But never a sound came back. Then a dreadful shuddering seized me, and I felt the nerves tingle right up my back to my brain. Had I seen a ghost on a dark night I could not have been smitten with a greater dread.

Reeling back I made my way round to the front of the house and tried to cry out to my uncle, but my tongue clave to the roof of my mouth. I felt as though I should never speak again.

"Good heavens, Davie," he cried, seeing my white face, "what is the matter with you?" and almost before I knew what had happened he had sprung from the cart, opened the gate and was holding my face up to his.

"Speak, lad!" he continued excitedly, his face full of anxiety. "What has happened? What have you seen?"

"Nothing," I said. "But they do not answer—and the scullery window is open."

Realizing at once the importance of this apparently trivial statement, he dashed round to the back of the house, I at his heels. He knocked as I did, but with a like result. He shouted through the open window, but only the echo of his voice came back, and this smote upon his heart and lined with anxiety his face.

"Davie," he said, "I fear something has happened. Don't blub," as I clutched him by the arm and turned a terrified face up to his. "It may be nothing much. We shall see. Are you afraid to go in through that window and open the back door for me?"

I was, but I had some pride, so I gasped out, "No."

"Good lad," and he patted me encouragingly on the back. "Come here and I will help you. There's nothing to be afraid of," he added consolingly. "Your mother and the girl have evidently gone out together. We will get in and wait until they return. Now, then, one, two and up."

The window was some five feet from the ground, but with his aid I quickly scrambled across the sill and peered into the room. Reassured by what I saw, which was the scullery in its usual state of perfect tidiness, I got through the window with little difficulty and let myself down upon the table which stood beneath. Then, with nothing more than a hurried glance about me, I dashed through the kitchen, out into the passage and opened the back door. My Uncle Jim immediately entered.

For a moment he seemed to hesitate, looking about him for some sign or token. Then he went along the passage to the front of the house calling loudly, but receiving no reply sprang to the stairs and without a word mounted to my mother's room. Arriving there, he stopped for a moment or two and contemplated the closed door: then he knocked gently thereon. No reply coming he knocked louder, louder, and then he turned the handle.

Peeping behind him, I saw that the room was still shrouded in gloom, the blinds being closely drawn. He called her by name, but his voice sounded hollow and ghostly as it circled round and round the oppressive chamber. No sound came from the bed, no movement. He turned and drew up the blind and let a flood of light into the dark room, and as it lit up the bed I saw it fall upon a tress of my mother's hair, which drooped back over the pillow. She was lying there enveloped in the counterpane, her form clearly outlined beneath the clothes; but she was so still, so dreadfully still.

Uttering an involuntary cry I sprang across to her, and before my uncle could prevent it I had snatched the covering from her head. A ghastly white face met me, two vague, distorted eyes stared up into mine—eyes in which glared too plainly the hideous placidity of death.

"She is dead," I wailed, "she is dead," and, unable to look death in the face, I fell upon my knees by the bed and buried my face in my hands.

Presently my uncle touched me on the shoulder. As I looked up at him with blurred eyes it seemed to me that his erstwhile jovial face was ghastly with pain or rage.

"Do you know what has happened?" he said, his voice cold and cutting as death itself. And not waiting for an answer he at once replied to his own query. "Your mother has been murdered!"

"Murdered!" I gasped.

"Yes, murdered!" he repeated. "Look! Don't be afraid, she cannot hurt you. Look—and remember."

He drew me close to the head of the bed, and once more I gazed upon the deathly pale face, the distorted eyes which, seen through a mist of tears, were awful in the extreme. As I stared down at the pale face I could not quite realize that this was death or what death really was, but a vague, sickening sense of loss numbed all my energies and filled the world with a vague desolation. It was the first time I had gazed upon death, and I tried to learn its meaning. She was there, my mother, the sweet soul I had known so long, had loved so dearly. Save for that unwonted pallor, those fixed eyes, there was no difference in her. Yet she knew me not; she would know me no more. I might weep, I might pray, but she would heed me not. And though in life I was her all in all I had passed from her, as it were; I was that of which she knew not. This was death.

"See," said my uncle, whose voice was low and charged with deep emotion, "she has been strangled!" And he pulled back the nightdress from her white throat, and I saw that it was encircled with a hideous purple band. The murderers had done their work deftly.

By this time my eyes had cleared of the mist, and I had courage really to look my mother in the face. Across her forehead a great lock of loose hair had fallen, and as with loving fingers my uncle pressed it back he gave a sudden start as though he had been stung.

"Heavens!" he cried. "They were not satisfied to kill. They have mutilated her as well."

I pressed forward and saw distinctly a brown circle on her forehead, a reddish brown circle which looked as though it had been burned by some acid. I looked again, and the circle formed itself into an ellipse or oval. I started. What did this remind me of? I had seen something like this before, but where?

Reverently my uncle covered up the poor white face, drew the blinds and led me from the room.

"Poor Davie, poor lad," he said very tenderly, "we have been hit very hard. Why was she not spared to us? Whom could she have wronged? She who never uttered a harsh word or turned a deaf ear to a tale of sorrow. Heavens, but it's hard!" and as he spoke I felt his hand suddenly tighten on my arm, and I knew that there was a sudden madness in his heart.

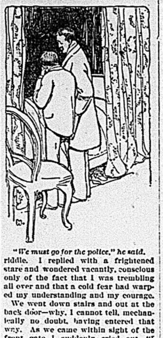
Carefully locking the door, he dropped the key in his pocket.

"We must go for the police," he said. "We can do nothing more at present."

"Janet," I suggested.

"I forgot," and as if impelled by a sudden, awful thought he moved swiftly toward the girl's room, which was just behind my mother's. Here, too, we discovered that the door was shut, and though we knocked no answer came. Entering the room, we found it in darkness, but upon the blind being drawn we saw the girl's outline in the bed in the far corner. Guessing instinctively what was the matter, my uncle rushed across, and there the same awful sight met our gaze. The girl was dead, strangled as my mother had been, and upon her forehead was the same red brown sign.

My uncle seemed dumfounded at this display of fiendish malignity. Usually a man of resource, he looked inquiringly my way as though he expected me to give him an answer to this hideous riddle. I replied with a frightened stare and wondered vacantly, conscious only of the fact that I was trembling all over and that a cold fear had warped my understanding and my courage.



"We must go for the police," he said.

We went down stairs and out at the back door—why, I cannot tell, mechanically no doubt, having entered that way. As we came within sight of the front gate I suddenly cried out, "I have it," and before my uncle knew what I was doing I had slipped from him and was dashing down the pathway.

"What?" he cried.

"The sign! The sign!"

In a moment I was through the gate and closely scrutinizing the post, but the sign of the egg had been obliterated. I looked closer; I examined both posts, but not a trace of it could I find. And my brain, overwrought, doubted its own knowledge. I stood vacantly staring at the unsoiled posts. Had I really seen the sign?

"The sign," repeated my uncle as he came up. "What do you mean by that?"

Then I told him what I had seen upon the post, and his face grew very serious. It was evident that he did not believe me the victim of an hallucination.

"This is terrible work, Davie," he said. "Heaven knows what the end of it will be."

Then we discovered that the horse and trap had disappeared. It will be remembered that my uncle had jumped out quickly and come to me, forgetting even to take the precaution of locking the wheel. As a consequence the horse had wandered off.

It had been his intention to send me off to the police station while he kept watch over the house, but now both of us had to set out in different ways. Luckily, however, at the first bend of the road he called to me, and on returning to his side I beheld the horse and trap in charge of a local policeman coming up the road.

"I seed him grazing by the wayside," explained the official, "and I at once says to myself, ah, I knows that 'ere trap. It belongs to Mr. James Davie, what lives on the other side o' the Maiden'end road, and I thinks to myself"—

But my uncle cut him short, for Baddeley was known as the most loquacious peeler in the district. On an ordinary occasion the gag would have been the price of a pint of beer; now it was the word "murder." Baddeley turned very white. My uncle led him into the house and showed him what had taken place, but he merely rolled his eyes in horror, and crying out, "Don't touch nothing!" he hurried from the room, saying he would go and find the inspector.

My uncle led me into the sitting room. Placing his hand tenderly upon my shoulder, he said: "Davie, we two are all that's left. But I loved her dearly, and she was an angel to you. She must know how we feel. Here let us promise to be good friends always."

Well, what could I say? I flung myself in his arms and gave way to a passionate outburst of tears.

CHAPTER IV.

THE KILLING OF THE HORSES.

Many theories were set afloat concerning this dreadful crime, and the law searched high and low for the man with the strange eyes, but without success. No one remembered to have seen him. Many people came to Windsor and Slough during the season. It was hardly possible that an ordinary man, for such he would have appeared to the casual observer, would have been noticed. Be that as it may, no trace of him was discovered, and as he did not come forward of his own free will I soon abandoned all hope of hearing of him.

What also added a deeper mystery to the crime was the fact that nothing had been stolen from the house, though my mother's cash box, which contained her jewelry and some £10 or £15 in gold, stood on a chair by the dressing table, absolutely beneath the eyes of the assassins. The egg shaped mark on the forehead was a thing to which the police attached no importance. To them it had no meaning, and they consequently dismissed it with scant ceremony. It had been discovered that the marks had been produced by the application of a powerful acid, but they had no doubt that if the brand meant anything at all it had simply been done to mystify the investigators.

And so in time the sensation lost its charm, and people began to forget. The police were still supposed to have the matter in hand, and I recollect well that they advanced some ingenious but utterly erroneous theories concerning the crime, and there their utility ended. My uncle and I were still convinced that the man with the strange eyes was at the bottom of the mystery and that he could likewise explain the meaning of the sign, for that the two were associated I implicitly believed. If the police shared this conviction, they made little of it. Murderers never took the trouble to mark their dead unless it was specially designed to throw the authorities off the scent. My father's warning letter could not possibly relate to the crime. His reference to enemies could only mean enemies in business, such as any man was likely to have. If there had been a man or any particular number of men to dread, would he not have said who they were and to what extent their hatred was likely to carry them? As for the story of the gatepost and the sign—well, I was only a boy, and it is so easy for a boy to imagine things. The mere fact of the disappearance of the sign showed how little my evidence was to be trusted.

I now went to live with my uncle, and many and many a time we discussed the pros and cons of the case, trying to build up some satisfactory clew to work upon. But we always came back to our original starting place, the man with the strange eyes.

"I believe," said my uncle, "if we could only lay our hands on him we should soon solve the mystery. Your father has led a strange life, Davie, and I should not be surprised to hear that he had mixed himself up with the secret societies of the far east. That man with the strange eyes, whose nationality neither you nor your poor mother could guess, must have been either a Jap or a Chinese, and from what I have read of those easterns and their societies I know them to be cruel and callous to a degree. Therefore, my lad, we must be very careful, for if it is as I believe we have a terrible enemy to grapple with."

And so for weeks at a time he never let me out of his sight. I slept in a room next to his, in the partition of which he had had a door constructed. He saw himself to the locking of the house, going the rounds every night after dark with a revolver in his hand. I know he inwardly prayed for a meeting with the man with the strange eyes, but that gentleman never put in an appearance. And yet, though he said nothing, I knew that he also feared the coming, and with that end in view he took me out in the fields every day and gave me pistol practice until I became quite an adept. He was a capital shot himself, and he taught me to use the rifle as well as the gun. "It may be useful one day," he used to say, and I knew what was passing in his mind.

And so in this way the next six months passed, and the winter had come, with its short days and its long, cold nights. By this time the "great Windsor mystery," as it had been called, had become a thing of the past, and my youth enabled me to regard it with equanimity. No further word had come from my father. Had he been living in any civilized city or town he could hardly have failed to read of his wife's murder. But nothing came from him, and sometimes we suspected that the same power that had struck down my mother had wrought its vengeance on him. Be that as it may, he was to all intents and purposes dead. My uncle now regarded me as his child, and had he been my father I could not have loved him more.

The grief through which he had lately passed had steadied him considerably. The face was still kind, though robbed of much of its ruddiness, but the reckless, devil may care expression had entirely vanished. The man had responsibilities now if he had never known them before, and he scarcely took the pains to hide the fact. Then he had long fits of mental abstraction which he shook off with a great effort. We rode and drove incessantly, and I noticed that he always peered into the eyes of every stranger we passed. Sometimes he took me to town for a week, and together we haunted all the most popular resorts of the metropolis. We tramped the great thoroughfares from the Marble arch to the bank, from St. Paul's to Hyde Park corner. And all for what? He never said, but I knew it was for the man with the strange eyes. Time after time he used to say to me, "Davie, are you quite sure you would know him again?" And then I would go through a minute description of the man as he appeared to me in the garden that day, and so often had I repeated the story that he knew it as well as I, and if I omitted any particular he would say, "You forgot to mention the black tie with the white spots," or "His boots were rather square at the toes."

But nothing ever came of our wanderings, though we had many false alarms, for in London, where one sees so many different faces, it would have been strange had we not encountered a few disappointments. Men of foreign appearance in particular we marked as our quarry, especially those who have the brand of the east or the far east. But though at the sight of a man I have sometimes felt my heart leap to my throat a closer inspection dissipated the hope, or, rather, I should say the fear, for there was more of fear than of hope in it.

And so the time flew on, and a bitterly cold January was drawing to a close. A good six months had already passed, and in that time the world forgets much. I know that I had reached that state in which I no longer experienced any difficulty in lulling my fears, and I could sleep without dreaming of trying to escape from a man with strange eyes who pursued me with a gleaming knife and who was ever on the point of stabbing me just as I woke. I think my uncle also was beginning to rest, though rest he would not while his sister's murderer was at large. But he was just a little more contented, less given to gloomy fits of abstraction, when something happened that set us all in a whirl again.

I thought one night, waking suddenly, that some one was trying to force the window of my room, but after lying for many minutes listening intently I came to the conclusion that it was nothing but my fancy. So, secure in the possession of a well barred window, I soon fell asleep again. But when I awoke in the morning I still retained a recollection of my fright and, rapidly dressing, went out to investigate that side of the house, but though I subjected it to a pretty close scrutiny I saw nothing that led me to suspect the presence of an enemy.

However, on skirting the back of the building I passed close to the stable, upon the door of which I saw something that made me start. A step or two closer assured me that I had not been mistaken. There, distinctly visible, was the fatal egg shaped sign drawn grimly with a red pencil.

I looked and looked again and then drew closer to make sure that there was no mistake. Every nerve in me was now trembling with excitement, and for several moments I stood looking at the dreadful thing like one unable to realize its meaning. Then, forcing my numbed limbs into action, I turned about and hurried into the house, bursting into my uncle's room with: "The sign! The sign!"

"The sign!" he shouted excitedly, turning round with lightninglike rapidity. "Do you mean the"—

"Yes, yes, the same. Come! It is on the stable door."

Without further words he dashed by me, out through the back of the house to the yard, I at his heels. Before the stable door he stood and very narrowly scrutinized the tracing.

"It is the same?" he said. "It is like the one you saw on the gatepost?"

"Exactly, but bigger."

"Then," said he, "our enemies are close at hand."

I then told him how I woke up in the night fancying I heard some one at my window. He started and looked very serious.

"Why did you not call me?"

"Because I lay awake a long time listening, and, not hearing the sound repeated, I easily persuaded myself that I was dreaming."

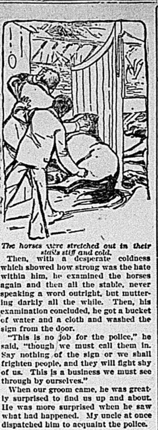
"It was wrong of you," he said. "Call me always if you hear anything suspicious. We have a desperate set of people to deal with, Davie. We must lessen their number on every possible occasion. Now run in and fetch me the keys of the stable. We must see if everything is all right inside."

I did as I was bidden and on returning found him closely examining the door. But with the exception of the sign there was nothing to show that it had been tampered with. The lock was intact, and when the key was inserted into it the spring flew back with a sharp click. But when the door was thrown open we saw at once that something had happened.

The horses (my uncle kept two of them) were stretched out in their stalls stiff and cold. I knew this at once by the look of them, and so did he, for, with a cry, he sprang into the stable and began closely to examine them. There were no streams of blood to trace to their fount, but just at the back of the ears a wound about half an inch long was discovered. The piercing of the vertebræ had at once paralyzed the brain, and the poor animals had fallen dead without a struggle.

For a long time my uncle stood looking at the two beautiful horses that had been his pride, his face white and drawn, his lips working convulsively. Then presently he turned to me, and I saw that his eyes were full of passion.

"Davie," he said, "we must find out who did this. We must discover the meaning of that sign. The murderer of your mother and the slayer of these horses is the same man. We must be careful or our turn will come—careful, you understand—so careful that he shall never take us unawares. I must search for this man and wring his secret from him. Your father might give us the clew if we only knew where to find him, but probably he is dead himself, with the fatal sign stamped deep on his forehead. We will regard this calamity, which is meant to destroy our peace, as a friendly hint and be always on our guard, and if you ever meet the man with the strange eyes shoot him. Don't stop to think, but shoot him dead. He will cross your path until one of you is exterminated. Don't spare him."



The horses were stretched out in their stalls stiff and cold.

Then, with a desperate coldness which showed how strong was the hate within him, he examined the horses again and then all the stable, never speaking a word outright, but muttering darkly all the while. Then, his examination concluded, he got a bucket of water and a cloth and washed the sign from the door.

"This is no job for the police," he said, "though we must call them in. Say nothing of the sign or we shall frighten people, and they will fight shy of us. This is a business we must see through by ourselves."

When our groom came, he was greatly surprised to find us up and about. He was more surprised when he saw what had happened. My uncle at once dispatched him to acquaint the police.

CHAPTER V.

THE RETURN OF THE WANDERER.

As we fully expected, nothing came of the police investigation. Such a wanton, senseless crime they failed utterly to comprehend, and, not knowing all that we knew or all that we suspected, they had little to stimulate them to great exertions. Sometimes I doubted my uncle's wisdom in withholding the story of the sign. It would at least have put the authorities on the right track, but as my mother's murderer was still at large and they were supposed to be assiduously searching for him it could have furthered his capture but little to tell of our suspicions. As for making a point of the egg shaped symbol, that would undoubtedly have laid us under the suspicion of being a marked family and as such not pleasant neighbors. No; take it all in all, he was perhaps wise. The crime had been committed. There was the evidence of it. If the police captured the perpetrator, we should know where to look for my mother's murderer.

But some weeks slipped by, and with them went all my uncle's patience, and at last he told me that the strain of incessant watching was proving more than he could bear.

"I am convinced," said he, "that the police will never discover the perpetrator of this outrage, and as they cannot afford us the necessary protection we must see to our own welfare. Davie, my lad, I am sick to death of being hunted, and I intend to turn hunter myself. I have no doubt whatever that this man or men will follow us, so that our chance of one day meeting him is not remote. You know what to do. Kill him without a moment's hesitation just as you would a mad dog. But you are young yet, and I have decided to put you in a place of security. I will work on alone."

Then one day, without warning, we left the house and went to London, my uncle taking a couple of rooms for us in Chelsea. He then entered into communication with his lawyer, and after some little delay he succeeded in letting his cottage to a couple of highly respectable spinsters who sighed for the felicities of a rural life. Next the subject of school was broached, a subject not at all to my liking, but my uncle considered that another two or three years at least were necessary to complete my education, and, feeling that he was right, I consented. Moreover, my life of the last few months had made an old man of me before my time, and I sorely needed the companionship of youth.

So in due time I was packed off to a school in the heart of the Midlands, my uncle having carefully chosen the situation. There I was known as James Davie, my uncle, for reasons of his own, wishing me to take his name. Perhaps those reasons would not be difficult to guess. If by chance my own name of Kingston should come to the ears of certain people, even the crowded school might be no protection. Perhaps it was a little superfluous caution on my uncle's part, but I could not quarrel with him on that account. Besides, I had no particular love for my father's honored patronymic. Anyhow, names are not of much account in youth, and of the two I preferred James Davie to Davie Kingston.

My life was now extremely pleasant, and, except when I got a letter from my uncle, I scarcely thought of the horrors of the past. I was surrounded by young companions. I lived the free, open life of a boy, and if I did not enjoy my studies overmuch I made up for my lack of intellectual energy by developing a wonderful aptitude for games.

During this period my uncle proved a most consistent correspondent, dispatching a letter to me every week with unfailing regularity. It was a contract we had entered into, for it would be the means whereby I might know if he was still alive. I in turn was to write as often, but after having had a few letters sent to his club he begged me to desist and send them on to his lawyer, to whom I was at once to telegraph in case of an emergency. He did not explain himself more fully, but I needed no fuller explanation.

Then he began his wanderings, and I got letters in succession from Hastings, Eastbourne, Brighton, Worthing and so on from many towns and many counties, and they all repeated the same note: "I am still searching for the man with the strange eyes." To me it seemed singular that he should not forget, and once I even went so far as to suggest something of the sort, but the answer I received made me feel ashamed of my presumption. "She was my sister," he said, "and yet I cannot forget, but she was your mother." Only those few underlined words, yet what a world of meaning they conveyed.

With the advent of the holidays he always came and took me away with him, and upon each successive occasion I saw how sadly his quest was affecting him. From a jolly fellow he had grown morose and gloomy and was losing weight in a manner that might have been considered alarming had it not suited him so well. Truth to tell, he had been somewhat inclined to fleshiness and a ruddiness of countenance of which a fastidious observer could not approve. Had I not known the cause of this change I should probably have welcomed it; knowing, I had some difficulty in concealing my alarm. The world was not big enough for him and his sister's murderer. He was like one groping in the dark, but somewhere behind that darkness was the light, and he would see it one day.

In the comparatively calm seclusion of this school the next two years of my life slipped peacefully away. The past was dropping further and further astern. The horrors of two years ago, if not quite obliterated from my memory (such a thing could hardly be with

WHAT TEA DOES TO RHEUMATICS.

When you next take tea think of this.

Tea contains 175 grains of Uric Acid in every pound.

Meat contains only five to seven grains.

Rheumatism is Uric Acid in the blood.

Uric Acid accumulates from food when the digestive apparatus cannot create enough Alkaline elements (like soda) to neutralize it.

This acid collects urea, or worn-out waste matter from the system.

That Urea enters the blood when Alkaline action has not previously dissolved it.

By and by the waste matter reaches the joints and muscles, through circulation of the blood.

There it gradually deposits in solid particles, like granulated sugar.

These solid particles grind between the joints and muscles at every movement.

This grinding causes irritation and pain.

These in turn may develop inflammation and swelling. That inflammation bestirs Nature to help herself.

She proceeds to coat the hard Uric particles over with cushions of pulpy mucous, like the first healing strata of an outer sore.

This pulpy covering grows to the bones, as well as to the particles deposited. There it hardens like plaster or sealing wax. Then we have "bony joints," almost inflexible and usually fixed in a bended position, from the pain and inflammation.

That is rheumatism at its worst.

It is bad enough before it gets that far.

There is but one sure way of curing Rheumatism. The first step is to neutralize the Uric Acid already in the system. Next, to dissolve, and carry away, the hard deposits that grind between the joints. Then get the digestive apparatus into such healthy condition that it will, unaided, produce less Uric Acid and more Alkalines.

This is what doctors generally have failed to do.

It is what I studied a lifetime to accomplish, and achieved only after many failures and thousands of experiments.

At last I found, in Germany, a Solvent which was not only effective, but absolutely safe to use.

Few agents powerful enough to be effective in rheumatism are safe.

My discovery, now called "Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure," acts directly, but internally, upon uric acid in the joints and muscles.

It dissolves, and carries off, the painful deposits, producing an immediate Alkaline condition of the blood, and neutralizing the acid in it which would have fed the rheumatism and extended the disease.

It won't restore bony joints to flexibility, and it can't undo, in a week, the damage caused by years of rheumatic condition.

But it will benefit every case, and it will entirely cure most cases of rheumatism.

So sure am I of this that I will supply Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure to any sick one who writes me for it on a month's trial, at my risk.

If it succeeds, the cost to him is only $5.50 for the six bottle treatment.

If it fails, I bear the whole cost myself.

And—he alone shall be the judge—shall decide who shall pay.

Surely you will not continue to suffer when you can thus get well, at my risk.

I have written an important Treatise on rheumatism, telling of its relief and cure.

It is free to rheumatic people.

Write me a post card for it to-day. Address—Dr. Shoop, Box 69, Racine, Wis.

P.S.—Simple cases often yield to one bottle of Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure. (Druggists $1.) But all druggists do not supply it on a month's trial. You must write me for that. C.I.S.

THE ROOT AND THE FRUIT

Bu-Ju is not a remedy for symptoms. It is a cure for disease. Disordered Kidneys will produce many troubles, among which may be mentioned Rheumatism. Sick kidneys cannot properly perform their functions; hence the system is flooded with uric acid and rheumatism in its various forms is the result. Bu-Ju cures rheumatism, because it cures the cause of rheumatism, Disordered Kidneys; for same reason it cures dropsy, blood poison, weak heart, loss of ambition, sleeplessness, brain fag, failing memory irritable temper, sallow complexion, bad breath, lame back, and a hundred and one ailments that spring from disordered kidneys, which is the root of the evil. You may pluck the leaves of a rank weed, or cut its stem, but so long as you leave the root it bears new fruit and spreads until its extermination is almost impossible. If you are suffering from any of the above troubles you cannot afford to neglect them. Neglect means misery, for what joy is there in living without good health? Bu-Ju, the Kidney Pill, has restored thousands and it can do the same for you.

The Claflin Chemical Co., Windsor, Ont.

Dear Sirs:—I have used a box of Bu-Ju Pills and have been greatly benefited by them. I was troubled with piles for years and tried several kinds of medicine, without getting any relief, but I have had no trouble with them since I took the third box of Bu-Ju. I still take them whenever I can get them and I recommend them to all my friends. Yours sincerely,

MRS. GEORGE DOSMAN.

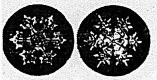
SNOWFLAKE WONDERS

NO TWO OF MYRIAD CRYSTALS ALIKE IN FORM OR DECORATION.

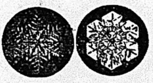
Pictures of Snowflakes Enlarged From 400 to 500 Times Larger Than the Crystals Themselves, Give Some Idea of Their Wondrous Beauty—The Frost Work on the Window Panes Rival Flowers in Design.

Usually each snowflake consists of several or many separate crystals. These crystals are typical of the infinite variety and beauty that exists throughout nature. The pictures herewith are engraved direct from enlarged microscopic photographs made from separate crystals of snow. No two of these crystals are alike in form or in decoration, but the separate crystals that comprise one snowflake often have some similarity. The pictures are from 400 to 500 times larger than the real crystals themselves, or are enlarged from 15 to 16 diameters. They show only the exterior of different snow crystals, each much enlarged, and there is much greater variety in the interior forms. The particles, even while they hang together, are in constant vibration among themselves. Each crystal always has six points or raddii, yet how marvelous the variety! The frost-work on window panes, which rivals leaves and flowers in elegance of design, shows how ice crystals depart from geometrical arrangement when their freedom of growth is limited. The more they are constrained, the more beautiful appears their grace and adaptability.

It is true of the snow crystal as it is of many other crystalized forms, that it never loses the power of growth. It also possesses power of self-repair. If it be bruised or deformed, the subsequent growth is abnormally rapid over the injured area until perfection of form is regained. A German scientist studied the formation of quartz crystals some years ago and discovered that they were actually teeming with life—that is, possess vibrations having organized movement and life manifestations. Thus, even the humble snowflake is perhaps a common expression of Infinite life, as it is of infinite beauty.



About snowflakes Henry Crocker wrote: "Inscribed with the law and loveliness of the Creator, and vieing with the stars of the firmament, the snowflakes feel an earthly drawing—a longing to reveal to man something of Him who stamped his glory on them. Each has a life peculiarly its own, a record of which is faithfully preserved in its features. Mysterious electrical forces play upon those shining hosts, brooding over them, like the Spirit of creation. Flying, as if alive, they cover our sin-cursed world with celestial purity and light. They flit into our eyes and look up to us as if imploring us to look at them carefully and to see what beauty and glory has been wrought upon them. But many are indifferent to their appeal! They brush them off and trample them under foot, and never dream what elegance they destroy, what purity they defile, what delight they miss. But the time is coming when many shall see. They are beginning already to see!"



Baroness Burdett-Coutts.

"What a wonderful woman the Baroness Burdett-Coutts is!" says M. A. P. "The other day I saw her in the Royal York at Brighton, and I hear from everybody that she is enjoying the air of Brighton with as much zest as if she were in her first youth. Like the late Queen, the Baroness has immense faith in open air. Wet or dry, she goes out for her long drive every day. The result is that in old age she has much of the vivacity of youth. She is, I hear, as keenly interested in the fiscal question as though she were a member of the House of Commons herself; and is, I believe, an ardent Chamberlainite."

Where Domesticity Shines.

In Siberia there is a custom that a bride, on coming to her husband's house, has to give a dinner prepared with her own hands, as a test of housekeeping capabilities. If she succeeds in gratifying her guests, it is taken as a proof not only of the young woman's own excellence, but also as a recommendation of her whole family, by whom she was instructed in the culinary art.

Color and Strength.

The Russian War Office has decided that in future grey horses shall be exclusively used for artillery purposes, the reason given for the innovation being that animals of this color have been found by experience to be stronger and more enduring than those of other colors.

Literary Notes.

In literary features the March Designer is particularly strong. Milady Fashion is catered to in numerous designs for stylish garments and millinery, an explicit lesson on the making of a toque for a middle-aged woman, and the well-illustrated articles, "Fashions and Fabrics" and "Fads and Fancies," while Milord receives his portion in "Fashion Notes for Men." "Points on Dressmaking," describes lucidly the trimming of the now popular military garments. "Good Taste in Hair Arrangement" not only pictures prevailing modes for hair dressing, but tells how to bring them about. "What Women are Doing" or "Helps Along the Way," "Toilet Table Chat," "Etiquette Hints," "The Kitchen Kingdom" and "Floriculture" are well represented, and "Knots and Whatnots" furnishes unusually interesting puzzles for unwinding.

EARLY SPRING STYLES.

Dainty little designs, dots, tiny checks or hair lines are brought out in some of the prettiest of the spring silks for the shirt waist toilette, which is quite as fashionable as in preceding seasons. Since the street costume purchased just now will be worn during the spring, no material offers quite the possibilities of mohair. The newest shirt waists are made of finest, sheerest materials—lawn, mull, batiste, etc.—and they will be worn even with tailored costumes. Ruchings are to adorn not only gauzy creations for evening, but the silk or cloth gown that is intended for semi-formal wear as well. Braids are handsomer than ever and their popularity seemingly greater. Gold braid, both wide and narrow, continues in vogue. Yokes, that run down over the shoulder and epaulettes are the prominent features of the new blouses. The new stocks and belts possess the distinction of being novel.— From The Delineator for March.

So Many People Ask

Why on earth are you selling Wall Papers at HALF PRICE this time of the year.

WELL its just like this—We still have about 3,000 rolls of 1903 Wall Papers left and with our reputation for carrying the very newest in Wall Papers it would not pay us to put this small balance in with our 1904, and call them new.

We don't do that kind of business. We prefer giving our customers who are not so particular about having the very latest, these goods at bargains. So we are selling all 1903 papers this month at HALF of the regular prices, so as to start March with nothing but 1904 papers which are now flooding our warehouse.

All Fancy Goods and China—not Staple—for the balance of the month of February at Half regular price—this makes home beautifying doubly cheap.

Yours In Decorations

During the winter months our workmen have been kept unusually busy decorating some of the best homes of the city.

TO SAY THAT our decorative work is a success—is putting the matter mildly—you have just to witness this for yourself in observing any one of the many city homes we have given decorative attention during the past two years.

Our success is because of a knowledge of the decorative trade begot of study and experience both in wall hangings and the decorative art—the two go hand in hand—the one without the other is absolutely lost.

NO better time for you than the present for selecting, new wall hangings now arriving.

No better time to have your work done than during the later winter months and the earlier spring.

We are prepared—with a liberal staff of experienced workmen—the best obtainable in their several branches and our prices will meet with your approval every time.

THE SMALLPOX QUESTION.

Any intelligent physician will admit that you don't catch smallpox because some one else has it, but because your condition favors it. Low vitality always encourages sickness and at this season especially everyone should take Ferrozone, which destroys disease germs and makes the system so strong and healthy that sickness can't exist. Ferrozone is a vitalizing tonic that makes rich, red blood, builds up the nerves, cures nervousness and drives away tired languid feelings. To get strong and keep strong use Ferrozone; it assures health and costs but 50c at all druggists.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

THE INTELLIGENCER'S AFTERNOON DESPATCHES ARE TWELVE HOURS IN ADVANCE OF THE TORONTO MORNING PAPERS.

Russian Cruiser Blown Up—Russian Soldiers Threaten British and United States Ships—Russian Troops and Supplies Arriving from Siberia—Russian Fleet to Bombard Southern Japanese Forts.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

St. Petersburg, Feb. 15.—The Russian second-class cruiser Boyarin was blown up by a mine on Feb. 13 in the same manner as was the Russian torpedo transport Yonisil. She had on board 197 officers and men, all of whom, it is understood, were lost. No details of the disaster have been given out.

Ying Kow, Feb. 15. — Threatening demonstrations have been made against the British gunboat Espiegle and the United States gunboat Helena by Russian soldiers, whose assaults upon and depredations against other foreigners continue. The civil administrator is making every effort to arrest the offenders.

New York, Feb. 16.—The arrival is reported of 60,000 Russian troops at Irkutsk, says a Herald despatch from Port Arthur by way of Chefoo. The troops are now nearing Harbin.

Manchurian trains are now running regularly, bringing supplies from Siberia.

A Russian fleet is reported to be moving in the direction of Korea or Southern Japan, with the intention of bombarding the nearest ports, causing a diversion in favor of Port Arthur.

Yokohama, Feb. 18.—The cruiser Nishin arrived safely at Yokosuke at 9 o'clock this morning, and the cruiser Kasuga at 11 o'clock. These two vessels, recently purchased from the Argentine Republic, will increase materially the preponderance of the Japanese naval strength.

RAILROAD TELEPHONES.

MONTREAL BROCKVILLE LINE SO SATISFACTORY THAT ALL STATIONS ARE TO BE RE-EQUIPPED.

(Brockville Times.)

The Grand Trunk Railroad is installing a new telephone system over its lines. By the new plan the wires used for telegraph purposes can also be utilized for the 'phone, and both messages can travel over the wires at the same time without interfering with each other.

The arrangement, which is known as the composite system, is already in satisfactory operation between Montreal and Brockville, and will gradually be installed on all other parts of the Grand Trunk lines. The 'phones are of the most improved pattern and especially adapted for railway work. There is no central station, but a code is arranged by which one station on a certain number of rings can call up any other station. The telephone will not be used for the handling of train orders, which will still be done by the despatchers by telegraphy, but ordinary messages will be transmitted by 'phone.

The installation of the new system will not mean reducing the number of operators where more than one is engaged, but it will prove a boon to them in that it will lighten their work, which at present is heavy.

BETTER CLOTHING.

The Oak Hall are actively engaged in educating the people into buying better clothing. The forced demand for very cheap clothing is being met in some quarters by garments almost worthless. A week or two of active service and the garments lose their entire shape. Buy Oak Hall clothing and you take no risk.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Coulson, who were residents of Thomasburg for many years, recently removed to Sidney township. Previous to leaving their former home they were presented with an address and writing desk by their friends at Thomasburg, who invaded their home for the evening. DANGER OF LIVING WITH CONSUMPTIVES.

Is real danger, because the sputum of affected persons diffuses itself itself through the air and finds lodgment in the systems of others. If exposed to consumption use fragrant healing Catarrhozone, the most efficient germicide known. No case of catarrh can withstand Catarrhozone, which cures this loathsome disease thoroughly. Cold in the head is cured in a few minutes, and bronchitis, asthma and lung trouble are cured to stay cured if Catarrhozone is employed "I don't know any remedy so good for catarrh and bronchitis as Catarrhozone," writes N. T. Eaton, of Knowlton. "It cured me after years of suffering and saved me from consumption." Two months' treatment, $1.00; trial size 25c.

FAILURES IN CANADA.

(Dun's Review.)

After the phenomenally good showing made by the Dominion of Canada last year as to insolvencies it is not surprising that January should have brought a considerable increase in amount of defaulted liabilities. Total commercial failures in Canada during January were 130 in number, against 120 last year and 146 in 1902, no material difference occurring in this respect, but in amount of liabilities $1,143,515 compares with $608,341 in January, 1903, and $886,429 two years ago. The statement was better than last year as to manufacturing losses, 26 for $89,861 comparing with 31 failures involving $143,467 in January, 1903, but there was a striking increase in trading insolvencies, 101 failures with liabilities of $1,026,654 far exceeding the 87 reported a year ago, with defaulted indebtedness of $364,874. While the increase was distributed over a number of lines, the chief difference occurred in dry goods, nine suspensions in this branch of business providing $416,303 liabilities, or more than the entire trading losses of the corresponding month last year. This may be narrowed down further to two failures at Halifax and Montreal, with liabilities of $351,503. In addition to the manufacturing and trading insolvencies, there were three other commercial failures for $27,000.

"How Simple Jack Was Saved."

The attendance at the Bible reading yesterday afternoon and the service last evening in the Baptist Church was good considering the extreme cold that prevailed. After Mr. Whyte had sung several selections Mr. Shields preached from John 3.3. The chief mistake made by many who were seeking Christ, was that they sought a change of feelings, rather than a change of nature. Christ in the words of the text pointed out to Nicodemus that mere reformation or change of feeling, apart from a new life principle, was not sufficient. The giving of life was a prerogative of God. Much had been done by men to prolong life, but God only could give it. The word of God assured the believer in Jesus, that life had been given to him, and it simply required faith in the word of God to have it. The story of how a huckster named "Simple Jack" was saved, by simply believing that he "was a poor sinner, and nothing at all, but that Jesus was his all in all," and showing how a soul may rest on the word of Jesus, was then told. The subject for this evening will be "How a young man got a new suit of clothes."

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

The Toronto Telegram has this to say of a former Belleville player: "Rainbow, in goal, played a marvellous game. He stopped at least half a hundred shots, picking out the puck on many occasions when Stratford men were alone in front of the flags."

It seems that we were somewhat misinformed in regard to the cause of Vice-President Nelson's resignation at the O.H.A. meeting on Saturday last, and, as the Toronto morning papers failed to arrive before The Intelligencer went to press the mistake could not be rectified. Mr. Nelson, it seems, resigned as a protest against the reinstatement of one Harry Peel, of London, an out and out professional, a professional who for some time has been under the ban of the O.H.A.

Teams representing the Ritchie Co. and the Grocers will play up-to-date hockey in the rink to-night, and there should be a great crowd present.

Speaking of the Peel case, the Toronto Telegram says: "His reinstatement establishes a precedent that opens a door out of which the present high amateur standing of the O.H.A. will soon escape. Time and again Peel's reinstatement has been refused by decision of the Executive, and every where outside of London that decision has been applauded. Now, by the same committee, and with no new circumstances to guide them, Peel has been reinstated. The decision shows the committee to be inconsistent and will lead the outside world to wonder whether they were influenced by the interests of the O.H.A. or their private friendships."

Berlin's success this season makes the fifth consecutive year of winning the W.O.H.A. senior championship. The series this winter consisted of Berlin, Waterloo, London Aberdeens and Goderich. Berlin did not lose a game, and scored forty-six goals against sixteen for their opponents.

This is the way the Toronto Star sizes up the Stratford team, by many people supposed to be the coming intermediate champions: "The visitors made a good impression, and it was the consensus of opinion that the team that could beat them would win the championship. They are somewhat lightweighted for a hard game, but the forwards are all lightning skaters, adept at stick handling and dodging and good shots on the wings. Lightfoot, the colored player, is a speed marvel." The Stratfords are now in the semi-finals.

Messrs. McMillan and Truaisch arrived home at noon to-day, after attending the O.H.A. executive meeting in Toronto. The Intelligencer had an interview with Mr. Truaisch, and learned that it was 1.30 this morning before the executive commenced its session, the delay being caused by many trains, carrying delegates, being snowbound. The meeting lasted till five o'clock, and during that time Messrs. McMillan and Truaisch were subjected to severe examinations and cross-examinations. There was, on the part of the executive, every disposition to be fair towards this city, and the evidence submitted by the local men appears to have been convincing, for the upshot of the matter was that Mr. McMillan was declared perfectly eligible to play with Belleville.

The latest playing arrangements are these: Belleville plays the Marlboros on the Mutual St. rink, Toronto, to-morrow night, and the Dukes will be here for the return game on Friday night.

The Beechgroves of Kingston last night defeated Upper Canada College by 10 to 2, thus practically qualifying for the O.H.A. junior finals. Good luck to the Kingston lads; they are clean and clever.

The Mutual St. rink people are asking $2 apiece for reserved seat tickets to the Marlboro-Perth match next Saturday night.

The local club should have the biggest house of the season when they meet the Marlboros here next Friday night.

The Bakers are the latest aspirants for hockey honors, and challenge the Barbers to a match. There should be a lot of dough up on this match.

Initial Fight Lost $650,000 in Shells.

Paris, Feb. 16.—"The battle between the elephant and the whale," as the French press characterizes the Russian-Japanese war, is exciting comment here. The expense of such a war is specially dwelt upon. The cost of the bombarding of Port Arthur, lasting two hours, is estimated at $650,000, each shell of heavy calibre costing, according to French artillery experts, $200. To this must be added the cost of coal consumed.

MARCUS HANNA IS DEAD.

Prominent Figure in the United States Passes to the Beyond.

Washington, Feb. 16.—Marcus A. Hanna, Senator from Ohio, and one of the foremost figures in American public life, died last evening at his apartments in the Arlington Hotel, at 6.40 p.m., of typhoid fever, after an illness of two weeks. He passed away peacefully and without pain after being unconscious since 3 a. m., at which time the first of a series of sinking spells came on, from the last of which he never rallied.

The members of the families, with one or two exceptions, were at the bedside when the end came. During the last hours life was kept in his body only by the use of most powerful stimulants.

Senator Hanna's death followed a sinking spell that lasted 10 minutes, beginning at 6.30.

Senator Hanna will be given a public funeral in the Senate Chamber at noon Wednesday, and probably lie in state at the capitol. Funeral services will also be held in Cleveland, Friday.

JAPS LOST 2 TORPEDO BOATS

After the Torpedo Boats Had Done Their Business the Action Became General, the Japanese Fleet Steaming Past in Line of Battle, When Heavy Fast Firing Was Done By Both Sides—The People Fled the Town—Women and Children Were Very Brave—War News Bulletins.

London, Feb. 16.—The London Daily Mail received yesterday the following uncensored details of the first sea fight at Port Arthur from its correspondent, who got out of the Russian lines:

Yienhow (Niuchang), Wednesday Morning, Feb. 10.—I have just reached here by special train from Port Arthur, and to save time have written my account while traveling on locomotive. There was no other method of getting out of Port Arthur or transmitting a message of this length, as since the bombardment on Tuesday no vessels have been permitted to leave the harbor, and the railway telegraph lines are reserved for the exclusive use of Russian officials.

There were only four special correspondents present at the bombardment, Reuter's representative, two foreign correspondents and myself. Unfortunately one of them was wounded.

Six Jap Torpedo Boats.

About midnight on Monday the town was roused by the firing of big guns. I hastened up the hill on which the main battery is situated. I saw that six Japanese torpedo boats had approached within half a mile of the Russian fleet and were showing lights, funnels and signals just like those of the Russians.

The Japanese torpedo boats crept quite close to the Russian ships. Before they were discovered each of the Japanese boats discharged torpedoes, three of which took effect, striking the battleships Cesarevitch, Retvizan and the cruiser Pallada. The three damaged ships returned to the harbor entrance in order to avoid sinking. Notwithstanding the continuous fire from ships and forts, four of the Japanese torpedo boats escaped. One, however, was sunk, and another in sinking condition was deserted by her crew and afterwards captured by Russians.

I saw several Japanese cruisers in the distance. The remainder of the fleet was still farther off, lying eastward, showing search lights. After the retirement of the Japanese torpedo boats the Russian cruiser squadron, under Admiral Prince Ktompaky, followed to investigate, and then returned. The action ceased at 3 a.m.

Russian Losses.

The loss on Russian ships was eight killed and twenty wounded, apart from the disablement of the three Russian ships. The damage done to the fleet and forts is not very great. Tho many Russian torpedo boats and destroyers were in the harbor they were not ready to resist an attack. The Japanese, in fact, created a great deal of surprise, not only by the unexpected onslaught, but by the promptness and bravery with which they acted.

On Tuesday morning news arrived from Dalny that the Japanese fleet was steering westward in attack formation. It came in sight about eleven o'clock. There were in all 15 ships in two lines of battle, six battleships, six first-class cruisers and three second-class cruisers. Russians had outside thirteen large vessels under Admiral Stark (Flagship Petrohavlossk) and Rear-Admiral Prince Ktompaky (Flagship Peresviet), excluding Pallada, Cesarevitch (Flagship Rear-Admiral Mollas), and Retvizan, which were lying aground across the inner harbor entrance, as it was low water. The action was commenced by the big guns of the land battery. The morning was dull, with light wind, and the heavy smoke rendered it difficult to observe the details of the action, but I witnessed all that was possible from the Beacon Hill opposite the entrance to the harbor in line of fire. Two shells fell near us and about twenty others fell in the old town and western harbor, where many steamers flying neutral flags were anchored.

Fled From Town.

After the commencement of the action all people fled towards the hill outside the town and got under its protection. A little while after the first shell a big 12-inch one exploded, smashing the office fronts of Guensbergs Yalu Concessions Company and Russo-Chinese Bank. The streets were then entirely deserted, but the local police kept splendid order. There was no looting. The women and children were very brave. Regiments from the adjoining barracks and camps came pouring thru the town to take up a defensive position in the event of a Japanese landing.

The Japanese warships steamed slowly past in line of battle to westward and about four miles off, each vessel beginning fire when opposite Russian ships, which were two miles off shore. The action soon became general. There was no manoeuvring, simply heavy fast firing on both sides. I counted over 300 shells, few of which reached the mark. Others did not explode during action. Several merchant steamers outside the roads moved their position, but none were allowed to leave the anchorage in the harbor. Firing ceased at noon, the Japanese ships withdrawing southward, having lost one battleship and one larger cruiser put out of action. One small boat was chased and sunk by the Novik, which afterwards received a shell at the water line, but reached port all right, Admiral Stark signalling "Well done," while all the rest of the fleet cheered her arrival. Even the three ships aground fired during the action.

Cesarevitch Repairing.

Afterwards the Cesarevitch got off at high water and was towed into Targe basin, where she now is being repaired.

The Pallada effected her own repairs and rejoined the fleet. The Retvizan was still aground when I left. The casualities were 22 killed and 64 wounded. Nearly half the casualities occurred on the Pallada and Novik.

The Japanese fleet sailed southward. At 1 o'clock all quiet. The wounded were brought ashore and removed to hospitals. After Monday night's action many Japanese torpedoes were found floating outside the harbor. They were secured and their mechanism extracted. During the afternoon Alexieff ordered all women, children and non-combatants to leave. The slow special trains were crowded. They ran as often as possible from Dalny. The women and children were immediately removed in an English steamer.

After the action on Monday night official telegrams from Vladivostock stated that the cruiser squadron, consisting of the Gromovoi, Rossia, Rurik and Bogatayr had shelled a town in Yezo and then returned to Vladivostock. I offered a large price for a launch or tug boat, to put to sea from Port Arthur for Chefoo, Chinwangtao or Newchwang, but was unsuccessful."

WAR BULLETINS.

Contradictory Reports of the Sinking of Three Russian Cruisers.

Che Foo, Feb. 16.—A reliable report received yesterday says that three Russian torpedo boats have been sunk by guns from the forts. They were mistaken for Japanese Vessels.

Said to Be Confirmed.

New York, Feb. 16.—Official confirmation is given in Tokio, according to a cablegram to The World, of the report that three of the four Russian warships from Vladivostock which entered the Tsugaru Straits to attack Hakodate were blown up by mines the night of February 13 while attempting to pass the Straits.

Say They Were Sighted Since.

New York, Feb. 16.—A cablegram from London says the later advices are that four Russian warships have been sighted in Tsugaru Straits since the report went out that three of the cruisers had been sunk or disabled.

Driven Back By Storm.

Paris, Feb. 16.—A despatch to The Eclair from St. Petersburg says it is affirmed there that after the bombardment of Hakodate (which has not been officially corroborated) the four Russian cruisers which took part in the engagement were driven back to Vladivostock by a storm.

Foxton Hall Destroyed By Fire.

London, Feb. 16.—In connection with the rumors of another bombardment of Port Arthur, the owners of the British steamer Foxton Hall, which was detained by the Russians at Port Arthur, have received news that she has been destroyed by fire.

Neutralization Not Possible.

London, Feb. 16.—Answering a question in the House of Commons yesterday as to whether the British Government was taking steps to secure an arrangement for the neutralization of Niuchwang during the war the Foreign Under Secretary, Earl Percy, replied that the Government did not consider it to be practicable to neutralize any territory in the actual occupation of either of the belligerents.

Government Not Approached.

London, Feb. 16.—Home Secretary Akers-Douglas announced in the House of Commons yesterday that the British Government not only had not been approached with a suggestion that it should consent to the Russian Black Sea fleet passing out through the Dardanelles, but there was no reason whatever for supposing that Russia contemplated such a violation of her treaty obligations to the European powers.

Wants to Denounce Alliance.

Paris, Feb. 16.—M. Jaures, leader of the Socialist party (which holds the balance of power in Parliament), has made a declaration contemplating the immediate denunciation of the Franco-Russian alliance, which has attracted a great deal of attention in diplomatic circles. The declaration was made at St. Etienne, where the Socialist congress is sitting.

20,000 Japs Land at Chemulpo.

Washington, Feb. 16.—Information has reached here that nearly 20,000 Japanese troops were landed at Chemulpo Sunday, the first division of a large number which will be thrown into Corea while the Russian fleet is bottled in Port Arthur. By one conversant with the Japanese plans, it is stated that the repeated attacks on Port Arthur are not for the purpose of seizing that place at present, unless an unexpected weakness in the fortifications there should develop. They are part of a plan to harass the Russian fleet until Corea can be occupied.

AN UNPLEASANT EXPERIENCE.

Has it ever been your unhappy lot to be told by your physician that you must go to a hospital and submit to an operation? If so, you remember with what dread and shrinking you awaited the day when you must endure the knife.

The present day surgeon appears to be possessed by a mania for operating; especially in cases of hemorrhoids or piles, and while the greater number of the profession do not recommend this "last resort" unless they honestly believe it necessary, the fact remains that much needless operating is done, and the patient put to much expense and suffering for what?

To obtain a possible temporary relief; these words are used advisedly, because in nine cases out of ten the affliction returns and the patient is just where he started from. Oft-times he could be cured much more simply and easily by the use of such a remedy as the Pyramid Pile Cure; this has come to be recognized as the best remedy on the market for the painful disease named, and the druggists now sell more of it than all other pile remedies combined.

The writer personally knows people who were afflicted with the worst form of bleeding and protruding piles and who were permanently cured by the use of Pyramid Pile Cure. In every one of these cases the attending physicians had assured the sufferer that only by an operation could he rid himself of the disease; so much for the infallibility of the doctors.

This remedy, which is sold by all druggists at the low price of fifty cents, is in suppository form, is applied directly to the parts affected, and performs its work quietly and painlessly. The Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., will mail free to any address a book telling all about piles or hemorrhoids, their cause and cure.

A suggestion is offered that if the reader is afflicted, or knows anyone who is, this book may be sent for, as it will be found invaluable.

JAPAN FIGHTS ALONE.

Accepts No Aid in Money or Men Though Both Offer.

Tokio, Feb. 16.—The Japanese Minister at Washington has officially advised his Government that he is receiving numerous offers of large contributions to the war fund from Americans, and requests instructions. It is considered probable that Japan will refuse to accept this aid.

The Cabinet will consider the question and formally instruct the Minister shortly. Many applications for permission to enlist in the Japanese army and navy are coming from various parts of the world. All these applications have been refused, and no foreigner will be allowed to participate in the military or naval operations in Japan, except as spectators.

At a meeting of the bankers, newspaper proprietors and commercial men yesterday, it was resolved to support the Government irrespective of party lines.

No further news of the Russian Vladivostock squadron has been received here. It is thought to have returned to the port of Vladivostock, in preference to risking a fight or exhausting its fuel.

Will Fight For Japan.

Chicago, Feb. 16.—The Post says: Sixty Chicagoans, many of them veterans of the Spanish-American war, it is said, will leave this week for Japan. Owing to the neutrality proclamation of President Roosevelt, the men are keeping their plans a secret, but it is intimated that the purpose is to join the Japanese forces.

BANISHED FROM HOME.

John Wilson Did Not Return, Even Though Wealth Awaited Him.

Detroit, Feb. 16.—The body of John Wilson, who died at the Red Cross Hospital, has been sent to Peterboro, Ont., his birthplace, for burial. It is said Wilson was ordered away from his home about seven years ago, and that after that incident he became a wanderer, careless of himself or his future. Even when he learned of the death of his father and mother and of the fact that he had fallen heir to ten thousand dollars, he did not return, nor did he claim his heritage. He was finally sent from Allen's Mission to the county house, where one of his relatives found him a few weeks ago.

Not Without Distinction.

A note of family pride was struck in the conversation between three small Reading boys the other day. The parts played by their respective grandfathers in the civil war were being depicted by two of the boys in vivid colors. The career of each, it seemed, had been halted by confinement in southern prisons, and it was on the latter fact that the lads laid particular stress. The third youth, unable to match these recitals with any military achievement of his own forefathers, preserved an envious silence for awhile and then, not to be outdone, said disparagingly:

"Why, that's not so much. My Uncle Bill was in jail a long time, and he was never in the army at all!"

FAIRY TALE OF SCIENCE

ARE SCIENTISTS TO RECOGNIZE THE TRANSMUTATION OF METALS?

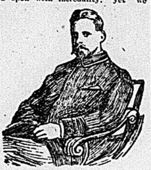
Changing of Radium Into Helium a Triumph for Modern Alchemy—Mr. R. M. Hunter, Who Says He Is Commercially Changing Silver Into Gold, on the Importance of Sir William Ramsay's Discovery.

SIR WILLIAM RAMSAY, who has been associated with Lord Rayleigh in the study of argon and helium, in recently making his amazing announcement that he had witnessed the changing of radium into helium, said: "What is this but an actual case of transmutation of one element into another, which the ancient alchemists believed when they painfully sought to change lead into gold and incidentally founded the science of modern chemistry?"

In this connection may be remembered the recent apparently incredible announcement by a well known scientist that he had succeeded in transmuting silver quickly and cheaply into gold. The discoverer of this amazing process, Mr. Rudolph Melville Hunter, of Philadelphia, who told a story of work already accomplished and of plans in contemplation which suggested a page from the "Arabian Nights," has been awarded upward of four hundred patents at Washington of recognized commercial value, while his work is recorded in the standard biographies. Mr. Hunter's analysis of the discovery of the distinguished English metallurgist and its far-reaching influences follows:

Alchemists' Goal.

"The announcement from London that Sir William Ramsay has discovered that the emanations from radium, when kept in a sealed condition, were converted into helium, has created considerable comment, and has caused many men of science to admit that it looks very much like transmutation—the long sought goal of alchemists for ages. The public may recall that some months ago my announcement that I was daily transforming one metal into another—namely, silver into gold—was looked upon with incredulity, yet we have in the present developments of Sir William Ramsay another evidence of the correctness of the theories I then advanced.



SIR WILLIAM RAMSAY.

"As I am constantly transmuting one metal into another and therefore know, with absolute certainty, that metals are not primary elements but are creations of a common primary substance under different electrical conditions, I am ready to accept it as quite probable that gases are equally transmutable. In fact, I see no reason why all the so-called primary substances of our text books on chemistry should not be transmutable one into each other or into other substances.

"I have before asserted and wish to again say as positively as the English language will permit, that alchemy is an accomplished fact—not based upon the almost unknown substances, but with the ordinary metals we are daily accustomed to see and handle.

"Copper, lead and silver are readily converted into gold, for example; and when it is borne in mind that the transformation of silver into gold is accomplished in less time than one minute, we should not be astonished by the fact that the emanations of radium should, in the space of from one to two weeks, be transformed into helium and to even then disappear at a period of one month.

"Radium, like uranium, is radio-active, but with far greater intensity. It produces a very decided electrification of the air in its vicinity, and which extends to surrounding objects. While radium has a high atomic weight, its emanations have a very low atomic weight when taken into consideration with respect to the space they occupy. If, as assumed by Professor Ramsay, it would require a million years to dissolve radium into a gas, it is evident that the quantity of gas produced in a few hours from a few grains of radium would be so relatively small and attenuated that if again densified the resulting product would disappear to the eye. It would also disappear from the spectrum, since its condensation would undoubtedly mean the loss of its radio-active properties.

"Helium has an atomic weight of about one two-hundredth part that of radium, and consequently it is reasonable to find in the condensed gas a substance of approximately the lowest atomic weight. Helium is the gas found in abundance in the solar atmosphere, but until comparatively recent date it was not found in the earth, presumably because the conditions for its creation are not normal at the present age of the world.

Qualities of Radium.

"The radio-activity of radium is undoubtedly an electrical condition of its ultimate particles, which, so long as they remain in sufficient quantity, keep up that tremendous bombardment among themselves which maintains the luminosity and radio influence that will cause the gaseous emanations to remain as radium gas. This activity of the gas will endure for a couple of weeks, with a gradual decreasing value, and will finally disappear.

"M. Curie found that if the gas were not sealed its radio-activity decreased one-half in every twenty-eight minutes, and that if sealed in glass it diminished one-half every four days; therefore it follows that the radio-activity is less than one-hundredth of its first value at the end of four weeks, in which case the gas ceased to be visible, as pointed out by Professor Ramsay.

"As the radio-activity diminishes a condition is reached where the inductive influence of the particles decreases so that the rapidity of movement becomes less, the orbital range becomes limited, and hence the same number of ultimate particles are condensed into smaller space and helium is produced. But helium is an unstable gas, and by further loss of radio-activity the gas becomes so greatly condensed that it assumes a condition that does not affect the spectrum, and it is therefore said to disappear altogether. If it disappeared as helium it nevertheless exists as a substance, but so greatly reduced in bulk that it is invisible.

"I would point out that the unstable character of substances in process of transmutation is well settled. In changing silver and copper into gold a failure to secure the 'proper conditions' frequently produces an intermediate metal which is neither silver nor gold, but which, having the appearance of gold under heat and acid tests, will return to silver in due time.

"If the process be carried on with the proper conditions then the transmutation is complete, and no natural conditions will cause the gold to return to silver or copper. It is then gold for ages to come. At the present time my work in transforming silver into gold has reached such perfection that the unstable intermediate metal is not produced, and all the gold made is absolutely stable in the first instance.

"Helium is in great quantity in the sun's atmosphere, and is no doubt due to the attenuated condition of certain portions of the primary matter outside of the more condensed central portions. When the primary matter becomes condensed to different atomic weights it becomes definite substances, and these substances are influenced by the radio-activity, or electrons, which impart motion under inductional action to the ions or ultimate particles.

"So then lead, iridium, mercury, gold, bismuth, osmium and platinum should be readily convertible into each other if their electrons or radio-activities can be properly governed during transmutation. Having already been able to commercially convert several substances into gold at a cost of about five per cent, of the gold produced, I am fully convinced that I shall soon be equally able also to transform lead into gold commercially. In due time we shall be manufacturing platinum, mercury and other valuable metals of commerce.

"I predict that in less than one year the scientific world will have fully recognized the conditions of alchemy which are with us to-day and outlined above. Of course I realize how very averse the public is to believe that the precious gold they work so hard to secure can be made in unlimited quantities from baser metals with wonderful rapidity and small cost. They will, however, accept this fact when in the very near future a plant of magnificent proportions is reared in this country and produces $100,000,000 of gold per annum.

"While alchemy of the ancients comprehended the transmutation of metals alone, modern alchemy draws no such distinction, as I can see no reason why any of the non-metallic elements, so-called, such as oxygen, hydrogen, nitrogen and carbon, cannot be converted one into the other or into other substances."

BILLETS FOR BARNACLES.

Tarte's dear friend, the Hon. Raymond Prefontaine, is the author of an unique circular, through his private secretary, Jules Clement, which will go down in political history as the most remarkable that "has been." The Minister of Marine and Fisheries has invited applicants for Government positions to state their qualifications, by whom recommended, the position sought, etc. The appeal is not unique in Liberal annals. In 1900, during the absence of Hon. Mr. Tarte, Sir William Mulock, acting Minister of Public Works, caused a letter to be sent to the faithful asking them to state what public works they desired to be constructed in their several sections. Sir William offered no defence for his action, which was most unjustifiable and was made the subject of severe condemnation. Mr. Prefontaine, however, professes to believe that an invitation, such as he issued and circulated on the eve of two important bye-elections in the City of Montreal, is quite the proper thing. He desires, according to his own story, to ascertain what the office-seekers who have been besieging him really want. Mr. Prefontaine has abandoned the idea of determining for himself what his or other departments need. In future it will be for applicants to express their preference for this or that situation, and if the political pull is strong enough the people will be allowed to pay their salaries. The motto of the Laurier Government hereafter will be "situations made while you wait."

TIMELY TOPICS.

Ugly rumors are abroad, we are sorry to say, in regard to the Gas by-law. As everybody knows, the by-law in question was carried, and the majority was raised on a recount before the County Judge. Thereupon the City Council took over the works and have for some time been running them. It would naturally be supposed that all citizens who have the welfare of the town at heart would, now that the corporation is committed to the scheme, do all they could to help the Gas Committee in their by no means easy task of putting the works in good running order and placing them on a paying basis, at the same time giving them an opportunity to extend the system and give large numbers of our citizens, who desire to do so, a chance to use fuel gas for domestic purposes.

It seems, however, if what we hear is true, that the useless and uncalled-for opposition to the by-law still continues, and that there is a possibility of the city being forced into tedious and expensive litigation by a few people who, perhaps, hardly realize the injustice they are doing the taxpayers as a whole. There is no doubt at all that the city, having taken over the Gas works, will run them. The opponents of the scheme may raise obstacles and cause protracted litigation, which may put money in the pockets of a few lawyers, but they have no earthly chance of preventing the Council from, sooner or later, carrying out the provisions of the by-law. Everybody knows that gas is a necessity in this city. Were the works shut down, many manufacturing establishments would be compelled to shut down, thus throwing people out of employment, without mentioning the inconvenience and expense caused to people who use gas for illuminating and cooking purposes. As things stand at present, the Council must either run the works or shut them down; they have no legal right, we are told, to lease them.

• • •

We submit: Does it not appear to be the duty of all good citizens, now that the city has taken over the works and been committed to the scheme, to lend a helping hand and push the thing along, rather than lend themselves to interested parties who have an object in seeing the works close up? The Intelligencer has respect and admiration for fair opponents, like Ald. Green and others, who fought the by-law fairly and squarely while its fate hung in the balance, but who, now that the vote has been taken, and the mandate of the people made known, declare their intention of bowing to the wishes of the majority and doing their level best to make the civic management of the Gas works a success. This is not a personal matter with the Council, it is a matter which concerns the citizens as a whole, for out of their pockets must come the costs if needless litigation is forced on us. This useless and mischievous opposition should be frowned down by all who have at heart the best interests of Belleville.

RUNNING A NEWSPAPER IN RUSSIA.

(Vancouver World.)

Pity the sorrows of a newspaperman in Russia. Running a paper is pre-eminently a risky operation. The Czar's Government spends more on the press censorship than it does on education, and quite recently the staff of press censors has been increased by eight. Certainly the censor earns his salary in Russia. Last year 83 newspapers were suspended for periods amounting in all to thirty-one years and ten days; twenty-six papers were forbidden to accept advertisements, and 259 editors were officially threatened with Siberia if they did not mend their ways.

• • •

The Russians are said to be very much put out because British sympathy is with the Japs. Let's see, wasn't Russia one of the countries which laughed at us in the early stages of the Boer war? Sure. Crack another smile and hurrah! for the plucky little Japs.

• • •

A WELL-FOUNDED BELIEF.

(Hamilton Herald.)

The Russian fleet is said to be bottled up in the harbor of Port Arthur, which supports the general belief that the Japs are corkers.

A GOOD OLD PLAN.

(Montreal Gazette.)

Schemes for the moral reform of politics are being discussed in some parts of Canada with much earnestness. Some are ingenious and some not. There is none yet suggested, however, more promising than the good old constitutional plan of turning the rascals out. It has cleaned many a political mess. It will clean any to which it is applied.

• • •

The Conservatives gained a seat in the bye-elections yesterday, the captured stronghold being the city of St. John, N.B., in which there was a turn over of nearly 1300. That shows how the G.T.P. scheme is regarded "down by the sea."

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

The local intermediate team left for Toronto on the 6 o'clock train this morning, and will meet the Marlboros in the Mutual St. rink to-night. Belleville has never yet won a game on that rink. Will they break the ice to-night? We hope so. One thing is sure—if the boys do lose it won't be anything like the slaughter they were up against about a year ago. Not much, Mary Ann.

Kingston Whig: The O.H.A. intermediate championship, just now, appears to be between Stratford and Belleville. And of course Kingston hopes dear old Belleville will win. Let the championships come east.

Queen's hockey team, if they win the intercollegiate championship on Friday night, threaten to challenge for the Stanley Cup. And it really looks as though they would have as good a chance of winning it as any O.H.A. team.

The Marlboro Seniors trimmed Perth on their own ice last night. The Dukes, bar accident, will surely go after the Stanley Cup next week.

Kingston News and Times: During recent hockey matches, when the cover point showed much speed, the spectators sometimes coached him to act the part of an extra forward and rush down the ice. The weakness of this advice was evident in the McMaster-R.M.C. game on Friday. The Cadets scored two goals by Young being out of his place. The Cadets also lost a goal while Harrington was doing the grand stand rush down the rink.

No doubt about it, hockey players who keep their places are the most service to their teams.

Reports of the match between Belleville and the Marlboros will be received at Hotel Quinte to-night.

Teams picked from the members of E Company, Fifteenth Regiment, and the Bugle Band will play hockey to-night.

HOCKEY.

Ritchie Employees Won.

In the early portion of last evening a hockey match was played between a team of Ritchie & Co.'s employees and a team representing the Grocers. It proved to be an easy win for the dry goods boys, who at the conclusion of the game had scored 9 goals to their opponents 4. A goodly number of spectators were present and apparently enjoyed the fun. Mr. John Gordinear made a satisfactory referee.

The Date Changed.

Owing to the match here on Friday night, the date for the game between the Printers and Clothiers has been changed to to-morrow evening, between 7 and 8 o'clock. Both teams are prepared for the fray.

ICE TROTTING.

"Sloppy Weather" in a Match Race at Syracuse.

The Syracuse Telegram gives the following account of a race in which an old campaigner well known in this district took part. Incidentally it shows the queer methods practised in certain portions of Uncle Sam's domain:

The two fastest ice pacers in training in Syracuse—Sloppy Weather, A. E. Alvord's mare, and Direct Bud, a stallion, the property of Edward Burns—met yesterday, and the mare proved the faster and the more reliable. It was a royal contest between the speedy pacers drawing sulkies, and the way the sharp shoes cleaved the hard ice furnished sweet music to the ears of the enthusiastic horsemen present. C. L. VanAuken was behind the mare and Jack Cahill handled the stallion.

A week ago the Burnses and the Cahills imagined they had the fastest thing that visited Kirk Park, and were willing to back their opinion to the amount of $500. It was then that the writer called attention to the steady work that Sloppy Weather was receiving, an easy half she had negotiated in 1.12, and the prediction was offered that Direct Bud would meet his match if Mr. Alvord consented to race the mare. That prediction was fulfilled yesterday.

Direct Bud's admirers were ready with the coin yesterday and offers to bet $100 on the stallion were frequently heard before the first heat. The mare had admirers, but they kept their money under cover. They reasoned that Direct Bud would have a big advantage with the pole, and thought he would be more reliable with the hopples, while the mare went free of any kind of rigging. But they had no idea of the famous ice mare's speed. She was the same piece of horseflesh that has delighted the hearts of winter racing enthusiasts on northern New York tracks for several years. The two got away together at better than a 2.20 clip. Around the first turn they seemed to be going a 2.10 gait, for speed is deceiving on the ice. In spite of her outside position the mare stayed at the stallion's neck, and when they straightened out on the back stretch she moved up until the two were nose and nose. The mare moved up a few more inches and the strain that the little stallion put in his lithe limbs to recover his advantage threw him off his feet.

"He's up," shouted the crowd, and Mr. Alvord's voice could be heard saying, "There's nothing to it, there's nothing to it." The mare had gone to the quarter in 33 1-2 seconds, which the writer believes is the fastest quarter that has ever been paced on the ice track at Kirk Park. She jogged home in 1.12.

In the second heat the mare had the pole, but Cahill cut her off at the first turn. Van Auken's sulky was forced upon the bank and one of the tires cut so badly that the wind was let out immediately. The mare recovered quickly, however, and was after the stallion like a flying machine. She closed the gap before they reached the quarter, when Direct Bud was again forced off his feet. He caught and the race was on again, but the mare had too much speed. She finished in 1.10 1-2, which is the fastest time made in a race at the track this season, and, considering that she pulled a sulky with one flat tire, the exhibition was a remarkable one.

Mr. Alvord was displeased at the failure of the judges to act on the alleged foul and, turning to VanAuken, said:

"Take her home. We'll give them the cup."

UNJUST AND ILLEGAL.

Mr. Hendrie Scores the Payment of the Higher Salaried Officials in "Soo" Wages Account.

Toronto, Feb. 17.—The Soo payments have provided a new topic on which to assail the Government. Yesterday Opposition members delved into the return brought down, and extracted some figures, showing that the high-salaried officials received large amounts from the Government under the authority of the Order-in-Council passed "to relieve distress and prevent rioting." Mr. Hendrie was the first to whom the figures became useful, as he had the floor for the resumption of the budget debate.

An hour was very usefully occupied by the Attorney-General in explaining the main features of the new taxation bill. He traced the evolution of the assessment law of the province from 1793 down to the present day and then dealt in a concise manner with the efforts of the Assessment Commission and the special committee in producing the measure which is now before the legislature, and of which the particulars he dealt with have already been printed in these columns.

The bill was referred to a select committee.

Budget Debate Resumed.

Mr. Hendrie resumed the debate on the budget. He congratulated the member for Haldimand (Mr Holmes) on his exceedingly frank speech last Thursday, in which he acknowledged that the House was called to forestall the election protests, and he admired the Premier for his generalship. He presumed Mr. Holmes meant the Premier's generalship in looking after the interests of his party and not of the province.

Discussing the Soo payment, he said the object of the Government in paying the wages of the workmen was stated to be "to relieve distress and prevent rioting." Mr. Hendrie created much amusement by reading some of the amounts paid by the Government "to relieve distress." For instance, Cornelius Shields, president of the Consolidated Companies, got $6,693, and Mr. Coyne, his assistant, drew $1,606.45 to relieve his distress.

He said the high-salaried men should come in with the other creditors who supplied materials to the Consolidated Company. The payment was unjust and illegal.

Where to Draw the Line.

The Attorney-General—Where would you draw the line?

Mr. Hendrie—At laborers and mechanics.

Mr. Gibson—I suppose the honorable gentleman would not have paid the office clerks?

Mr. Whitney—We would not have paid the officers.

Mr. Gibson—Oh, no!

Mr. Whitney—They gave pretty good value.

Mr. Hendrie continued until recess and shortly after, going over the various subjects traversed in the budget speech.

Mr. Samuel Russell of East Hastings, continued the debate, and he was followed by Mr. Taylor. Mr. Dunlop of North Renfrew, moved the adjournment of the debate at 9.30 o'clock.

POLICE SHOOT BURGLAR.

"Shorty" Wilson Killed By London Detectives Searching Home For Plunder.

London, Sept. 17.—In a desperate fight in a home on Ridout street north, near Black Friar's Bridge, yesterday afternoon, a man who is supposed to be a notorious burglar, was shot and killed by Detectives Nickle and Egelton, and his pal was badly beaten with revolver butts and landed in jail. The dead man was about 27 years of age, and was known as "Shorty" Wilson. The other gives his name as James Vance. It is thought, however, that both names are merely aliases.

The detectives had gone to search the house where the shooting occurred. It was the home of Frederick Mosely, who was arrested Monday, charged with robbing two local shops. Vance, who is also known as "Texas," opened fire on the detectives. After a fierce fight the revolver was knocked from his hand. "Texas" then shouted for his pal, who was hiding in the back shed. The pal, "Shorty," rushed to a window and fired into the room, one bullet crashing through Egelton's hat. Both of the detectives fired at Wilson, one bullet lodging in his brain and the other just over the heart.

"Texas" by this time had whipped out another pistol and the rough and tumble fight was resumed, the detectives finally disarming the burglar.

THREE SEATS IN EIGHT

Won By Liberal-Conservatives in the Bye-Elections.

Liberals Lose St. John City, Which Hon. A. G. Blair Carried in 1900 By 997 Majority—Conservative Candidate Has a Majority There of 285 Votes—Ontario Conservatives Increase Their Majorities While Those of Quebec Liberals Dwindle.

Toronto, Feb. 17.—The result of the eight bye-elections held yesterday should afford satisfaction to the Conservative party. Of the eight seats, the Conservatives carried three. In the general election of 1900 they carried but two. The gain is the City of St. John, N.B., which Hon. A. G. Blair carried in 1900 by a majority of 997. The Conservative candidate carried the seat yesterday by 285 majority. The two Ontario seats are held by largely increased majorities. Mr. Armstrong won East Lambton by over 500, while Mr. Donnelly was the victor in East Bruce by 209 majority. The Liberals carried all of the four Quebec seats by reduced majorities. St. James division of Montreal defeats Bergeron by 636. In the general election of 1900 the Liberal majority was 1,641, while two years ago Ald. Brunet carried the seat by 720. The most surprising result was the reduction of a Liberal majority of 1,111 in St. Hyacinthe to 195. Hochelaga returns a Liberal by 301 against 635 for Madore in 1900, and in Montmagny there is a slightly reduced majority. The other seat, West Queens, P.E.I., remains in the Liberal column by 170 majority. Hon. L. H. Davies had 735 majority in 1900, and Mr. Farquharson 475 in the bye-election of 1901.

Donnelly By 200.

Walkerton, Feb. 17.—With two polls in Culross to hear from, which will likely give a small majority for the Liberal candidate, Mr. Donnelly, the Conservative nominee, is elected for East Bruce by a majority of 209. Both candidates worked very hard, and an unusually good vote was polled, considering bad roads and severe weather. Heavy changes in favor of the Conservative candidate are shown in the Townships of Carrick and Greenock. They have also gained slightly in Culross. The other parts of the riding are about normal.

Armstrong By 500.

Watford, Feb. 17.—The bye-election in East Lambton yesterday has gone Conservative by about 500 majority. The Liberals looked for defeat, but not by so large a majority. Returns so far give Armstrong, Conservative, about 500, with 14 polls to hear from. Owing to the cold weather and the condition of the roads, the total vote was somewhat smaller than at the last election. Outside returns are hard to obtain, and some will not be heard from until to-day.

Four Liberals in Quebec.

Montreal, Feb. 17.—The Conservative party has once more been defeated in Quebec Province, but there is little in the result that will create the belief that French Canada will not return to its Conservative allegiance of old. The only real disappointment is in Mr. Bergeron's defeat, although perhaps, his many friends and admirers hoped for too much in the present contest. The vote in St. James yesterday stood 3,211 for Gervais, against 2,775 for Bergeron, giving the Liberal candidate a majority of 636. Two years ago Ald. Bruntt polled 2,980 votes and Mr. Bergeron 2,260, so it will be seen that Mr. Gervais polled a larger vote by 231 than Brunet, and Mr. Bergeron polled 315 votes more yesterday than when he ran two years ago.

In St. Hyacinthe the Conservatives came near capturing perhaps the most pronounced Liberal stronghold in the province. In 1900 Hon. Mr. Bernier was returned by 1,111, while yesterday Mr. Blanchet gets but 195 majority. Mr. Tache carried the Town of St. Hyacinthe, but was defeated in the country parishes. At a general election Tache will be returned.

In Hochelaga E. A. Rivet is returned by 301 votes, against a majority of 665 obtained by the Liberal candidate at the general elections.

In Montmagny A. Lavergne is elected by over 200, which is not so heavy as Mr. Martineau's majority at the last election.

BIG BERLIN BLAZE.

Felt Boot Company Factory Burned to the Ground.

Berlin, Feb. 17.—One of the most disastrous conflagrations in Berlin's history visited us last evening, when the large four-storey building of the Berlin Felt Boot Company, situated on the G.T.R., and one of the largest of the kind in the Dominion, was burned to the ground. Fire was discovered in the spinning and carding-room, first floor, about 6.45, and no time was lost in getting the brigade out, but very little could be done to save the structure. The fire raged for over two hours and a half. The Waterloo brigade arrived about 8, to render all assistance they could. Pieces of burning embers were carried for a mile. The loss will reach probably $150,000. The amount of insurance carried is said to be over $30,000. The industry employed about 200 hands, and was established about 30 years ago.

Wants Company Investigated.

Toronto, Feb. 17.—Robert Stewart of Guelph has applied for a winding-up order against the Hees Furniture Company of Bracebridge, share capital $65,000, paid up $7,200, to satisfy a judgment for $543 and a claim of $2,300. The motion was adjourned two weeks.

Toronto Election Scandals.

Toronto, Feb. 17.—When Judge Winchester ascended his seat yesterday morning to resume the investigation into the civic election scandals, the name of Samuel Thompson was called, but in vain, for Thompson, who was deputy returning officer in sub-division 9, of Ward 4, had skipped his bail and disappeared. The most of the afternoon was taken up in endeavoring to find out all about him from his brothers and sister. The Judge ruled that no man would be permitted to refuse to answer questions on the ground that he feared to incriminate himself. It is said that Durance, Thompson's poll clerk, will turn King's evidence. Durance is said to have made a confession to his solicitors, who, it is said, have turned it over to the Crown Prosecutor.

Evangelistic Services.

The intense cold of yesterday afternoon and evening, affected the attendance at the special services in the Baptist Church. Mr. Whyte is suffering from a cold and was unable to be present. At the evening service Mr. Shield's text was 1st Samuel, 18.4, and his subject "How a young man got a new suit of clothes." The young man was David, who had received the apparel of a prince at the hand of the son of Saul. The subject for this evening will be "A representative man." The Bible readings are held each afternoon at 3.30 and the evening service at 7.30.

TENDENCY OF THE TIMES.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

THE QUESTION OF BALDNESS.

This is a vital question with hundreds of men or partially so. How to overcome the disfigurement lent by baldness is a simple matter when you consider the perfection of modern art in the making of Wigs and Toupees. The visit of Prof. Dorenwend, of Toronto, to Belleville on Friday, Feb. 19th, when he will be at the Hotel Quinte, renders it possible for anyone who wish to consult him to do so at his private apartments retained at Hotel Quinte for this purpose. Demonstration given to show the perfect naturalness of Wigs and Toupees. Do not miss this opportunity. Remember the days and dates, Friday, Feb. 19th. 1w-1d

BOYARIN BLOWN UP MINE AT PORT ARTHUR

What the Japs Leave Russians Themselves Destroy.

197 OFFICERS AND MEN LOST

Accident Occurred in the Same Manner As That to Yenisei.

Capt. Stepanof, Who Was Blown Up With the Latter, Invented the Device For the Rapid Laying of Mines, Which Proved So Disastrous in Two Instances —M. Kurino Blames Admiral Alexieff For Causing the War.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 17.—The Russian second-class cruiser Boyarin was blown up by a mine on February 13 in the same manner as was the Russian torpedo transport Yenisei. She had on board 197 officers and men, all of whom it is understood were lost. No details of the disaster have been given out.

Report Is Confirmed.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 17.—The report circulated here yesterday that the Russian cruiser Boyarin was blown up last Saturday and that all her officers and crew, 197 in number, were lost, is confirmed from a private source.

The Boyarin.

The Boyarin was 348 feet long, 41 feet beam and 16 feet draught. She was of 3,300 tons displacement, and her trial speed was 25 knots. Her armament consisted of six 4.7 inch guns, eight 1.8 inch guns, two 1.4 inch guns and three machine guns. She was also fitted with six torpedo tubes. The Boyarin was last reported as having taken part in the engagement of February 9 at Port Arthur.

Hoist By His Own Petard.

Captain Stepanof, who was blown up with the torpedo gunboat Yenisei, and who himself invented the system for laying submarine mines, which is considered responsible for the catastrophe, had caused the Yenisei to be fitted with his device for the rapid laying of mines, whereby a trolley line extended beyond the vessel's stern along which the mines slid out and dropped into their appointed place. This plan did away with the cumbersome work of laying the mines from small boats. The accident was due to the excessive strain on the Yenisei's anchor cables while the mines were suspended pending immersion. The two cables snapped and one mine collided with another.

Alexieff Blamed For the War.

New York, Feb. 17.—Neither side wanted war, according to Mr. Kurino, former Minister to Russia, in a cable to The Herald. Mr. Kurino is quoted as giving out an interview in Berlin to this effect:

"When hostilities were at last opened," declared Mr. Kurino, "it was directly due to the action of Admiral Alexieff. By his ostentatious preparations for war he rendered war inevitable."

Mr. Kurino affirmed that the Viceroy never delivered the last note to the Japanese Government. Mr. Kurino said he had not the slightest information as to what the note contained.

600 Russians Frozen to Death.

Berlin, Feb. 17.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Tagliche Rundschau says that six hundred Russian soldiers have been frozen to death while marching across Lake Baikal in Eastern Siberia.

Russian Torpedo Boats Frozen Up.

Tokio, Feb. 17.—The German steamer Batavia has just reached Moji from Vladivostock with 1,500 Japanese refugees on board, including the commercial agent of Japan at Vladivostock. The latter reports that three Russian torpedo boats are frozen up at that port unable to move. Massing of troops on the north bank of the Yalu continues.

Manchurian Trains Run.

New York, Feb. 17.—The arrival is reported of 6,000 Russian troops at Irkutsk, says a Herald despatch from Port Arthur by way of Che Foo. They are now nearing Harbin, Manchurian trains are now running regularly, bringing supplies from Siberia.

ROYAL TEMPLARS.

Reports Discouraging—Only 3 Members Gained in the Past Year.

Toronto, Feb. 17.—The twenty-second annual meeting of the Grand Council of the Royal Templars of Temperance of Ontario, opened here yesterday. Many delegates were delayed by snow blockades on the railways. The morning session was occupied with officers' report. The Grand Councillor dealt with the prohibition situation. They had a right to insist upon the largest measure of prohibition within the powers of the province, and demanded "the complete suppression of the traffic in strong drink for beverage purposes." Meanwhile the local option measure should be utilized.

The report called attention to the stationary condition of the membership, which only showed a net increase of three for the year. The condition is disheartening and discouraging, he said. The membership is now 8,016.

Hanna Left $8,000,000.

Cleveland, O., Feb. 17.—The value of the estate left by the late Marcus A. Hanna is valued at from seven to eight million dollars. It is stated that he owned at least 15 per cent. of the stock of the Cleveland Electric Railway, capitalized at $23,500,000.

THE POPULAR VOTE OF 1904

IS UNANIMOUSLY IN FAVOR OF STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS—THEY ARE THE NATION'S FAVORITE.

No article on the market, whatever be the purpose for which it was created, can be a phenomenal success and be universally popular unless it possesses great and unfailing merit. Inferior and worthless articles may flourish for a limited time if their praises are sung by sufficient clever and catchy advertising; but their days are numbered from the start and their finish is a foregone conclusion. This is an age of the survival of the fittest, and only articles of true worth endure.

The unparalleled and phenomenal success of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets from a business standpoint is not unnatural nor surprising. It is due directly to their unparalleled and phenomenal success in curing multiplied thousands of cases of dyspepsia throughout the English-speaking world.

The reason of the wonderful success of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is so plain and simple that a child can understand. It is this and nothing more; they are natural in their workings and effects. They take up the work of the worn and wasted stomach and do it just as the stomach did when it was well and strong and able. They actually digest the food and do it thoroughly, completely and independently, thus giving the weak and weary stomach an opportunity to renew and regain its wasted strength. You forget that you have a stomach just as you did when you were a healthy boy or girl and Nature restores and heals that organ and makes it well and strong.

A St. Louis business man says:—"I was a confirmed dyspeptic for years. What I ate had to be forced down and most of it soured or lay like lead in my stomach and did me no good. I was in constant misery both in mind and body and came to be cranky, morose and irritable. My natural disposition, which was cheerful and pleasant, left me, and I was alienating all my friends. The doctors did me no good. I got so I hated the sight or name of a doctor. My wife finally worried me into buying a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which I began taking under protest, as I had no faith in anything or anybody. I was sore on creation.

"I had not taken a third of that box before I noticed a decided and most welcome change. I could enjoy a good meal and feel no bad effects following it. I forgot my stomach and had a chance to think about something else. I went ahead with my business in ease and comfort. Six boxes of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at a total outlay of $3.00, cured me completely and I have not suffered a pain from dyspepsia for two years. I have an appetite like a sixteen-year-old boy. I wish everyone who suffers from dyspepsia could know what a change this great remedy made in me."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by druggists everywhere at 50 cents a box. All druggists carry them, and the best doctors are prescribing them. You need not fear that you will ever be unable to get them; for, because of the good they have done mankind and the suffering they have relieved and the happiness they have caused, the fame and the success and the popularity of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets from generation unto generation will endure.

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN

When buying clothing, beware of the man who offers you $10 and $12 suits or overcoats for $3.98 or $4.76 Then again, do not be governed too much by the marked price—look to the value, the worth, the texture, trimmings and make of the goods themselves. A comparison thus made will show conclusively that the prices we quote are lower than goods of equal worth or quality can be bought for elsewhere.

A DRINK OF WATER.

Why It Is a Good Plan to Take One Before Breakfast.

In the morning the stomach contains a considerable quantity of mucus, spread over and adherent to its walls. If food enters at this time the tenacious mucus will interfere to some extent with the direct contact between the food and the stomach necessary to provoke the secretion of gastric juice. A glass of water taken before breakfast passes through the stomach into the small intestines in a continuous and uninterrupted flow. It partially distends the stomach; it thins and washes out most of the tenacious mucus; it increases the fullness of the capillaries of the stomach directly if the water is warm and indirectly in a reactionary way if it is cold. Care must be taken not to take cold water when the circulation, either local or general, is so feeble as to make reaction improbable. We should not risk it in an advanced age nor in the feeble, whether old or young, nor should it be taken in local troubles like gastric catarrh. In these cases it is best to give warm or hot water. The addition of salt is very beneficial.—London Family Doctor.

If Quail Are Scarce, So Are Turkeys.

"I don't know whether you ever noticed it, but it's a fact just the same that whenever we have a year in which quail are scarce the same is true of turkeys," said a prominent meat dealer the other day. "Prolonged wet weather in the spring or in the early summer is fatal to young quail and turkeys alike. Both are extremely tender, and the weather has much to do with their successful rearing. I have watched this thing for years, and invariably a poor quail year means a scarcity of turkeys and high prices."

Rather Fruitless Advertising.

It is an open secret that tailors make presents of elegant clothing to prominent persons, in consideration for which the latter are expected to mention the maker, casually, to be sure, but as often as possible. Other firms are known to employ persons who, when occasion offers, say in a crowded street car, converse naturally, but quite audibly and energetically, on the merits of their employer's establishment.

The Will Was There.

He—So your husband has given up smoking? It requires a pretty strong will to accomplish that. She—Well, I'd have you understand that I have a strong will!

Unnecessary Fear.

Good News For The Old People.

A New Source of Strength and Vigor for Those Who Feel Their Vitality Waning and Suffer From the Ills Consequent on Old Age.

The story of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a story of great cheer for the old people.

It is a source of strength and support at that time in life when vitality begins to decline, and the weaknesses of age begin to make themselves felt.

Young blood is warm blood—it is rich, pure and life sustaining, and it is by actually forming new blood that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food proves of such wonderful benefit to the aged.

As the years go by the blood gets thin watery and impure, and fails to supply the nourishment required to keep vitality at high water mark. Circulation gets bad and the nervous system suffers. Besides the pains and aches, besides the weakness and dizziness there are feelings of numbness which tells of the approach of paralysis and locomotor ataxia.

Judging from the experience of the thousands of old people who have tested this great food cure, it seems to be exactly suited to overcome these conditions consequent on old age.

Unlike ordinary medicines Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is entirely restorative in action, while others seek to tear down the tissue, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures by forming new, firm flesh and tissue, and building up the system. It thus permanently overcomes disease and affords lasting benefit.

Mrs. Woodcock, East Moira street, Belleville, Ont., states:—"I was so very nervous and my system was so exhausted that at times I would take severe dizzy spells which made me stagger and at other times I had splitting headaches. In fact my health generally was being undermined by my trouble. I got a box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and after having used this preparation for some time I am pleased to say that my nerves are steady and strong, the dizziness is gone and the headaches are a thing of the past."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cts a box, six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

THE SLED BOAT.

Ingenious Combination Devised by the Fire Island Life Savers.

The life savers attached to Uncle Sam's stations on Fire Island encountered great difficulties and dangers in crossing the Great South bay to the Long Island shore, either by water craft or ice craft. Still, naturally enough, they had a longing to visit family and friends when the great island sea was choked with drift ice or partly frozen over. These ingenious people long ago realized the needs of a vehicle capable of traveling on either ice or water safely, and years ago they launched the first "scooter," a boat constructed to travel on both ice and in water. It was a small boat, made fast to a sled, which was pushed on the ice and rowed on the water. This crude mode of travel, with the wind against or across the boat, made the trip one of tremendous exertion. In the course of time a sail was tried, at first square rigged and very small, but it was used only when the wind was fair. Then a special boat was built which was partially decked, and the sled was made lighter until at last the scooter of the present day came about, with nothing left of the sled but the bottom of the runners, shod with iron, or, better still, as experience has shown, with brass. And so has developed the wonderful scooter of the Long Island lakes and bays, a swift iceboat that will sail in the water and from one element to the other quickly without a jar.—Exchange.

GOLD NUGGETS.

The Process In Nature by Which They Are Formed.

That gold is formed from solution is generally recognized. The miner receives the theory because it explains the making of gold to him, but he often wonders how it is done, so here is what has been seen: Daintree once prepared a solution of gold and left in it a small piece of metallic gold. Accidentally a small piece of wood fell into the solution. The solution decomposed, the gold assumed a metallic state and collected and held to the small piece of undissolved gold, which increased in size. Another investigator heard of this and made a dilute gold solution, in which he immersed a piece of iron pyrites and left it there a month. He added also organic matter, and at the month's end the pyrites were covered with a film of metallic gold. Pyrites and galena were next tried, and each was covered with gold. Gold, copper pyrites, arsenical pyrites, galena and wolfram were also tried, with similar results. Metallic precipitates were tried, and while they threw down the gold as a metallic powder they did not cause it to cohere nor to plate any of the substances tried. Organic matter thus seemed the necessary chemical agent. Through the wood used in these experiments gold was disseminated in fine particles. Imagine these experiments conducted by nature through ages and the result could be a nugget.—Mines and Minerals.

The Cook Approved.

Out in Columbia road lives a gentlewoman of ample means, who recently advertised for a cook. The establishment is entirely in accord with an excellent social position, but is by no means pretentious, so when a well recommended cook called and mentioned her price as $40 a month the lady of the house answered that a wage of that figure was quite out of the question.

The cook dwelt a little on her superior ability in the matter of getting up smart luncheons and dinners, but the mistress of the house answered that she wouldn't think for a moment of paying $40 for a cook. The chef-lady rose to depart. She was perfectly affable, and the gentlewoman's determination evidently impressed her as most commendable.

"I see how it is," she said approvingly. "You are trying to live within your income."

And she departed, doubtless to find somebody who isn't making that effort.

Kean and Macready.

When Edmund Kean and Macready, intense rivals, played in the same pieces at Drury Lane it was usual to consult them in the course of the evening as to what they would appear in next. One night when the prompter was sent to ask Mr. Macready what he would play with Mr. Kean the great tragedian frowned upon him till he blushed. "Sir," he roared, "how should I know what the man would like to play?" The prompter retired to seek the desired information from Mr. Kean. "Sir," said Mr. Kean sharply, "how should I know what the fellow can play?"

Keeping Up Appearances.

Wife—There was a man around today selling big brass burglar alarm bells to put on the front of the house, so I ordered one.

Husband—What! You know we haven't anything worth stealing.

Wife—I know that, but it will make the neighbors think we have.

A Little Off.

"Really," said Mrs. Oldcastle, "your little dinner last night was quite recherche."

"Oh, dear," her hostess groaned. "I just knew that new cook would make a botch of it some way!"

The Essentials.

"Which would you rather marry, Ethel, brains or money?"

"Money, of course. I can get along without the luxuries, but I must have the necessities."

Ten men have failed from defects in morals where one has failed from defects in intellect.—Mann.

THE YELLOW MAN.

A THRILLING STORY OF THE BOXERS
IN CHINA.

BY CARLTON DAWE.

Copyright, 1900.
By Paul R. Reynolds.

my uncle, still pursuing his grewsome quest), had grown faint in the distance, and with the happy fortune of youth I looked forward, with but an occasional glance back. Not that I had forgotten or ever could forget my mother, but at 17 one cannot paint the world black, paint he ever so vilely.

And yet if I had ever indulged in the hope that my misfortunes were at an end I soon had good cause to regret my premature congratulations. Fate had only been trifling with me so far. My real trial was about to begin.

I remember one day being sent for by the head master and told that a gentleman was waiting to see me in the visitors' room. Thinking it was my uncle and delighted at this unexpected visit, I rushed toward the door, and, finding it open, bounded in, my hand outstretched. But instead of encountering the well known face and figure a gaunt stranger slowly rose from a chair in the far end of the room, where he had been sitting, his back to the light. His beard was gray, his hair gray and worn thin about the temples. I saw that he had deep sunken eyes and heavy brows that bristled conspicuously. Once a man of conspicuous stature, his powerful shoulders now drooped forward in a way that betokened the presence of ill health. His face was very pale, and across the bridge of a commanding nose the skin was drawn tightly.

Without speaking he advanced slowly toward me, and I saw that his eyes, deep set and piercing as they were, wore a frightened, hunted expression which filled me with considerable apprehension. Nor was I the more relieved when he threw a stealthy glance from side to side and nodded for me to close the door. I grew suspicious in an instant and involuntarily drew back from him. I remembered my uncle's warnings and beheld in this man a possible enemy. He saw my indecision and smiled, and that act recalled me to a sense of dignity. I was now a big fellow and not to be frightened by a shadow.

"Your name is James Davie?" he said.

"Yes, sir."

"But it used to be Davie Kingston?"

Startled and more suspicious than ever, I watched him closely.

"I will not deny it," I said. "But how do you know?"

He advanced still closer and fixed his little piercing eyes on me.

"Look at me well," said he, "and try to think."

I did as I was bidden, but failed to recognize him.

"I do not know your face. I have never seen it before."

"Not even in a dream?" he asked.

As he spoke he hid with his right hand the lower part of his chin and beard. I started back with a cry, for I recognized the portrait at once.

"Yes, I know you now. You are my father?"

"Yes," he answered, with a grim smile; "your father come back at last."

To say that I entertained at that moment any feeling but one of utter astonishment would scarcely be accurate. It was my father no doubt, but hitherto he had been nothing more to me than a distant memory, a thought, a word, and for him I had no well of filial love waiting to bubble over. Indeed, his looks repelled me, and it was with an effort I held out my hand and said, "I am very glad to see you, sir."

"Thanks," he replied coldly, stretching out a long, bony claw, the chilliness of which almost made me shiver. "I knew you would be."

This little bit of sarcasm, accompanied as it was by a singularly comprehensive look, nonplused me somewhat, but I managed to stammer out, "You know of course that my mother is dead?"

A great shiver seemed to sweep him from head to foot, and involuntarily he cast an uneasy glance across his shoulder.

"Yes; your uncle has told me."

"She was murdered on the day she got your letter warning her against some persons unknown."

"Yes, yes," he answered rather testily. "I have heard all about it."

"Who were those persons?" I asked. "Was one of them a dark complexioned man with strange, Chinese eyes?"

Again he threw that frightened look over his shoulder and bent his head as though listening for some step or sound.

"I don't know," he said, but not without some confusion. "I am not quite sure of what I referred to. However, it is all over now. We have other things to think of."

He went back to his seat by the window and sat there, scanning me intently.

"You are a strapping fellow," he said suddenly. "How old are you?"

"Seventeen."

He rested his head in his hand and began to think, and I saw the furrow deepen between his brows and the brows themselves come together until they formed a forbidding line across his face. I knew what was passing in his mind, and I did not envy him the possession of it.

"Let me see," he said. "It is nine years since I have seen you?"

"Nine years," I answered.

"And she has been dead"—

"Two years."

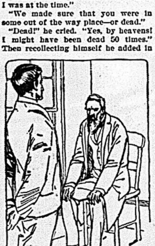
"Heavens," he cried suddenly, slapping his forehead, "my brain is going!"

"Her death created a sensation," I continued. "It is strange that you should not have heard of it."

"No, not strange, considering where I was at the time."

"We made sure that you were in some out of the way place—or dead."

"Dead!" he cried. "Yes, by heavens! I might have been dead 50 times." Then recollecting himself he added in a lower tone: "An out of the way place, as you say. I was cruising in the south sea islands at the time, a place without newspapers and telegraphs. Poor Lucy, poor, poor Lucy!"



"You are a strapping fellow," he said suddenly. "How old are you?"

"You heard, of course, that the murderers branded my mother on the forehead?"

"Aye, aye, the hidden meaning," he muttered. "I know, I know."

"The hidden meaning?" I echoed.

He started, and the suspicious, mistrustful look leaped once more to his eyes. Then, not without an effort, he began a confused explanation.

"Aye," he said, "had it not a hidden meaning? Your uncle told me that no one understood its significance."

"True, but we were always under the impression that you would know and that you would tell us."

"That is your uncle's opinion. He is a stupid fellow. I have no patience with him."

"He has been very good to me," I answered stoutly, allowing no one to speak slightingly of him, "and he loved my mother dearly."

"I suppose you mean to insinuate that I didn't? This, I presume, is the way he has brought you up to respect your father?"

Then assuming a more generous air he continued: "I know he is a good fellow, and I admit that I have been much to blame, but you don't know all. Perhaps one day you may. Then you shall judge, but until then suspend your judgment and remember that misfortune often comes uninvited. But time presses," said he, looking at his watch. "You like this school?"

"Very much."

"You are happy here?"

"Yes."

I had nothing to complain of. Learning was a bit irksome, the blessings of which I did not fully appreciate. But in this I merely claimed kinship with my kind.

"But you will not be very sorry to leave?"

I looked at him inquiringly. There was something behind the question which made me pause.

"Am I to leave, sir?"

"Yes," he said. "I have decided to take you away with me."

This was what I neither wished nor expected, and I mumbled, rather ungraciously I fear, something about my uncle and his disappointment if I should quit without his knowledge.

A cloud spread itself over my father's face. I saw that the reference to my uncle annoyed him, and I thought he was going to say something unpleasant. However, he caught the word on the tip of his tongue and held it fast. With a curious smile he drew a letter from his pocket and handed it to me. Opening it hastily, I at once recognized my uncle's handwriting. It was but a short note and was to this effect:

> My Dear Davie—The bearer of this note is your father. He wants you, and you must go with him. I need say nothing more to a lad whom I have grown to regard as my son. I am still marching, marching; still the same restless spirit. But a letter or a telegram sent to Waring (his lawyer) will always be forwarded to me without delay.

I handed back the note to my father, and he received it with a peculiar smile. He seemed to know that he would have no more trouble with me. Much as he may have disliked to admit the fact, he knew that to me my uncle's word was law.

"Must I go at once?" I asked.

He nodded slowly. "Yes. I want to reach North Wales tonight. Run off and pack your box. I will see the head master and give him the necessary explanations."

He rose and moved toward the bell, and I now noticed that he walked with a limp. He saw me look, but he offered no explanation beyond "I have been in the wars, my lad, but they have not done for me yet. This arm," said he, lifting his left hand, which fell back with a lifeless swing, "was once as good as the other, but a knife among the tendons don't improve them. Strange things happen in some parts of the world."

I thought that strange things happen everywhere and that one of the strangest was the coming back of this man from the dead, but I kept the thought to myself and ran away to prepare for the journey.

CHAPTER VI.

WHICH CONCERNS SOME STRANGE BEHAVIOR.

I left the school with much regret and a vast amount of uneasiness. My father's manner, nervous, excitable and suspicious, was one well calculated to arouse suspicion and excitability in others. He gave me no reasons for his hurried departure. He did not even condescend to tell me why he was going to Wales. We drove in a fly to the station, and, though the afternoon was beautifully fine, he made the man put the hood up. This naturally produced an atmosphere which was anything but agreeable, and when I hinted at it he replied that he always avoided an unnecessary draft. To me, on the contrary, it seemed that a draft was most necessary, but what I thought mattered nothing. The silent man in the corner had taken the helm.

At the station he discharged the fly and hurried me into the waiting room, in the remotest corner of which we sat with our belongings. He informed me that his heavy stuff had gone on to Denbigh, which "heavy stuff," I discovered later on, consisted of nothing but a Gladstone bag. My father was a man who did not believe in heavy baggage. To move and move quickly was the principle upon which he worked.

He never went out on the platform to see a train dash through or to watch the passengers alight, but sat in his corner of the waiting room reading, reading incessantly. And yet I noticed that whenever any one entered the room he seemed to know it as if by intuition, and the top of the paper would gradually drop to a level with his eyes, and he would subject the newcomer to a careful scrutiny. At first I thought that I must be mistaken, that his glance was such as most people bestow upon the advent of a stranger, for who has not entered such a place and seen every eye immediately turn his way? To me, however, there seemed something more than mere idle curiosity in my father's glance, and after a brief interval I was assured of it.

I happened to be speaking to him at the moment, when, without any apparent cause, I saw his eyes, which were turned toward the door, start nervously, while a sudden spasm seemed to sweep across his face. Hastily he raised his paper and at once seemed to be deeply engrossed in his reading.

The cause of this sudden transition I immediately sought for, but I could see nothing to warrant it. The few people scattered about the room were yawning as usual and lolling about on the hard benches in the most ungraceful attitudes, while in the doorway, the direction in which my father had looked, there stood a little man of a dark, foreign appearance, but whether he was Turk, Malay or Mongol I could not tell. He merely stood there for a few moments while he surveyed the room, but evidently not liking the appearance of it turned away and began slowly to promenade up and down the platform.

As soon as he had gone my father, as though instinctively aware of the man's departure, stole a stealthy glance over the top of his paper, and I saw that his usually pale face was if anything more ghastly than usual.

"You are ill, sir," I said. "What is the matter?"

"Nothing," he answered sharply, irritably, "except the cursed cold of this dreary room." And he huddled up closer into the corner as though he gained warmth thereby.

Now, to me the room seemed unpleasantly warm, permeated as it was by an odor which seems inseparable from such places, and I could not help saying something to that effect.

"Aye," he answered, "but if you had the fever in you as I have you'd wish yourself well out of this cursed drafty country."

Well, as far as the country was concerned, he had little to complain of. He had not troubled it much of late years.

Presently a train thundered into the station, and I went to the door to watch the people coming and going. When I returned, my father evinced some curiosity as to the passengers who had departed, and even went so far as going to the door and looking out. The scrutiny evidently satisfied him, for he came back with a smile and told me to bring my things out on the platform.

Punctually to time our train slid into the station, and my father and I entered a first class smoker. During the few minutes that the train stood there he glued his face to the window and watched anxiously the entrance to the platform. But at last the guard's whistle sounded, the engine replied with a short, sharp shriek, and slowly we crept out of the station. Then my father threw himself back with a sigh of content, rested his feet on the seat opposite and quietly began to fill his pipe.

Once the train was fairly under way, the land skimming by us on either side, and no sound came but the roar and the rush of the wheels, my father settled himself down to read, and I scarcely think he moved unless it was to refill his pipe or to cross or uncross his legs. I tried hard to follow his example, tried hard to convince myself that I found my varied store of literature interesting, but I was conscious all the time of the utter failure of my endeavor.

As we began to approach Shrewsbury my father dived once more into his valise and extracted therefrom a Bradshaw, which he began intently to study. And here I may state that this Bradshaw was a companion of his which was in constant requisition. Thumbed and dog eared, pencil marked on the margin, it showed a mutilation or an indignity upon almost every page. To me Bradshaw has always been a weariness to the flesh, a thing devised to drive men mad and hurry their souls to perdition, but to my father it was an endless page of lunatic delight. It didn't matter where the editors hid away a train, he pounced upon it like a hawk. Their ingenuity was wasted on him. He reveled in mountains of bewildering figures; he read the columns of hieroglyphics as easily as I could read the English alphabet. The compilers little knew when they chuckled in secret over their fiendish work that they were creating an infinite source of intricate happiness for at least one son of man.

After studying the mystic pages for some time he, having absorbed his information, carefully deposited the precious tome once more in his bag. Then he began to collect his various papers, which he also placed in the bag. It looked to me as though he was making preparations for leaving the train; but, knowing this to be an impossibility, I merely regarded it as another of his little eccentricities. However, as we began to slacken down he cried out suddenly, "Stand by."

I looked at him. He repeated almost harshly: "Stand by. Get ready. Don't stare at me like a fool."

"But this is Shrewsbury."

"I know that as well as you."

Thinking it just possible that the liquor he had sipped might have made him forget, I said, "But we started for Denbigh?"

"We did nothing of the kind. We started for Shrewsbury, and here we are."

At that moment the train glided into the station and so cut short all further remonstrance. But I think he saw that he had annoyed me, for as we jogged away together in the cab he explained, with some attempt at plausibility, that it had been his original intention to stop the night at Shrewsbury, but that he had forgotten to make me acquainted with such a trifling detail. I assured him that his explanation was quite unnecessary. Indeed, it was a matter of perfect indifference to me where we went, since every place was sure to prove distasteful. My father and I did not yet quite understand each other, and to have as a traveling companion one with whom you are in no sort of sympathy is distinctly distressing.

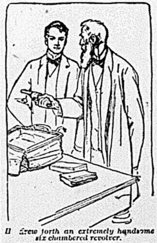
Arriving at the hotel, his first inquiry was for a room with two beds, and I may here state that during the remainder of our wanderings we always slept in the same room when it was possible, and when not he insisted upon two rooms communicating with each other. In this instance a very excellent room on the second floor was shown us, a glance at which at once convinced me of its suitability, but he was harder to please. He felt the beds, examined the windows, saw that the door had both a bolt and a key and then and not until then declared himself to be fully satisfied.

As it was already late he ordered dinner to be brought to the room, and I thought that he now seemed like a rational man for the first time. His frigid reserve thawed in the most remarkable manner, and he condescended to crack an occasional joke at my expense. What wrought this change in him I could not then imagine, for I did not think it was the good food, and I felt sure that it could not be the quantity of wine. It seemed to me that he cast aside his suspicions as one would a cloak and that for the first time that day he felt the blessing of security.

That evening we retired to rest at a comparatively early hour, but before so doing he once more examined the windows very carefully and saw that the door was locked and bolted. Then he lifted his bag on to the table, opened it and drew forth an extremely handsome six chambered revolver. This he handled very carefully, almost lovingly, I thought, and then, after balancing it and taking sundry imaginary aims, he turned to me.

"I suppose you know what this is?"

Truly he had but an indifferent opinion of me, an opinion bred of ignorance, no doubt, like so many indifferent opinions, yet none the less offensive on that account.



He drew forth an extremely handsome six chambered revolver.

"Yes," I said.

"Have you ever fired one?"

I could not help smiling as I thought of the weeks of daily tuition I had undergone with my uncle.

"Often."

"Come," said he, apparently much relieved, "that's not so bad. Do you think you could hit that window yonder?"

The window in question was an ordinary one, some 10 or 12 feet from my bed. He evidently had not heard of my prowess with the gun.

"I think so," I said. "What is more, I could put a ball between a man's eyes if he stood outside."

"Good," he cried. "If you see him there put a ball between his eyes."

"See him?" I echoed, not a little startled at his sudden vehemence.

"Why," he said, with an uneasy laugh, "ain't you afraid of burglars?"

"Not in the least."

"Nor was I once, nor of anything else; but now I haven't got the nerve of a goat left me. I tell you what it is," he continued, "the unexpected is always happening, and I'm afraid of it."

"But a burglar would hardly venture into a place like this," I suggested.

"Who knows? A desperate man will do anything. If this one has a yellow face and strange dark eyes, shoot! Put your bullet fair between those eyes. Give him no time to pray, for as there's a God above he'll send you to join him without a moment's hesitation."

"If he has a yellow face and strange dark eyes," I repeated. "It was such a man who killed my mother. It was for such a man my Uncle Jim and I have searched everywhere. Are you also afraid of him?"

The question startled him a little, but he clinched his teeth, and a furious scowl contracted his brows.

"I am afraid of no man living," he snarled. "The man who says Bob Kingston's afraid of him is a liar."

I had not the least intention of disputing this statement, though his sudden glance round the room might have led one to believe that he expected a challenge. To me this outburst appeared to lack that fine intensity which should accompany such brave words. Indeed, there was a ring of bravado in it which robbed the utterance of some of its terror. The ferocious sentiment did not come well from one who was afraid of his own shadow and who had broken his journey because an inoffensive foreign looking gentleman had stood for a moment at the door of a railway waiting room.

CHAPTER VII.

WANDERERS.

Notwithstanding the sensations of the day and the novelty of my surroundings I slept exceedingly well that night, once sleep had seized the brain. The day had been full of wearying, strange surprises, but I possessed in full the superb quality of youth. A thousand trains might have whirled by at express speed without arousing me; the man with the strange eyes might have picked the lock with impunity. But none of these things happened, and when I finally awoke I beheld my father, already dressed, sitting on the edge of his bed watching me.

"You sleep soundly," he said.

I smiled. "Always."

"An easy conscience?"

"I think so."

"Sabbee." He had a way of using odd words, chiefly of the pigeon English variety, which he had picked up in the far east. Other words also, which were pure Chinese, he used in moments of great excitement, but of them I could only guess the meaning. "Do you know," he continued, a troubled, earnest look playing about his eyes, "I have not slept soundly for 20 years."

"That, I suppose, is why you look so pale and ill?"

He shook his head slowly as though balancing some matter in his mind.

"So I look pale and ill, do I? Yes, I suppose I do, but a man is apt to think little of that to which he is accustomed. And I've had some cause," he added as if speaking to himself; "I've had some cause."

I did not doubt him for an instant. His face, his suspicious manner, the sudden starting at a sound, the peering at people from beneath the brows—were these things to be associated with a man of clean reputation? I would not have had my father's conscience for a king's ransom.

I went below to breakfast, leaving him in his room. He was going to have a little of something brought to him, professing a dislike to crowded public places. I thought it rather fastidious of him, but beyond that it troubled me nothing. If a man wishes to eat alone and can pay for the privilege, there is nothing more to be said. I preferred the stir of life and the view of people.

As I lounged about the vestibule smoking an after breakfast cigarette curiosity led me to look at the visitors' book, which lay open on a desk a little to the right of the office. On the page for that day there were already two entries, but on the page of the day before I failed to see my father's name. And yet I had most assuredly seen him advance to the book, take up a pen and write. What he had written I was in total ignorance of, but that he had written something I felt perfectly certain.

There had not been many entries that day, only some nine or ten, but among them there was no name resembling ours. The two last, written in the same hand, were "R. Martin" and "D. Martin," and I knew that these must be the names which my father had inserted. An indefinable shame seized me. I hastily turned the page and quitted the desk, hoping that no one was watching. I slunk away from the lynx eyes of the young man in the office—slunk away in the shadow like one who had been caught doing a discreditable thing.

Mounting to our room, I knocked upon the door and almost at the same moment turned the handle, but to my surprise the door was locked.

"Who's there?" cried my father.

"I."

"Oh!"

I heard him limp across the room; the lock went back with a click. Then the door was but partly opened, and his beetling brows filled up the aperture.

"I was just going to change," he explained in answer to my look of interrogation. Probably, but the room was full of tobacco smoke, and a book was turned face open on the table.

A Happy Combination.

No need to say a word about the virtues of Cod Liver Oil, Iron and Phosphorus; they have long been universally recognized. It is not so well known, however, that combines these unequalled remedies in a scientifically prepared emulsion, so palatable and easy to digest that those who have hitherto found it difficult or impossible to take Cod Liver Oil and Iron find the difficulty entirely removed.

FERROL

We invite all those who are suffering from any form of Lung Trouble, Bronchitis, Chronic Coughs and Colds, after effects of La Grippe or other acute disease, to send at once for a free sample and literature to

In Humanity's Name

I Ask You to Tell Me a Sick One Who Needs Help.

No money is wanted. I ask simply a postal card stating which book to send. I will do all the rest, and accept all the risk, to see that your friends get well.

I will send him my book. I will arrange with a druggist near by that he may take six bottles Dr. Shoop's Restorative. He may take it a month at my risk. If it succeeds the cost is $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself, and the sick one's mere word shall decide it.

I do that so that those who need help will accept it.

I have what those sick ones must have to get well. And I want them to have it. I make my offer so fair that no sick one can afford to neglect it.

You may think it too fair to be possible, but I do just as I say. I have furnished my Restorative to hundreds of thousands in this way, and 39 out of each 40 have paid gladly, because they were cured. I willingly pay for the rest.

It is a remarkable remedy that makes such an offer possible, and I have spent my lifetime on it. It is my discovery, and the only known treatment that strengthens the inside nerves.

The common way is to doctor the organ that is weak, but that way brings at best but temporary results. My way is to bring back the nerve power which alone operates every vital organ. I give to each organ the power to do its duty, and there is no other way to make weak organs well.

I fail only where organic trouble—like cancer—makes a cure impossible. Such are rare.

My book will convince you, for it is clear. Almost any sick one who reads it will know that he can get well.

Simply state which book you want and address Dr. Shoop, Box 69, Racine, Wis.
Book 1 on Dyspepsia.
Book 2 on the Heart.
Book 3 on the Kidneys.
Book 4 for Women.
Book 5 for Men (sealed).
Book 6 on Rheumatism.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured with one or two bottles. At druggists.

THEY DROVE PIMPLES AWAY.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

The biggest brave does not always make the best chief.

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

Sleeplessness.—When the nerves are unstrung and the whole body given up to wretchedness, when the mind is filled with gloom and dismal forebodings, the result of derangement of the digestive organs, sleeplessness comes to add to the distress. If only the subject could sleep, there would be the oblivion for a while and temporary relief. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will not only induce sleep, but will act so beneficially that the subject will wake refreshed and restored to happiness.

No prayer ever failed to be heard because it was too short.

A WONDERFUL CURE.—Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly to cure the sore but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle and when I had used about one-half, the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done, it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using 3 bottles of the Vegetable Discovery, the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 68 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

THE PUBLIC should bear in mind that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has nothing in common with the impure, deteriorating class of so-called medicinal oils. It is eminently pure and really efficacious—relieving pain and lameness, stiffness of the joints and muscles, and sores or hurts, besides being an excellent specific for rheumatism, coughs and bronchial complaints.

Seven hundred British subjects are yearly born at sea.

These two desirable qualifications, pleasant to the taste and at the same time effectual, are to be found in Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator. Children like it.

Much talk, many lies.

To get relief from indigestion, biliousness, constipation or torpid liver without disturbing the stomach or purging the bowels, take a few doses of Carter's Little Liver Pills, they will please you.

The average watch represents but 12 hours of human labor.

They make one feel as though life was worth living. Take one of Carter's Little Liver Pills after eating; it will relieve dyspepsia, aid digestion, give tone and vigor to the system.

On occasion knowing what one wants is as difficult as getting it.

That tired, languid feeling and dull headache is very disagreeable. Take two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring, and you will find relief. They never fail to do good.

Nothing so actively obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their afflictions from a neglected [illegible] the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state.

Have you tried Holloway's Corn Cure? It has no equal for removing these troublesome excrescences, as many have testified who have tried it.

A long portage makes a heavy canoe.

HEARTS "ON STRIKE"

The more clothes a girl has the more trouble it is for her to make up her mind what to wear.

The scratch of a pin may cause the loss of a limb or even death when blood poisoning results from the injury. All danger of this may be avoided, however, by promptly applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It is an antiseptic and unequalled as a quick healing liniment for cuts, bruises, and burns. For sale by all druggists.

No Great Difference.

Bilker—My sakes! Here's a story of a man going to marry a woman he doesn't know! Enpeck—That's nothing. The only difference between him and the others who marry is that this fellow isn't deceived to the point of thinking he knows her.

RUSSIA FORSAKES THE SEA

Sees Port Arthur in Danger and Prepares to Meet Japs in Corea.

HAVE LOST 400 TORPEDOES

Two-Thirds of Russia's Entire Available Supply Destroyed on the Variag at Chemulpo—20,000 Russian Troops in Central Corea—Japanese Fleet Said to Have Re-Attacked Port Arthur on Feb. 14 and to Have Damaged One Russian Warship—Russians Lose Two More Battleships.

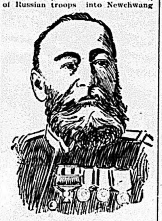
London, Feb. 17.—According to a special despatch from Tokio, the Russian squadron has returned to Vladivostock.

The Tokio correspondent of The Daily Mail says in a despatch that two Russian warships appeared off Oki Island in the southern part of the Japanese Sea Sunday.

The correspondent at Chemulpo of The Daily Express makes the astonishing statement that Japan has already landed 120,000 troops in Corea, 80,000 of whom are extended along the fighting front south of the Yalu River.

Port Arthur in Danger.

The press attaches great significance to the departure of Viceroy Alexieff from Port Arthur, and comments upon the sudden throwing of Russian troops into Newchwang as indicating Russian apprehensions that Port Arthur is in danger, and that the Japanese attack may not after all be made where it is expected on the Yalu. All reports tend to confirm the impression that Russia has little or nothing to expect from sea operations.



VICEROY ALEXIEFF.

According to a despatch to the Paris edition of The New York Herald, four hundred torpedoes, being two-thirds of Russia's entire available supply of these articles, were destroyed on board the Variag at Chemulpo.

20,000 in Central Corea.

The Tokio correspondent of The Daily Chronicle cables that it is said officially that several thousand Russian troops have reached Antung, and it is rumored that 20,000 Russian troops have arrived at Pingyang on the Tatong River, in Central Corea.

The Chronicle, however, regards this rumor as quite improbable, unless the invasion of Corea preceded the outbreak of hostilities.

Another Fight.

Tokio, Feb. 17.—A report has reached here that the Japanese torpedo fleet re-attacked the Russian fleet at Port Arthur, Feb. 14, and it is thought that one Russian warship was damaged.

Russians Lose Two More.

London, Feb. 17.—In a despatch dated Port Arthur, Feb. 13, a correspondent of The Times gives a description of seven Russian warships which he says are lying disabled there. They include the battleships Sebastopol and Petropavlovsk, which have not been named in previous reports of the action. The correspondent says that altogether eleven Russian ships were put out of action at Port Arthur.

Continuing, he declares that the Japanese were driven from the neighborhood of Kinchau, near Newchwang, after a skirmish, in which 150 Japanese were taken prisoners and 70 Russians killed.

Heading For Port Arthur

Paris, Feb. 17.—Advices through the French Government channels confirm previous reports to the effect that the Japanese are preparing to make a landing west of the Liaotung peninsula, at or near the port of Newchwang.

Landing in the North.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 17.—A despatch from Port Arthur, dated Feb. 15, denies that the Japanese are landing at Chinwangtao. No Japanese have been seen on the Yalu River. The Japanese are landing provisions and munitions of war at Wonsan on the east coast of Corea and north of Seoul.

Had No Refugees With Her.

Port Arthur, Monday, Feb. 15.—The firing on the German cruiser Hansa by Japanese warships occurred while she was proceeding to Port Arthur to take away the German residents, and not when the latter were on board of her. The Hansa was not damaged. On her arrival at Port Arthur she took on board a number of wives of Russian sailors and left the port without further incident.

Japs Trap Three Russian Ships.

Seoul, Feb. 17.—The Corean Government has granted Japan the right to traverse the country. It is reported that Japanese warships have trapped three Russian ships at Yonghampo. No details regarding the result of this naval exploit have been received.

Russians Parade Strength.

Yangkow, Feb. 17.—The 11th Siberian Regiment paraded at Newchwang yesterday in full strength. The Russian authorities deny the report of the loss of Russian vessels, near Wei-Hai-Wei.

Sultan Issues Irade.

Constantinople, Feb. 17.—An irade has been issued commanding the Turkish press to refrain from publishing comments unfavorable to Russia during the war.

Russian Flag For Mikado

Tokio, Feb. 17.—The flag of the Russian cruiser Variag, which will be presented to the Emperor as the first trophy of the war reached Sasebo Monday on the cruiser Chiyoda, together with the anchor, a gun and other souvenirs of the destroyed warship.

Alexieff Says Russians Will Win.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 17.—Viceroy Alexieff on Feb. 16 issued an order of the day admonishing the soldiers with regard to patriotic duty, and expressing his confidence in victory.

Leased to Great Britain.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 17.—A despatch has been received here from the Russian minister at Pekin, Paul Lessar, saying that upon his official inquiry the Chinese Government informed him that Wei-Hai-Wei remains leased to Great Britain.

Canadian Missionaries.

Ottawa, Feb. 17.—Hon. R. W. Scott, Secretary of State, received Monday evening the following cablegram from the British Consul at Seoul, in response to a message sent on behalf of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, requesting that measures be taken to ensure the safety of Canadian missionaries in Corea: Seoul, Feb. 11.—Hon. R. W. Scott, Secretary of State, Ottawa, Canada's telegraphic communication with Song Ching interrupted, but I sent message on 11th inst. to Wonsan, to be forwarded overland, recommending that women and children at Sonchin and Hambeung should be sent to Wonsan.

(Signed) Wordan.

Coal Is Contraband.

Ottawa, Feb. 17.—His Excellency the Governor-General has received a further telegram from the Right Hon. the Secretary for the Colonies, directing that the following additional rules be added to those already published touching the coaling of belligerent vessels of war in British ports:

1. During the continuation of hostilities no coal to be supplied to warships of either of the belligerent powers, except on a written authorization of the competent port authorities, specifying the amount of coal which may be supplied.

2. Before issuing any authorization for the supply of coal to any belligerent warship, the port authority shall obtain a written declaration, duly signed by the officer commanding such warship, of the destination to which it is proceeding and the amount of coal already on board.

CRUSHED UNDER FALLEN SHED.

Jesse Doan a Farmer Near Huntsville Killed.

Huntsville, Feb. 17.—Monday night about five o'clock Jesse Doan, a farmer, in the township of Chaffey, was going through his cattle shed with a hired boy to get on the roof to shovel off the snow, when the roof fell in and buried them both. The alarm was given and neighbors went to work to get them out. After about an hour's work they found the body of Doan and the boy pinned down under a piece of timber. The boy had escaped without any injury, but Doan was dead. The deceased was an old Sharon settler, a member of the Masonic Order, Sharon Lodge, Newmarket, where the body will be buried.

Thawed Out Dynamite.

Port Arthur, Feb. 17.—The remains of a Pole, named Karis, from Duluth, were brought here yesterday from Camp 7 of the Pigeon River Lumber Company. Karis endeavored to thaw out some dynamite, when it exploded. His head was badly shattered.

Nitro Glycerine's Havoc.

Hornellsville, N. Y., Feb. 17.—A wagon load of nitro-glycerine exploded near Barney's Mills yesterday, blowing the driver, named Adams, to atoms; wrecking a house near-by and injuring the inmates.

Fireman Crushed to Death.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 17.—A fireman was crushed to death under the wreckage of the grand stand of the Vailsburg bicycle track, destroyed by fire yesterday, at a loss of $10,000.

Charged With Stealing $960.

Sault Ste. Marie, Feb. 17.—Charles P. Eterson, Danish, was arrested Monday at Eitho Bay by Provincial Constable Bush, charged with having stolen $960 from a farmer near Regina, N.W.T.

So Many People Ask

Why on earth are you selling Wall Papers at HALF PRICE this time of the year.

WELL its just like this—We still have about 3,000 rolls of 1903 Wall Papers left and with our reputation for carrying the very newest in Wall Papers it would not pay us to put this small balance in with our 1904, and call them new.

We don't do that kind of business. We prefer giving our customers who are not so particular about having the very latest, these goods at bargains. So we are selling all 1903 papers this month at HALF of the regular prices, so as to start March with nothing but 1904 papers which are now flooding our warehouse.

All Fancy Goods and China—not Staple—for the balance of the month of February at Half regular price—this makes home beautifying doubly cheap.

Yours In Decorations

During the winter months our workmen have been kept unusually busy decorating some of the best homes of the city.

TO SAY THAT our decorative work is a success—is putting the matter mildly—you have just to witness this for yourself in observing any one of the many city homes we have given decorative attention during the past two years.

Our success is because of a knowledge of the decorative trade begot of study and experience both in wall hangings and the decorative art—the two go hand in hand—the one without the other is absolutely lost.

NO better time for you than the present for selecting new wall hangings now arriving.

No better time to have your work done than during the later winter months and the earlier spring.

We are prepared—with a liberal staff of experienced workmen—the best obtainable in their several branches and our prices will meet with your approval every time.

THE SMALLPOX QUESTION.

Any intelligent physician will admit that you don't catch smallpox because some one else has it, but because your condition favors it. Low vitality always encourages sickness and at this season especially everyone should take Ferrozone, which destroys disease germs and makes the system so strong and healthy that sickness can't exist. Ferrozone is a vitalizing tonic that makes rich, red blood, builds up the nerves, cures nervousness and drives away tired languid feelings. To get strong and keep strong use Ferrozone; it assures health and costs but 50c at all druggists.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

THE INTELLIGENCER'S AFTERNOON DESPATCHES ARE TWELVE HOURS IN ADVANCE OF THE TORONTO MORNING PAPERS.

Storm Spared Russians from Desperate Torpedo Attack—Belief That Russian Warship Was Damaged—700 Japanese Fishermen Practically Murdered.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

Tokio, Feb. 17.—A heavy storm spared the Russians from a desperate torpedo attack at Port Arthur on the morning of Sunday, the 14th instant.

During the preceding night the vessels of the Japanese flotilla of torpedo craft were parted by the force of the wind and waves in a blinding snow storm, so that only two of the larger destroyers succeeded in forcing their way through the fierce gale to Port Arthur. When they arrived there they attacked separately and the officers of one of them are confident that they succeeded in torpedoing a Russian warship.

London, Feb. 17.—A despatch from Tokio says it is reported that the merchantman, Nounkoura Meru, which was sunk by the Russians in Tsugaru Straits, had aboard 700 Japanese fishermen, who were all drowned.

IS YOUR DOCTOR BILL LARGE?

Best way to keep it small is not to call the doctor, but use Nerviline instead. For minor ailments, like colds, coughs, chills, cramps, headache and stomach trouble Nerviline is just as good as any doctor. It breaks up a cold in one night, cures soreness in the chest, and for neuralgia, toothache and rheumatism you can't get anything half as good as Nerviline. The fame of Nerviline for cramps, colic and pain in the stomach extends far and wide. Good for everything a liniment can be good for and costs but 25c for a large bottle.

SOME RESULTS OF THIS DREADFUL WINTER.

INABILITY OF RAILWAYS TO MOVE FREIGHTS MAKING FUEL SCARCE — SCHOOLS MAY HAVE TO CLOSE.

If the weather conditions do not change before long, there is a possibility of a fuel shortage in this city. This is not meant as an alarmist report, but it is a fact, just the same. Some of the coal merchants have used up their stock. They have plenty ordered and on the way, but the railways, they say, are unable to move freights while the present weather conditions continue.

Rev. A. L. Geen, chairman of the School Supplies Committee of the Board of Education, informs us that he ordered a car load of coal for the schools during last December, and it has not yet been delivered. One of the local merchants has been supplying the schools, but it is rumored that he is getting short in his stock, owing to non-delivery on the railways, and it is just possible that, unless things change for the better, some of the schools may be compelled to close for a few days owing to lack of fuel. The Chairman of Supplies also ordered twenty-five cords of wood for No. 2 School, but it has not yet been delivered; and, taking into consideration the present state of the country roads, it is hard to say when it will be.

However, if no more snow falls in the near future, and the weather moderates, things should rapidly improve. It is to be sincerely hoped that such will be the case.

AD WINTER.

Most of our local commercial travellers are having a compulsory holiday.

The reports this morning along the line of the Midland are not encouraging. "No trains north" is the information here and at Port Hope. At the latter place the train from the north, due in Port Hope at 10.20 p.m., got stalled at Gardens Hill on Monday night and is there yet, without any prospect of getting out to-day. Between here and Peterboro there is "nothin' doin'," although attempts have been made to force the blockade.

The present winter has been a hard one on all classes of people in this district. The merchants have suffered greatly owing to dulness in trade; of late the country people have been almost unable to reach the city at all. Among the poorer classes there has been much distress. The Intelligencer this morning asked Mr. F. D. Diamond, Tax Collector, how the taxes were coming in. "Slow," was the reply, "very slow; upon my word I haven't the heart to ask some of the poorer people for money. If you could see, as I do, the conditions which prevail in some places it would open your eyes."

However, there is still a crumb of comfort in the situation—the winter cannot last forever, and every day brings us nearer to "The Good Old Summer Time."

A WARM ULSTER.

Don't you think a nice warm ulster would be a good thing these cold days? The Oak Hall have a few good ones left and will part with them cheap. Plenty of cold weather yet this winter, and more next. Then you can save money by investing now.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

MR. GEORGE GROSSMITH LAST NIGHT.

"A remarkably clever man, but, as a humorous entertainer, a distinct disappointment." That would appear to fit the case of Mr. George Grossmith, the English entertainer, who last night appeared before only a fair sized audience in the opera house. It is remarkable how tastes differ. There is no doubt at all that, in London and the larger English cities, Mr. Grossmith is regarded as an entertainer par excellence; he has no rival in his own particular field. In this country it is doubtful if he could, on a second appearance, draw even a fair-sized audience. And yet Mr. Grossmith is clever, his musical numbers in particular, but his humor is quiet—almost too quiet for the average theatre patron; his singing is only mediocre, and as a story teller our mutual friend Mr. Smily—another Englishman, by the way—has the great Grossmith completely "faded" as the boys would say. As we remarked before, it is wonderful how tastes differ. On the occasion of a visit to London, Eng., some years ago, the writer attended the Savoy theatre, at which Gilbert and Sullivan's "Mikado" was then running. The production was under the direction of the librettist and composer, Mr. W. S. Gilbert being stage manager and Sir Arthur Sullivan conductor. "The Mikado" at that time was the talk of London, and Grossmith's name, as "Ko-Ko," was in everybody's mouth. Naturally the writer was anxious to see and hear him. He did so, and was just about as much disappointed as were the majority of the people in the local opera house last night. And how that Savoy theatre audience did laugh and applaud Mr. Grossmith! His every word and gesture made them laugh consumedly. The second comedian in the opera, who played the "Lord High Everything Else," was, in the writer's opinion, the funniest man he ever saw, but the audience had no eyes for him at all; it was all Grossmith, who is probably, like "Katisha," an acquired taste.

The programme last night was divided into three parts. The first was "Some things you have noticed," and it is no exaggeration to say that, in this part of the programme, Mr. Grossmith was dull. His songs were out of touch and his jokes fell flat.

The second part was "How to succeed though married," and in this part things livened up greatly. Mr. Grossmith's musical sketch, "Haunted by Dolly Gray," was a capital thing. It described the woes of a composer and musician who, in an evil moment, heard the once popular melody, "Dolly Gray," and found it obtruding itself thereafter into all music he heard or played. His maiden aunt got married, and there was the strain "Good-by, Dolly, I must leave you," in the wedding march from "Lohengrin" and the bridal music by Mendelssohn, as well as in everything else he played or heard. It was a bright and original sketch.

The third part was entitled "How to write a musical comedy," and in this Mr. Grossmith was at his best. His satire was keen and his impersonations remarkably clever, the idiosyncracies and inconsistencies of the modern musical comedy being shown up in an amusing and merciless way. Warm applause was accorded the entertainer at the conclusion of the programme.

COMIC OPERA COMING.

The original Wilbur Opera Company will begin an engagement of two nights and matinee at the Carman Opera House on Monday, Feb. 22nd. The company is stronger and better than ever, with new faces, new costumes and funny comedians. The cast will be made up from Miss Minnie Emmett, prima donna; with Miss Marion Langdon as alternate, Ethel Hunt, Mabel Holly, Lottie Reick, Martin Pache, Franklin Fox, Tom Smith Martin, W. A. McGraw, Henry Peakes, Charles Van Dyne and a large chorus of pretty girls. On the opening night "La Mascotte" will be sung. This is one of the best of the lighter operas, with its beautiful costumes, pretty music and funny comedy.

The Rev. Crossley and Hunter are now in the city of Indianapolis. As a result of their meetings in Picton over four hundred have joined the different churches there and a thousand persons signed the total abstinence pledge.

Just read this. When Mason & Risch say that they build their pianos "with skill and care" they mean that they put hidden good work into them. More than half the goodness of a piano is hidden. This careful hidden work that is put into the Mason & Risch piano, comes out in tone and permanency. These pianos are sold in Belleville by W. Flint Jones.

The Success of a Prescription

Depends upon the quality of drugs used. There is as much difference in drugs as there is in other goods. Drugs which have been gathered at the wrong season of the year, or that have stood on a shelf for several years are hardly the best kind to use in a prescription. When you have your prescription filled here you are sure of getting drugs that are pure and fresh.

Whitman and His Friends.

Walt Whitman is described by his friend, Thomas Donaldson, as "never on dress parade. Whitman with the pen was one man, Whitman in private life was another man. He was not a good nor a fluent talker. Men who write well seldom are. He read very few books, and on being asked the reason, replied, "A man who wants to have original ideas wants to let other people's alone."

His visitors were numerous, Mr. Donaldson tells of a friend whom he escorted to Camden, and who sat in Mr. Whitman's small parlor and apparently listened with deep interest while Whitman talked on various subjects.

"I had never heard him talk as well. About ten o'clock I arose and said to my friend, 'Well, we had better go. Mr. Whitman is tired, and this is his hour for retiring.'

" 'Certainly,' said my friend, 'what a charming evening I have passed! Mr. Whitman, may I have the honor of calling again?'

" 'Certainly,' he replied; 'certainly, come when you like.' We retired in good order. As we were going down Mickle street toward the ferry for Philadelphia, my friend gave a yawn and said, 'I find when I nap early in the evening I cannot sleep well at night!'

" 'You old villain,' I answered, 'and you were asleep all the time at Mr. Whitman's?'

" 'I was, most certainly. The poet's voice lulled me into blessed repose two minutes after he begun to talk. Really he is a remarkable man. I have had doctor after doctor try to give me early sleep, but they all failed. He is truly a remarkable man.' "

Princes at School.

King Edward, even from his earliest years, was thoroughly taught the words of the British Constitution. Daily he was taxed to the utmost in this branch of his education until he grew to dislike it most heartily. One day he openly rebelled, and said to his tutor: "I hate this study, sir! It's to frightfully dry!"

"O," replied the shocked tutor, "but it is very important that you should know all about the Constitution of the country over which you will one day have to rule, most imperative."

"Yes, sir," quietly replied the Prince; "the British Constitution is most important, I know, but how about my own constitution."

An amusing anecdote is also related of the present little Prince Edward of Wales.

He seems to be no fonder of his studies than his grandfather, the King, was. The little Prince dislikes his arithmetic, and, in fact, mathematics in general.

His punishment for dereliction of duty is being put in the corner.

Some time ago when he saw his governess taking out the book and slate to prepare for the day's lessons in the particular branch which he specially disliked, he said, very deliberately:

"I don't believe I care to do 'rithmetic to-day. I'll go into the corner again, if you don't mind."

Away he marched like a soldier, leaving an astonished teacher wondering what course best to pursue.

GOOD RESULTS

Are Sure to Follow the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—They Never Fail When Used for Blood and Nerve Troubles.

The reputation held by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills not only in Canada but throughout the world is one that cannot be equaled by any other medicine. No other medicine in the world is so extensively used as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and this extensive use is due solely to the merit of the medicine. These pills are not a common purging medicine; they are a scientific blood builder and nerve restorer. Every dose helps create new, rich, red blood, and this new blood reaches the root of the disease and drives it from the system. That is the whole secret of the success of this remarkable medicine. Thousands and thousands testify to the value of these pills, among them being Mrs. Robert Gibbs, Petit Lameque, N.B., who says: "I wish to thank you for the good results obtained from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I suffered from kidney trouble and the pains in the back were some times hard to bear. I used in all six boxes of the pills and the trouble has entirely disappeared. I would strongly advise others suffering to use your pills without delay."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure all blood and nerve trouble such as rheumatism, neuralgia, anaemia, partial paralysis, indigestion, palpitation of the heart and many others Sold by all medicine dealers or direct from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50.

The Way These Exasperatingly Foolish Animals Court Death.

A sheep herder gives some of his experience in handling sheep on the western ranges in the following:

We have to watch them every minute, and if vigilance is relaxed for an instant the entire flock is likely to commit suicide. In handling most animals some degree of self help or intelligence can be relied on to aid the owner in saving their lives, but sheep seem to set deliberately to work to kill themselves.

If caught in a storm on the plains, they will drift before the wind and die of cold and exposure rather than move 100 yards to windward to obtain shelter in their corral. To drive sheep against the wind is absolutely impossible. I once lost over 1,000 head because I could not drive them to a corral 200 feet away.

In the corral they are still more foolish. If a storm comes up, they all move "down wind" until stopped by the fence. Then commences the proceeding so much dreaded by sheepmen, known as "piling." The sheep will climb over one another's backs until they are heaped up ten feet high. Of course all those on the bottom are smothered. Not one has sense enough to seek shelter under the lee of the fence, as a horse or dog would do.

Again, if a sheep gets into quicksand its fate teaches nothing to those that come immediately after, but the whole flock will follow the leader to destruction. No more exasperatingly stupid animal than a sheep walks.

A RABBIT CAT.

The Manx Tailless Feline Was Once a Seacoast Freak.

It seems probable that the tailless Manx cats originally came from Cornwall. They managed to survive longer as a distinct breed in the Isle of Man than in Cornwall, the predominance of the common tailed cat being of course aided in the latter district by the fact that, although remote, it is part of the mainland of England, whereas new cats could be carried to the Isle of Man only by sea. The Manx cat which first attracted modern attention was a very different animal from the variously colored specimens which now take prizes at cat shows. It was always of the color of a hare and had fur like a hare.

Like a hare, too, it always moved its hind legs together. Its chief food was crabs caught on the beach, and when transported inland from the seacoasts it very seldom, if ever, survived long. No cat of this kind has been seen for many years in the Isle of Man, though there are plenty of tailless cats, its crossed descendants, to be purchased there. Wherever it originally came from, the Cornish or Manx cat was more nearly a separate species than any kind of show cat now existing. It was a seacoast animal, with fur, color, absence of tail and method of locomotion obviously adapted by the inheritance of ages to its habit of catching crabs and other small life behind the ebbing tide.

To Avoid a Tie Vote.

In the history of our comic literature there have been many genuine "Irish bulls" recorded, but rarely one that is of a neater brand than that encountered at a political gathering on Locust street above Broad, in Philadelphia, says the Record of that city. A convention of delegates had been called to revise the rules of the party, and in order to expedite matters a delegate moved that a committee of fifteen be appointed to draft the proposed rules. Before this was adopted another delegate suggested that a committee of fifteen would be unwieldy and proposed an amendment reducing the number to eight. This was agreed to, but before its adoption an aged delegate, with a rich Milesian brogue, arose and solemnly proposed, "Misther Chairman, I move yer that the committee be incr'ased to noine, so that in case of a toie vote there'll be a majarity of wan."

HARD TO UNDERSTAND.

The Cabman's Vocabulary Was Puzzling to the Stranger.

He was a scholarly looking Englishman, with the abstracted appearance of a student about him, and he wanted to take a ride to a suburban locality and back. "What will be your charge?" he asked the cabman.

"Two plunks," replied cabby.

"Two what?"

"Plunks—bones—cases. Ain't you on?"

"On?" echoed the other in bewilderment. "Not until I know how much it is to cost me for the trip. That is what I am asking you."

"That's what I'm tellin' you. Two daddies. See?"

"I beg pardon. That is equally mystifying. Either I have failed to make you understand me or I am singularly deficient in apprehending the vocabulary of commerce. May I ask you to make one more effort to tell me what my fare will be for the proposed trip?"

"Told you five or six times. Two bucks; two cart wheels."

A light seemed to dawn upon the befogged mind of the scholarly person.

"Could you," he said, "by any possibility mean $2?"

"Sure. That's what I've been tellin' you all along, but you don't seem to understand English."

A few moments later one might have seen a cab making its way toward the suburbs. On the driver's seat was a brisk looking personage with his "plug" hat tilted back on his head, and on the inside was a passenger who was industriously jotting down something in his notebook.—Youth's Companion.

A DEN OF DISORDER.

The Press Gallery of the French Chamber of Deputies.

The press gallery of the French chamber of deputies seems to enjoy special privileges. The reporters behave as they please—that is to say, very badly. They shout, laugh, interrupt the orators or discuss among themselves the topics treated on the floor. As their voices are drowned by the noise made by the house and their manifestations are not easily located, the president and his deputies affect to ignore them and very often let pass many boyish pranks in which that young and somewhat uneducated body is wont to indulge. When they are wearied by a speech they cry out "Cloture!" as the deputies do to shut off a speaker. They greet speakers whom they dislike with groans or laughter. They make at the top of their voices all sorts of disrespectful remarks about the lawmakers down below. There was one reporter in the press gallery of the senate who, as he entered, used to cry out the famous phrase of a speaker of the revolution, "President d'assassins, je demande la parole!" As a rule, however, the deputies by themselves are a spectacle interesting enough, and the noise they make is distracting enough to monopolize the whole attention of the galleries as well as of the speaker; consequently the din of the press gallery passes unheeded until once in awhile a journalist goes too far and has to be called to order or expelled.

Sugar of Milk.

Sugar of milk, which is made from whey, in itself has no medicinal qualities. Aside from its uses as a food for the young, it is known to the medical profession principally as a vehicle. Homeopathic physicians naturally use it more than the allopaths, but both allopaths and homeopaths nowadays are giving medicine in tablet form to a great extent, and the tablets are in most cases made palatable by sugar of milk.

Sugar of milk also forms the bulk of triturations, more commonly known to patients as powders. Only a small per cent of the average powder is medicine. By means of mixing sugar of milk the taking of moderate doses of powerful drugs is made possible. In the globule or pill form this is also true.

A Dig at the Satirists.

The instinct of mankind against satire is really a very sound instinct. Satire is always dishonest, for it is always the expression of hatred for a thing hopelessly coveted. Who satirizes humanity? None but he who, not having the common human advantages, is obsessed with admiration of them. Who satirizes plutocracy? The pauper, who is warmed by the notion of wealth. Who satirizes aristocracy? The man who wishes he had been born an aristocrat. Thackeray wished that, and the Marquis of Farintosh was one of the natural outcomes of his wish.—Max Beerbohm in Saturday Review.

How to Advertise.

The householder in glancing through his morning paper has his attention caught by the more attractive advertisements. Advertising is an essential factor in modern business methods, and to advertise wisely the business man must understand the workings of the minds of his customers and must know how to influence them effectively—he must know how to apply psychology to advertising.

Instructions to the Cook.

"How long shall I boil the eggs, ma'am?" asked the cook.

"I don't exactly know," replied the young housewife, "but cook them until they are real tender."

THE PEPPERMINT STICK.

Some Words of Praise For the Candy of Our Daddies.

The old style stick candy has red stripes running around it in spiral form. The body of the stick is white. It is slightly flavored with peppermint. It is very sweet and wholesome. Good enough for a king! So cheap that the poorest may have it. Six sticks for 5 cents. Enough to last a family of six two days. Break a stick in two in the middle, eat half of it after dinner or after supper if preferred. That is enough candy for one day. It is good for children. Keep it in the house. Away up in the pantry where the children can't help themselves. After dinner is over take it down, break a stick in two and pass it around. The children will like it immensely. They will like it all the better for not being able to get too much of it. Never let them have all they want of it. A half stick is enough, although a whole stick might be allowed occasionally. All the fancy stuff put up in boxes that cost a dollar or more cannot equal the old fashioned stick candy. Six sticks of it contain more solid comfort and more nutrition than a wagon load of caramels and painted bonbons. It is the candy of our forefathers. Our grandmothers used to eat it. Accept no other. Be sure that you get the proper trademark—red stripes running spirally round the stick. Beware of substitutes.

THE WILD BIRD.

When the Naturalist Gets a Chance to Study Him at Close Range.

For the greater part of the year fear is the dominant instinct in the life of nearly every wild bird or mammal which has to contend with man or overt enemies of any kind. But with the periodic revival of the reproductive functions profound changes occur not only in the bodily parts, but in the instincts which govern their movements and life. The parental instincts, which are essential to the generation and successful rearing of the young, begin to assert themselves and by blocking or supplanting the sense of fear hold them to the focal point—the nest and later the young—during the period when parental care and even parental sacrifice is necessary.

This wonderful parental instinct, or series of instincts, rises gradually like a fever, reaches a maximum and then as slowly subsides. When at its height every sense seems to be lost in an all absorbing passion. This is the time to approach the wild bird. We can watch and record with pencil and camera every act which occurs at the nest. We can approach as near as we please and by aid of the tent are enabled to analyze in detail the behavior of the same birds for a period of from one to three weeks.—Professor Francis H. Herrick

A THIRD FIGHT AT PORT ARTHUR

Two More Russian Battleships Were Destroyed.

STORM SPARED CZAR'S FLEET

General Attack Was Prevented By Darkness—Japanese Torpedo Boat Destroyers, However, Succeeded in Getting Close Up to the Enemy When the Haze Lifted—Delivered Their Death-Dealing Message and Retired Without Injury—Japanese Wounded Brought in on Junks—Infuriated Russian Admiral Shot Boyarin's Lieutenant.

Sasebo, Japan, Feb. 18.—The opinions of Japanese naval officers here is that a third fight has occurred off Port Arthur, some of the Russian war vessels having been reported as leaving that place.

Japan's Determined Purpose.

Kobe, Feb. 18.—On account of the darkness of the weather on Sunday, Feb. 14, the Japanese torpedo boats were alongside the Russian battleships before their presence was detected, and only then did they launch their torpedoes. Japan is determined to cripple effectually the Russian fleet, and nothing will be allowed to prevent the carrying out of this purpose.

Two Russian Warships Torpedoed.

London, Feb. 18.—A despatch to The St. James' Gazette from Kobe, Japan, in reporting the Japanese naval attack on Port Arthur, Feb. 14, says the Russian guardship in the harbor and another Russian warship lying outside the harbor were torpedoed, and that the Japanese retired without sustaining any injury.

Russian Volunteer Struck.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 18.—A despatch received here from Port Arthur, dated Feb. 17, says that in the action off that port of Feb. 14, the Russian volunteer fleet steamer Kherson was struck by a 12-inch shell in her upper works. A slight fire broke out, which was quickly extinguished. There was no loss of life.

Junks Bear Japanese Wounded.

Paris, Feb. 18.—The Che Foo correspondent of the Paris edition of The New York Herald, in a despatch in which he reports the arrival of junks bearing Japanese wounded from the Port Arthur engagement of Feb. 14, considers this to show that something more than a torpedo attack took place there.

Two Russian Battleships Destroyed.

London, Feb. 18.—The Tokio correspondent of The Standard reports that two Russian battleships were destroyed in this attack, while the correspondent at Tien Tsin of the Standard says, under date of Feb. 12, that a private despatch from Port Arthur brings the statement that the Russian squadron has again put to sea.

A TORPEDO ATTACK.

Short Succinct Account of the Battle of February 14.

Wgshington, Feb. 18.—The Japanese Legation received yesterday from the Foreign Office at Tokio the following despatch, giving details of the torpedo attack at Port Arthur, on the morning of the 14th: "On the 13th of February, a detachment of torpedo boat destroyers proceeded, braving the fierce north storm, toward Port Arthur. At 3 o'clock the next morning, the Asargari, Japanese torpedo boat destroyer, amidst a shower of shells from the enemy's fort and ships, torpedoed a Russian man-of-war, and further firing on the enemy's guard boat, safely returned to its headquarters. The Hayatori, another Japanese torpedo boat destroyer, at 5 o'clock of the same morning, approached to the mouth of the port, where she found two of the enemy's men-of-war, and, in defiance of their firing immediately torpedoed one of them, with effective explosion and safely withdrew."

In a Heavy Storm.

Tokio, Feb. 18.—A heavy storm spared the Russians from a desperate torpedo attack at Port Arthur on the morning of Sunday, the 14th inst. During the preceding night the vessels of the Japanese flotilla of torpedo craft were parted by the force of the wind and waves in a blinding snowstorm, so that only two of the larger destroyers succeeded in forcing their way through the fierce gale to Port Arthur. When they arrived there they attacked separately, and the officers of one of them are confident that they succeeded in torpedoing a Russian warship.

The destroyer Asargiri, in charge of Lieutenant-Commander Ishikawa, arrived off Port Arthur about 3 o'clock in the morning and was met with a sharp fire from the fortress and Russian ships acting as scouts. The Asargiri discharged several torpedoes at a big warship, but the result is unknown.

A cannonade was opened upon the scouting vessels and maintained until they withdrew. The destroyer Heyatory, Lieutenant-Commander Oakenouchi, arrived two hours after the Asargiri and ran up close to the mouth of the harbor, where she found two warships, names unknown. She fired a torpedo at one and the torpedo exploded.

Admiral Togo, in reporting the attack, says, although the results are unknown, he feels sure the moral effect upon the enemy will be excellent. Commander Nagari commanded the entire torpedo flotilla. The number of the craft in the flotilla and the point of their departure are concealed.

Shot By His Own Admiral.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 18.—The accidental blowing up of the Boyarin in Port Arthur harbor has had a dramatic sequel. Infuriated at what he considered the culpable negligence of the lieutenant in charge the admiral shot him dead by his own hand.

Nagasaki Harbor Mined.

London, Feb. 18.—Cabling from Shanghai, Feb. 17, a correspondent of The Daily Telegraph declares that a combined movement between a Japanese fleet and a large landing force from Nagasaki is now proceeding. The reports that the Japanese have captured the East Asiatic Company's steamer Manchuria, as well as the Siberian Railway's steamer Manchuria, are confirmed. The harbor of Nagasaki has been mined.

Cable Cut.

Che Foo, Feb. 18.—The Port Arthur-Che Foo cable was cut Tuesday.

Good-Bye, My Brothers

St. Petersburg, Feb. 18.—In the courtyard of the Winter Palace, the Czar yesterday reviewed the Third Battalion of the First Siberian Rifles, which is proceeding to the Far East. The battalion, accompanied by its baggage wagons, then marched past the Czar, who called out to the men as they went by: "Good-bye, my brothers."

Russians Leave Irkutsk.

London, Feb. 18.—A telegram has been received here from Irkutsk, Siberia, dated Feb. 17, saying that the first detachment of Russian troops has started from there for Port Arthur.

How China Helps Japan.

Shanghai, Feb. 18.—The Russian gunboat Mandjui, of 1,224 tons, for which two Japanese cruisers have been lying in wait, has been ordered by the Chinese officials to leave. Being unarmed, the Mandjui will fall an easy victim, and her chances of escape are slender.

Correspondents Forbidden.

Tien Tsin, Feb. 18.—The Russians have regained control of Shankenkwan, a town about midway between Newchwang and here, and have forbidden correspondents to travel in the district. A Chinese army is moving north of Shankaikwan.

The Black Sea Fleet.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 18.—It is officially denied that the Russian Government asked permission for the Black Sea fleet to pass through the Dardanelles. It will remain at home.

Baltic Fleet Sets Sail.

Copenhagen, Feb. 18.—A despatch has been received here from Wisby, Island of Gothland, saying that six Russian warships passed the island on Feb. 15 going south. No doubt these vessels are part of the Russian Baltic fleet about which there have been a series of conflicting telegrams.

British Steamer Missing.

Tien Tsin, Feb. 18.—It is feared the British steamer Hsi Ping, bound from Chinwang for Shanghai, with passengers and bullion has been captured. She is five days overdue and was last seen in Port Roads.

CALLED TO THE FAR EAST.

Toronto Newspaper Man Will Represent London Standard at the War.

Toronto, Feb. 18.—W. Richmond Smith, who was war correspondent for The Montreal Star in South Africa, yesterday received instructions from The London Standard to leave at once for the scene of hostilities in the Far East. The Standard's chief correspondent, William Maxwell, is already at the front. Mr. Smith will act as associate correspondent with Mr. Maxwell. The latter is one of the best known war correspondents attached to the London dailies, and his work in South Africa was very favorably commented on.

W. RICHMOND SMITH.

Mr. Richmond Smith, who has had a wide newspaper experience, was despatched to South Africa with the first Canadian contingent. He spent a year at the front, and saw some of the most important engagements, including Paardeberg. Mr. Smith was among the war correspondents who received a war medal.

Mr. Smith was editor of The Evening News under the former management, which position he held until that newspaper was taken over by J. W. Flavelle. His friends in the city will wish him good luck in the Far East and a safe return from his hazardous undertaking.

Nomination in Gaspe.

Quebec, Feb. 18.—Saturday will be nomination day in Gaspe. This bye-election has been caused by the appointment of Rudolphe Lemieux as Solicitor-General. It is almost certain that he will be re-elected by acclamation.

New Privy Councillor.

London, Feb. 18.—The King has directed that General Sir Henry Brackenbury, G.C.B., R.A., be sworn of the Privy Council.

DAINTY SPRING WHITEWEAR

No other time in the year offers such inducements to whitewear buyers as the present.

No other store offers such beautiful white garments at the uniformly low prices which you will find in our mantle room during this sale.

We have yet to hear of a lady who had anything but praise for our display.

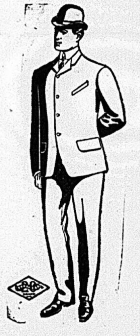
You are sure to have Whitewear needs—our sale offers you a buying opportunity which will not come your way again this year.

This sale was planned months ago when the manufactors had plenty of material to work with, now the material is scarce and the goods have advanced rapidly in price.

This advance does not effect our prices in the least—as an inspection of our display will prove.

We've an immense assortment to choose from and if you have not selected yet come in and see the new styles before you do.

A visit to our mantle room will help you greatly in deciding what to buy.



Out of the Beaten Path

Is the way of the man who originates—of the maker's who strives to produce a better article than his competitor,

The merchant who buys clothing made by firms who do not deviate from the time-travelled Clothes Trial and who—because it was good enough for our forefathers, offers the same style of clothing today is following the "beaten path."

OUR clothing is manufactured by firms who have dared to go out of the "beaten path"—by firms who originate and manufacture "modern" clothing.

These firms are composed only of YOUNG MEN THIS IS THE SECRET of their success.

We have already received several shipments of our spring clothing.

Daily Intelligencer.

A GRIT MINISTER WHO BELIEVES IN PROTETCION.

It would appear that Hon. L. P. Brodeur, the newly-elected Minister of Inland Revenue, is duly qualified to enter the ranks of the Conservative party. It is true he has always been a pronounced free trader, but like most of his colleagues, his views are modified to suit his political surroundings.

Mr. Brodeur represents a constituency which is a large producer of tobacco. At a meeting held in Marieville the other day he expressed his gratification that the farmers of Quebec had been able to largely increase their production of "the weed." Then Mr. Brodeur went on to point out that the Laurier Government was responsible for the encouragement of the tobacco growing industry.

But horrors of horrors, how did Mr. Brodeur reach his conclusion? He submitted that in 1897 the market for Canadian tobacco was limited by the importation of 9,609,000 pounds of foreign leaf. The Government then imposed a duty of 10 cents per pound on tobacco and last year the importations had fallen to 7,700,000 pounds. As a result of protection the Canadian tobacco grower enjoys an increased market and the foreign farmer is compelled to get along with less Canadian money.

Having disposed of the farmer's side of the case, Mr. Brodeur announced that in 1896 only 474,100 pounds of Canadian tobacco was manufactured. In 1903, with the increased duty of 10 cents per pound, no less than 3,167,200 pounds of Canadian tobacco was finished and put on the market. In 1896 there were 10 tobacco factories in Canada. In 1903, with the additional 10 cents duty, 27 Canadian factories were in operation. All of which is a source of comfort to Mr. Brodeur—Free Trader.

Mr. Brodeur has advanced an argument which has been tested and proved by the National Policy since 1878. He has shown that the farmer, manufacturer and workingman can be benefitted by protection. Yet it is safe to predict, that when Parliament meets, Mr. Brodeur will vote against further protection for any one of the three great branches of Canadian industry. The new Minister should insist upon the Laurier Government extending the blessings bestowed on the tobacco grower to all classes, or like Mr. Tarte, resign as a protest against the injustice done to the Canadian people as a whole. It is fairly safe to assume that he will do neither.

Our New Pulled Taffy.

We have lately introduced a new Chewing Taffy which everyone who has tasted declare the best they ever ate.

Its flavor is delicious—it is not sticky and it does not pull the filling out of your teeth, as it chews up as easy as gum.

In the neighboring town of Deseronto there is probably a feeling just now that the prosperity alleged to have been brought about by Laurier is only a fleeting thing. A correspondent writes:

"The match factory and sash and door factory in this town have closed down owing to lack of orders. A large number of men are thrown out of employment, and may have to leave town to find work. A bad outlook in this bitter weather."

• • •

The same correspondent adds a little bit of news which will be of interest to Belleville people: "It is rumored," he says, "that Mr. Gaylord, proprietor of the Deseronto Smelting Works, has purchased a piece of property on which he will erect rolling mills to run in connection with his smelting works."

Conditions on the railroads are said to be improving, and some freight is being moved. It is expected that, should the weather improve, the freight blockade will soon be raised.

"I think," said a prominent citizen this morning, "that The Intelligencer's remarks in regard to the rumored opposition to the Gas by-law were very much in order. The city is now committed to the scheme, and all who have Belleville's interests at heart should try to assist the Council, not hamper them."

In Kingston active steps are being taken towards preparing for the Old Boys' reunion next summer. What is Belleville going to do? Has the matter been dropped or is it simply waiting for somebody with energy enough to push it? There is no doubt at all it could be made highly successful and would be a benefit to the city. Who will start the ball rolling?

"How was that?" he was asked.

"Well," was the reply, "they hadn't laid for so long that I was fully determined to kill them off and sell them on Saturday, but this morning they laid two eggs and the death sentence has been revoked." He went on to say that his thirteen hens hadn't laid for three months, while a friend of his had 26, and hadn't got an egg all winter. That's enough to disgust any man with poultry keeping.

The annual report of the Sun and Hastings Savings and Loan Company, published in another column, should prove eminently satisfactory to the many shareholders of the company in this district. It shows that the company is persistently holding to the legitimate business of a loan corporation, making loans only upon the security of real estate and productive property. The management is evidently in excellent hands. Of the assets, which have now reached the sum of $1,063,078, $1,029,582 is invested in mortgage loans on properties valued at $1,842,380. The reserve fund is now $35,406. The net earnings for the year were $72,327. The usual 6 per cent. dividend was paid.

PROHIBITION WHICH DID NOT PROHIBIT.

LOCAL OPTION BY-LAW ALLEGED TO HAVE BEEN VIOLATED IN RAWDON.

Police Magistrate Flint, accompanied by the County Attorney, was in Stirling village to-day, where an interesting trial was in progress. Some 20 persons, many being prominent yeomen of Rawdon township, were charged with an infringement of the Liquor Act. The township is under local option, and it is alleged that at a recent gathering at a hotel liquor was supplied and freely indulged in. The case is exciting much interest.

DANGER OF LIVING WITH CONSUMPTIVES.

Is real danger, because the sputum of affected persons diffuses itself itself through the air and finds lodgment in the systems of others. If exposed to consumption use fragrant healing Catarrhozone, the most efficient germicide known. No case of catarrh can withstand Catarrhozone, which cures this loathsome disease thoroughly. Cold in the head is cured in a few minutes, and bronchitis, asthma and lung trouble are cured to stay cured if Catarrhozone is employed "I don't know any remedy so good for catarrh and bronchitis as Catarrhozone," writes N. T. Eaton, of Knowlton. "It cured me after years of suffering and saved me from consumption." Two months' treatment, $1.00; trial size 25c.

THE WILBUR OPERA COMPANY.

On next Monday evening the Wilbur Opera Company will commence a two nights engagement with Audran's comic opera, "La Mascotte." The company is too well known to need much description, having been presenting the light operas for the past twenty-five years; suffice it to say that it is better than ever and contains some of the best vocalists and comedians on the stage, among whom may be mentioned Miss Minnie Emmett, prima donna for the past four years with the Savage and Grau Opera Company; Miss Marion Langdon, as alternate; Martin Pache, tenor; Franklin Fox, baritone; Henry Peakes, basso; and that funny trio of comedians, Tom Smith Martin, W. A. McGraw, Charles Van Dyne, besides a chorus of pretty girls.

THE SMALLPOX QUESTION.

Any intelligent physician will admit that you don't catch smallpox because some one else has it, but because your condition favors it. Low vitality always encourages sickness and at this season especially everyone should take Ferrozone, which destroys disease germs and makes the system so strong and healthy that sickness can't exist. Ferrozone is a vitalizing tonic that makes rich, red blood, builds up the nerves, cures nervousness and drives away tired languid feelings. To get strong and keep strong use Ferrozone; it assures health and costs but 50c at all druggists.

GLOSSARY OF CHINESE AND COREAN TERMS IN MANCHURIA.

FU—To the name of a city indicates capital of province, a city of the first class.

CHOU—Indicates city of the second class.

YI—A small post town, as Ychang-Yi, and at the termination of geographical terms:

KIANG, HO, YCHUAN, YCHU—All mean stream, river.

HAI—Sea, sometimes lake.

SHAN—Mountain.

KUAN—Camp, strong, fortified place.

SHAN-HAI-KUAN — The fortified camp where the mountains and the sea meet aptly illustrates these three terms.

LING—Pass over a mountain.

YCHENG, CHEN, HOLO — Town, large village.

At the beginning of geographical names the following prefixes may generally be translated:

YA—Great, large.
SIAO—Small, little.
PEI—North.
NAN—South.
HEI—Black.
HUANG—Yellow.
SI—West.
TUNG—East.
STRANG—Upper.
HIO—Lower.

COREAN TERMS.

In Corea the termination—

PO or PHO—Indicates that the place is a port or harbor on navigable waters—for instance:

Yongam PHO—The harbor near mouth of Yalu river.

Masam PHO—The disputed naval base on the southern shore of the peninsula.

DO—As termination indicates that the place is a province, and means, therefor, 'the district of,' or that it is the capital city of such a province.

HAN—River.

The Unfortunate Japanese.

(New Orleans Times-Democrat.)

(There are no oaths or expletives in the Japanese language. The nearest approach to one is to call a man a "beast."—Exchange.)

We who are reared in a Christian country,
With plenty of oaths for the humblest man,
Friends, have you ever paused to consider
The pitiful case of Japan?

They tread on a tack, and perforce are silent;
They fall in a ditch, and there's naught to say;
A waiter spills soup on their Sunday garments,
And a barber, instead of "bay,"

Fixes them up with a loud hair tonic,
While they are glancing the paper o'er;
A button bursts at a critical moment,
Their favorite team don't score—

And their wrath through it all must still be bottled;
No vent of language to give them ease;
I could weep for years with the sadness of it.
Unfortunate Japanese!

ANNUAL MEETING.

The Annual General Meeting of the above Company was held at the Head Office, Toronto, February 15th. A large number of stockholders were present, taking part in the discussions and showing an active interest in the Company's progress.

The President, Whitford Vandusen, Esq., occupied the chair, opening the meeting in the usual manner, by reading the notice calling the same, after which the General Manager, W. Pemberton Page, who acted as Secretary, read the report and financial statement, from which the following extracts are taken:—

Total assets as at 31st Dec., 1903	$1,063,078.16
Total mortgage loans and investments	1,029,582.43
Secured by Property.
Valued at	1,842,380.20
Total subscribed capital at close of the year	1,910,700.00
Paid up capital stock at close of the year	777,455.03
Net earnings of the Company for the year after providing for cost of management, salaries, advertising, commissions, etc.	72,327.62
Mortgage loans made during the year	275,094.81
Cash receipts during the year (this does not include deposits	417,453.56
Reserve fund at the close of the year	35,406.84

A dividend of 6 per cent. upon the capital stock for the year was paid in half-yearly instalments.

The President, in moving the adoption of the report, referred to the large assets now held by the Company as compared with that of eight years ago, when the Company really commenced business. He also referred to the dividend of 6 per cent. paid upon the capital stock, to the prompt payments that had been made of interest and principal upon loans during the past year. He also referred to the purchase of the assets of the Empire Loan Company, which was completed near the close of the year, and consequently could not appear in the statement for 1903, but would be added to the present year's statement, and which, no doubt, will prove a valuable asset.

The motion for the adoption of the report was seconded by Vice-President Ambrose Kent, Esq., who also made reference in a general way to the satisfactory business of the Company during the past year, and the importance of the growing reserve and the securities held by the Company for loans made. And, further, to the careful consideration that was given to all loans by the Board before accepting the same.

The customary votes of thanks to the Board of Directors, Officers, General and Local Agents were passed, after which complimentary remarks were made by some of the stockholders present, all agreeing that the outlook for the coming year was exceedingly bright.

The following is the Board of Directors and Officers, as elected:—President, Whitford Vandusen, Esq.; Vice-President, Ambrose Kent, Esq.; General Manager, W. Pemberton Page, Esq., of Toronto; H. Wilberforce Aikins, M.D.; J. T. Gilmour, M.D.; Sir Mackenzie Bowell, K. C. M. G.; Rev. Amos Campbell; W. H. Biggar, K.C., Belleville; and W. J. Fawcette, Esq., Brigden; Solicitor, H. H. Dewart, K.C., Toronto; Branch Office, Belleville; J. P. C. Phillips, Manager, and W. N. Ponton, Solicitor.

FALL FAIRS ASSOCIATION.

Education of Young Farmers Rather Than Entertainment the Key Note.

Toronto, Feb. 18.—The annual meeting of the Canadian Association of Fairs and Exhibitions was opened yesterday afternoon in the City Hall. About 150 delegates were present from all parts of the province. J. T. Murphy, of Simcoe, president of the Association, occupied the chair, and delivered his annual address. He was in favor of the policy to educate rather than entertain. Capt. W. F. McMaster read a report on Agricultural Society statistics, but said he was unable to complete it on account of not having received reports from ninety-five societies in the province. Mr. Creelman said the Government would be perfectly justified in withholding the annual grant to any society that failed to make their reports. A resolution was passed looking in this direction. G. C. Creelman, Superintendent of Agricultural Societies, read his annual report, which noted a marked improvement in live stock and gave statistics showing the great increase in values. A general discussion followed.

Dr. A. W. Bell then read an address on "Pointers on Keeping Fair Books," illustrating it by printed forms for records.

Too Many Small Shows.

At the evening session the chair was taken by Hon. John Dryden, who made a short opening address. He dwelt on the large number of small fairs which were shows. In his riding they had not had township shows for years and would not think of holding them again. Fairs should be kept clean. He wished to see more public spiritedness on the part of young men and this could be greatly increased by clean exhibitions.

Addresses were delivered by Prof. Day of Guelph, Rev. C. B. Clarke of Russell, W. E. Smallfield of Renfrew, and others.

Hon. Mr. Dryden closed the meeting with a reference to the cost of expert judges. He asked that the societies should endeavor to keep the expense within the limits of the $80,000 granted to fairs.

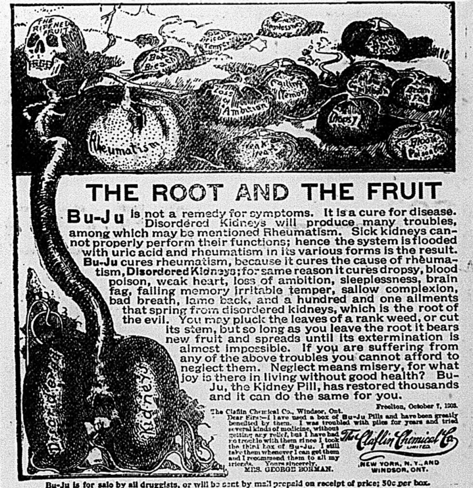
ALL ABOUT EGGS.

HOW TO TELL WHETHER FRESH OR STALE WITHOUT SMELLING.

Not only does an egg contain a great deal of nourishment in a concentrated form, in fact, all the necessary constituents of food, but it is easily digested. It is reckoned that one pound weight of eggs of the ordinary fowl contains: Water, 11 oz. 266 grs.; fat 1 oz. 332 grs.; albuminoids, 2 oz. 105 grs.; mineral matters, 231 grs. The albuminoids are amongst the most nourishing substances known, and help to build up nerve and tissue. Weight for weight eggs are practically on a level with butcher's meat. The yolk contains more of the oil and fat and mineral matter than the white, which latter is practically pure albumen. It is for this reason that the yolk cannot be whisked to a stiff froth as the white can. As a rule an egg in the shell will weigh from an ounce and a half to two ounces, and it is significant that they lose in weight with age. A good way to test an egg is the old fashioned one of putting the large end of the egg to the tongue. If it feels warm it is new. In new-laid eggs there is a small division of the skin from the shell, which is filled with air and is perceptible to the eye at the end. On looking through them against the sun or candle, eggs will if fresh, be pretty clear. If they shake or "gurgle" they are not fresh. Of course new-laid eggs as we understand that term are not necessary for cooking purposes, but it is false economy to buy the very cheap varieties, for they are deficient in bulk as well as nutriment.

A traveler has made the observation that coffee drinking people are very seldom given to drunkenness. In Brazil, for instance, where coffee is grown extensively and all the inhabitants drink it many times a day, intoxication is rarely seen. The effect is not only noticeable among the natives, but the foreigner who settles there, though possessed of ever such a passion for strong drink, gradually loses his liking for alcohol as he acquires the coffee drinking habit of the Brazilian.



THE ROOT AND THE FRUIT

Bu-Ju is not a remedy for symptoms. It is a cure for disease. Disordered Kidneys will produce many troubles, among which may be mentioned Rheumatism. Sick kidneys cannot properly perform their functions; hence the system is flooded with uric acid and rheumatism in its various forms is the result. Bu-Ju cures rheumatism, because it cures the cause of rheumatism, Disordered Kidneys; for same reason it cures dropsy, blood poison, weak heart, loss of ambition, sleeplessness, brain fag, failing memory irritable temper, sallow complexion, bad breath, lame back, and a hundred and one ailments that spring from disordered kidneys, which is the root of the evil. You may pluck the leaves of a rank weed, or cut its stem, but so long as you leave the root it bears new fruit and spreads until its extermination is almost impossible. If you are suffering from any of the above troubles you cannot afford to neglect them. Neglect means misery, for what joy is there in living without good health? Bu-Ju, the Kidney Pill, has restored thousands and it can do the same for you.

Freelton, October 7, 1903.

The Claflin Chemical Co., Windsor, Ont.

Dear Sirs:—I have used a box of Bu-Ju Pills and have been greatly benefited by them. I was troubled with piles for years and tried several kinds of medicine, without getting any relief, but I have had no trouble with them since I took the third box of Bu-Ju. I still take them whenever I can get them and I recommend them to all my friends. Yours sincerely,
MRS. GEORGE BORMAN.

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN

When buying clothing, beware of the man who offers you $10 and $12 suits or overcoats for $3.98 or $4.76 Then again, do not be governed too much by the marked price—look to the value, the worth, the texture, trimmings and make of the goods themselves. A comparison thus made will show conclusively that the prices we quote are lower than goods of equal worth or quality can be bought for elsewhere.

SPENCER'S EAR PLUGS.

The Way the Great Philosopher Rid Himself of Small Talk.

"Years ago," says William H. Hudson in the North American Review, "Herbert Spencer found that the effect of following ordinary conversation became frequently too much for him. But he liked to have people about him to watch the play of expression on their faces, to feel that, though he could not himself share much in the merriment, he was, as it were, a part of the normal and healthy social world. For this reason he objected to withdrawal into solitude and evolved a plan by which he might secure the partial isolation which he required. He had a circular spring made to go round the back of his head, and this carried pads which fitted firmly upon the ears, effectively deadening the noise about him and reducing the surrounding chatter to a mere hum. I have often seen him, stretched at length upon his couch, follow with apparent interest the gossip over the afternoon tea cups up to a certain point and then, reaching under his pillow, draw forth and adjust his instrument, thus suddenly detaching himself from his environment. The effect of this movement with comparative strangers was always to cause an instant cessation of the conversation. But this was precisely what Spencer did not wish. 'Go on talking,' he would exclaim, with a quizzical look. 'I can't hear what you are saying, you know!'"

COSTLY LANTERNS.

The Fancy Lamps That Passenger Conductors Used to Carry.

Modern railroading has driven the passenger conductor's lantern almost out of use. Years ago the pride of a passenger conductor was his lantern. Then the cars were not so brilliantly illuminated as they are now, and the ticket taker was obliged to carry his light on his left arm in order to see the pasteboards as he passed through the dimly lighted car.

At one time the conductors indulged in considerable extravagance in the matter of lanterns. Some of them were gold and silver plated. The upper part of the glass globe was colored blue, and the name of the owner was cut in old English letters. At the meetings of the Conductors' association manufacturers would arrange a great display of costly lights at one of the hotels in the city in which the meeting would be held. Some of the conceits in the lights were unique, and the prices ranged from $25 to ten times that figure. The glass and plating were kept in a highly polished state, and none dared to meddle with this part of the ticket puncher's equipment.

Conductors still carry their own lanterns—that is, they are on the train ready for use—but there is nothing like the need of them that formerly existed.

Good News For The Old People.

A New Source of Strength and Vigor for Those Who Feel Their Vitality Waning and Suffer From the Ills Consequent on Old Age.

The story of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a story of great cheer for the old people.

It is a source of strength and support at that time in life when vitality begins to decline, and the weaknesses of age begin to make themselves felt.

Young blood is warm blood—it is rich, pure and life sustaining, and it is by actually forming new blood that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food proves of such wonderful benefit to the aged.

As the years go by the blood gets thin watery and impure, and fails to supply the nourishment required to keep vitality at high water mark. Circulation gets bad and the nervous system suffers. Besides the pains and aches, besides the weakness and dizziness there are feelings of numbness which tells of the approach of paralysis and locomotor ataxia.

Judging from the experience of the thousands of old people who have tested this great food cure, it seems to be exactly suited to overcome these conditions consequent on old age.

Unlike ordinary medicines Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is entirely restorative in action, while others seek to tear down the tissue, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures by forming new, firm flesh and tissue, and building up the system. It thus permanently overcomes disease and affords lasting benefit.

Mrs. Woodcock, East Moira street, Belleville, Ont., states:—"I was so very nervous and my system was so exhausted that at times I would take severe dizzy spells which made me stagger and at other times I had splitting headaches. In fact my health generally was being undermined by my trouble. I got a box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and after having used this preparation for some time I am pleased to say that my nerves are steady and strong, the dizziness is gone and the headaches are a thing of the past."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cts a box, six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

GERMAN WORK PEOPLE.

Their Amusements Are Few and Mostly Confined to Sunday.

Amusements play a comparatively small part in the lives of German work people, and such as they have are mostly confined to Sunday. Games have not taken hold of them; they go to no football or cricket matches, although there are matches, and other classes in Germany show a growing taste for games and sports. I went to see a football match between Dusseldorf and a neighboring manufacturing town. A similar match anywhere in manufacturing England would have attracted from 10,000 to 20,000 sons of toil, who would have shouted themselves hoarse from beginning to end. At the German match not one put in an appearance. When I left the field toward the close of the game the spectators, who had slowly increased during the afternoon, numbered exactly sixty-five. They were not workingmen, and they showed no excitement whatever. They played the association game, not very well. The national game in Germany is kegel, a kind of skittles, and it is played at public houses, but not by workingmen or seldom by them. They play cards sometimes, but not a great deal. In short, games may be ruled out as an item in industrial life. Theaters and music halls count for more, but for nothing like so much as in England and in America. They are less numerous in proportion to population and are only visited by the working classes to a limited extent on Saturday and Sunday.

HERBERT SPENCER.

He Was a Great Phrase Maker and Had Some Odd Ways.

Herbert Spencer was no linguist. Because of eye strain which affected his health he did not even know German. His pamphlet on education was, however, translated into fifteen languages, including Japanese.

Spencer was a great phrase maker. It was he who popularized the word "evolution" and explained one of the phases of the Darwinian doctrine as "the survival of the fittest." He also introduced Comte's coined word "sociology."

He was a bachelor and long lived in boarding houses. Finally he set up an establishment of his own, where he could have about him people of his own choosing. A favorite relaxation in his later years was to sit in the open doorway of his house and listen to a piano played in a distant apartment. He had the player trained. A thump of his stick was the signal for her to stop, another thump for the music to proceed where it broke off.

Spencer was fond of playing billiards. Once at Brighton he invited a smart youth to a game. The philosopher had four strokes and scored two while the youth ran out. Mr. Spencer put away his cue with deliberation and said to his opponent: "A moderate degree of expertness in a game of skill is agreeable and even creditable. Such dexterity as you show is evidence of a misspent youth. Good afternoon."

Drinking Healths.

This was a Roman custom. The drinking was accompanied by some such words as "Here's to myself," "Here's to you" and "Here's to I shan't say who." The ancient Greeks also drank healths. When Theramerus was condemned to drink hemlock he said, "Hoc pulcro Critiæ."

The ancient Saxons also had the same custom. Hengist invited King Vortigern to a banquet to see the new levies. After the dishes were removed Rowena, the beautiful daughter of Hengist, appeared before the scene holding in her hand a golden cup full of wine. She then made obeisance and said, which in modern English means, "Lord king, your health." The king drank and replied, "Here's to you."

The Greeks handed the cups to the person they toasted and said, "This to thee." Our custom of holding out the cup comes to us from ancient Greece.

Thistles.

In the fourteenth century thistles were used as food for cattle, and they were considered as a crop. In the old priory of Lindisfarne there is a note in the archives of 1344-45 of thick leather gloves required for the harvesters of the thistle crop. It is curious that, though the thistle is the emblem of Scotland, the Scot never seems able to say which kind of thistle is the true national emblem. It is said that a thistle which resembles Carduus marianus was figured on the old coinage of the day of James V., who was first to put thistles on the Scotch money. The horn spoons sold in Edinburgh sometimes have little silver thistles on the end of the handles.

THE YELLOW MAN.

A THRILLING STORY OF THE BOXERS IN CHINA.

BY CARLTON DAWE.

Copyright, 1900.
By Paul R. Reynolds.

I went to my bed and sat down. He threw himself into an armchair, picked up the book and resumed his pipe. I had no book, no armchair, no pipe, and even if I had had all three I could not have interested myself in one of them. So I sat doggedly still for a quarter of an hour or so, thinking, thinking; but instead of thought easing my mind or blood it but irritated the one and rendered the other more tempestuous. This secret, horrid life might suit one who feared the light of day, but I had been accustomed to fresh air and the open fields, and I could not tolerate this sitting in prison, as it were, this moral and physical confinement. So, after much hesitancy, after numerous fatal starts, I ventured to inquire what we were going to do with ourselves.

"Do with ourselves?" he repeated, dropping his book on his knees and favoring me with a puzzled look. "What do you suppose we are going to do with ourselves?"

I said and rather confusedly that I hadn't the least idea.

"Of course not," he replied. "It seems to me that they have not taught you how to employ your time to advantage. Get a book and improve your mind."

But I never felt so little like reading in my life. The "bluddiest" of "bluddy" books would not have held me then.

"I cannot read," I said. "I think I shall go out for a stroll."

He looked up sharply. "What do you want to go out for?"

"Because I shall go mad if I stay in."

"Nonsense. Look at me. I stay in enough, but I don't go mad."

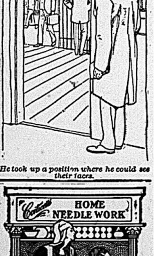
Forgetting myself for the moment, I replied a trifle too pointedly perhaps: "It may suit you. It doesn't me."

He turned more in his chair and peered up at me through his thick brows.

"What do you mean by that?" he asked coldly.

Seeing that I had advanced too far for retreat, I answered with more boldness than discretion: "Simply this, sir. I do not understand this hole and corner business, this game of hide and seek."

He looked at me without replying, but I saw his little eyes burn through the shaggy forest of eyebrow. Then he rose and limped toward me, and by the way his underlip writhed I knew that he was in a great rage. Indeed I fully expected that he would strike me, and somehow I didn't care much. So that we understood each other nothing else mattered. But if that had been his intention, he very considerately altered his mind. Indeed he came close up to me, and his look bore a decided wish for an understanding.



He took up a position where he could see their faces.

"Look here," he said harshly, "you seem to be an obstinate mixture of your mother and me. What do you want?"

"Simply to know, sir, why we seem to be hiding."

He laughed. "And if we are not hiding at all?"

"Why, then, do we take such precautions to conceal our identity? Why do we travel under the name of Martin?"

A curious smile flitted over his sallow face.

"And why not that as well as any other name?"

"People do not change their names without a reason."

"Why should they?" He smiled, but only with his pale lips, showing his teeth in a decidedly unpleasant manner. I might have said more had it not been for the sight of that pallid, writhing mouth. After a pause he continued: "I will admit to you that there is a reason, but what it is I may not say. Perhaps one day, but not now. It is a long story and one which, if known to you, would contain but little consolation. And so I repeat—there is a reason. As you see, I am getting old; I shall soon set sail for foreign parts," his reference to death. "My nerves are not what they were. I need companionship; maybe I shall require help, and I look for it to my son. We shall go to many strange places and do many strange things, and I cannot say when our wanderings will cease. Perhaps soon, perhaps late; but soon or late I want obedience and an end to this questioning. If I do an odd thing, you are to believe that I have a good reason for it, and leave me alone when you see me struggling with the devil of fear or melancholy."

Though this confession left me no wiser than I was before, it to a certain extent cleared the air. In his own way he had spoken civilly, had treated me for the first time as a rational being, and as a result I felt considerably mollified. That some potent reason forced him to this contemptible subterfuge I had no doubt whatever; that it did not encroach upon the domain of Scotland Yard I also firmly believed. Whatever my father was, or whatever he may have been, it was not to escape the police that he behaved in this extraordinary manner.

We left Shrewsbury that night by a late train. I spent that day wandering about the town, but I do not believe my father left his room during the whole of our stay. When the time came for our departure, he went through the same mysterious performance, muffling up to the ears, ordering a closed cab and sitting huddled up in the corner. He was not on the platform when the train arrived, but as soon as it came to a standstill and the passengers began to make toward the exit he took up a position where he could see their faces as the lamplight streamed upon them. Evidently satisfied with his scrutiny, he chose his carriage and entered it. A minute or so later and we were pounding along through the night.

We arrived at Denbigh without mishap and there acquired rooms on the outskirts of the town. For some six or eight weeks we pursued a quiet, uneventful life, and my father, who scarcely ventured out of the house for the first eight or ten days, gradually began to throw off the fear which seemed to clothe him as a cloak. But though he went abroad he seemed unable to forget. He never left his room without first going to the window to see who was in the street; he never stepped out from the door without first taking a hasty glance up and down the roadway, and when in the street itself his eyes were forever darting keen glances in every direction. Even upon the highroad, seeing a solitary figure advance toward him, he showed unmistakable signs of apprehension until the person was well in view. He was looking for somebody; he expected some one. He seemed assured of the meeting and yet fearful of it. What would happen then? His evident fear tended toward catastrophe. Being a fatalist, I think he had no doubt what would be the result of the encounter.

During this period my own soreness wore off, and as I knew him better I discovered the suggestion of many good points in him and when the terror was not on him jovial to a degree. Or rather I should say he showed the wreck of a stanch heartiness from which one might guess what the ship had been. And so I began to take an interest in him and his affairs and thought less of myself and my Uncle Jim. I will not pretend that I felt for him anything like the affection which I had bestowed upon my mother, but he was my father, and, account for it as you may, one must take a certain amount of interest in one's parents. Thus his fears became my fears, and I used to long for him to take me into his confidence, but that, despite numerous broad hints, he would never do, regarding me as nothing more than a boy. Yet boy as I was misfortune had sharpened my wits, and, piecing his words together, I knew that he feared the yellow, slit eyed men of the east. I had not forgotten the man with the strange eyes nor the little brown faced gentleman who had stood in the door of the waiting room.

I remember once reading out to him the account of an attack by a Chinese mob on an English mission during which the rioters had set the place on fire and deliberately burned several of the inmates.

"So like them!" he said. "I loathe the yellow, slimy swine. Cruel, treacherous, they know neither pity nor mercy. Of course it's only English life and English property. It doesn't in the least matter to the bloated fools who sit at home and fancy they know how to govern outside of England. It's not their property. It's not their life. Ignorant, pigheaded fellows, they want whipping, every one of them. They are responsible for these outrages on Englishmen because they do not make the name of England feared. Heavens, if they'd only give me command of the squadron and a free hand I'd teach those yellow devils and all the world besides what the power of England is. It makes me mad," he continued, "to think that our ministers insist upon treating these Asiatics as civilized beings. Any sign of courtesy or of conciliation has but one meaning for them—fear. They have never been treated as intelligent human beings, and they do not expect such treatment. Give them orders; don't ask favors."

I am afraid my father got very excited as he dilated on the delinquencies of the Asiatics and that he used some language which might sound stirring when delivered from the bridge of a ship, but which would be singularly out of place in a decent narrative. He also spoke with contempt of her majesty's government and gave it some sound advice, which I would reproduce if I thought ministers would profit by it. But as advice of any kind, and, above all, sound advice, is the thing most detested by the Jack in office I refrain. After all we have our own village pumps and our own parish councils, and the present holder of a great office is necessarily a great man, and the government knows everything about everything.

CHAPTER VIII.

THE MAN WITH THE FELT HAT.

How long it was my father's intention to stay in Denbigh I have no knowledge, nor do I think had he. Life had but one object for him, the discovery of peace. This, I thought, he had found at last, and I am sure he was beginning to think so, too, when one morning I took him up a letter. He stretched out his hand eagerly, as he always did for anything of that sort, but as soon as his eyes fell on the handwriting he started and turned very pale, and it was with a great effort he could control himself so as to open the missive. Even as he did his hands shook so palpably that the paper rustled.

A glance was enough to master its contents. He looked up at me, and I thought that his face had suddenly grown white and haggard.

"Davie," he said, "we must pack up at once."

I looked hard, but he vouchsafed no further explanation, and I had long since abandoned my disagreeable habit of questioning. But, as appeared to me natural, I asked him where he thought of going.

"Heaven knows," he said, and as he spoke he passed his hand despairingly across his brow. But he at once sought refuge in his familiar friend, or fiend, I never knew which—Bradshaw. I left him deeply engrossed in its mystic and fascinating pages while I went away to pack.

Now began an existence the horror, the terror, of which has remained with me to this day. No wonder people have thought my face preternaturally old for its years. A mind never at peace, each nerve continually on the throb, what was there left me but to grow before my time? Pursued by an unknown enemy, all the more feared for the mystery which enshrouded him, I never laid my head on the pillow at night with the careless consciousness of a youth that he shall see the sun rise on the morrow. Sometimes I awoke in the night and fancied I could see the man with the strange eyes bending over me. I dreamed bad dreams. Many a night I lay awake striving manfully to beat back the sleep which came to my eyes. I dared not go to sleep for fear of the horror that awaited me there.

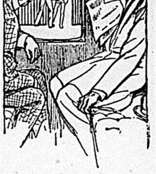
So up and down the country we went, seeking peace and never finding it. My father seemed to have plenty of money, which he spent with the utmost freedom. He never haggled over the price of a room. If it suited him he took it. He drank wine without stint, and he seemed to be an excellent judge of it. Anything that brought him safety or peace was worth the highest price. This dreadful phantom from which he flew robbed him of every other mundane thought. He only wanted to get away—away; to hide himself from the sight of his fellow men. And yet he had such a horror of the loneliness of the country that he shrank from the idea of it as one would from the plague. No, in cities, among men, the greatest seclusion was to be found. The cities he haunted, the men in them he shunned.

Fulfilling our pitiable destiny, we had in due course reached Winchester, in which town we had succeeded in passing a miserable three weeks in safety. Then the usual order came, "Davie, pack up," and without rhyme or reason we hurriedly set out for the station.

Well, in accordance with our usual custom—for once he took charge of the arrangements he never allowed fate to treat him to a second waiting room episode—we drove into the station a few minutes before time. The passing of the baggage and the buying of the tickets took us almost up to starting point. Indeed we had not been seated more than a minute or so when the banging of doors along the line proclaimed the near approach of our departure.

My father, as was usual with him upon such occasions, sat where he could get a glimpse of the entrance. A paper held before him lent an excellent pretense of reading to his attitude, but I, who knew him, saw the keen eyes glancing round the corner of the paper or over the top, and I knew that no soul entered that station without his knowledge.

Suddenly as the train began to move I saw him fling his head back into the corner and raise the paper. Startled, I looked to see the cause, and as we glided by I saw a man hurriedly enter upon the platform. But one of the officials restrained him, and I could see that he chafed consumedly under the restraint. Indeed as our carriage went by he looked straight at me, and I felt myself start in turn. It was only a look, a glimpse one might say, and at a distance, yet to me there was something strangely familiar about his face. A soft felt hat pulled well over the brows hid or threw into shadow his upper features, and yet I grew all a-quiver with excitement as the chords of memory began to vibrate. Where had I seen that dark face, that lithe, well knit figure?



One of the officials restrained him, and I could see that he chafed consumedly.

My father still sat back in his corner, apparently deeply engrossed in his newspaper, while I scanned the flying country vainly striving to tear from it the secret of the man with the felt hat. But the hedgerows danced before me and the trees waved mockingly as we dashed by. Now and again I turned toward my father, and his troubled eyes met my anxious, inquiring look, but if he saw the question there he steadfastly refused to answer it.

At last I started in my seat, involuntarily exclaiming, "I have it!"

"What?" said he eagerly, elevating his shaggy brows.

"I have just seen the man with the strange eyes."

"Where?" he gasped, looking round as though he expected to see that individual enter the carriage.

"On the platform at Winchester. It was he whom the porter prevented from entering the train. I think you saw him, the little man with the felt hat."

"Little man with the felt hat?" he repeated, making a futile effort to cudgel his brains to a remembrance of that personage. "I saw no particular man with a felt hat."

I could scarcely credit my ears, and my amazement showed plainly on my face. He had not seen this man, and yet the very sight of that little gentleman had almost paralyzed him with fear. Why did he say these things? What was his reason? It is perfectly true that he had not yet made a confidant of me, but he had long since abandoned all pretense of concealing the fact that he fled from somebody.

"It was the man who came rushing on at the last moment. I thought you saw him. He wore a dark check suit and a soft felt hat which was pulled well over his eyes. But I know him now. I could swear to him among a thousand. Once lay our hands on him, and we shall be able to unravel the mystery of my mother's death."

I will absolutely stand all the cost if it fails. If you say, "It did not help me," that ends it as far as cost to you is concerned. Do you understand me? I am telling it as plainly, as clearly as I can. I want you to know absolutely and without doubt that this offer is made on honor. I have the prescription that cures. My only problem is to convince you that Dr. Shoop's Restorative will cure—is an uncommon remedy. A common remedy could not stand a test like this. It would bankrupt the physician making the offer. And I am succeeding everywhere and here is the secret of my success. I found invariably that where there was a weakness, the inside nerves were weak. Where there was a lack of vitality, the vital nerves lacked power. Where weak organs were found, I always found weak nerves. Not the nerves commonly thought of but the vital organs' nerves. The inside — the invisible nerves.

This was a revelation. Then my real success began. Then I combined ingredients that would strengthen, that would vitalize these nerves. That prescription I called a Restorative. It is known the world over now as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Thousands are accepting my offer and only one in each forty writes me that my remedy failed. Just think of it. 39 out of 40 get well and these are difficult cases, too. And the fortieth has nothing to pay. That is a record I am proud of. It is wrong to stay sick when a chance like this is open. If well, you should tell others who are sick, of my offer. Don't let a sick friend stay sick because he knows not of my offer. Tell him. Get my book for him. Do your duty. You may be sick yourself, sometime. Sick people need help. They appreciate sympathy and aid. Tell me of some sick friend. Let me cure him. Then he will show to both of us his gratitude. Your reward will be his gratitude. Send for the book now.

"But there is no mystery," said he.

"My Uncle Jim thought so," I answered.

"Probably. Your Uncle Jim is a very worthy but utterly impractical person, who will bring the Terror upon himself if he is not more careful." Then, silent for a little while, he turned upon me a pair of eager, questioning eyes. "You are sure you recognized the man?"

"I could not forget him."

"There are many such men."

"In the east, perhaps, but not with us. Why, I thought you also recognized him."

"I—I know nothing of the man," he wavered. "But it is all dreadful—ghastly."

And yet his face gave the lie to his tongue, for horror and fear were written upon every feature. His futile attempts to read betrayed his agitation. He stole stealthy glances round about the compartment as though he expected to see the man with the felt hat peer out at him from some corner of the carriage. More than once he had recourse to his flask. He burned a prodigious number of matches in endeavoring to keep his pipe alight. It was very strange if he had not seen the man on the platform, and stranger still if he had not recognized him. And why did he ask me at least three times within a quarter of an hour if I was sure the man had not been permitted to come by the train?

CHAPTER IX.

FROM PORTSMOUTH TO CHICHESTER.

Upon our arrival at Guildford we immediately drove to a well known hostelry in the High street, and there we remained until our baggage arrived from Waterloo, which, you may guess, was not dispatched with any breakneck speed. Needless to say, ever since that adventure on the Winchester platform my father had grown more highly excitable and nervous, and as a consequence he was totally unable to remain for long in any one place. Suspicious of everybody, he knew not where to turn to escape his enemies, real or imaginary. He sat in his room, even in the daytime, with a locked door, and he would never permit me to make an excursion into the street without first inquiring if I had my revolver and if it was loaded. And then the same injunction always followed: "If you drop across that man you saw on the Winchester platform, shoot quickly. You once boasted of putting a ball between a man's eyes. Do it to him." And this advice was rather strange, because this was the man he had not seen upon that occasion!

A few days of Guildford wearied us. Heaven itself would not have pleased us with the little yellow man knocking at the gates. So we began our aimless wanderings round the country, visiting in turn Godalming, Haslemere, Petersfield, Petworth, and eventually, as my father would say, we dropped anchor at Chichester.

We had been some three months in Chichester. The summer had gone, and the leaves were beginning to turn, and occasionally a chill wind which had in it the first breathings of the coming winter crept up from the sea during the night. We now began to consider ourselves extremely fortunate and were accordingly happy or comparatively so, and my father, who during this short period had regained a surprising amount of self possession, not only took an occasional turn through the town by himself, but he placed no restrictions whatever upon my coming and going. As a consequence I scoured the country on my bicycle and lived and enjoyed life for the first time during the whole period of our long, weary companionship. In this way I got to know every road and byway within 20 miles of the town, and often I went for very long journeys, sometimes with an acquaintance, but more frequently alone. Indeed I had been so much alone that I could easily tolerate myself, but when I got the bicycle I was no longer solitary. It was a companion, a friend, and if it could not talk to me I could always talk to it. And many a secret we had shared with each other and many a happy jaunt.

Well, one day after luncheon I set out for a run to Portsmouth, a journey I had accomplished several times with ease and satisfaction. But upon this occasion fate did not smile on me. As I entered Portsmouth town the clouds began to pile up from the south, and I viewed with apprehension the promised deluge, for your bicycle is nothing but a fair weather bird. Give him mud and dripping streets, and the brute will probably break your neck if you try to ride him. But the young fear neither the one nor the other, and as for neck breaking—well, that simply does not come into the count.

However, I rode straight on through the town down to the Clarence pier and, dismounting, looked about me. Truly the sky was dark, the clouds seeming to hold a perfect deluge, but as yet they were high and, though scudding furiously, promised not, I thought, an immediate downpour. Therefore I turned about, determined to get some distance on the road before the deluge came. But before I reached Cosham the first drops fell, and these were followed so quickly by the real downpour that I rode into the little town amid a perfect torrent of rain.

Here, much to my chagrin, I was forced to stop for nearly two hours, and when at last I ventured forth it was in a slight drizzle, as there were no prospects of the weather clearing. Carefully I pedaled my way along, now splashing through pools, now indulging in various forms of the side slip, and expecting every moment to be projected into the road. It was quite dark as I wheeled my way through Havant, and I looked with longing at the lights of the shop windows. But the genial warmth within was not for me, so I passed on into the night.

As I left the town the rain began to descend with renewed vigor, but as I was already well saturated it did not affect me in the least, albeit it did not add to the cheerfulness of my surroundings. Once wet a second or third deluge mattered nothing, and I had no fear of a cold, given the exercise of pedaling. That was why I should have feared to train to Chichester even if I had had the money, which was not the case. My father rarely seemed to think that I might like a shilling or two in my pocket, and as a consequence he saw no necessity to burden me with the dross. I believe it is not an uncommon consideration with parents.

So far I had progressed satisfactorily, if slowly, but about half a mile outside of Emsworth I went into a rut. A swishing of water followed, the machine swerved suddenly, and I was precipitated with some violence into the road.

Picking myself up, much shaken, my first thought was naturally of the bicycle, and upon examining it in the dark, for my lamp had gone out, I discovered, to my dismay, that the front wheel would not budge. Feeling in full the horror of the situation, I succeeded after several vain attempts in lighting my lamp, when an investigation of the front wheel disclosed the fact that the fork had been twisted and that the rim of the wheel pressed against the side.

There was nothing left now but to run the thing on its back wheel and trundle it before me, and this I did, feeling my misfortune very keenly. The rain came down in torrents, and the road was gradually transformed into a series of miniature lakes, into which I splashed with disconcerting regularity. But I plodded on sturdily, and presently the lights of the town opened up, a glad sight to the eyes of the weary wayfarer.

Then began the trying search for a repairer's shop, and after the shop was found another expedition had to be formed to go in search of the repairer. Eventually he was run to earth in a neighboring public house, and with a very bad grace he consented to see what he could do.

When I at length left Emsworth, I found that it was after 11 o'clock. Save for the street lamps the town was in complete darkness, and a melancholy and uninspiring sight it presented. But I was glad to see the rain had stopped, for that had seemed to make the darkness more profound. It was, however, a melancholy outlook, and I set forth feeling in a marked degree the influence of the night.

I passed never a soul upon that dreary road. Occasionally a belated light shone dimly from a window. The trees towered above me like gloomy phantoms; the wind whistled in an uncanny manner through the hedgerows. I fancied I saw men plodding before me in the dark; I even thought I could hear the swish of their boots as they rose and fell in the mud. A thousand

THEY DROVE PIMPLES AWAY.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

The biggest brave does not always make the best chief.

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

Sleeplessness.—When the nerves are unstrung and the whole body given up to wretchedness, when the mind is filled with gloom and dismal forebodings, the result of derangement of the digestive organs, sleeplessness comes to add to the distress. If only the subject could sleep, there would be the oblivion for a while and temporary relief. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will not only induce sleep, but will act so beneficially that the subject will wake refreshed and restored to happiness.

No prayer ever failed to be heard because it was too short.

A WONDERFUL CURE.—Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly to cure the sore but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle and when I had used about one-half, the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done, it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using 3 bottles of the Vegetable Discovery, the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am 68 years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

THE PUBLIC should bear in mind that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has nothing in common with the impure, deteriorating class of so-called medicinal oils. It is eminently pure and really efficacious—relieving pain and lameness, stiffness of the joints and muscles, and sores or hurts, besides being an excellent specific for rheumatism, coughs and bronchial complaints.

Seven hundred British subjects are yearly born at sea.

These two desirable qualifications, pleasant to the taste and at the same time effectual, are to be found in Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator. Children like it.

Much talk, many lies.

To get relief from indigestion, biliousness, constipation or torpid liver without disturbing the stomach or purging the bowels, take a few doses of Carter's Little Liver Pills, they will please you.

The average watch represents but 12 hours of human labor.

They make one feel as though life was worth living. Take one of Carter's Little Liver Pills after eating; it will relieve dyspepsia, aid digestion, give tone and vigor to the system.

On occasion knowing what one wants is as difficult as getting it.

That tired, languid feeling and dull headache is very disagreeable. Take two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring, and you will find relief. They never fail to do good.

Nothing so certainly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarefies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their afflictions from a neglected [illegible] the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all disease of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state.

Have you tried Holloway's Corn Cure? It has no equal for removing these troublesome excrescences, as many have testified who have tried it.

A long portage makes a heavy canoe.

How We Cure Weak Men.

Give me a man broken down from excesses, hard work or worry from any cause which has sapped his vitality. Let him follow our advice for three months, and we will make him as vigorous in every respect as any man of his age. We will not promise to make a Hercules of a man who was never intended by nature to be strong and sturdy. Even that man we can make better than he is, but the man who was once strong and lost his strength, we can make him as good as he ever was. We have many testimonials to show any one applying at this store, these are people who do not wish there names made known through the newspapers. Read this,—for a long time I have been a great sufferer from nervous trouble, I was unable to attend to business and could not sleep at night. I tried all the leading doctors in Belleville, but they did me no good. I went away to specialists which gave the same result. By this time I was pretty well discouraged and had almost given up, when my son persuaded me to try the Gilmour Belt, which I did, and after using it for three months began to feel like a new man. Any one who needs treatment for this disease, can make no mistake on this great Belt. I would not take one thousand dollars for mine if I could not get another."

"For many years I have had rheumatism very badly, especially before a storm. I would suffer for days at a time with pain I could hardly endure. I tried all the doctors and they gave me up saying there was no relief for me. At last I tried the Gilmour Electric Belt and after using it for a time began to improve, and am today a pretty good man from its use. I can recommend this Belt to any one suffering from rheumatism."

"I have been bothered with kidney and bladder trouble for nearly twenty years. I could get nothing to do me any good. I was induced by a friend to try the Gilmour Electric Appliance with the special attachment for treating such cases. After using it for a few weeks, began to feel better and can say am getting better. Any one suffering from this ailment can make no mistake on this appliance."

This is the most powerful Electric Appliance in the world, if there is such a thing as a cure in Electricity, which everyone knows there is, this appliance will surely give it.

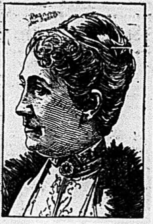
WOMAN'S WORLD

MRS. PHEBE R. HEARST.

A Woman Who Has Contributed Millions to Education.

Mrs. Phebe R. Hearst of California is one of America's most generous contributors to the cause of education, the gifts of this noble woman to educational and other institutions aggregating many thousands of dollars. She has given $2[illegible],000 to establish a national cathedral school for girls in Washington; she has established free kindergartens and a kindergarten training school in Washington; she maintains a training school for mining engineers and a manual training school; she has built, endowed and given many thousands of volumes to free libraries at Lead City, S. D., and Anaconda, Mont., as well as to other mining towns; she paid the entire cost of a competition of the best architects of Europe and America for plans for the great University of California, to which she has given about $5,000,000.



MRS. PHEBE R. HEARST.

It is just twenty years since Mrs. Hearst established her first kindergarten in California, having been moved to do so through a special interest in the welfare of children. The success of her first kindergarten was so immediate and so great that Mrs. Hearst wrote to the late Mrs. Sarah Cooper, at that time president of the Golden Gate Kindergarten association: "I feel that I would like to support another kindergarten. If you will kindly select a suitable locality and rooms I shall be very glad to have another group of little ones. I am most anxious to do this. I am satisfied that money expended in this way for little children accomplishes more good than in almost any other way."

It was this pleasure in helping poor children that caused Mrs. Hearst to found a boys' home in Washington and to provide for them a farm on which they work in the summer time. The benefactions of Mrs. Hearst have been many and wise, and it is said that she has made plans by which a great part of her large fortune will be used for educational and benevolent purposes after her death.

Writing a Letter.

Woman's inexplicable aversion to beginning on the first page of a sheet of letter paper and following the pages in their natural order is well known. Men find it distracting, and even women correspondents confess that in others it is an eccentric practice not calculated to meditation and prayer. Beyond this no one dreamed of going until this feminine peculiarity served actually to invalidate a woman's will. The late Isabella Andrews of Brooklyn, it seems, was one of the women who delight to treat the third page of a sheet of writing paper as if it were the second, the fourth as if it were the third and the second as if it were the fourth. She made her will that way too. Starting on the first page, she jumped the provisions of the will over to the third page, which she marked two, and wound up by subscribing and attesting the document on the second page, which she marked three. She used a printed formula, which was intended to be attested on the reverse side of the first page, what in ordinary correspondence paper one would call the fourth page. The will was rejected, and the supreme court, to which recourse was had, upheld the rejection on the ground that a will to be legal must be signed at the end, not in the middle.

Such a Simple Remedy!

There is nothing upon which the beauty doctors lay more stress than on not worrying. This is the one infallible rule for keeping young, but the difficulty is that nobody has ever been able to tell the beauty seeker how not to worry. A medical authority now comes to the rescue of distressed womankind with a recipe so simple that it is hard to understand why it should have remained so long under cover while carking care was wrecking people's nervous systems, bleaching their hair and furrowing their brows. In the fullness of time, however, medical wisdom has arrived at the conclusion that if the victim of worry will only "loosen her garments and lie down in an attitude of repose" her cares will immediately vanish. Stocks may be falling to zero, the baby may be in convulsions, the servants may all have given notice, and the motor car may be smashed, but all will seem trifles light as air to the woman who puts on a peignoir and curls up comfortably on the sofa.

The German Emperor has presented to the Hohenzollern Museum, the "death dice" with which one of his ancestors decided a difficult case in the seventeenth century. This is their history:

A young girl had been murdered. Suspicion fell upon two soldiers, Ralph and Alfred, who were suitors for her hand. Both the accused men denied their guilt, and even torture failed to extract a confession from either of them.

Then Elector Frederick William decided to cut the knot by means of the dice-box. The two soldiers should throw for their lives, and the loser should be executed as the murderer. The event was celebrated with great pomp and solemnity.

Ralph had the first chance and threw sixes, the highest possible number. The dice-box was then given to Alfred. He fell on his knees, and prayed aloud:

"Almighty God, Thou knowest I am innocent. Protect me, I beseech Thee."

Then he rose to his feet, and threw the dice with such force that one of them broke. The whole one showed six, the broken one also gave six on the larger portion, and the fragment split off showed one. This was a total of thirteen, one beyond Ralph's throw. The audience held its breath in amazement.

"God has spoken!" cried the prince.

Ralph, appalled by what he regarded as a sign from heaven, confessed his guilt and was sentenced to death.

So Many People Ask

Why on earth are you selling Wall Papers at HALF PRICE this time of the year.

WELL its just like this—We still have about 3,000 rolls of 1903 Wall Papers left and with our reputation for carrying the very newest in Wall Papers it would not pay us to put this small balance in with our 1904, and call them new.

We don't do that kind of business. We prefer giving our customers who are not so particular about having the very latest, these goods at bargains. So we are selling all 1903 papers this month at HALF of the regular prices, so as to start March with nothing but 1904 papers which are now flooding our warehouse.

All Fancy Goods and China—not Staple—for the balance of the month of February at Half regular price—this makes home beautifying doubly cheap.

Yours In Decorations

During the winter months our workmen have been kept unusually busy decorating some of the best homes of the city.

TO SAY THAT our decorative work is a success—is putting the matter mildly—you have just to witness this for yourself in observing any one of the many city homes we have given decorative attention during the past two years.

Our success is because of a knowledge of the decorative trade begot of study and experience both in wall hangings and the decorative art—the two go hand in hand—the one without the other is absolutely lost.

NO better time for you than the present for selecting, new wall hangings now arriving.

No better time to have your work done than during the later winter months and the earlier spring.

We are prepared—with a liberal staff of experienced workmen—the best obtainable in their several branches and our prices will meet with your approval every time.

Presentation and Address.

On the evening of Feb. 9th, about eighty-five neighbors and friends assembled and took possession of the home of Mr. Samuel Leslie, of the sixth concession of Thurlow, for the purpose of spending an evening with them before leaving their old home in which they have ever been universally esteemed, and as a mark of remembrance and esteem in which they were held they were presented with a handsome secretary while the following address was read by Mr. James Batcanquel:

To Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Leslie and family.

Dear friends,—We, your friends and neighbors, in view of your leaving this neighborhood, feel we cannot allow you to do so without first giving some expression of the warm regard and esteem we entertain for you. We have not failed to observe your readiness to assist in every good work for the welfare of the church with which you are connected, as also your willingness to lend a helping hand to any cause requiring your assistance. We also desire to offer you our heartfelt sympathy for the cause which has led you to remove from our midst to a home elsewhere. Permit us, then, dear friends, to present you with this piece of furniture as a slight token of our friendship for you, and that in the future in your new home it may remind you of friends of former days. It is our hope and prayer that God's blessing will accompany you as you leave us, but we are glad to know that we still shall have the pleasure of meeting you from time to time and that while we will have to bid you good-bye, we will not have to bid you farewell.

Signed on behalf of friends and neighbors,

George Hall,
James Mather,
James Batcanquel.

After a suitable reply had been made by Mr. Leslie, a number of gentlemen present gave short addresses. The remainder of the evening was spent in games, music and social chat, while a number of cakes and candies, which had been provided by the ladies, were disposed of. The party broke up about midnight by singing a few old familiar strains.

IS YOUR DOCTOR BILL LARGE?

Best way to keep it small is not to call the doctor, but use Nerviline instead. For minor ailments, like colds, coughs, chills, cramps, headache and stomach trouble Nerviline is just as good as any doctor. It breaks up a cold in one night, cures soreness in the chest, and for neuralgia, toothache and rheumatism you can't get anything half as good as Nerviline. The fame of Nerviline for cramps, colic and pain in the stomach extends far and wide. Good for everything a liniment can be good for and costs but 25c for a large bottle.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

THE INTELLIGENCER'S AFTERNOON DESPATCHES ARE TWELVE HOURS IN ADVANCE OF THE TORONTO MORNING PAPERS.

Siberian Railway Service Demoralized—Russian Troops Said to be Literally Starving—Foodstuffs Thrice Their Normal Value.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

London, Feb. 18.—Complete demoralization of the Siberian railway service beyond Lake Baikal is confirmed by official reports, says the Express' St. Petersburg correspondent.

The government admits the heavy mortality of men and lack of horses.

At all the depots the stocks are exhausted or perilously low.

Urgent telegrams are bombarding the capital imploring assistance. Many troops are literally starving and all foodstuffs are thrice their normal value.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

"Grindy" Forrester, of Barrie, has been asked to assist the Marlboros of Toronto when they go after the Stanley Cup. The Marlboros seem to have their nets out in all directions.

The Toronto Telegram continues to whack the O.H.A. executive for reinstating Peel, of London, as though no professional had ever been reinstated before. We may be wrong, of course, but to us it seems that when a man who has played for money comes forward manfully, acknowledges his sin and promises to offend no more he should be forgiven, providing, of course, he had been sufficiently disciplined by a suspension of sufficient length to punish him properly. There seems to have been nothing dishonorable in any act of Peel's. He played for money, did not deny it, saw the error of his ways and for several years now has done nothing which the purest amateur could not do. Why should not he be given a second chance, as plenty of other men have been?

It seems to us that the man who should be placed under an everlasting ban is not the man who honestly turns professional and then gives it up, but the man who can be "got at," who can be shown by reasonable testimony to have connived at the selling or throwing of games. Against such men as these the O.H.A. should declare war, and, once they are out, they should never be allowed to return. To the credit of Canadian manhood be it said, such cases are few and very far between.

"Now they may leave Belleville alone," says the Kingston Whig, commenting on the recent protest against McMillan. And, indeed, it is to be hoped they will. The boys have played fairly, took their bumps manfully and had to endure a good deal of persecution. It is sincerely to be hoped that they may be given a rest and a chance to play together in harmony for the remainder of the season.

Caught in the Net.

It is said that the Marlboros are determined to make a better showing to-morrow night, and will send down a team very much stronger than that which played last night. They may do so, and may possibly win the game, but that they can pull down the lead of 11 goals does not appear probable.

Hurrah for Belleville's winning team. They are good enough on their own ice, to tackle any bunch in Canada, outside of the Stanley Cup aggregations.

The boys' opponents in the next round will be Midland, which club is said to be very strong. The winners will then clash with Stratford, the black and white proposition which is going very fast and which many people expect to collar the championship.

There should be a record crowd in the local rink to-morrow night. The Marlboro team will be greatly strengthened, and everyone who attends may be sure of seeing a swift game and getting his money's worth. Be on hand and show your appreciation of Belleville's coming champions.

At the conclusion of the match the Belleville team was handsomely entertained by Mr. E. Gus Porter, M.P., and a delightful evening was spent.

The Bellevilles played their regular team, the Marlboros lining up this way: Goal, Thayer; point, Purse; cover point, Brown; forwards, Brennan, Simpson, Reid, Anderson.

Two of the Marlboros' strongest men were unable to play last night, but will be on to-morrow night.

Some press comments on the game are interesting. The Globe says: The clip set by the visitors was a little too speedy for the littlest Dukes and they "blew up" in the home stretch. The Belleville bunch is plenty fast enough for senior company. The team is fully as fast as Stratford and much heavier. All the Belleville forwards are lightning movers and adepts at stick-handling. They played a neat, clever combination, and always let go at the right moment.

The Mail and Empire says: The Belleville team is a splendidly balanced one, and will take a lot of beating for the intermediate O.H.A championship. The players are all fast skaters, and adept stick handlers. They shoot accurately, and are quick to break away for a combination rush. The team looks stronger than last season.

HOCKEY NOTES.

The members of the Bugle Band in connection with the Fifteenth Regiment can, in addition to jamming wind, play fairly good hockey. Last evening the Bugle Band team and another from E Company of the Fifteenth Regiment had a match from 7 to 8 o'clock which was attended by a few spectators. Although the score was one-sided, to 0 in favor of the musicians, it was nevertheless a well contested game. The winning team are fortunate in having three O.H.A. junior players on their seven. Mr. W. Hough was referee, and performed to the satisfaction of both teams. The players were entertained to an oyster supper after the match.

The game to-night between the Printers and Clothiers will surely be the sporting event of the season. The Printers have been training hard, running into telegraph poles and falling on the Front street sidewalks, and Manager Harrison says they will make the Clothiers look like paralytics. The latter, it is said, will appear in costumes so startling that the spectators may have to wear smoked glasses. The battle will rage between 7 and 8 this evening, and there will be something doing every minute of the time.

The Barbers have got their backs up and their war paint on, and are ready to play the Bakers for anything from love up. If the representatives of the Doughboys will meet the representative of the Razor Wavers the sanguinary affair can be quickly arranged

Evangelistic Services.

There was a good attendance at the service in the Baptist Church last evening. Mr. Whyte was present and sang several selections. Mr. Shields gave an excellent address on "A Representative Man," taking for his text Exodus 28.12-29-38. The last Bible reading will be given to-morrow afternoon at 3.30. The subject for this evening will be "Some Funny People I Have Met."

ROUGH TIMES ON THE MIDLAND RAILROAD.

NINE ENGINES WERE YESTERDAY STALLED AT GARDEN HILL—TWO "DEAD ONES."

(Port Hope Guide.)

Major Howden and a couple of commercial travellers had an experience last evening that they will not soon forget. They had the misfortune to be on board the 10.20 train which was stalled at Garden Hill on Monday night. They remained in the village all Monday night and part of Tuesday, and seeing no hope of getting home by train tried to persuade some of the residents to drive them in, but the country roads were not tempting enough for the farmers to turn out, and consequently the three gentlemen decided to take "Shanks' mare." They left Garden Hill shortly after four o'clock yesterday afternoon and arrived in Port Hope about half-past seven. The walking was very heavy and the winds across the open fields was not by any means pleasant. The snow covered all the cattle guards and the travellers plunged into three of them and were almost buried out of sight. The Major had both ears frozen, but beyond this is feeling tip top.

No less than five locomotives have been about Garden Hill station the past two days trying to open up a passage. They have become solid masses of ice and two of them are without water or coal, and are termed by the trainmen as "dead."

Two of the others left yesterday afternoon for Millbrook for fuel and water, but Mr. Howden informs us that these were stalled at Carmel. The position is consequently growing worse, and it is difficult to say when traffic will be resumed.

Only about five passengers are left at Garden Hill, and they are being looked after by Mr. Webber, of the King Edward.

Mr. D. McMillan, Ward street, mail clerk on the Midland Division of the G.T.R., walked from Garden Hill this morning.

When he left nine engines were stalled there, and the prospects for a clearance are not very bright.

We understand the situation on the north and west ends of the Midland Division is not much better.

On the main line the passenger service has been very irregular, and we are informed that a train is stalled this afternoon between Port Hope and Newtonville. The Grand Trunk is making a plucky and costly fight to keep the track clear, but the locomotive power appears to be short for the purpose.

Presentation and Address.

On the evening of Feb. 9th, about eighty-five neighbors and friends assembled and took possession of the home of Mr. Samuel Leslie, of the sixth concession of Thurlow, for the purpose of spending an evening with them before leaving their old home in which they have ever been universally esteemed, and as a mark of remembrance and esteem in which they were held they were presented with a handsome secretary while the following address was read by Mr. James Balcanquel:

To Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Leslie and family.

Dear friends,—We, your friends and neighbors, in view of your leaving this neighborhood, feel we cannot allow you to do so without first giving some expression of the warm regard and esteem we entertain for you. We have not failed to observe your readiness to assist in every good work for the welfare of the church with which you are connected, as also your willingness to lend a helping hand to any cause requiring your assistance. We also desire to offer you our heartfelt sympathy for the cause which has led you to remove from our midst to a home elsewhere. Permit us then, dear friends, to present you with this piece of furniture as a slight token of our friendship for you, and that in the future in your new home it may remind you of friends of former days. It is our hope and prayer that God's blessing will accompany you as you leave us, but we are glad to know that we still shall have the pleasure of meeting you from time to time and that while we will have to bid you good-bye, we will not have to bid you farewell.

Signed on behalf of friends and neighbors,

George Hall,
James Mather,
James Balcanquel.

After a suitable reply had been made by Mr. Leslie, a number of gentlemen present gave short addresses. The remainder of the evening was spent in games, music and social chat, while a number of cakes and candies, which had been provided by the ladies, were disposed of. The party broke up about midnight by singing a few old familiar strains.

IS YOUR DOCTOR BILL LARGE

Best way to keep it small is not to call the doctor, but use Nerviline instead. For minor ailments, like colds, coughs, chills, cramps, headache and stomach trouble Nerviline is just as good as any doctor. It breaks up a cold in one night, cures soreness in the chest, and for neuralgia, toothache and rheumatism you can't get anything half as good as Nerviline. The fame of Nerviline for cramps, colic and pain in the stomach extends far and wide. Good for everything a liniment can be good for and costs but 25c for a large bottle.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

THE INTELLIGENCER'S AFTERNOON DESPATCHES ARE TWELVE HOURS IN ADVANCE OF THE TORONTO MORNING PAPERS.

Siberian Railway Service Demoralized—Russian Troops Said to be Literally Starving—Foodstuffs Thrice Their Normal Value.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

London, Feb. 18.—Complete demoralization of the Siberian railway service beyond Lake Baikal is confirmed by official reports, says the Express' St. Petersburg correspondent.

The government admits the heavy mortality of men and lack of horses.

At all the depots the stocks are exhausted or perilously low.

Urgent telegrams are bombarding the capital imploring assistance. Many troops are literally starving and all foodstuffs are thrice their normal value.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

"Grindy" Forrester, of Barrie, has been asked to assist the Marlboros of Toronto when they go after the Stanley Cup. The Marlboros seem to have their nets out in all directions.

The Toronto Telegram continues to whack the O.H.A. executive for reinstating Peel, of London, as though no professional had ever been reinstated before. We may be wrong, of course, but to us it seems that when a man who has played for money comes forward manfully, acknowledges his sin and promises to offend no more he should be forgiven, providing, of course, he had been sufficiently disciplined by a suspension of sufficient length to punish him properly. There seems to have been nothing dishonorable in any act of Peel's. He played for money, did not deny it, saw the error of his ways and for several years now has done nothing which the purest amateur could not do. Why should not he be given a second chance, as plenty of other men have been?

It seems to us that the man who should be placed under an everlasting ban is not the man who honestly turns professional and then gives it up, but the man who can be "got at," who can be shown by reasonable testimony to have connived at the selling or throwing of games. Against such men as these the O.H.A. should declare war, and, once they are cut, they should never be allowed to return. To the credit of Canadian manhood be it said, such cases are few and very far between.

"Now they may leave Belleville alone," says the Kingston Whig, commenting on the recent protest against McMillan. And, indeed, it is to be hoped they will. The boys have played fairly, took their bumps manfully and had to endure a good deal of persecution. It is sincerely to be hoped that they may be given a rest and a chance to play together in harmony for the remainder of the season.

HOCKEY.

A Waterloo for the Marlboros.

That Belleville will win the third round by a handsome margin seems now reasonably certain, as last night the Red and White Boys beat the Dukes on their own ice by the jug-handled score of 14 to 3. The Mutual St. rink has always been a hoodoo to Belleville, but the luck changed for fair yesterday. A good deal of interest was felt in the game in this city, and the Quinte held a great crowd last night, which had assembled to hear the returns. When half-time came with the score 4-2 it was believed that the final score would be close, but in the last half the Belleville boys made a runaway race of it, scoring 10 goals to the Marlboros' 1. Our lads played a great game, their combination being gilt-edged. Time and again the Red and White forwards would break away with the puck and go down the ice four abreast. The Marlboros were outclasses, though it is only fair to say that two of their strongest players were off. All the locals played in their usual form, McGuire in particular putting up "a corker of a game." It was a clean, enjoyable game, especially to the few Belleville people present. Only a fair-sized crowd was in attendance, and they repeatedly cheered the clever work of the Belleville team. Mr. "Pick" Lillie, of Toronto, was referee, and he gave both teams an even break.

The scoring was done in the following order:

1.—Belleville—McGuire.
2.—Belleville—Marks.
3.—Marlboro—Simpson.
4.—Belleville—Kennedy.
5.—Marlboro—Simpson.
6.—Belleville—Kennedy.

Half Time.

7.—Belleville—Burrows.
8.—Belleville—McGuire.
9.—Belleville—McMillan.
10.—Belleville—McGuire.
11.—Belleville—Marks.
12.—Belleville—Burrows.
13.—Belleville—McGuire.
14.—Belleville—Burrows.
15.—Marlboro—Reid.
16.—Belleville—Brown.
17.—Belleville—Marks.

Caught in the Net.

It is said that the Marlboros are determined to make a better showing to-morrow night, and will send down a team very much stronger than that which played last night. They may do so, and may possibly win the game, but that they can pull down the lead of 11 goals does not appear probable.

Hurrah for Belleville's winning team. They are good enough on their own ice, to tackle any bunch in Canada, outside of the Stanley Cup aggregations.

The boys' opponents in the next round will be Midland, which club is said to be very strong. The winners will then clash with Stratford, the black and white proposition which is going very fast and which many people expect to collar the championship.

There should be a record crowd in the local rink to-morrow night. The Marlboro team will be greatly strengthened, and everyone who attends may be sure of seeing a swift game and getting his money's worth. Be on hand and show your appreciation of Belleville's coming champions.

At the conclusion of the match the Belleville team was handsomely entertained by Mr. E. Gus Porter, M.P., and a delightful evening was spent.

The Bellevilles played their regular team, the Marlboros lining up this way: Goal, Thayer; point, Purse; cover point, Brown; forwards, Brennan, Simpson, Reid, Anderson.

Two of the Marlboros' strongest men were unable to play last night, but will be on to-morrow night.

Some press comments on the game are interesting. The Globe says: The clip set by the visitors was a little too speedy for the littlest Dukes and they "blew up" in the home stretch. The Belleville bunch is plenty fast enough for senior company. The team is fully as fast as Stratford and much heavier. All the Belleville forwards are lightning movers and adepts at stick-handling. They played a neat, clever combination, and always let go at the right moment.

The Mail and Empire says: The Belleville team is a splendidly balanced one, and will take a lot of beating for the intermediate O.H.A championship. The players are all fast skaters, and adept stick handlers. They shoot accurately, and are quick to break away for a combination rush. The team looks stronger than last season.

HOCKEY NOTES.

The members of the Bugle Band in connection with the Fifteenth Regiment can, in addition to jamming wind, play fairly good hockey. Last evening the Bugle Band team and another from E Company of the Fifteenth Regiment had a match from 7 to 8 o'clock which was attended by a few spectators. Although the score was one-sided, 5 to 0 in favor of the musicians, it was nevertheless a well contested game. The winning team are fortunate in having three O.H.A. junior players on their seven. Mr. W. Hough was referee, and performed to the satisfaction of both teams. The players were entertained to an oyster supper after the match.

The game to-night between the Printers and Clothiers will surely be the sporting event of the season. The Printers have been training hard, running into telegraph poles and falling on the Front street sidewalks, and Manager Harrison says they will make the Clothiers look like paralytics. The latter, it is said, will appear in costumes so startling that the spectators may have to wear smoked glasses. The battle will rage between 7 and 8 this evening, and there will be something doing every minute of the time.

The Barbers have got their backs up and their war paint on, and are ready to play the Bakers for anything from love up. If the representatives of the Doughboys will meet the representative of the Razor Wavers the sanguinary affair can be quickly arranged.

Evangelistic Services.

There was a good attendance at the service in the Baptist Church last evening. Mr. Whyte was present and sang several selections. Mr. Shields gave an excellent address on "A Representative Man," taking for his text Exodus 28.12-29-38. The last Bible reading will be given to-morrow afternoon at 3.30. The subject for this evening will be "Some Funny People I Have Met."

A LIBERAL PREDICTION

Rosebery Says Party Will Sweep Country in Elections.

Duke of Devonshire Will Explain His Resignation From the Government—Unionist Free-Fooders Want Another Days Debate in the House—Canada Has Australia Handicapped—Lady Mountstephen's $10,000 Necklace Recovered.

London, Feb. 18.—(C.A.P.)—Lord Roseberry, presiding at the City Liberal Club dinner last night, said the fortunes of the Liberal party were the same as when the highwater mark was reached in 1880. He believed that in the approaching general election the Liberals would sweep the country.

Will Explain.

The Duke of Devonshire will explain his resignation from the Government in the House of Lords today.

Not Content.

The Unionist free-fooders, dissatisfied with the fiscal situation, intend to ask Premier Balfour for another day's debate.

Too Big a Handicap.

The Times, refering to the conference in Australia re immigration, says the distance which Australia lies from England will always handicap her against Canada. British workingmen have noticed the shut-out of six British hatters, whereas Canada receives immigrants with open arms.

Necklace Recovered.

Lady Mountstephen's necklace, with all its pieces restored, lies safe in a Bond street jeweler's establishment. Nobody has claimed the reward of £30 offered for its recovery.

It Was a $10,000 Necklace.

London, Feb. 18.—A pearl and diamond necklace, valued at $10,000, which was lost by Lady Mount Stephen at the recent royal wedding, was found, broken in pieces, at the railway station yard at Windsor yesterday.

Defeated By 51.

London, Feb. 18.—After a long discussion in the House of Commons yesterday the amendment of the address in reply to the speech from the throne, against the admission of Chinese laborers to South Africa, was defeated by the comparatively small majority of 51. The amendment was moved by Herbert L. Samuel (Liberal).

TRACING MANY ROBBERIES.

Gang Broken Up in London Believed to Have Committed Them.

London, Feb. 18.—The surviving burglar of the two who engaged in mortal combat with Detectives Nickle and Egelton yesterday afternoon came up for examination at the Police Court yesterday morning. He gave his name as Harry Burdell. He was arraigned on a charge laid by Jacob Obernesser of stealing an iron safe from his hotel, containing $80 in money and valuables worth $500. He elected to be tried by the county judge, and was remanded for one week.

The inquest was opened at Smith's undertaking rooms during the afternoon upon "Shorty" Wilson, the man shot by the detectives. The jury after viewing the remains, adjourned for a week.

The police are investigating the past life of two desperadoes, and hope within a short time to definitely trace a large number of robberies committed in Western Ontario recently. The men carried tools of safe-crackers, and the police feel assured they are the same that committed the recent safe robberies at Embro and Brantford

DUNLOP'S MAIDEN SPEECH.

New Member For North Renfrew Breaks Ice in the Legislature.

Toronto, Feb. 18.—Mr. Dunlop, member for North Renfrew, made his maiden speech in the Legislature yesterday afternoon, resuming the debate on the budget. He spoke for an hour and proved in the hour that he was on his feet that the electors of North Renfrew chose wisely. Apart from possessing an agreeable manner he showed that he had a grasp of provincial affairs that is not often seen in a new and young member. He expresses himself clearly and his logic is sound. Frequently the Opposition showed appreciation of his effort, and the other side of the House listened with great interest. Mr. Pettypiece followed and Mr. Powell moved the adjournment of the House.

The members welcomed back to his seat Mr. Carscallen of Hamilton, who looks extremely well after a month's illness.

Questions Answered.

A large number of questions were asked and answered. Hon. Mr. Latchford informed Mr. Smythe of Algoma that eight petitions had been presented praying for aid to build and repair colonization roads and bridges in Algoma, and that they were under consideration. Mr. Latchford was unable to find any petitions asking for grants for drainage in the township of Balfour and Rayside. Hon. Mr. Davis informed Mr. Gamey that W. L. Nichol had resigned as Indian Land Agent and Division Court Clerk at Thessalon. Nichol is now Indian Land Agent at Sault Ste. Marie, and acted as an official in the Soo bye-election. The Government had made no lease of the Fort Frances water power on the Rainy River, but an agreement for sale had been made with D. W. Bachus and others who are not residents of the province.

Didn't Want to Make a Mistake.

The Attorney-General was asked by Col. Matheson how long the office of Clerk of the Peace and District Attorney for Thunder Bay had been vacant, and why an appointment had not been made. Mr. Gibson said two years, and the reason the place had not been filled was because the Government did not want to make any mistake.

Waived Usual Notice.

The Kingston Street Railway deadlock was made the subject of the deliberations of the Standing Orders Committee of the Legislature yesterday morning. E. J. B. Pense, the member for Kingston, asked the committee to waive the rule in regard to the giving of notice. The committee unanimously agreed to the introduction of the bill without the notice fixed by law being given. Mr. Pense will introduce the bill this week, and it will be taken up by the Private Bills Committee.

POWER AT FORT FRANCIS.

Agreement With Syndicate For Development of 8,000 Horse Power.

Toronto, Feb. 18.—The syndicate represented by E. W. Bachus of Minneapolis has concluded an agreement with the Government for the sale of water power on the Rainy River at Fort Francis. The agreement provides that the syndicate shall develop the water power to its full capacity and shall render permanently available on the Canadian side one-half of the whole capacity of the stream.

The purchasers agree to supply power to Canadian users at a price to be fixed by the Government. Within nine months of the date of the agreement $50,000 is to be expended. The price is $5,000 and the agreement is not to take effect unless within two months the purchasers enter into a satisfactory arrangement for the erection of a flour mill at Fort Francis with a capacity of 1,000 barrels a day or some other industry equally extensive.

There is about 16,000 horse-power capable of development at Fort Francis, and of this 8,000 will be on the Canadian side. The right is reserved to the Dominion Government to build and operate the canal at Fort Francis.

TURNED KING'S EVIDENCE.

Poll Clerk Durance Reveals Crookedness in No. 9, Ward 4, Toronto.

Toronto, Feb. 18.—Startling evidence was given in the civic investigation into election scandals yesterday morning by John J. Durance, who was poll clerk under Samuel Thompson at sub-division 9, ward 4. Durance went into the witness box and made a clean breast of the ballot-stuffing and frauds at sub-division 9 of the Fourth Ward. He told how, at Samuel Thompson's instructions, after all the scrutineers had gone and the constable had been sent home by Thompson, he wrote the 25 names in the poll book which caused the discovery of the crooked work. "We have to do this every year," was the only explanation Sam Thompson vouchsafed with reference to the matter.

Durance also told of an interview the family of Sam Thompson tried to have with Controller Richardson and of one they did have with Dr. Beattie Nesbitt.

Power is a fretful thing and hath its wings always spread for flight.—Wallace.

250,000 BEFORE A COLLISION

Japanese Employ Bandits to Blow Up the Railway—All Quiet on the Yalu—Russian Scouts Do Not Find Enemy Within 35 Miles of River—Russia Awaits Land Fight With Confidence—Japs in Ascendant.

Port Arthur, Feb. 18.—The reports that the Japanese have concentrated about 60,000 troops at Wonsan (on the east coast of Corea), with the object of entering Manchuria, are confirmed.

Ready For Spring.

Berlin, Feb. 18.—The Admiralty here has received confirmation of the reports that Japanese landing operations on a vast scale are taking place on Corea's northern coast, and it is assumed by the German authorities that Japan will be ready by early spring for a forward land movement, supported by properly equipped bases. Possibly 250,000, according to the estimates made at the German Admiralty, will be in the field before a collision takes place with the Russians in force.

8 Transports on the Way.

Tokio, Feb. 18.—Eight transports, with Japanese troops, from Nagasaki, and several additional vessels carrying war munitions, are on their way to the west coast of Corea. Detachments of Japanese cavalry have already landed at Wiju, on the Yalu River.

15,000 Embarked.

Nagasaki, Feb. 16.—Fifteen thousand troops were embarking on transports yesterday. Two damaged warships are here waiting to go into dry-hock.

To Fight For Japan.

Montreal, Feb. 18.—Major Sakol, who reached here yesterday from St. Petersburg, is hurrying home to fight for Japan.

Japanese Bury Dead.

Sasebo, Japan, Feb. 18.—Impressive funeral services were held here yesterday over the remains of three officers and two men of the Japanese battleship Fuji, who were killed by the Russian fire during the first attack on Port Arthur. The religious ceremonies were conducted by a Shinto priest, and the funeral oration was delivered by Admiral Samewi.

JAPAN EMPLOYS BANDITS.

Bands Formed to Attack the Railway—Quiet on the Yalu.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 18.—A despatch has been received here from Major-General Pflug, chief of staff to Viceroy Alexieff, saying that Yuan Sha Kai, commander-in-chief of the Chinese Army and Navy, has ordered 2,500 men to Tsinchou, to maintain order. Continuing, he says everything is quiet at Niuchwang, and that the information that the Japanese are forming bands of Chunchus (bandits), to attack the railroads, is confirmed. Quiet prevails on the Yalu. Russian scouts did not find the enemy within a distance of 34 miles of river.

Leave Port Arthur Alone.

New York, Feb. 18.—A special cable from St. Petersburg to The World says Russia waits with the utmost confidence the conflict on land which is soon to come. Experts recognize that relief from the responsibility of maintaining the long line of railway through Manchuria will greatly simplify Viceroy Alexieff's task. Port Arthur can be safely left to take care of itself.

Japs in Ascendant.

Washington, Feb. 18.—Mr. Allen, the American minister at Seoul, cables the State Department that Wiju has been declared open to the commerce of the world by the Corean Government. It is understood that the opening of Wiju is directly attributable to Japanese ascendancy in Corea.

Salonica, Macedonia, Feb. 18.—Shemsi Pasha, with 2,500 Turkish troops and three guns, is reported to be besieged by 20,000 Albanians at Babajhosi, between Diakova and Ipek. The Turks are said to be without food and water, and to have already lost 100 men. Strong reinforcements, under Shakin Pasha, are hurrying to the relief of Shemsi Pasha.

Clue to Napanee Bank Robbers.

Hamilton, Feb. 18.—Many $10 bills of the Dominion Bank in the series numbering from 46,000 to 47,000, which were stolen in the famous Napanee Bank robbery several years ago, have turned up in this city. It appears that there was a cock fight not far from Buffalo a few days ago, which was attended by several sports from the neighborhood of Napanee and Hamilton. It is alleged that the sports from Napanee tried to work off the bills when paying lost bets, and that is how the stolen bills happened to drift into this city. They are dated Jan. 2, 1888, and are not negotiable.

Can't See His Way.

Fort William, Feb. 18.—Fort William Liberal Association has received a letter from Hon. Clifford Sifton definitely declining the nomination as candidate for Thunder Bay and Rainy River. He expressed appreciation of the honor done him, but was unable to see his way to accept.

Royal Templars.

Toronto, Feb. 18.—The Royal Templars of Temperance of Ontario continued their grand councils sessions yesterday in St. George's Hall. The committee urged that members take a more active interest in municipal and Parliamentary politics, to the end that better men should be selected as candidates in election contests; also that Royal Templars take the initiative in having the Local Option Act brought into force, until such time as prohibition can be obtained. Several representatives were chosen for the Dominion Grand Council, which meets in Hamilton in March.

Lumber Schooner Wrecked.

Victoria, B. C., Feb. 18.—The three-masted schooner Emma Utter, with 360,000 feet of lumber, from Gray's Harbor to San Francisco, which cleared Aberdeen, Feb. 7, struck heavily on a bar and was abandoned by Captain Hansen and five of the crew on the 11th, leaving on board Seaman Henry Byndall. Since that date the vessel has been drifting about the coast. Two Indians rescued Byndall yesterday. The Utter will be a total loss. Nothing can be learned of the fate of Captain Hansen and his men.

OPTIMISTIC MINISTER

Hon. E. J. Davis Gives Incredible Timber and Dues Figures.

Two Hundred Million Dollars the Value of the Timber Lands the Property of the Province—These Would Bring on Disposal at Least $75,000,000 From Bonuses and $20,000,000 From Dues —And Much More Besides.

Toronto, Feb. 19.—The budget debate was resumed yesterday in the Legislature by Mr. Powell of Ottawa. He said year by year the expenditures of the province had exceeded the income. Leaving out the sale of timber in December the income would be $600,000 short of the expenditures. Who ever heard, he asked, of a business man selling part of his fixed assets and putting the cash in as part of current income? This was what the province had done. Since 1898 the expenditures had increased 30 per cent. It was a gross piece of mismanagement for the Government to borrow $2,000,000 at 5 per cent. from the banks, while it had about the same amount in the banks drawing only 3 per cent.

The Premier replied to this the Government had no authority to transfer money from one account to another without authority from the House. The House could asked to allow the Government to transfer these amounts.

Mr. Powell: I understood it was the practice of this Government to do business by Order-in-Council.

Mr. Ross: We can only go so far.

Grants to Veterans.

Mr. Powell then discussed the land grants to veterans. He regretted the condition of the land grants and said he regretted the Government had not expended the $100,000 appropriated for surveying this land. At 7c. an acre this amount would have surveyed 60 townships.

Hon. Mr. Davis said the price had been increased to 9 cents an acre.

Mr. Powell said only 18 townships were surveyed last year. Many of the veterans selected good lands, but were informed that they were already taken.

Discussing the Temiskaming Railway he said it would not do merely to ask the Dominion for a subsidy; they should go down to Ottawa and insist on it.

Minister of Crown Lands.

Hon. E. J. Davis replied. He related the various disabilities which confronted the department in their surveying and Veteran work, and discussed the financial statement.

Timber Resources Left.

Mr. Davis said a low estimate of the amount of white pine standing in the province was ten billion feet. There was enough pine to make twenty sales as big as the last one, and that the province would benefit to the amount of at least $75,000,000 from bonuses and $20,000,000 from Crown dues, while the dues from timber lands under license previous to the last sale, which had amounted to from $800,000 to $1,000,000 a year in the last three years, would also swell the revenues of the province to a considerable extent. There were 300,000,000 cords of pulp wood, which at 75 cents a cord, would net $225,000,000.

Hardwood in Abundance.

Besides these there was a considerable quantity of hemlock and hardwood. There was a great demand for hardwood from furniture dealers. If there were areas not suitable for agricultural purposes, he hoped some policy could be adopted by which the Crown might receive revenues from hardwood on these lands.

A comparison of the methods of disposing of timber lands in Quebec with that of Ontario showed, he said, that Quebec got $111 for every mile of timber sold, while in Ontario from $1,000 to $3,000 a mile was obtained for the pine alone. Again, in Quebec, the purchasers are not bound to erect pulp mills, but the wood may be exported.

Says Tarte Is Leader.

After 8 o'clock Mr. Davis said the Conservatives of Quebec had advocated the timber policy of Ontario, and quoted Mr. Tarte, who, he said, amid Opposition dissent, was the leader of the Conservative party of Quebec. Pulp concessions were not given to friends of the Government any more than to Conservatives.

New Forest Revenue.

The Minister then made an important announcement concerning the policy of the Government as to "setting apart a new forest reserve." There had been set apart some years ago the Temigami reserve of 2,200 square miles, to which was added a few weeks ago an area of 3,700 square miles. Yesterday, Mr. Davis said, the Government set apart a new area of 3,000 square miles in the Algoma district, known as the Mississaga reserve. Regulations were being worked out to have only such timber as would be designated by experienced men cut, and to reduce the risk of fire to the lowest minimum so as to give the undeveloped wood a chance to develop to the best advantage. A system of reforestration would be inaugurated and the province would receive from these reserves several million dollars a year; so that there would be no doubt about the financial condition of the province for years to come.

The Government proposed to ascertain the amount of timber on the islands in Lake Temigami. It was proposed to ascertain how these islands can be made available for tourist traffic.

Laborers For Ontario Farms.

After dealing with the cost of immigration, he said the Government was doing something to relieve the scarcity of farm laborers in Ontario. About 2,000 were found employment on farms in the province, and altogether about 5,000 were provided for. This year applications for farm help were coming in very rapidly. During the last week the number was about 50 a day.

He thought the country should congratulate itself on the financial condition of the province and on the prospect of receiving $200,000,000 from our timber lands.

Dr. Reaume of Essex, and Dr. James of East Nipissing, concluded the day's debate on the budget, the adjournment being moved by Mr. Sutherland of South Oxford. A number of bills were introduced by private members and read a first time.

BIG LIMITS BY PRIVATE SALE.

Return Shows Some Fine Plums For Friends of Government.

A return asked by J. W. St. John, M.P.P., last year was brought down by the Provincial Secretary in the Legislature yesterday afternoon. It shows the number of timber limits disposed of by private sale. The total area of Crown Lands under timber license is 18,829 square miles. Of this there are 16,007 square miles in arrears, numbering 80 licenses. Ninety-one licenses have been cancelled since 1891, covering an area of 6051 square miles.

One of the limits was sold on Jan. 10, 1895, in the vicinity of Lake Pogamasing, to the late J. W. Munro, for which he paid $30,000 bonus and agreed to pay $1.25 a thousand dues. Another was a sale to Henry Walters on Oct. 15, 1891, in the vicinity of Spanish River, for which he paid a bonus of $19,200 and agreed to pay $1 a thousand feet dues. Still another was sold Dec. 3, 1895, in Grant Township, to E. S. and H. S. Brennan of Hamilton, for which they paid $20,520 and $1.25 dues.

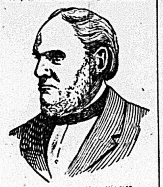
There are other limits of considerable importance, included in the return. A. Barnett, $17,555; A. Barnett, $6,000; McLeod & McNeil, $20,158; A. Barrett, $33,575; Victoria Harbor Lumber Co., $61,275; Hawkesbury Lumber Co., $30,195. The Shannon limit is also given in the return.

The return gives no idea as to the area disposed of in each case, and Mr. St. John will demand that the fullest information be brought down. It is claimed that the report discloses a distinct violation of the principle of sale of forest reserves by public auction.

100 YEARS OLD.

Fredericton, N.B., Will Present Testimonial to Senator Wark To-day.

St. John, N.B., Feb. 19.—Hon. L. J. Tweedie, Premier of New Brunswick, is here and will go to Fredericton to-day to take part in a testimonial to the Senator David Wark, of that city, who will be 100 years old to-day, the oldest Legislator in the world. Public recognition of the anniversary of the venerable Senator is to be made by the Fredericton City Council this afternoon, when an address will be presented to him.



SENATOR DAVID WARK.

Toronto's Municipal Scandal.

Toronto, Feb. 19.—The leading feature of the evidence at the civic investigation yesterday was the story related by Joseph Hazelton, druggist, Yonge street, of the perambulations of himself in company with Controller Richardson, Ald. Ramsden, Alf. Maguire and a Mr. Nichols, or Nicholson, through the Ward on the night before the election, winding up at the colored church just as the watch-night services terminated. Mr. Hazelton said he was working for Controller Loudon and Ald. Ramsden, but admitted he did a little on Controller Richardson's behalf. He was severely reprimanded by the Judge for evasive answering, and Mr. Riddell said as he left the box that he would have him back again. Mr. Riddell also said during the day that he proposed to find out where the large sums of money paid came from.

Shot By Hired Man.

Winnipeg, Feb. 19.—Capt. F. St. G. Gore, who resides near Minnedosa, was attacked by a neighbor's hired man named Sidney Wagstaff, with an axe last evening. He was disarmed and drew a revolver, shooting Gore in the side. The extent of his injuries cannot be ascertained. Constables went out from Minnedosa to arrest his assailant. The injured man arrived from England last spring.

Dr. Jameson a Cabinet Maker.

Cape Town, Feb. 19.—Sir John Gordon Sprigg, who was defeated in the Parliamentary election recently held in East London (which he had represented for nearly thirty years), has resigned the premiership. Dr. Jameson of raid fame, the leader of the Progressives, has been summoned to form a new Cabinet.

Permanent Police Posts.

Ottawa, Feb. 19.—It is intended early in May to send up a steamer with coal and additional food supplies for the Canadian expedition in Hudson Bay. The Neptune is not expected back till November. The Government intends to establish permanent police posts on the shores of Hudson Bay.

Fell Down Elevator Shaft.

Ottawa, Feb. 19.—B. T. A. Bell, editor of The Mining Review, sustained severe injuries yesterday, and was taken to the hospital. He walked into an elevator shaft on the ground floor of Orme's building, Spark street, and fell to the basement. He has a broken arm and a fracture at the base of the skull.

Admiral Vesey Dead.

London, Feb. 19.—(C. A. P.)—Admiral Vesey is dead, at the age of 81. He conveyed the Prince of Wales between Nova Scotia and New Brunswick and assisted at the opening of the navigation of the St. Lawrence up to Montreal.

WHY ALL THIS MYSTERY?

Cabinet Ministers, including Sir Wilfrid Laurier, have been taking an active part in the bye-elections, but in no instance has one of them taken the electors into his confidence and explained the position in which the Grand Trunk Pacific deal stands. Everything was left to the imagination of the voter, in the hope that he, like Sir Wilfrid's followers in Parliament, would swallow the scheme whole. This was a most unusual course to pursue. Responsible Government is founded on the intelligent votes of electors, but the Liberal party evidently labors under the impression that the common people do not count for much, and are, accordingly, not in a position to pronounce on the merits of large and important questions. Of course Sir Wilfrid and his colleagues are probably in no position to announce anything, but they should have at least admitted their ignorance of the whereabouts of the magnificent G.T.P. deal. In railway circles it is openly stated that the Government is far at sea in respect of the entire proposition. The Grand Trunk Company has been fighting shy of the wildcat scheme, and the Government is at the mercy of those who were instrumental in hatching the project. While Sir Wilfrid is doing his best to patch up the many existing difficulties, his efforts will undoubtedly result in blunders greater than those into which the Premier has already fallen.

The mercury was actually above zero this morning! We'll soon be getting our fans a-going.

A comical incident happened at an entertainment in the city last night. A young vocalist had started to sing his encore song: "After the winter the springtime will come," he sang, and the audience burst forth with a perfect storm of applause, which rather disconcerted the singer, till he saw the point, then he joined in the merry laughter.

• • •

The terrible and distressing accident which happened on Pinnacle St. last night should be a warning to the many boys of this city who, it is alleged, make a practise of "jumping" trains which go up and down Pinnacle St. Some drastic measures should be taken to stop it. Let the police arrest every boy they see on the trains, and let all citizens report every boy they see on the trains; then mete out a good sound horse-whipping to the offenders and the practise could be stopped. Were the course outlined above followed we would have no more shocking affairs like that of last night.

It is said that in Peterboro they have an unique way of thawing out frozen water pipes. In that electric town, when the water pipes freeze, it is the custom to connect the most convenient electric wire with the frozen pipe, and the trouble is over in an instant. This method of saving money and averting a common annoyance may be rather a rude shock to the plumber gentleman, but it should be awfully good news to the victim who has to foot the bills which usually run hand-in-hand with the frost-bitten water pipe.

An Interesting Suit.

Kingston Whig: A case of much interest to farmers, patrons of cheese factories and others interested in the manufacture of cheese, will be argued at Napanee to-morrow. One day last August, Thomas Clancy, Enterprise, registered at the Napanee board 400 boxes of cheese. D. J. McKinnon, Kingston, bought 200, and Thos. Cook, Belleville the other 200 at 10 5-8c. It was agreed that Cook was to inspect the cheese at the factory. Subsequently, two weeks later, he ordered the cheese sent to Belleville for inspection. Meanwhile the market had fallen and Clancy sold the cheese bid for by Cook, to McKinnon for 10c. Now Clancy is suing Cook for the difference in the price, representing five-eighths of a cent a pound on 200 boxes.

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

The Toronto Telegram's sporting writer, whose picturesque views are always readable, has these nice things to say of our hockey team:

Belleville's bunch look like intermediate champions. They also look like people who had lots of time for practise, and had used the time to advantage.

Belleville hockey team demonstrated last night that they had some legitimate claims to the intermediate O. H. A. championship. They are a husky lot, the huskiest in fact, either intermediate or senior, that have appeared here this year. Then they have lots of speed and handle their sticks as if they seldom did anything else. They weren't worrying about the result of last night's game, and didn't start to play hockey till the second half. But when they did start they demonstrated that they knew how.

Reddy McGuire is supposed to be the star, but Kennedy, on the right wing, looked the best last night. He did the feeding, and "Reddy" did the scoring, though occasionally the wing man drove in a wicked one himself, and sent the referee's hand up. But they all look good and strong and healthy, and they work one of the most picturesque combinations seen here this season.

It's Stratford, Midland or Belleville for the silverware, and till last night it looked like one of the first two. Now it's as much, if not more, Belleville than anybody else. But there'll be some hockey worth risking a snowdrift or two to see when any two of the three come together.

The much-moved Reddy McMillan, presently at Belleville, moves almost as fast on the ice as he does between times.

The moderate weather should ensure a large attendance at the match to-night.

It is whispered that the Marlbores are bringing a regular old corker of a team down, and are determined to win the match. They may, but they will hardly win the round.

The biggest crowd of the season should be in the rink to-night. Some of those famous Toronto players may be on, and, if so, they will give the locals a merry chase. Don't miss it.

The Kingston Sleeengroves beat U.C.C. 8 to 7 last night, and now go into the finals. The junior championship appears to be as good as won by the lads from dear old Kingston.

"Chaucer" Elliott will referee the match here to-night.

HOCKEY.

Napanee Beat Picton.

Napanee and Picton Trent Valley League hockey teams, being a tie in this district, played off here last night. It proved to be an easy win for Napanee, who outplayed their opponents at every stage of the game. At half-time the score was 7 to 1 in favor of Napanee, and at the conclusion of the game the score was 12 to 4 in favor of the eastern boys. Mr. Chaucer Elliott, of Kingston, was referee, and as usual he was impartial. The game was devoid of roughness, only two of the players being sent to the fence. The game started at 8.15, the line-up being as follows:

Napanee		Picton
	Goal
Stacey		Bartholomew
	Point
Coates		Yerex
	Cover point.
Wagar		Hess
	Rover.
Lake		McMullen
	Centre.
Dafoe		Tamblyn
	Right wing.
Trimble		Webster
	Left wing.
Williams		Sullivan

Printers Won, of Course.

"Finest game of the kind ever seen in Belleville." That was the verdict of all who saw the match between the Printers and Clothiers last night. There was quite a good crowd of spectators present, and every one of them got his or her money's worth. Mr. Sam Symons was referee, and the people who said he didn't know an offside from a side of sole leather were badly mistaken. Mr. Symons, in addition to being an excellent referee, gave an exhibition of fancy skating easily worth the whole price of admission. There is no necessity of importing referees from Toronto while he is here. It was exactly 7 o'clock when the teams lined up, and they started off with a speed which soon took their own breath away, if it didn't the spectators. The Printers had an elegant combination, and it was a common thing to see the forwards slide 20 yards on the seat of their pants. Their defence was great; no high ball ever got by them, and they lifted the puck as easily as a married man lifts a scuttle of coal. With a couple of year's practise the Printers' team could easily defeat any septette ever turned out by any other trade in this city. The Printers' goal-keeper, Mr. MacDiarmid, has already received offers to play in other places next season. He stopped all sorts of shots last night, and the point and cover point had to hold him to keep him from making rushes. Harry Hampton, in goal for the Clothiers, was a regular Winchester. If his feet were only a little bigger he would be a star. Bawden and Tuite scintillated for the Printers, doing some really creditable work. In the first half they were closely checked, but the Ready-Mades "blew up" in the stretch, and the Printers' rover and centre easily got away from their checks. For the losers Paterson, Reeves and Fahey played well, but the last-named got a check into the fence which took all his speed away. The half-time score was 3-2 in favor of the Printers. In the second half the Clothiers got two in succession, making it 4-3 in their favor. Then the Printers woke up and scored four more, thus winning the match by 7 to 4. The teams were:

Printers.		Clothiers.
	Goal
MacDiarmid		Hampton
	Point
Stevenson		Luscombe
	Cover point.
Cherry		Gillick
	Rover.
Bawden		Crawford

Evangelistic Services.

There was a large audience present at the service in the Baptist Church last evening, when Mr. Shields gave an address on "Some Funny People I Have Met," in which some of the peculiarities that manifest themselves in connection with the religious life were dealt with. The most peculiar people of all were those who rejected all the riches of God's love and grace, and practically closed the door of Heaven on themselves, because of the inconsistency of those who professed to follow Jesus. Why they should follow such a course as this was hard to understand. During the service Mr. Whyte sang several of his tender selections and in the after meeting that followed, quite a number took part. Mr. Shields gives his farewell address at the service this evening, which will be the concluding one of the series. A large audience will no doubt be present.

A Chance for Investors.

The Cherry Creek Copper King Mines, Ltd., owns and operates the O.K. group of six mineral claims situated about four and a half miles south-west of Kamloops, B.C.

The property has exceptional advantages and is exceedingly valuable, and as the surface indications on this vein are identical with those at the workings on the Iron Mask, a property owned by the B.C. Exploring Syndicate, and adjoining it on the west. The following extracts from the Chairman's address to the shareholders at their general meeting held in London, Eng., on the 18th Sept. last, will give an idea as to the prospective value of the O.K. group:

"On the Iron Mask at Kamloops we have expended £26,000 and I think we may allow that this item is splendidly represented by the mine we have in process of development at Kamloops, and I believe you will credit us with having given you twenty shillings for every pound expended on that mine. * * * * *

"If it is true that we have as we believe we have, a practically unlimited body of 5 per cent. ore in our mine at the Iron Mask, then in the words of one of the most eminent smelting millionaires in America, whom I had the pleasure of meeting at Salt Lake City, 'You have got millions.' * * * * "Kamloops is an absolutely ideal position for the erection of a smelter and the working of a mine. The railway, the water, the fuel and the grade of the earth surface, and the self fluxing nature of the ore all seem about as desirable as they could be. * * *

These extracts are from an address by a hard-headed London financier to equally hard-headed business men, who are developing their property with a view to large profits, under the direction of an expert mining engineer.

Owing to the proximity of the mine to the railway, a short line of aerial tramway would be easy of construction and would enable the company to transport their ore to the railway at a cost not exceeding ten cents per ton. Freight and treatment charges for the class of ore obtained are exceedingly favorable and are quoted by the Trail and Granby smelters at $6.25 per ton, so that the entire cost of mining, freighting and smelting would not exceed $5.00 per ton. The ore is a high grade copper gold assaying from 10 per cent. to 24 per cent. copper and from $6 to $22 gold per ton, and is in great demand at the smelter owing to its fluxing qualities.

The near future will see the erection of a large copper smelting plant to treat the ores of this district, both the B.C. Exploring Syndicate and the Inland Smelter Company having already selected and purchased sites. The completion of these enterprises will insure the lowest possible rates for reduction of local ores. The company has secured a clear title to the property on the most favorable terms, the former owners showing their confidence in the mine by accepting the entire purchase price in fully paid up shares of the company.

After paying all the expenses in connection with the incorporation, the amounts due on options secured by the company and the purchase price of the O.K. group, there remains in the treasury two hundred thousand shares, the proceeds from the sale of which are to be applied to the development of the properties, now owned or to be hereafter acquired by the company. There is absolutely no promoters stock, and the issue advertised in another column is the first opportunity offered the public to invest in the shares of the Company.

Who Need Glasses?

(1) Many children need them, some parents say they do not want their children to "begin" wearing glasses if they can help it. That is all right, but in many cases before they find out they cannot help it, it is too late to save the sight of one or possibly both eyes. Many such cases have come under our examination, that might have been prevented by wearing the proper glasses in time. Bring your children to us if they do not need glasses we will tell you so.

All work warranted first-class. THE INTELLIGENCER, Belleville.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

Drink lots of water. Boil it if doubtful of its purity.

Don't bestow less care upon the teeth than upon complexion and hair.

Don't use metal or wire hairpins of any kind. They are ruinous to the hair. Use shell or imitation shell of medium size.

Don't think that the skin is as thick as the hide of the rhinoceros and treat it accordingly. If you do you will have premature wrinkles and lose delicacy of coloring.

Do not forget that the same blood that nourishes the muscles also feeds the nerves; so when developing physical strength you are strengthening the nervous system.

When you are feeling fagged and your skin looks pasty dip a sponge in very hot water and bathe the base of the brain, also the face and throat, for five minutes. Finish this ceremony with a dash of toilet vinegar.

A simple wash for that bete noire of the dainty woman, a greasy skin, is made by dropping half an ounce of tincture of benzoin very slowly into half a pint of elder flower water. Apply with a soft cloth, using instead of soap and water before retiring.

The Perfect Hand.

Interviewed on the question of what the perfect hand should be like, Mr. Frederick Penberthy had some interesting information and quickly destroyed the popular belief that it is the smallest hand that is the ideal one. Apparently the ideal size is that which a six and a quarter glove will fit, and Mr. Penberthy thinks that a well shaped hand in this size looks as elegant as it is possible to look. The ideal hand must be fairly fleshy, with tapering fingers, and such a hand as this will show off a glove to the best advantage, filling out every part of it so that there is not a crease or a line to be seen. The measurement round the wrist at the first button should be five and three-quarter inches, round the knuckles at the base of the fingers six and three-quarter inches, round the hand at the ball of the thumb seven and a half inches, from the base to the top of the thumb four and three-eighths inches and from the top of the second finger to the fork three and one-eighth inches, and the other fingers in proportion. The lady who can show these measurements can safely lay claim to an ideal hand which will compare favorably with any other. —Boston Globe.

The Instinct of Hospitality.

The instinct of hospitality should be cultivated in the little people and children as well as the older boys and girls. They should occasionally be allowed to invite a friend to luncheon or tea. In the case of younger children the invitation should be a written one, as mothers often decline verbal invitations of young children, fearing the invitations are extended without the knowledge and consent of the other mamma. Of course the regular "invitation" dinners should not take the place of the nursery entertainments, the importance of which cannot be overestimated, but the custom of having the friends of the younger children as guests promotes the friendly understanding which goes for much in the way of training and takes into consideration the "bounden" rights of the youngsters whose position as members of the family in "good and regular standing" thus receive proper emphasis.

Colors as Background.

No matter how beautiful a blond or brunette may be, certain colors will offer a better background for her than others. A brunette may wear a brilliant black with satin sheen, and she of ruddy hue does well to introduce into her wardrobe white, with touches of dark violet, crimson, lilac or blue. The pale brunette will wear red and pink, and the brunette of stronger color will wear blue. Flaming orange shades are the joy of the brunette. Her blond sister revels in greens, certain yellows and black most particularly. White, if worn by her, must be touched up by brilliant red. If grays and blues are her desire she must be of brilliant complexion. The auburn haired woman must dress in brown, shading into the tones of her hair, or in rich dark green. Let her avoid the brilliant lines.

Children and the Piano.

A quarter of an hour at a time is long enough for a little child to practice on the piano. Some physicians think no children should ever be set to learn the piano before they are twelve. On the other hand, if lessons do not begin early, how are their fingers to attain the needful agility and how are they to find the time for practicing? Children have retentive memories, and learning by heart becomes easy if the habit is formed in youth. On the other hand, long hours of continuous practice are excessively bad for children and even for older persons. If the practice is limited to a quarter of an hour, with a long rest before the next practice begins, a good deal can be accomplished without risk to the young musician.

The Family Finances.

The wage earner has only himself to blame if he gives his wife no idea of how the family finances stand, but allows her to run bills for him to pay more or less grumblingly. The majority of women, given a certain definite amount to expend, soon learn to make it go much farther than a man. A man hates to be bothered with details. While the American woman has not yet equaled the French housewife in guarding against the smallest household leaks and stretching the income so as to make every penny count, she is gradually working up to it and in time will doubtless be able to give points to the housewives of other nations.

DANGER OF LIVING WITH CONSUMPTIVES.

Is real danger, because the sputum of affected persons diffuses itself itself through the air and finds lodgment in the systems of others. If exposed to consumption use fragrant healing Catarrhozone, the most efficient germicide known. No case of catarrh can withstand Catarrhozone, which cures this loathsome disease thoroughly. Cold in the head is cured in a few minutes, and bronchitis, asthma, and lung trouble are cured to stay cured if Catarrhozone is employed "I don't know any remedy so good for catarrh and bronchitis as Catarrhozone," writes N. T. Eaton, of Knowlton. "It cured me after years of suffering and saved me from consumption." Two months' treatment, $1.00; trial size 25c.

Had a Splendid Year.

The Independent Order of Foresters apparently had a splendid year during 1903. The net addition to the membership during the twelve months was 14,124. This is considerably larger than the net additions during 1902. The death rate was also lower, being only 6.43 against 6.60 in a thousand as compared with 1902. This indicates how careful this great Fraternal Society is in its selections of its risks. The enormous work which the Order did in helping widows and orphans may be understood from the fact that it paid to them during last year no less than $1,542,630.01. In sick benefits the members of the Order received $192,163.71, and totally and permanently disabled brethren received $84,719.91. Notwithstanding these large and helpful payments to the membership the Order increased its already large accumulated funds during the year by the enormous sum of $1,234,236.97. The total accumulated funds of the Order on February 1st, 1904, amounted to $7,518,852.09. The above is certainly a wonderful record. Dr. Oronhyatekha, the Supreme Chief Ranger, is certainly to be congratulated upon the results which are flowing from his labors. The total membership of the Order is now over 220,000.—Daily Mail and Empire, Toronto, Feb. 16th.

SHELLFISH LANGUAGE.

Curious Clicking Sounds Heard on the Water at Night.

Most seamen will tell of curious clicking sounds heard on calm nights at sea, and the origin of the noise seems so altogether unaccountable that it has often created some alarm among superstitious fishermen.

A distinguished naturalist made a careful study of the sounds on many occasions and found that it was not a sustained note, but made up of a multitude of tiny ones, each clear and distinct in itself and ranging from a high treble down to a bass. When the ear was applied to the gunwale of the boat the sound grew more intense, and in some places as the boat moved on it could not be heard at all.

On other occasions the sounds resembled the tolling of bells, the booming of guns and the notes of an æolian harp.

For a long time he was unable to trace the cause, but at length discovered that the sounds were made by shellfish, hundreds of them opening their shells and closing them with sharp snaps. The noise, partly muffled by the water, sounded indescribably weird. He was finally led to the conclusion that as the shellfish made the sounds they probably had some meaning and that the clicks might possibly be a warning of danger when the shallow water was disturbed by the boat.

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN

When buying clothing, beware of the man who offers you $10 and $12 suits or overcoats for $3.98 or $4.76 Then again, do not be governed too much by the marked price—look to the value, the worth, the texture, trimmings and make of the goods themselves. A comparison thus made will show conclusively that the prices we quote are lower than goods of equal worth or quality can be bought for elsewhere.

Plain Truth

Our perferences are always in strict accordance with the promise made in our "ads." We believe in the SUBLIMITY of PLAIN TRUTH. We are not in the business for purely philanthropic motives, but for the purpose of keeping our capital active, our mind and body employed, and making a few dollars for the benefit of ourselves. THE NEW VERSION.

(New York—Sun.)

A soldier of the Russians
Lay japanned at Tchrtzvkjshivitch
There was lack of woman's nursing
And other comforts which Might add to his last moment
And smooth the final way;
But a comrade stood beside him
To hear what he might say.
The japanned Russian faltered
As he took that comrade's hand,
And he said: "I never more shall see
My own, my native land.
Take a message and a token
To some distant friends of mine,
For I was born at Smnlxzrskgprxzski,
Fair Smnlxzrskgqrxzski on the Irkstrvzkimnov."

AN UNPLEASANT EXPERIENCE.

Has it ever been your unhappy lot to be told by your physician that you must go to a hospital and submit to an operation? If so, you remember with what dread and shrinking you awaited the day when you must endure the knife.

The present day surgeon appears to be possessed by a mania for operating, especially in cases of hemorrhoids or piles, and while the greater number of the profession do not recommend this "last resort" unless they honestly believe it necessary, the fact remains that much needless operating is done, and the patient put to much expense and suffering for what?

To obtain a possible temporary relief; these words are used advisedly, because in nine cases out of ten the affliction returns and the patient is just where he started from. Oft-times he could be cured much more simply and easily by the use of such a remedy as the Pyramid Pile Cure; this has come to be recognized as the best remedy on the market for the painful disease named, and the druggists now sell more of it than all other pile remedies combined.

The writer personally knows people who were afflicted with the worst form of bleeding and protruding piles and who were permanently cured by the use of Pyramid Pile Cure. In every one of these cases the attending physicians had assured the sufferer that only by an operation could he rid himself of the disease; so much for the infallibility of the doctors.

This remedy, which is sold by all druggists at the low price of fifty cents, is in suppository form, is applied directly to the parts affected, and performs its work quietly and painlessly. The Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., will mail free to any address a book telling all about piles or hemorrhoids, their cause and cure.

A suggestion is offered that if the reader is afflicted, or knows anyone who is, this book may be sent for, as it will be found invaluable.

KAISER WROTE TO CZAR

Especially on the Subject of Great Britain's Attitude.

TALK OF EUROPEAN CHANGE

Official Circles in Russia Continue to Count on Germany's Unreserved Support—Discuss Openly Grouping of Russia, France and Germany—War With Great Britain Also Talked of Without Reserve—Russians Surprised at Hay.

Paris, Feb. 19.—The Figaro this morning publishes a telegram said to be from a high Russian official and sent from the frontier, saying that Col. Von Schenck, the commander of the Emperor Alexander Regiment of the German Guards, of which the Czar is honorary colonel-in-chief, was received by the Czar on Monday and handed to His Majesty an autograph letter from Emperor William on the war in the Far East, and especially on the subject of Great Britain's attitude.

Continuing, The Figaro's informant says, official circles in Russia continue to count on Germany's unreserved support, and discuss openly the possible change of the equilibrium of Europe, which might result from the grouping together of Russia, Germany and France, taken in connection with the anti-British feeling.

The increasing possibility of war with Great Britain is discussed without reserve in Russian military circles. Rear-Admiral Rojestvenski, chief of the general staff of the navy, has said it was impossible, according to the Russian official who telegraphs The Figaro, to send to Port Arthur all the naval officers who want to go there, because they may be required in the Baltic. In conclusion, this official says the whereabouts of Viceroy Alexieff has been unknown for three days past, and that the official telegrams are received without signature.

Russia Surprised at Hay.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 19.—An official of the Government yesterday said that he was surprised Hay had closed his note without waiting for Russia's reply. He said: "There is no doubt the Government feels somewhat embarrassed by the desire of the United States to instal consuls in the open ports of Manchuria immediately. The Government does not like to be placed in the position of putting obstacles in the way, but that entire territory is now under military control and these posts would be within the sphere of the operations. Furthermore, trade is at a standstill at present, and the authorities cannot comprehend why Washington should press this matter now; none of the other powers is seeking to take immediate advantage of the privileges accorded by the Japanese treaties.

"As far as concerns Port Dalny, to which place an American commercial agent has been appointed, the situation is even worse, as it it not impossible that the military authorities will soon request all foreigners to leave there."

Baltic Fleet Stays at Home.

Copenhagen, Feb. 19.—Notwithstanding all previous circumstantial statements, it is not the intention of the Russian Government to despatch the Baltic fleet on its long journey to the Far East. On the contrary, it will be retained in northern waters, pending eventualities. In view of possible European complications, Russia feels that to denude the Baltic of all naval strength might expose her to serious peril.

Against the Jews.

London, Feb. 19.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Jewish Chronicle says the commission now sitting at St. Petersburg, charged with the revision of the laws in force against the Jews, proposes to recommend that in 10 provinces of Poland, where hitherto Jews have enjoyed unrestricted rights, these rights shall now be restricted in every respect to conform to the regulations obtaining within the "pale of settlement."

Convicts, Mutineers' Prisoners.

Guayaquil, Ecuador, Feb. 19.—About 200 laborers and convicts at Chatham, Galspagos Islands, belonging to Ecuador, recently mutinied and killed Leonardo Reina, the Governor of the islands, and several others. The mutineers also committed robberies and destroyed valuable property. The assassins fled in a schooner to Tumaco, on the coast of Colombia, where they were captured and handed over to the Ecuadorian authorities. The prisoners will arrive here to-day, and will probably be shot. A German named Hansen was the leader of the mutiny.

Looking Toward Canada.

New York, Feb. 19.—At the meeting of the Newspaper Publishers' Association yesterday, it was urged that Congress should be asked for free paper and free pulp. It was said that fully 50 per cent. of the pulpwood is now drawn from Canada, and the paper business has passed beyond the protective period. "With the tariff out of the way, capital could safely invest in Canada and give us our paper at living prices," said one delegate.

Preferences to Canada.

London, Feb. 19.—(C. A. P.)—The Governor of British Guiana announces that a 10 per cent. remission of duties in favor of Britain and Canada has been granted, costing the revenue of the colony $38,000 and $5,400 respectively.

King to Roberts.

London, Feb. 19.—A special army order was issued last evening in which King Edward in highly eulogistic language takes leave of Lord Roberts as Commander-in-Chief of the Army.

SKIN AND BLOOD PURIFICATION

Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Resolvent

Cleanse the Skin, Scalp and Blood

Of Torturing, Disfiguring Humours with Loss of Hair

WHEN ALL ELSE FAILS

Thousands of the world's best people have found instant relief and speedy cure by the use of Cuticura Resolvent, Ointment and Soap in the most torturing and disfiguring of itching, burning and scaly humours, eczemas, rashes, itchings and inflammations.

Thousands of tired, fretted mothers, of skin-tortured and disfigured babies, of all ages and conditions, have certified to almost miraculous cures by the Cuticura remedies when the best medical skill had failed to relieve, much less cure.

Cuticura Treatment is local and constitutional — complete and perfect, pure, sweet and wholesome. Bathe the affected surfaces with Cuticura Soap and hot water to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle, dry without hard rubbing, and apply Cuticura Ointment freely to allay itching, irritation and inflammation, and soothe and heal, and lastly take Cuticura Resolvent to cool and cleanse the blood, and put every function in a state of healthy activity.

More great cures of simple, scrofulous and hereditary humours are daily made by Cuticura remedies than by all other blood and skin remedies combined, a single set being often sufficient to cure the most distressing cases when all else fails.

Cuticura Resolvent, liquid and in the form of Chocolate Coated Pills, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap are sold throughout the world. Depots: London, 27 Charterhouse Sq.; Paris, 5 Rue de la Paix; Australia, R. Towns & Co., Sydney; Boston, 137 Columbus Ave. Potter Drug & Chemical Corp., Sole Proprietors. THE YELLOW MAN.

A THRILLING STORY OF THE BOXERS IN CHINA

BY CARLTON DAWE.

Copyright, 1900,
By Paul R. Reynolds.

strange thoughts kept me company, and I have a vivid recollection of repeating over and over to myself, keeping time, as it were, with the crunch of the wheels and the movement of the pedals, snatches of that ballad which tells how Horatius kept the bridge in the brave days of old, my favorite stanza beginning:

> He reeled, and on Herminius
> He leant one breathing space,
> Then, like a wildcat mad with wounds,
> Sprang straight at Astur's face.

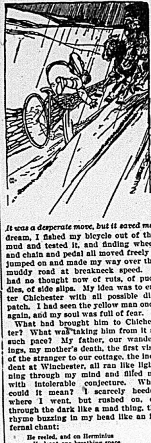
I suppose most people have experienced something akin to this. It was quite a common thing for me to find a verse of poetry running through my head while my mind was deeply engrossed with other matters.

In this manner I carefully pursued my way, of necessity going slowly, until I came within a mile and a half of Chichester. Then I began to breathe freely. The way had seemed never ending, the miles multiplied by three, but gradually I had reeled them off, and I was beginning to dream of home and warm food and clothing, when a turn in the road disclosed the lamps of a carriage. I saw by a glance that it was coming swiftly and somewhat erratically, and I at once took my proper side of the road. Fortunately my lamp was burning brightly, so that I had no fear of being run down—that is, supposing that the driver was neither mad nor drunk.

Presently the clatter of hoofs proclaimed that the horses were coming at a gallop, and I edged over still nearer to the gutter, not that I had the least fear of being run down, but the bicycle, being the weaker vessel, always goes to the wall. However, the advancing carriage, much to my dismay, instead of drawing aside, came toward me, and instantly I realized my immediate danger. I shouted, but my voice was unheeded or was drowned in the clatter of hoofs, the noise of the wheels. Instant annihilation seemed mine. There was no way of escaping that dreadful rush. The great eyes of the carriage glared into mine. I saw the figure of a man rise up, and I heard the crack of the whip as he lashed the horses onward. Then when it seemed as though the maddened animals must bear me down, when I almost fancied I could see the hoofs raised to batter out my brains, I suddenly swerved to the left, drove hard on the pedals and found myself flying headforemost into the ditch.

It was a desperate move, but it saved me. A few moments later the carriage thundered over the very spot which I had so precipitately vacated, and as it dashed by I caught the momentary glimpse of a man as he leaned forward in the glare of the lamp. It was but a glance, inconceivably rapid, but rapid as it was it enabled me to distinguish the outline of the face. It was the yellow man with the strange eyes!

Fortunately for me the occupant or occupants of the carriage, which vehicle was of the phaeton order, did not wait to see what damage they had done, so, bruised and shaking with cold and excitement, I dragged myself out of the ditch and listened—listened until the sound of the hoofs died away in the distance. Then, like one in a dream, I fished my bicycle out of the mud and tested it, and finding wheel and chain and pedal all moved freely I jumped on and made my way over the muddy road at breakneck speed. I had no thought now of ruts, of puddles, of side slips. My idea was to enter Chichester with all possible dispatch. I had seen the yellow man once again, and my soul was full of fear.



It was a desperate move, but it saved me.

What had brought him to Chichester? What was taking him from it at such pace? My father, our wanderings, my mother's death, the first visit of the stranger to our cottage, the incident at Winchester, all ran like lightning through my mind and filled me with intolerable conjecture. What could it mean? I scarcely heeded where I went, but rushed on, on through the dark like a mad thing, the rhyme buzzing in my head like an infernal chant:

> He reeled, and on Herminius
> He leant one breathing space,
> Then, like a wildcat mad with wounds,
> Sprang straight at Astur's face.

CHAPTER X.

CAPTAIN KINGSTON SETS SAIL FOR FOREIGN PARTS.

Reaching Chichester without further mishap, I at length drew up before the door of our hotel, the windows of which were in complete darkness. The good folk had evidently retired for the night, but a clamorous ringing of the bell soon brought a sleepy servant on the scene. Pushing by him, I left the dripping machine in the hall and flew impatiently toward the stairs, up which I stumbled in the darkness. But having trodden them so often I knew, as it were, every stair by heart, and in a few moments I was vainly endeavoring to turn the handle of our room, for, as I have already said, we always used one room when it was impossible to get two which were connected by a door.

I next knocked loudly and, waiting, knocked again. Then impetuously I shook the handle, the rattle resounding through the quiet house. But still no answer. "Father! Father!" I whispered through the keyhole, but I might as well have spoken to the air. No sound, no movement. The ominous stillness set me shivering painfully. My wet clothes clung icily to my limbs. My body was frozen, but my brain burned like fire.

Fearing that something was amiss and acting upon a sudden impulse, I hurled myself violently against the door, and the lock gave way. For a moment I stood upon the threshold and called to my father once more, but receiving no reply I made my way through the dark to the mantelpiece, where I knew I should find the candle and matches. Striking one, I instinctively turned toward his bed, and in the dim light created by the match I distinctly traced the outline of his figure there. I called again, "Father!" but he did not move. Tremblingly I applied the flame to the candle and then turned to make a closer investigation.

He lay perfectly still, entirely enveloped in the bedclothes, and for a little while I stood staring at him, not having the courage to lift the sheet from his face. But the sound of footsteps in the passage outside suddenly recalled me to my senses, and with a desperate movement I flung back the covering.

At first a horrid mist seemed to blur my sight; but, quickly passing, it showed me a deathly pale face with wide, distorted eyes and a brow seared with the purple sign of the egg. It was the same sign as that which I had seen upon my mother's forehead.

With a cry of horror I turned aside and confronted the landlord, who, candle in hand, had come to investigate the meaning of the noise caused by my breaking down the door.

He began to splutter, as a landlord naturally would, but my ghastly face arrested the outburst.

"God in heaven!" he cried. "Have you seen a ghost?"

I beckoned for him to advance, and he came cautiously toward me.

"My father," I gasped, "my father has been murdered. Look!" and I held the light over the pale face and showed the projecting eyes and the livid sign.

"Murdered!" he echoed. "Good God!" And to make sure he came close, quite close, and bent over the body and touched the pale, cold face. The icy contact made him shiver. He stepped back with an involuntary cry.

"This is awful," he continued. "When could it have occurred? I saw him off to bed myself at half past 9. He was very worried about you and thought of sending to the police, but I guessed it was the rain that caused the delay, and so I soothed him. Half an hour later he rang to know if you had yet returned. Then he troubled us no more."

I looked long into the ghastly face, scarcely heeding the moanings of the landlord, though I seemed to hear as through the noise of the surf roaring afar off his whining of the misfortune that had befallen his house. But I could now look on the face and think despite the awful coldness which enveloped me, the deadly weight about the heart, and some mention of "suicide" in the landlord's lamentations caused me to loosen the collar of the dead man, and I saw that his neck was encircled by a ghastly purple line, and I thought that the fumes of ether or chloroform rose from his beard.

The landlord saw and realized. He, too, smelled the heavy, sickly odor of the anæsthetic, and in a dull way he continued to call upon the Deity. Like most godless wretches, the name of God was always on his tongue. And so he wrung his hands and continued to ask blankly what he should do.

"The police must be communicated with at once," I said, "though they will never lay their hands on the man who did this."

"Why do you say that?"

"Because I know him."

"You know him?" The landlord opened his eyes—a wide, incredulous look.

"Well, I saw him tonight. He is a dark faced, foreign looking man of medium build, with black hair and strange little slits of eyes."

"Heavens!" cried the landlord once again, and his florid face turned pale, and his dull eyes seemed to start from their sockets. "That is an exact description of the stranger in 22."

"He came"—

"Tonight—about 10 o'clock. He went direct to his room. I was to call him early, as he was going up to London."

"There will be no necessity to call him. He has gone already."

No. 22 was the next room to ours, and though the landlord instantly ran and knocked upon the door no reply was vouchsafed. He turned the handle only to find the door locked. Then he came toward me, and the candle that he held shook ominously.

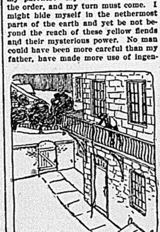
"He is gone!" he whispered. "Good heavens, what a go!"

I turned to the window, he at my heels, for I verily believe he was afraid of the dead man lying there on the bed, and found exactly what I expected. It had been opened, and though duly closed with a care which showed the cool callousness of the murderer it told its own tale. Despite my father's wanderings and his precaution the enemy had trapped him at last.

Our room was on the first floor, overlooking the back of the premises, and the window above mentioned led on to a small balcony which encircled the rear of the building. Passing out upon this structure, I immediately made for the window of No. 22. As I firmly anticipated, it was open, but the stranger was not in his room, nor was there any sign of him save for the portmanteau, which upon examination was found to contain nothing more valuable than a couple of pairs of wornout boots and a piece of linen which looked like the part of a shirt. This upon a closer examination was found to retain an odor of the anæsthetic.

Dangling from the balcony was a rope, which told its own tale. To open the gate of the back yard was evidently an easy task for the murderer. When examined in the daylight, the lock showed no suggestion of rough usage.

I shivered with dread as I contemplated the future. How could I hope to avoid the fate which had overtaken my parents? My extermination was the order, and my turn must come. I might hide myself in the nethermost parts of the earth and yet be not beyond the reach of these yellow fiends and their mysterious power. No man could have been more careful than my father, have made more use of ingenious subterfuge or the wiles of intelligence, and yet he had succeeded in eluding his enemy but for a few years. What more had I to hope? A haunted life with never a moment free of the shadow of the Terror and then defeat at last. Truly there seemed no peace for me this side the grave, and I felt so despondent that I cared not how soon the end came.



Dangling from the balcony was a rope which told its own tale.

But with the morning I regained some courage, though the day broke gray and dull and with a coldness that touched my heart. As soon as the office opened I telegraphed to my uncle at his lawyer's, for he, fearing that I might want him some day, had left instructions to that effect. But instead of returning to the hotel, which I almost dreaded to enter, I wandered about the streets until I thought there was time to get a reply. Then I went back, but it was not until another hour had elapsed that the message came for me. Imagine my despair upon a perusal of it. It was from the lawyer, Mr. Waring, and ran thus: "Your uncle is abroad. Brussels, I think. Will wire."

CHAPTER XI.

EASTCHEAP, E. C.

It is not a part of my plan to enter into the police details of this outrage, nor is it necessary to say that the crime created a profound sensation throughout the country, especial interest attaching to the strange story I had to tell. Many people, however, believed that my father was a madman and that he had done away with himself. But on this point I need not dilate. The coroner's jury pronounced a verdict against some person or persons unknown, and another mystery was added to many.

Mr. Waring, who had previously received full instructions from my uncle to attend to any communication I might make, came down to Chichester, bringing with him a telegram he had received from Brussels which said that my uncle had gone to the Ardennes, but that he was expected back every day. Fortunately Mr. Waring proved a sympathetic and amiable gentleman, and he undertook all the business in connection with this sad affair. Then that evening a telegram came from my uncle, and on the following day he arrived at Chichester.

My joy at seeing him was so great that I made no attempt to control my feelings, and though, like most young fellows of my age, I already imagined that I was a man I could not resist the impulse to throw myself in his arms. He was much affected by the undoubted genuineness of my greeting, and his honest blue eyes grew as soft as a girl's. Wringing my hand again and again, he kept murmuring: "Poor lad! Poor lad!" and other words, which betokened a deep sorrow and affection. Then I led him to my room, not the one of the tragedy—I had quitted that—and we talked together of the crime and of the circumstances which led to it. And I gave him a brief outline of our wanderings, and the narrative wrought a great impression upon him.

"I, too, have been a wanderer," he said, "but instead of avoiding the enemy I have sought him everywhere. So far he has eluded me, but we shall meet one day." His blue eyes grew hard as death. The easy going, retired stockbroker had become a desperately determined man. "We have an account to settle with this man, Davie, and we must not forget it."

For myself that is just what I should like to have done. Though his advent revived somewhat my drooping courage, I had a wholesome dread of this yellow man with his mysterious ways. The thought of him filled me with horror. Open enmity seemed natural enough, a fight by daylight was a thing to which my nature rather inclined, but this awful underhand cunning, this stabbing in the back, frightened me.

"But now," said I, "surely, surely he is content."

My uncle shook his head.

"Perhaps, but I doubt it. These people pursue a vendetta to the end. They are not content with revenge on the culprit. They exterminate the brood. What your father did to bring this curse upon himself and his family I know not, but of one thing I am certain. It will not end with him."

"Will there never be an end to this horrid state of suspense?"

"Yes," he said; "one day."

I did not like the gloomy look on his face, the gloomy utterance. Nevertheless it sent a throb pulsating through my fear and set the blood coursing desperately.

"Can we do nothing? Is there no way of putting an end to this doubt?"

"There is but one way," he said, "and only one. Instead of being hunted we must turn hunters. I have tried and failed, possibly because I do not know the man. You, on the contrary, are sure of him. Together we may accomplish what I singly have found impossible. Prudence might counsel a policy of noninterference. You know the adage of the wisdom of letting sleeping dogs lie? But is this a sleeping dog or will he sleep now that he has accomplished his object?"

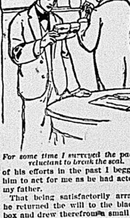
How could I say? To me this yellow man was the very incarnation of mysterious and awful death, and I feared him as one fears a mystery which defies solution. Child of the night, clothed in the parent shroud, he stole secretly from the four corners of the earth, and no man might say whence he came or whither he went. If it was his intention still to pursue his revenge, I feared that the earth was not big enough to hide me. For I had learned to fear his power and dread his vengeance, and I no longer believed that it was possible to escape his awful vigilance.

After the funeral we left for London and lived at his old rooms in Dover street, Piccadilly, neglecting, I need scarcely say, no precaution which would insure us against the attacks of our mysterious assailant. Then I wrote to my father's lawyers, Messrs. Martin & Smith of Eastcheap, acquainting them with his death and of my arrival in town, and the next morning I received an answer expressing the hope that I would call upon them at my earliest convenience, as they had something of importance to communicate. Therefore after breakfast my uncle and I set out for the city and upon our arrival there were immediately ushered into Mr. Martin's private room.

The senior partner of the firm was a sleek, amiable looking gentleman with a lofty brow accentuated by a sparseness of hair. He received us with an extreme affability, and after sundry well chosen expressions of grief conveyed with excellent tact and feeling we proceeded to business, as they say.

First of all he extracted my father's will from a black tin box which bore the initials "R. K." This was very brief and to the point and bore a codicil dated some six months previously which accused me of being the possessor of every filial virtue. Consequently I became the sole heir of the aforementioned Robert Kingston, some time master mariner, and the possessor of a snug income of a few hundred a year. For that was what it all meant when stripped of its legal verbiage and the erudite explanations of the excellent Mr. Martin.

I in turn thanked him very cordially and, I hope, with becoming dignity and there and then arranged that he should dine with us on the following evening, and further to show my appreciation of his efforts in the past I begged of him to act for me as he had acted for my father.



For some time I surveyed the package, reluctant to break the seal.

That being satisfactorily arranged, he returned the will to the black tin box and drew therefrom a small package.

"This, Mr. Kingston," he said, balancing the parcel in his sleek, white hands, "was sent to us by your father some six or seven months ago with the intimation that we should hold it during his lifetime, but that if any unforeseen contingency occurred we were to deliver it into your hands. Therefore I have much pleasure in complying with his last request."

In his gravely pompous fashion he handed me the parcel, which was wrapped in stout brown paper plentifully sealed with blue wax. On the face was written in a somewhat shaky hand: "To my son, Davie Kingston. To be opened after my death. In the case of his death to be destroyed."

The lawyer went on with his explanations:

"The letter that accompanied this was very precise in its tone. I was to guard the package strictly and by no chance let it fall into the hands of a third person. It was, he said, a communication intended for his son only, and in the event of your death I was to return it to him if he were alive; if not, I myself was to destroy it intact. I need scarcely say, Mr. Kingrton, that your father reposed the utmost confidence in me."

"Not without good reason, I am sure," said my uncle graciously.

Mr. Martin bowed.

"We make a point of setting our clients' interest before aught else," said he. "Unhappily I am in the unfortunate position of having to hand this over so soon. However, I have done my duty, and I sincerely trust the packet may contain nothing but what will prove eminently agreeable."

Thanking him again, we took our leave, I bearing the mysterious package under my arm. At the door we hailed a hansom and after making a couple of business calls turned westward.

"Now," said my uncle, "we shall see what the old man has got to say."

I held the parcel before me and looked again and again at the superscription, "To my son, Davie Kingston." Here probably was the explanation I had sought for two long weary years. This was the key which would open the lock of the mystery of his life. No wonder I regarded it with some apprehension, though even the worst he had to tell could not exceed many of my vivid imaginings.

When our cab pulled up at the house in Dover street, I sprang quickly from it, opened the door and was half way up the stairs before I heard my uncle close the door behind him. However, he was no less eager than I, and he came up after me in double quick time. But first we took the precaution of locking the door, then of examining our sleeping rooms beyond. The investigation proving satisfactory, he returned to me and taking up the parcel from the table on which I had thrown it subjected it to a close scrutiny.

"It's manuscript, Davie," he said. "The old man has a story to tell, a strange one, I have no doubt, a terrible one perhaps. But we may as well know it. And remember—he's dead." He handed it to me, then turned to the mantelpiece and began to fill his pipe from a stone jar.

For some time I surveyed the package, reluctant to break the seal, for I had my doubts as to the wisdom of acquiring the knowledge here contained. I had seen enough of my father to gain an inkling of his past. I had never been too proud of him. Would this lessen that pride? I almost wished that he had not left me this heritage. If he had nothing good to tell, why break the silence? And yet even against himself for my benefit he might be about to speak. Looking over the package, I saw my uncle comfortably seated in an armchair, apparently waiting for me to begin, so without more ado I broke the seals.

The outer covering of brown paper being removed disclosed another wrapping which bore the same superscription in the same shaky hand and was likewise sealed in an exactly similar manner. This I also opened, now keenly eager to unravel the mystery, and a roll of paper disclosed to the view. Opening it rather excitedly, I saw at once that it comprised the sheets of an autobiography.

"Well?" said my uncle.

"It is what we thought, a clearing up of the mystery."

I handed it to him, and he began slowly to turn the pages.

"What an execrable hand!" he exclaimed. "Can you read it?"

"Easily."

He handed it back to me and with a shake of his head relit his pipe.

"Then fire away. Perhaps we shall get something to work upon at last."

I sat myself just opposite him and after a preliminary clearing of the throat began.

CHAPTER XII.

THE SOCIETY OF THE HIDDEN MEANING.

"Feeling the hand of God and man against me and knowing not at what moment I shall fall a victim to the machinations of my enemies, I think I owe you, my son, some explanation of my strange manner of living and of the apparent desertion of your mother. And there is still another reason which personally concerns you and of which you shall read further on. For as I fall so shall the nearest and dearest to me, until there is not one left who bears my name. So runs the law which you have already exemplified so bitterly, which you shall see again, which you, too, shall suffer, unless you kill Kung!

"I need not here enter into a detailed description of my various voyages, for, as you know, I have spent most of my days in the China seas, but what you may not know is that I lived in China for many years before I knew your mother, that I spoke the language like a native, that in short for some time I lived the life of a native. Not a thing to be proud of, eh? Well, no; neither am I. But when a man has voyaged so far he looks back complacently enough on the dirty weather through which he has sailed. Not that dirty weather is

Accept My Help and Get Well

Without the Risk of a Penny.

You can secure the utmost that medicine can do by simply writing a postal card.

All I ask is your name and address, and to know the book you need. I will arrange with a druggist near you so that you may take six bottles of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. You may take it a month at my risk. If it succeeds the cost is $5.50. If it fails I will pay the druggist myself. And the sick one's mere word shall decide it.

You must realize that this offer would be impossible if I did not know that my Restorative will cure. A man doesn't take a risk involving $5.50, and with hundreds of thousands of people, without knowing what a remedy will do.

I spent a lifetime in perfecting my Restorative before such an offer was possible. I tested it thousands of times, in hospitals and homes, in cases as difficult as physicians ever meet.

Then I let the world know of it upon terms so fair that no reasonable sick one could neglect it. And 550,000 people have accepted that offer and 39 out of each 40 have paid gladly, because they got well.

My success comes from strengthening the inside nerves. My Restorative brings back this power which alone operates the vital organs.

The common way is to doctor the weak organ itself, and many of you know how temporary are the results. I give the weak organ power to do its duty, and the results are not only sure but enduring.

In little troubles my Restorative is the quickest help. In difficult troubles it is usually the only way to a cure.

Simply state which book you want and address Dr. Shoop, Box 69, Racine, Wis.

THEY DROVE PIMPLES AWAY.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

The biggest brave does not always make the best chief.

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

Sleeplessness.—When the nerves are unstrung and the whole body given up to wretchedness, when the mind is filled with gloom and dismal forebodings, the result of derangement of the digestive organs, sleeplessness comes to add to the distress. If only the subject could sleep, there would be the oblivion for a while and temporary relief. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will not only induce sleep, but will act so beneficially that the subject will wake refreshed and restored to happiness.

No prayer ever failed to be heard because it was too short.

A WONDERFUL CURE.—Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly to cure the sore but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle and when I had used about one-half, the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done, it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and had used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using 3 bottles of the Vegetable Discovery, the billiousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am [illegible] years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

THE PUBLIC should bear in mind that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has nothing in common with the impure, deteriorating class of so-called medicinal oils. It is eminently pure and really efficacious—relieving pain and lameness, stiffness of the joints and muscles, and sores or hurts, besides being an excellent specific for rheumatism, coughs and bronchial complaints.

Seven hundred British subjects are yearly born at sea.

These two desirable qualifications, pleasant to the taste and at the same time effectual, are to be found in Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator. Children like it.

Much talk, many lies.

To get relief from indigestion, biliousness, constipation or torpid liver without disturbing the stomach or purging the bowels, take a few doses of Carter's Little Liver Pills, they will please you.

The average watch represents but 12 hours of human labor.

They make one feel as though life was worth living. Take one of Carter's Little Liver Pills after eating; it will relieve dyspepsia, aid digestion, give tone and vigor to the system.

On occasion knowing what one wants is as difficult as getting it.

That tired, languid feeling and dull headache is very disagreeable. Take two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring, and you will find relief. They never fail to do good.

Nothing so suddenly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their afflictions from a neglected [illegible] the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state.

Have you tried Holloway's Corn Cure? It has no equal for removing these troublesome excrescences, as many have testified who have tried it.

DISARMING THE GODS.

How Chinese, Japanese and Hindoo Boys Prepare For School Life.

Among the eastern nations the beginning of school life is a critical time for the child. The priest or astrologer must be consulted to choose a lucky day. Every precaution must be taken to avert the jealousy of the gods, whose malice is especially directed against a fine boy.

The Chinese father who adores his son will take the utmost pains to convince the powers of the air that the boy is of no account. The child may be given a despicable name, like flea or chutze, a pig, or, more insulting still, he may be given a girl's name. The boy may be started off to school wearing a girl's dress and one earring, and if the deception is complete this will be the most effectual of all, for even the gods do not care for girls in China.

The Japanese schoolboy wears hanging from his belt a little red bag containing a brass tag with his name and his parents' name and address upon it. He must have his paper umbrella and his fan, and in a gray bag upon his arm is a jar of rice for his luncheon. This quaint little fellow has probably made his offering at his own private shrine to Tenjinsen, the god of penmanship.

When the Hindoo boy has found an auspicious day to begin school he is taken to the god of learning, Sarasvati. Here the little supplicant presents his offerings of rice and betel nuts and repeats the letters of the alphabet after the priest. Thus he is entered into the ways of knowledge in the very presence of the god.

OMNIVOROUS MAN.

Reptiles Are Eaten With Eagerness All Over the World.

Reptiles are eaten with eagerness all over the world. Neither want of beauty nor abundance of venom protects them from omnivorous man. Although they suggest to us by form and motion all that is false and unfair, hideous and horrid, even God's curse of the serpent does not shield it, and from the humble frog of the pond to the colossal crocodile of Egypt they are all only so much food for men. Old Mexicans loved the speckled salamander and ate it with Spanish pepper. The Spaniards learned the odd fashion, and the habit has not entirely died out. Vipers are a favorite dish with Italians. The lizards of this continent are a most delicate dish, and the iguanas of the Antilles were carried to South Carolina in great numbers, the rice fields of that state being well suited to them.

Snakes find a ready market in many eastern countries. The giant of Java, which infests the pepper plantations and whose venom is fatal, is a favorite. The huge boa constrictor furnishes an exceedingly fat meat, and the negroes of its native country prefer it to the daintiest food of the white man. The anaconda of Brazil supplies the table of the poor, though the Portuguese use only the rich fat it produces. South American natives eat almost every kind of snake, and the far west has taught many a fastidious palate from over the sea to relish the fatal rattlesnake of our own country. Snake eating is more common in the United States than one would imagine.

How the Indians Dun.

We have all heard the phrase, "After him with a sharp stick," but it may not have occurred to many of us that the stick referred to is the much feared yearly January bill. Such, however, is the meaning that the saying conveys to the Nushinan Indians of California, who have seen the disagreeable habit prevalent among us of sending gifts. When one Indian owes another, it is considered bad taste for the creditor to dun the debtor. He proceeds with more delicacy. He procures a certain number of sticks, according to the amount of the debt, and paints a ring around the end of each. These he carries and tosses into the debtor's wigwam and then goes away without a word. The debtor invariably pays the debt and destroys the sticks, as it is considered a reproach to have the January dunning stick thrown into the wigwam. Indeed the creditor never uses them except with hard customers.

Cliff of Natural Glass.

A cliff of natural glass can be seen in Yellowstone park, Wyoming. It is half a mile long and from 150 to 200 feet high, the material of which it consists being as good glass as that artificially manufactured. The dense glass which forms the base is from 75 to 100 feet thick, while the upper portion, having suffered and survived many ages of wind and rain, has naturally worn much thinner. Of course the color of the cliff is not that of natural glass—transparent and white—but is mostly black and in some places mottled and streaked with brownish red and shades of olive green and brown.

The Tomb of David.

The tomb of David, king of Israel, is still pointed out to travelers in Palestine and, despite its age, is in a remarkably good state of preservation. David died in 1015 B. C. and was buried in the "city of David." His tomb became the sepulcher of several subsequent kings and one of the sacred places of the kingdom. It stands on Mount Zion, at Jerusalem, just outside of the city wall.

STOLEN BANK BILLS.

PART OF THE PROCEEDS OF THE FAMOUS NAPANEE ROBBERY NOW CIRCULATING IN HAMILTON.

Hamilton, Feb. 17.—Several $10 Dominion Bank bills, numbered from 46,000 to 47,000, series A, dated 2nd January, 1888, are in circulation in Hamilton just now, and citizens are warned that they are not negotiable. These bills are part of the proceeds of the famous Napanee bank robbery, which formed the subject of several interesting criminal prosecutions, but was never satisfactorily cleared up. It is understood that at the time of the robbery these bills were not complete, one signature being lacking, but this defect of course had been repaired before the notes got into circulation.

How it comes that a number of them have turned up just now in Hamilton is explained thus: A few days ago there was a cocking main in or near Buffalo, and among those present and participating were some Napanee sports. Several hundred dollars changed hands on the main, and advantage was taken of the opportunity to unload some of these bills on the backers of the Buffalo birds. Incidentally, a few of them found their way into the pockets of Hamilton spectators of the affair, and it was not until the banks here began to take them in that their defects were discovered.

It should be noted that all $10 Dominion Bank bills of the numbers given are not bad, but only those of the date mentioned. There is a series of good notes of those numbers, but of a different date. The Dominion Bank is said to have offered a reward of $2000 for the return of the stolen package, and if it would pay proportionately for any part of it, the bills would be worth twenty cents on the dollar.

THE SMALLPOX QUESTION.

Any intelligent physician will admit that you don't catch smallpox because some one else has it, but because your condition favors it. Low vitality always encourages sickness and at this season especially every one should take Ferrozone, which destroys disease germs and makes the system so strong and healthy that sickness can't exist. Ferrozone is a vitalizing tonic that makes rich, red blood, builds up the nerves, cures nervousness and drives away tired languid feelings. To get strong and keep strong use Ferrozone; it assures health and costs but 50c at all druggists.

THE MODERN NOTE.

It Is Not Sentiment, but Bravery With a Dash of Humor.

According to the modern notion, a man should be something of an artist in life. He should at least appear to play his part easily, with dash and gusto, like the acrobat who performs each dangerous feat smiling. This is la panache, the feather in the cap of courage—bravery with humor added. It is the spirit in which Lungtungpen was taken, in which Cyrano composed his ballade while he fought a duel, for Cyrano and Alan Breck, no less than Mulvaney and Sherlock Holmes, are very modern heroes.

Stevenson's whole life was one long devotion to this ideal. He carried his ill health and penury bravely and wittily into far corners of the earth through many strange adventures. As he wrote to William Archer: "The medicine bottles on my chimney and the blood on my handkerchief are accidents. They do not exist in my prospect."

The melodramatic gloom of Byron, the lachrymose pathos of Dickens and the shallow sentimentality of Thackeray touch the source of our tears less surely than the sheer gay heartedness and courage in the face of disease, difficulty or danger. This is the modern note. A clever woman told me that every young man of her acquaintance when he reached a certain degree of intimacy, quoted these lines of Henley's:

> Under the bludgeonings of chance
> My head is bloody, but unbowed.

—Claude Bragdon in Reader.

THE KANGAROO'S STORY.

Why the Does Throw Their Young Away When Hard Pressed.

"I have heard that men folk in their blindness deem our does to be lacking in the proper instincts of maternity because they have found that a doe kangaroo when hunted will throw away its offspring to save its own skin by hastening its speed. This," says Old Man Jack in the "Autobiography of an Australian Kangaroo" in Pearson's Magazine, "is simply scandalous and foolish.

"Men people are evidently not aware that our youngsters use the mother's pouch almost up to the age of maturity. Would they have our does attempt to fly—from dogs and men and horses with youngsters weighing nearly fifty pounds in their pouches? The thing would be impossible.

"Among us a mother is taught to toss her youngsters to a place of safety when she is hard pressed. If she could not throw it to a place far safer in the circumstances than her own pouch she would turn at bay with it and face any odds.

"In the case of my mother, when we were chased, and sure as the hunt became dangerous she would pause, draw me out of her pouch, throw me carefully into long scrub on her right, then turn sharply to her left, pause again until the hounds had seen her and then be off like the wind straight away from me."

WAYS OF THE MAGPIE.

The Bird Is Sociable, Secretive and Full of Mischief.

The magpie has the same sort of sociability, the same secretiveness, the same thirst for education—of a certain kind—the same inherent and ineradicable love of mischief as has that very versatile bird the raven. Not that in intellect and strength of character she is in any way equal to the raven. Fun she has in abundance, but hardly humor. Conscious humor, that high and rare gift of man which interpenetrates and colors everything in life, is, I think, possessed in germ by the raven and the raven alone. You see it in his eye, in the pose of his head, in his walk, in every movement of his body. The eye of the magpie is, like the wit of Dickens, always on the move, nervous, excitable, glittering, scintillating. The eye of the raven is like the humor of Goldsmith. It has a faraway look, it dreams, it thinks, "it bodes and it bodes," it all but smiles. The magpie [illegible] tences, and the old superstition that she will only talk or talk well if her tongue is slit with a thin and sharp silver sixpence died a natural death about the time that the coins of the realm had to be "milled" and so were rendered unsuitable for so stupidly cruel an operation.—R. Bosworth Smith in Nineteenth Century.

Servants In Germany.

It is difficult in Germany for a professional rogue to enter a family as a domestic servant. There every servant has a character book, in which the mistress must enter the dates of the coming and leaving of the servant, with her character while in service. This the girl is obliged to take to the nearest police station and have it dated with the official stamp, thus preventing the manufacture of bogus recommen- [illegible]

Tom—I've been bidden to her wedding, but I'm not going.

Dick—But your absence will surely be noticed. Do you think you can afford that?

Tom—Well, when you can't afford to have your presents noticed your absence is imperative.

Where It Should Begin.

"But why do you have your hero marry in the first chapter?" they asked. "Because," replied the author, "it has always seemed absurd to me to end a novel just where a man's troubles really begin. That's where you should begin the story."

When a man tells you that all women are delusions and snares, it's doughnuts to fudge he has been snared by a delusion.—Cooking Club.

THE COLOMBIANS.

They Are Hospitable People and Like Good Living.

The Colombians are a hospitable people and receive strangers cordially. It is customary for a stranger to send cards to those whose acquaintance he desires, and etiquette demands that the recipients of the cards call within a few days.

The dining tables of the rich are spread with fine linen and set with handsome cut glass and china. Among their beverages, in addition to wines, are cebada, barley water; orchada, which contains almond juice and sugar; agrass, the juice of unripe grapes; naranjada, orangeade and a preparation of chocolate thick as gruel. A dish for invalids is sopa de pan. A raw egg is broken upon a slice of toast, and a beef broth is poured over it. A breakfast often consists of several courses—for instance, fruit, poached eggs, with stewed tomatoes and rice; fish, chops fried in eggs and herbs and a tortilla con seso, brain omelet, sweet potatoes or other vegetable and coffee. Saffron is a favorite flavoring for soup. Chicken or game pies contain a variety of vegetables, hard boiled eggs and other ingredients. A common dish among the poor is a stew called sin coche. Another standby is rice and red beans. Rice cooked in lard, with a little tassado (dried beef) for a relish, is a tidbit among the lower classes. The flesh of the iguana, a species of land lizard, is regarded as a delicacy and is said to resemble chicken. The natives slit the sides of living female iguanas and take from them strings of eggs as large as plums. They hang these eggs in the sun and dry them for future consumption.

ACTING WITHOUT ORDERS.

General Grant's Tribute to General Sheridan's Judgment.

Senator Hoar in his "Reminiscences" says that at a dinner where General Grant and other distinguished men were present Commodore Alden remarked that there was nothing he disliked more than a subordinate who always obeyed orders. "What is that you are saying, commodore?" said President Grant across the table. The commodore repeated what he had said. "There is a good deal of truth in what you say," said General Grant. "One of the virtues of General Sheridan was that he knew when to act without orders. Just before the surrender of Lee, General Sheridan captured some dispatches, from which he learned that Lee had ordered his supplies to a certain place. I was on the other side of the river, where he could get no communication from me until the next morning. General Sheridan pushed on at once without orders, got to the place fifteen minutes before the enemy and captured the supplies. After the surrender was concluded the first thing General Lee asked me for was rations for his men. I issued to them the same provisions which Sheridan had captured. Now, if Sheridan, as most men would have done, had waited for orders from me Lee would have got off." Senator Hoar adds [illegible] "I listened with wonder at the generous modesty which, before that brilliant company, could remove one of the brightest laurels from his brow and place it on the brow of Sheridan."

Stars by Daylight.

It is worthy of remark that but for the brightness of the sky the stars could be seen in daylight. Even as matters stand, some of the brighter of them have been seen after sunrise by explorers on high mountains, where the air is very clear and the sky dark blue. If we could go above the atmosphere the sky would appear perfectly black, and stars would be visible right close up to the sun. Astronomers observe bright stars in daytime by using long focus telescopes, the dark tubes of which cut off the side light, and persons in the bottom of deep wells have noticed stars passing overhead, the side light being reduced by the great depths of the wells.—T. J. J. See in Atlantic.

The Cough is Your Warning.

THAT THE LUNGS ARE IN DANGER—GUARD THEM BY USING DR. CHASE'S SYRUP OF LINSEED AND TURPENTINE.

The usual course of a cold is from head to throat and thence along the bronchial tubes to the lungs.

The cough is the warning that bids you guard the lungs.

Once the cough gets dry and tight, once it hurts to cough, once there is soreness in the chest and lungs danger is near and the ailment serious.

Remember that pneumonia, consumption and other lung troubles are always the result of neglected colds.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has won its place as leader in the front rank of throat and lung treatments because it can be relied on to prevent and cure serious diseases.

Its far reaching action on the whole system, its healing, soothing influence on the bronchial tubes and lungs have made it the most popular because the most effective remedy obtainable.

Croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, asthma, pneumonia, coughs, colds and throat troubles are promptly cured by Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, as is evidenced by many of the best people in the land.

So Many People Ask

Why on earth are you selling Wall Papers at HALF PRICE this time of the year.

WELL its just like this—We still have about 3,000 rolls of 1903 Wall Papers left and with our reputation for carrying the very newest in Wall Papers it would not pay us to put this small balance in with our 1904, and call them new.

We don't do that kind of business. We prefer giving our customers who are not so particular about having the very latest, these goods at bargains. So we are selling all 1903 papers this month at HALF of the regular prices, so as to start March with nothing but 1904 papers which are now flooding our warehouse.

All Fancy Goods and China—not Staple—for the balance of the month of February at Half regular price—this makes home beautifying doubly cheap.

Yours In Decorations

During the winter months our workmen have been kept unusually busy decorating some of the best homes of the city.

TO SAY THAT our decorative work is a success—is putting the matter mildly—you have just to witness this for yourself in observing any one of the many city homes we have given decorative attention during the past two years.

Our success is because of a knowledge of the decorative trade begot of study and experience both in wall hangings and the decorative art—the two go hand in hand—the one without the other is absolutely lost.

NO better time for you than the present for selecting, new wall hangings now arriving.

No better time to have your work done than during the later winter months and the earlier spring.

We are prepared—with a liberal staff of experienced workmen—the best obtainable in their several branches and our prices will meet with your approval every time.

WORLD'S FAIR ARRANGEMENTS.

Mr. G. T. Bell, of the Grand Trunk Railway System, has returned from the American General Passenger and Ticket Agents' Special Convention at St. Louis, at which World's Fair arrangements and excursions were considered by the transportation lines of the country in a preliminary way, in conjunction with the St. Louis terminal railroads and the Executive of the Exposition. This consultation will aid materially the various passenger traffic associations in dealing with the subject definitely and more in detail. It was recognized at St. Louis that the conditions would require each group of lines to act separately and for this purpose the New England, Trunk Line and Central Passenger Associations are meeting in New York this week.

At the banquet tendered by the Business Men's League of St. Louis, to the visiting officials, Mr. Bell spoke in behalf of the Canadian lines which were complimented by the World's Fair officials for the comparatively large amount of publicity already given with the object of promoting the success of the Fair, upon which there has already been spent by the Exposition Company fifteen million dollars, aside from the millions being spent by each State and Territory, foreign countries, individual exhibitors and concessionaries, which will bring the total up to fifty millions. Mr. Bell's announcement that the Grand Trunk would operate during the Fair a double daily service between Canada's metropolis, Montreal, and St. Louis, passing through the leading cities of the Dominion, including Toronto, Toronto, Hamilton, London, etc., was greeted with much satisfaction by the business men and officers of the Fair present at the banquet.

CRUEL CAR WHEELS CRUSHED A LAD'S YOUNG LIFE OUT

The Horrible Death Which Came to Arthur Cook on Pinnacle St. Last Night.

Fell Under Train, Dragged 300 Yards, and His Body Terribly Mutilated.

Universal Regret and Sympathy Felt for the Lad's Sorely Stricken Family.

Gloom and sadness hung like a pall over the city last night, and many sympathetic prayers went up from all classes for a family which without a moment's warning, felt the heavy hand of affliction descend with crushing force. Another of those deplorable accidents which seem fated to happen at intervals took place on the Pinnacle street railway line, and to-day Master Arthur Cook, youngest son of Officer Purdy Cook, lies cold in death, cut down in his youth by the cruel cars. The unfortunate accident was the sole topic of conversation last night and to-day, the terrible circumstances attending the sad affair saddening even the lightest-hearted of our citizens.

How it Happened.

Whilst no person was directly at hand when the accident occurred, there were eye-witnesses not many yards away. Wm. H. Clarke and some other employees of the Lock Factory had just left the premises on Pinnacle street and were walking southward towards their homes. The train was backing down and they saw a lad, who proved to be young Cook, standing near the track on the southwest corner of Pinnacle and Campbell streets. He made a motion to catch one of the cars and whether he did so or not they were not in a position to see. The impression prevails that he did not but missed his hold and fell beneath the wheels. The body evidently came in contact with the brake-beam and was dragged along the track for some 300 yards. When the train had nearly reached Dundas street a lad named Harte saw the body being dragged and he made every effort to attract the attention of the train hands. A few yards south of Dundas street the train was brought to a standstill and the mangled remains were extricated from between the wheel and the beam. Identification was at first impossible, but the fact that a pair of fur gauntlets and a small milk pail were picked up near the spot where the lad made an effort to board the train aroused the suspicion that the victim was young Cook. As soon as Police Officer Hayes saw these articles he was convinced that the surmise was correct.

The remains were taken to a place near by, and Dr. Tracy, coroner, was soon upon the scene. After viewing the remains and hearing the statements of some of the parties he decided that an inquest was unnecessary. The body was then removed to Tickell & Sons undertaking establishment and prepared for burial.

No blame whatever can be attached to any of the train hands, who were for some time unconscious that an accident had occurred. Conductor Henderson was in charge of the train, Driver Logue at the throttle, and the fireman was Mr. Dougherty. The body was under a West Shore car No. 20319.

Owing to the fact that Officer Cook was confined to bed with a serious illness, it was an extremely difficult task to break the news to the family. To the Rev. Dr. Crothers, Pastor of Bridge Street Church, and Dr. Gibson, the family physician, fell this painful duty. The shock to the family was a terrible one.

The unfortunate lad was well known about the city and was a general favorite with his companions, being of a kindly and jovial disposition. He attended No. 2 School, being under the tuition of Principal Dafoe, and also attended Bridge Street Sunday School. He was 13 years and 2 months of age.

At 4 o'clock this afternoon services were held at Tickell & Sons' establishment, being conducted by Rev. Dr. Crothers. Many were present to pay the last tribute of respect to the deceased. The remains were then taken to the cemetery for interment.

IS YOUR DOCTOR BILL LARGE?

Best way to keep it small is not to call the doctor, but use Nerviline instead. For minor ailments, like colds, coughs, chills, cramps, headache and stomach trouble Nerviline is just as good as any doctor. It breaks up a cold in one night, cures soreness in the chest, and for neuralgia, toothache and rheumatism you can't get anything half as good as Nerviline. The fame of Nerviline for cramps, colic and pain in the stomach extends far and wide. Good for everything a liniment can be good for and costs but 25c for a large bottle.

EXCITING TIMES ON FRONT ST. THIS MORNING

FARMER'S TEAM RAN AWAY, INJURING A CITIZEN AND CAUSING OTHER DAMAGE.

Shortly after 11 o'clock this morning, Front street was the scene of a lively runaway. It was fortunate that a number were not seriously injured for the frightened animals were not content to keep the road but ran for some distance upon the sidewalk. Mr. Charles Lavis, Sr., was knocked down in front of the Robertson block and it was feared that he had been seriously hurt, but after being removed to his home and a physician summoned it was found that his injuries consisted mainly of a bruised shoulder and side. The shock to the aged gentleman, however, was severe.

It appears that Mr. John Waterhouse, who resides near Roslin, left his team standing up street and they became frightened and started off with the sleigh. They had not proceeded far when they took to the sidewalk and, at the corner of Campbell street, the rig collided with the hydrant, breaking it and causing the animals to break loose from the sleigh. In front of the City Hall the team collided with a cutter belonging to Tickell & Sons, smashing it badly. The horse also started to run away, as did a horse belonging to Mr. Thomas Manley, and for a time things were lively. The animals were finally captured before doing any further damage.

PLEASING CONCERT IN TABERNACLE LAST NIGHT

SPLENDID PROGRAMME AND DELICIOUS REFRESHMENTS FURNISHED.

A very pleasant evening, indeed, was spent by those who attended the concert and social held in the Sunday School rooms of the Tabernacle last night. There was a very good attendance, the Pastor, Rev. George Brown, being chairman. Those taking part in the programme were Miss Mabel Vermilyea, Messrs. James Dyer and Edwin Henthorne, vocalists; Misses Ada Greenleaf, Lucy Barry and Jennie Boalsteel, elocutionists, and Miss Eva Lavoie, mandolin soloist. Miss Vermilyea, as usual, pleased everybody highly, particularly in her serio-comic selections, which she sang with charming archness; Mr. James Dyer sang the favorite old "Skippers of St. Ives" in a highly creditable way; and Mr. Ned Henthorn gave Trotere's magnificent song, "The Deathless Army," in most excellent style. The readings were given in a way which left nothing to be desired, there not being a weak number among them, and Miss Lavoie's mandolin solo was tuneful and pretty. The refreshments served were dainty and delicious, and, taken altogether, the Epworth League of the Tabernacle, under whose auspices the entertainment was held, have every reason to be proud of the success which crowned their efforts.

The music lovers of Belleville will have a treat next Monday, when the Wilbur Opera Company open their engagement at the Carman with The Mascotte. The company is the oldest one presenting light opera in the country, having been in existence over twenty-five years, and have the reputation of giving the best shows of any company on the road. The company this season is stronger and better than ever and a very pleasant evening is assured every one who attends the theatre next week. During the engagement the following operas will be sung: The Mascotte, Chimes of Normandy and Fra Diavolo.

Died in Mineapolis.

Mr. Charles Ed. Beamish, aged 39 years, died at Minneapolis, Minn., on Monday last. Deceased was a son of the late Mr. W. A. Beamish, who was at one time connected with the Customs in this city. The family have been away from the city for some years.

TENDENCY OF THE TIMES.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

THE INTELLIGENCER'S AFTERNOON DESPATCHES ARE TWELVE HOURS IN ADVANCE OF THE TORONTO MORNING PAPERS.

Alarmist Report Comes From London—Anglo-French War Said to be Possible—France Fails to Give Formal Declaration of Neutrality—British Foreign Office Uneasy.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

London, Feb. 19.—Lloyd's is to-day asking a premium of 30 per cent. against an outbreak of an Anglo-French war within the next three months.

This high rate is based on the fact that France has not given a formal declaration of an attitude of neutrality towards the Far Eastern belligerents beyond a vague statement by Foreign Minister Delcasse.

In fact, the French Government, instead of giving such assurance, has allowed Russia to use Jibutal, which is in the French colonies at the head of the Red Sea as a base of rendezvous.

The British Foreign Office is uneasy regarding the outlook, while the Admiralty is getting ready for rapid mobilization in case certain eventualities develop.

THE MELROSE OIL WELL.

A DESERONTO CORRESPONDENT APPEALS FOR AID TO CARRY ON AN ENTERPRISE WHICH, IF SUCCESSFUL, WOULD PROVE OF INCALCULABLE BENEFIT TO THIS DISTRICT.

To Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—We wish to call the attention of your readers generally and the investing public in particular to the work being carried on at Melrose in the attempt to find oil there.

In spite of numerous and grave difficulties this work has gone on more or less steadily during the past two years until the boring is down some 1,723 feet and is now in the formation known as the "Trenton Limestone" and which expert oil men from Indiana and other United States points claim is the oil bearing formation par excellence.

The very severe weather of the present winter has caused a temporary stoppage of the work but with the return of spring, it is confidently hoped the drilling will be proceeded with and the well rushed to completion.

The operations have been and are being conducted by a syndicate composed chiefly of people (both male and female) who are working for their living and who have all paid full prices for their stock, the proceeds of which have gone into the development of the well. The directors are honorable and well meaning men elected from the body of stockholders and all of them have likewise paid full prices for their holdings.

The machinery (subject to a lien) is owned by the Syndicate and it is estimated that $2,000 will pay off all existing debts and complete the well.

Should oil be found (which all oil experts claim to be certain) it is unnecessary to state what a boon it will be not only to Melrose and the County of Hastings but to the whole Province of Ontario and the holders of stock will be handsomely repaid for their investment. The evidences of oil being found for the last 700 feet of drilling and the opinion of several oil experts from Indiana assures us we may expect oil in abundant quantity.

We therefore appeal to the public spirited men and women of the Bay of Quinte district and elsewhere to help us in making a test whether this is an oil bearing territory or not.

Persons desirous of investing may obtain all necessary information and stock certificates (shares one dollar each) from Clarence Long, Treasurer, Blessington, or W. Stoddart, Deseronto.

Thanking you for the above space, I am yours respectfully,

W. STODDART.

Y.M.C.A. Notes.

Last evening Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, B.A., lecturer at B.B.C. and Albert College, gave his second lecture on insurance. In his former talk he discussed "Life Insurance." Last night he took up "Fire Insurance" in the same able manner. Messrs. Clapp and Hunt conveyed the thanks of the audience to the lecturer, while Principal Johnson, of the O.B.C., showed the importance of following carefully the lines laid down by Mr. O'Flynn. The gathering closed with the announcement that the speaker of the evening would complete the subject of "Fire and Marine Insurance" during the month of March.

The Success of a Prescription

Depends upon the quality of drugs used. There is as much difference in drugs as there is in other goods. Drugs which have been gathered at the wrong season of the year, or that have stood on a shelf for several years are hardly the best kind to use in a prescription. When you have your prescription filled here you are sure of getting drugs that are pure and fresh.

AFTER HEAVY FIGHTING

Japs Were Repelled in Their Port Arthur Attack Feb. 16.

RUSSIAN GUNS WELL PLACED

Japanese Emperor's Men Hoped to Isolate Russia's Stronghold By a Double Assault—Russia Has Already 300,000 Men in the Field—A Sweeping Japanese Denial—None of Their Vessels Have Been Destroyed, and Their Fleet Remains Intact—Japs Capture Two Ships.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 19.—Official confirmation is given that an attack on Port Arthur, Feb. 16, was repulsed after heavy fighting on both sides, According to the story this attack was intended as a feint to cover a landing at Talienwan Bay, but it failed, because the Russia's guns were placed with great foresight to command the shore.

A Russian expert says the Japanese evidently hoped the adjacent group of Eliot Isles would cover this movement, as they did the same thing during the Chino-Japanese war landing simultaneously at Talienwan and Kinchou, thus cutting off Port Arthur from each side of the Liaotung Peninsula.

"It surprises me," this expert continues, "the Japanese should have adopted a foolhardy attempt to face the Russians, as they must have known from their spies how strongly the peninsula is mined and defended."

The Government's frank statement in its communique of yesterday morning on Russia's unpreparedness owing to Japan's sudden precipitation of hostilities, and warning the Russian public not to expect immediate victories, confirms the opinion which has existed here that Russia will act upon the defensive until her army is fully mobilized, and the equipment of the commissariat is in perfect working order.

There are already over 300,000 men in the field, and this number will be largely augmented. About 50,000 men are required to guard the railroad.

No Jap Losses.

London, Feb. 19.—The Japanese Legation here received an official despatch from Tokio last night saying it was not true that any Japanese vessels had been destroyed, so far in any of the various naval engagements, and that all necessary repairs had already been made. The Japanese fleet remains intact.

This message also denies the report that the Japanese were driven from the neighborhood of Kinchau after a skirmish in which 150 Japanese were taken prisoners, and declares that the Japanese made no attempt to land at Pigeon Bay. It says the Japanese forces have up to the present time made no attempt to land at any point where they could come in contact with the Russians, and that consequently all reports of land actions and Japanese losses are untrue.

Alexieff Reports of Feb. 9.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 19.—A long official despatch from Viceroy Alexieff was given out yesterday, recounting details of the fight of February 9 at Port Arthur. It does not enumerate the Russian casualties, and says it is known that a number of Japanese ships suffered severely, which accounts for their not following up the attack. After giving a full list of the ships engaged, with the names of their commanders, Admiral Alexieff says:

"According to the reports of the commanders, the men fought exceedingly well, on which account, in virtue of the imperial authorization, I have conferred six crosses of the Order of St. George on each company of the first and second class warships having crews of over 200 men, four crosses on each company of all other ships of the second class, one cross on each torpedo boat, one cross on each station at Golden Hill, which operated under the heavy fire of the enemy; four crosses on Battery No. 15, three on No. 13, and one cross on a gunner who, though severely wounded, returned to his battery.

"Our losses were: Of the squadron, 5 officers wounded, 14 men killed and 16 men wounded.

"Of the fortress and garrison: One man killed, one man severely wounded and five men slightly wounded.

"In announcing the above to Your Majesty, I am pleased to be able to add that the naval and land forces in the Far East are inspired by the most heartfelt wish to meet their enemy in order to fulfil their duty in sight of their adored ruler, and, firm and unshakable to fight for the honor and glory of their beloved Fatherland."

May Join About March 4.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 19.—Owing to existing conditions in the field and difficulties in the way of providing suitable accommodations, Viceroy Alexieff has recommended that the foreign military attaches should not join the Russian army until about March 4, and the Viceroy's views on this matter will be communicated to the Governments which have applied for the privilege of observing the war from the Russian side.

No official announcement has yet been made regarding the report from Tokio that a second Japanese torpedo attack at Port Arthur has taken place. There are reports here, but they lack official confirmation, that this attack was made.

Port Arthur Besieged.

Paris, Feb. 19.—An eminent military authority connected with one of the embassies said yesterday that Port Arthur was practically besieged, and it was a serious question whether this would not compel either during the bombardment of Feb. 9, the abandonment or the surrender of the fortress with its men and materials.

Repairs Proceeding Rapidly.

Port Arthur, Feb. 19.—The repairs to the Russian warships damaged are rapidly proceeding. The Czarevitch, Retvizan and Pallada will soon rejoin the fleet. The work is being carried on with the aid of caissons. The mishap was not so great as it might have been.

Russians Advancing Towards Seoul.

Tokio, Feb. 19.—Russian troops are reported to have occupied Pingyang, a station on the Wiju and Seoul Railway, about 100 miles south of Wiju. They are now advancing towards Seoul.

Japs Capture Two Steamers.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 19.—A telegram received here from Port Arthur says the Japanese have captured the Okhotsk-Kamchatka Company's steamers Kolik and Bovrik.

Chinese Pouring Into Manchuria.

Chinwangtao, Feb. 19.—The Chinese Government is displaying unexampled activity and troops are pouring into Manchuria. Special trains have been chartered and are being despatched as speedily as possible. Their ultimate destination is at present unknown.

First Collision at Wiju.

Seoul, Feb. 19.—The report that 3,000 Russian troops had arrived at Chintiencheng, opposite Wiju, on the Yalu River, is confirmed, as is the report that the Russians have occupied Wiju itself. They have 20,000 troops at Wiju, and the first collision is expected somewhere in that vicinity.

Russians Fired on British Ship.

Tien Tsin, Feb. 19.—The British steamer Hsiping from Chingwangtao for Shanghai, which was believed to have been captured by the Russians, arrived yesterday at Shanghai. She reports that she was fired on by the Russian ships and forts when seeking shelter in the outer roadstead of Port Arthur, and that she was then ordered to Dafny, where she was detained four days in spite of her captain's protests.

Consternation in Russia.

Berlin, Feb. 19.—Consternation prevails throughout Russia over the rapid spread of the revolutionary movement. The secret societies everywhere recognize that the opportunity for decisive action may come at any moment, and the authorities are appalled at the evidences of disaffection which meet them on all sides. Russia's internal stability was never so precarious and is causing the Government the most anxious consideration.

British For Far East.

Hamilton, Feb. 19.—A local broker who represents Japan and India tea houses claims that he has a private message saying that 14 British regiments and 60 batteries of artillery, consisting of 16,000 men, were being sent to St. John. From here the message says they will be sent across the continent by C.P.R. to Esquimalt.

NO DIFFERENCE.

No distinction is made as to the kind of Piles that Hem-Roid cures.

The names Internal, External, Bleeding, Blind, Itching, Suppurating, etc., are simply names of the different stages through which every case will pass if it continues long enough.

Piles are caused by congestion or stagnation of blood in the lower bowel, and it takes an internal remedy to remove the cause.

Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid is a tablet taken internally.

It is a permanent cure and no case of Piles has ever been found it failed to cure.

THE POPULAR VOTE OF 1904

No article on the market, whatever be the purpose for which it was created, can be a phenomenal success and be universally popular unless it possesses great and unfailing merit. Inferior and worthless articles may flourish for a limited time if their praises are sung by sufficient clever and catchy advertising; but their days are numbered from the start and their finish is a foregone conclusion. This is an age of the survival of the fittest, and only articles of true worth endure.

The unparalleled and phenomenal success of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets from a business standpoint is not unnatural nor surprising. It is due directly to their unparalleled and phenomenal success in curing multiplied thousands of cases of dyspepsia throughout the English-speaking world.

The reason of the wonderful success of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is so plain and simple that a child can understand. It is this and nothing more; they are natural in their workings and effects. They take up the work of the worn and wasted stomach and do it just as the stomach did when it was well and strong and able. They actually digest the food and do it thoroughly, completely and independently, thus giving the weak and weary stomach an opportunity to renew and regain its wasted strength. You forget that you have a stomach just as you did when you were a healthy boy or girl and Nature restores and heals that organ and makes it well and strong.

A St. Louis business man says:—"I was a confirmed dyspeptic for years. What I ate had to be forced down and most of it soured or lay like lead in my stomach and did me no good. I was in constant misery both in mind and body and came to be cranky, morose and irritable. My natural disposition, which was cheerful and pleasant, left me, and I was alienating all my friends. The doctors did me no good. I got so I hated the sight or name of a doctor. My wife finally worried me into buying a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which I began taking under protest, as I had no faith in anything or anybody. I was sore on creation.

"I had not taken a third of that box before I noticed a decided and most welcome change. I could enjoy a good meal and feel no bad effects following it. I forgot my stomach and had a chance to think about something else. I went ahead with my business in ease and comfort. Six boxes of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at a total outlay of $3.00, cured me completely and I have not suffered a pain from dyspepsia for two years. I have an appetite like a sixteen-year-old boy. I wish everyone who suffers from dyspepsia could know what a change this great remedy made in me."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by druggists everywhere at 50 cents a box. All druggists carry them, and the best doctors are prescribing them. You need not fear that you will ever be unable to get them; for, because of the good they have done mankind and the suffering they have relieved and the happiness they have caused, the fame and the success and the popularity of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets from generation unto generation will endure.

BALKAN SITUATION SERIOUS.

Austria Has 30,000 Men Ready to Invade Albania.

Rome, Feb. 19.—The situation in the Balkans, especially since the revolt of the Albanians in the District of Diakova, Province of Ipek, is considered here to be serious. It is declared that Austria has 30,000 men ready to invade Albania, but if such a move were made Italy would consider it as disturbing the balance of power on the Adriatic and most detrimental to her interests here.

Bulgarians Routed.

Salonica, Feb. 19.—The Albanians, who were besieging Shemsi Pasha have been routed, losing 800 men killed and wounded. The Turkish losses are said to be heavy. Five additional battalions of troops have been ordered to Verisovich (315 miles north of Uskub).

Firemen Breathed Poison Fumes.

Toronto, Feb. 19.—At midnight Fireman Arthur Potter of Hose 1 was reported to be steadily sinking from the effects of the poisoning of the nitric acid fumes at Wednesday's small fire in the Toronto Engraving Company. Cecil Stewart, also of Hose 1, is also in a critical condition, and Foreman William Russell of aerial No. 2 is in a serious condition from pneumonia. The others are off duty, but improving. The fire occurred through the explosion of glass jars in which were contained the nitric acid used in making zinc cuts.

Fireman Arthur Potter succumbed at 3 o'clock this morning.

ATLANTIC 'GRAVEYARD'

WHERE GREAT SHIPS LAY THEIR BONES IN TIME OF STORM.

Sable Island Enjoys the Most Evil Repute of Any Marine Area in the World—Its Very Name Is a Terror to Navigators—Long Roster of Wrecks—A Bark on the Island.

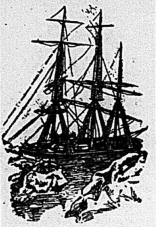
Another ocean horror has recently been enacted on Sable Island, "the graveyard of the Atlantic." The French fishing schooner Topaze, of St. Pierre, Miquelon, was dashed to pieces there, and every soul perished. Nine dead bodies were washed ashore and were torn into fragments by the surf and the rocks before the coast guards located there could secure them. The dismembered frames were, however, gathered up, and interred in one common grave.

No marine area enjoys such an evil repute as Sable Island, whose very name is a terror to navigators. The island, a crescent shaped mound of sand, rising from the midst of the wild Atlantic surges, lies one hundred miles off the coast of Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, right by the fairway of transoceanic travel and in a section where contending tides lure scores of vessels to destruction. Four days after the loss of the Topaze, just mentioned, a big steamer struck on a sand bar off the island, but floated clear again, and twenty-four hours later a bark touched there and remained hard and fast for two hours, when a squall struck her and drove her free. But it is rarely that escape comes to a craft striking this tiny inlet of shelving sand dunes. Its record is more than two hundred shipwrecks the last century, besides scores of others which were not noted because of the victims being engulfed at once.

Long Roster of Wrecks.

Last spring some fishermen trawling there fouled their nets in the hull of a big steamer, of the existence of which nobody was aware, it lying in twelve feet of water, having doubtless sunk with all hands in some blizzard during the winter by striking on a sand bar which may have been raised in a night by some swirl of the currents.

The history of Sable Island is one long roster of wrecks. It was sighted by the early Biscayan voyagers, and here fogs, gales and currents worked havoc among their clumsy barks. Then it was a substantial island, two hundred miles long by thirty wide, but the ceaseless warfare of the waves has torn it away fragment after fragment, until now it is only twenty miles long by one wide, and another quarter of a century will see it totally submerged. From its sloping shore, terraced by the everlasting wash of the combing breakers, stretch hidden and unstable sand reefs extending over an area fifty miles in length and representing the real menace of the place, for it is on these reefs that liners, freighters and fishers come to grief, getting bogged as in a mud hole and being beaten to pieces by the terrible waves which the fierce storms there provoke.



WRECK OF BARK ON SABLE ISLAND.

The region is one of constant elemental commotion. The cold north currents meet the gulf stream and the winds are ever at war, the meteorological reports showing frequent dense fogs, incessant "blows" of more than twenty miles an hour and an average of ten gales a month when the wind was over sixty miles an hour. The fifty mile line of reefs and bars is almost always a mad smother of broken water, and there is no safety for a visiting ship nearer than forty miles from the eerie isle. Usually vessels that have gone ashore there had laid a course to clear it by twenty leagues, but getting into the fatal grip of the currents were hurried onward to destruction, knowing nothing until the sands of this desert island grated against their keels and those on board were compelled to make a desperate and in many instances hopeless fight for their lives.

First Famous Wreck.

The first famous wreck there was Sir Humphrey Gilbert's Delight, in 1583. He sailed from St. Johns to reconnoitre the isle with his fleet, but he knew nothing of the shifting reefs of sand which barred his way; unseen plateaus, lying here to-day and there to-morrow; built up in an hour by a gale and a tide from one quarter, and demolished the next, to be re-formed somewhere else; this perpetual change defying the chart-makers and causing storm driven ships to meet their end in the ruck of this treacherous sand every month of the year. Countless caravels, galleons, pirates, privateers, war crafts and humble fisher-smacks paid tributes to this demon isle in the years that followed, and, save in rare instances, none knew their end.

In 1589 Baron de Lery stocked it with horses and cattle, intending to colonize it; in 1597 Marquis de Roche turned it into a penal settlement, and landed convicts there, and early in the seventeenth century it was a noted haunt of pirates and buccaneers, who hid their plunder in the sandy soil and subsisted on the cattle and horses, which were multiplying exceedingly. These wretches, by false lights and other schemes, lured unsuspecting merchantmen to destruction and then murdered the survivors and looted the cargoes. So frightful in time became its repute that France and England combined and swept every living soul off it. After that the castaway had a chance for his life, if he got ashore, for he constructed a hut out of planks and canvas, clad himself in the garb of his dead comrades, and subsisted on what the sea washed up or on cattle he killed, until his signals of distress moved some wandering fisherman to rescue him from this utterly shelterless foothold.

Wreck of the Hermes.

The troop ship Hermes went ashore there in 1780, bound to New York with soldiers for the Revolutionary War. She had seven hundred humans aboard, and the only way those who escaped succeeded in doing so was to float a line ashore attached to an empty barrel. By means of this a daring seaman swam after, and, getting a hawser ashore, fastened it to the ribs of a previous wreck. Three hundred and eighty people were saved. In 1787 the Princess Amelia, from London, was wrecked there, twenty-five only out of one hundred and ten persons escaping. Among these was Lieutenant Cochrane, afterward the famous Earl of Dundonald, who patched up a boat, sailed her to the mainland and got a schooner to return to rescue his companions. In 1801 the Francis was lost there with all hands, having on board the plate and equipage of the Duke of Kent, father of Queen Victoria, who was going to Canada in a larger ship to command the troops there. After reaching Halifax he sent a gun brig to the island to seek for his plate, but she, too, was lost there, only three persons escaping. Much of the plate was found later in the homes of the fisherfolk on the mainland.

A Life-Saving Station.

After these disasters the admiralty established a life saving station there, and it is maintained to this day. The life saving crew comprises sixteen men and their families, forty-five persons in all. They maintain a lighthouse on each end of the island, two shelters on each side between and a headquarters in the centre. The entire shore is patrolled every day and telephone connection is maintained between all the stations, though the sand storms often cover up both poles and lines.

In 1822 the French frigate Africaine was driven ashore there, but her whole crew of 210 men were saved by the coastguards, after her own boats had been broken to pieces. In 1830 the British frigate Hero, with the transport Wellington, also came to an end there, with 627 persons aboard, but all got safely ashore. In 1845 the ship Arno drove on a reef there, and every soul aboard, 188, perished. In 1857 the brig Bennett grounded on a bar, and 41 persons met their death, though among the 16 rescued was an infant three months old. The ship struck in December, and the ones saved were badly frosted, but they had to remain there until the next May, as there is no communication with it in winter, owing to the fearful storms which infest the region.

Wrecked Ocean Steamers.

Sable Island counts a score of ocean steamers among its victims. The Hungarian stranded there in a fog in 1860 and 237 lives were lost. The Georgia followed in 1863, but her eighty people were saved. The Atlantic, a year later, carried down with her 415 souls out of 800. The Wyoming, in 1865, only escaped by throwing overboard $100,000 worth of cargo after she grounded on the reefs. The Albion, in 1868, sacrificed herself and thirteen men upon this sandy spit. The Reeve, in 1872, went to pieces with her whole personnel of twenty-seven. In 1879 the Virginia beat herself to pieces there with 264 persons on board, nine of whom perished by the over-turning of a boat in the surf. A similar accident following upon the wreck of the Amsterdam in 1884 cost the lives of fifteen of her crew, and in 1886 the Britannia was engulfed there, six seamen and the captain's whole family going down with her.

The island is a visible portion of the vast Grand Bank fishing region, famous the world over. Here gather the American, Canadian, Newfoundland and French fishing vessels, and for them "Sablon," as the French call it, has a special terror. It is impossible in this short article to give even an idea of the size of the fishing flotilla that has been lost there, or of the army of fishermen whose bones strew the sandy bottom. These craft, because of their lighter draught, approach the mound, and when storms arise they are driven against the shifting sand bars and demolished almost in an instant, men and hulls being sucked under and swallowed up in the seething sand billows.

Attempt to Save Island.

The erosion of the cliffs is so rapid that the western lighthouse has had to be moved inland three times since its construction in 1873, and the whole island is slowly but surely sinking.

To attempt to arrest its demolition the Dominion Government in 1900 purchased 80,000 small pine trees of the varieties used in holding together the sand dunes of Brittany, and had them planted on the island, where they were indifferently successful. They cannot have much effect, however, as the sea undermines the place from below, and as it excavates great submarine areas the superstructure topples over and is speedily dissolved by the waters. When Sable Island disappears the locality will be a greater peril to seafarers than ever, because there will be no lighthouse or other safeguard then to warn them that they are running into danger.

Is the way of the man who originates—of the maker's who strives to produce a better article than his competitor.

The merchant who buys clothing made by firms who do not deviate from the time-travelled Clothes Trial and who—because it was good enough for our forefathers, offers the same style of clothing today is following the "beaten path."

OUR clothing is manufactured by firms who have dared to go out of the "beaten path"—by firms who originate and manufacture "modern" clothing.

These firms are composed only of YOUNG MEN THIS IS THE SECRET of their success.

We have already received several shipments of our spring clothing.

If you have heretofore been prejudiced against Ready-to-Wear Clothing—overcome this for once and try OUR MODERN garments. You will find them the DIFFERENT kind.

THE RAILWAY MEN BETRAYED.

By every shallow pretense the Government has endeavored to make a favorable impression on the labor vote. When it comes down to hard practical measures for the relief of the workingman, however, the Ministerial enthusiasm is not so much in evidence. For example, Sir William Mulock, as Minister of Labor, bewails the fate of the downtrodden mechanic; yet, Sir William Mulock, Postmaster-General, pays as low as 93 cents per day to city sorters and stampers and 97 cents per day to letter carries. Thus the Liberal party preaches and practises.

When the Railway Commission was formed Sir Wilfrid Laurier promised that one of the members would be a "practical railway man." That was taken to mean that the railway employees would be represented by one thoroughly familiar with their needs. But as is well known no such officer was selected. The railway employees, who have been fighting for safety appliances on railways and other concessions, are, therefore, left to the mercy of Hon. A. G. Blair, and two others who know nothing whatever of railway equipment. It is notorious that Mr. Blair strongly opposed the passage of any legislation which would compel railway companies to protect the lives of their employees, and asked to have the matter left to the Railway Commission. But after a hard fight the employees' representative, Mr. Harvey Hall, carried the day. It was subsequent to that struggle that the Government broke faith with the railway men, and left their case to the tender mercies of Mr. Blair, who is on record as an enemy to safety appliances. Here was a case in which labor could have been materially benefitted by the Government, but of course the lives of railway hands did not outweigh the political exigencies which required Mr. Bernier's retirement and a position for Professor Mills. When labor learns to estimate Sir William Mulock's bureau at its true value, it will succeed in getting the ear of the Government.

There are said to be no less than ninety cars of coal ordered for this city and tied up by the freight blockade.

• • •

There has been a coal famine in Galt, owing to the snow blockade, and the City Fathers of that burg recently took drastic action. The fact that the Grand Trunk could run special trains for the accommodation of hockey teams and pleasure parties, but could not find locomotives to bring in coal from points not more than from twenty-five to forty miles off, and could see homes closed and women and children suffering from lack of fuel, was censured in most emphatic terms. The result of the Council's action was that several cars of coal came in the next day, and more are expected. A vigorous kick is a good thing sometimes.

• • •

Talking of coal, the situation seems to be acute in Guelph, where a citizen writes to The Herald in this wise:

"Sir,—How long are the people going to put up with the coal situation? What a spectacle to see men, women and children beseiging the coal offices, with hand sleighs, bags, etc., begging for a supply of coal. The situation is even worse than last year. How long are we to be left to the mercies of the coal dealers? Is there no redress? It will not do to say that this is an usual occurrance and will not occur again. It is likely to occur again and again. What's to prevent it? There is more money in it for the dealers than carrying large stocks. Must we put up with this from year to year? We must if the dealers say so. If they decide to carry no stock next year we shall have a repetition of the same thing. Can we, as citizens, do anything to stop this? I think we can. We regulate other men's businesses and why not the coal dealers? Can we not safeguard the interests of the people and compel each dealer to carry a reserve supply: from one to two thousand tons? If that were done the situation would be helped, and we would have something to say as to the provision for our health and safety. It is a serious matter that the lives and health and prosperity of the people must be dependent on the few dealers, as to their willingness to carry stocks of coal.

"It may be alright for the citizen who can afford to fill his coal bin in the summer time, but what about the poorer people, who have to buy by the ton? Will not the City Council, Trades and Labor Council and citizens generally insist that something be done, and done now?"

CIVIC COMMITTEES IN SESSION LAST NIGHT.

MOSTLY ROUTINE BUSINESS TRANSACTED — SEVERAL ACCOUNTS PASSED.

At the meetings of the various civic committees, held last evening, Mayor Chown and all the Aldermen, excepting Messrs. Sulman and Magrath, were present. The business transacted was not of great importance.

PUBLIC WORKS.

Ald. McFee, Chairman, presided over this committee. The only account passed was the pay sheet, amounting to $172.31.

The matter of purchasing cement for building the granolithic walks for this year was left with the Chairmen of this and the Executive Committee.

The Surveyor was instructed to get prices from Mr. R. J. Graham for cedar for the repairing of the lower bridge.

WATERWORKS.

The following accounts were passed:

P. Milne	$5.25
Belleville Pottery Co.	4.50
E. H. Killogg & Co.	46.00

Other Accounts.

The following accounts were endorsed in the Executive Committee, having previously been passed in the other committees:

Downey Co.	$47.25
E. McGrath	4.00
T. S. Carman	143.30

Claim Not Entertained.

In the Market Committee the account of Abel Grills, for taking care of the meat market last year, was again brought up. The Clerk was instructed to notify Mr. Grills that as the Council did not engage him his claim is not entertained.

EXECUTIVE.

Ald. Panter, Chairman, presided over this committee.

The Solicitor was instructed to prepare a by-law in reference to the sale of lands for taxes.

It was decided to renew the policy with the Ontario Accident Insurance Company for $700 per annum, to insure the city against accident.

TRENTON VISITED BY A $50,000 FIRE

COLD STORAGE PLANT DESTROYED, ALSO 6,000 BARRELS OF APPLES.

The town of Trenton was at an early hour this morning visited by a disastrous fire. At one o'colck fire was discovered in the large cold storage building situated near the dock. The flames had made considerable headway and when the brigade arrived upon the scene the interior was burning fiercely. All efforts to save the building were futile, but fortunately the property adjoining was saved. The building was the property of a Liverpool concern, and, with the machinery, was valued at from $30,000 to $40,000. It was only completed last summer and was an up-to-date building in every respect. There were stored therein some 6,000 barrels of apples which were destroyed. These belonged to various parties. The total loss is in the vicinity of $50,000. What the insurance amounts to we were unable to ascertain. The cause of the fire was not learned.

MR. SPAFFORD'S COW

IS LIABLE TO CAUSE MR. GOULD A LOT OF TROUBLE—A PLAINFIELD CASE.

A case of considerable interest was being tried before Magistrate Flint this afternoon. Ward Gould, of Plainfield, it appears, had been cutting ice upon the river and a cow belonging to Mr. Thos. Spafford, in going down to the river to drink, broke through and was drowned. It is alleged that Gould had not properly protected the place where he had cut ice, and he was charged with negligence and also cutting ice where the public is liable to travel. Case still in progress. Mr. Anderson for Crown and Mr. F. E. O'Flynn for the defendant.

The Late Mr. Vandervoort.

The Napanee Beaver has this to say of the late Harry Vandervoort, who died on Wednesday in that town:

"Harry Lewis Vandervoort, one of our most respected citizens, died about midnight on Wednesday, 17th inst., after a brief illness of about three weeks. Deceased was the victim of a venomous attack of grip, and not being a rugged man, his physician and friends were apprehensive of the ultimate result from the first. Mr. Vandervoort was a young man of great force of character—in his thirtieth year — and throughout his illness made a determined resistance to the fatal attack, which was aggravated by other physical complications. Mr. Vandervoort was a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Vandervoort, of Belleville, and came to reside in Napanee as book-keeper for the Gibbard Furniture Co. six years ago. Deceased was a sterling business man, a loving husband and father, and a universal favorite with all who were fortunate enough to make his acquaintance. He leaves a devoted young wife, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Embury, and a little son to mourn an irreparable loss. Also, his parents, two brothers, W. E. of Belleville, and C. W. Vandervoort, Napanee, and four sisters, Mrs. J. A. Sharp, Mrs. J. K. McCargar, and Miss Emma Vandervoort, Belleville, and Mrs. J. W. Wilson, Toronto. Mr. Vandervoort was a member of the Presbyterian Church here, a member of the Board of Managers, to which position he was re-elected last January. The hearts of all our townspeople are full of sympathy for the bereaved family, who are at present passing through such severe affliction. Deceased was an active member of the I.O.O.F., and Recorder of the local A.O.U.W. Lodge.

THE FUNERAL.

The funeral yesterday afternoon was largely attended by members of the I.O.O.F., A.O.U.W. and sympathizing friends. Services were held at the house, conducted by the Rev. C. E. McIntyre and S. T. Bartlett, Methodist, and Rev. Mr. Eaton, the latter of the Presbyterian Church. The lodges also had services. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful.

Evangelistic Services.

There was a large audience present at the Baptist Church last evening, when the closing service of the series was held. After a brief song service, conducted by the pastor, Mr. Shields preached from I. Cor. 1:23, 24. The atonement of Jesus on Calvary was objected to by many, who, like the Jews, were seeking an outward sign of Jesus' Messiahship. There were also many like the Greeks, who were seeking to make the gospel coincide with their own views, rather than bring their views to the standard of the gospel. To those who believed, the crucified Saviour was the power of God and the wisdom of God. All who received Him by faith were made wise with the wisdom of God, and mighty with the power of God, in Him.

During the four weeks many have professed conversion, while believers have been edified and strengthened. Mr. Shields left for Ottawa this morning, where he will conduct a three weeks' mission with the Fourth Ave. Baptist Church.

Who Need Glasses?

(1) Many children need them, some parents say they do not want their children to "begin" wearing glasses if they can help it. That is all right, but in many cases before they find out they cannot help it, it is too late to save the sight of one or possibly both eyes. Many such cases have come under our examination, that might have been prevented by wearing the proper glasses in time. Bring you children to us if they do not need glasses we will tell you so.

1,500 COSSACKS OVER IN COREA

Difficulty in Restraining Chinese From Engaging Russians.

3,000 RUSSIANS SINK IN LAKE

Gen. Pflug Reports That All Is Quiet on the Banks of the Yalu—10,000 Chinese Soldiers For Shanhaikwan—Only Three Russian Warships Remain in Port Arthur Intact—Ten Russian Warships Crippled—What Canada Would Do If Britain Is Mixed Up in the War.

London, Feb. 20.—The correspondent at Seoul of The Daily Mail reports that 1,500 Cossacks are crossing the border near Wiju, and that Cossack scouts have already advanced into Corea as far as Anju.

Cablegrams received here from Shanghai declare that Gen. Ma, who is protecting the borders of Chili Province, wires that it is becoming daily more difficult to prevent the Chinese troops at Sinmingting from crossing the Liauho and engaging the Russians employed in guarding the railroad.

No Credence Put in Them.

No great importance is attached to the stories published in Paris and elsewhere on the continent of alleged intrigues looking to the coalition of Russia, France and Germany in the Far Eastern war, the belief being that it is to the interest of all powers to take steps that the struggle be localized. As Germany and France joined with Russia in 1895 against Japan, it would be natural for Russia to seek similar assistance in her present difficulties. Argument is therefore made that it behooves Great Britain to be prepared for any and all eventualities.

Anti-British Feeling.

Russian despatches record the rapid growth of anti-British feeling, one saying many English boys have been withdrawn from Russian schools owing to insults, and there is evidence in public resorts in Kieff that the position of the British residents would be very dangerous should Great Britain become involved in the Russo-Japanese issue.

Russian Regiments Drown.

Vienna, Feb. 20.—According to a despatch received here, the Russians have met with another disaster on Lake Baikal. Two regiments of Russian pioneers and one of railway guards have been drowned. It is supposed the ice gave way under the train and that all went to the bottom.

All Quiet on the Yalu.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 20.—Major-Gen. Pflug, chief of staff to Viceroy Alexieff, has sent the following telegram from Port Arthur: "Our scouts report that no Japanese have been either at Tsenchu or Pingyang, Corea. The population is indifferent towards us. The ice on the Yalu River is beginning to go out. Natives say that if a high tide comes in five days the ice will begin to drift. The west coast of the Liaotung Peninsula is covered with ice for a distance of a mile and a quarter to sea. None of the enemy's ships have been seen lately. There have been no fresh attempts to destroy the railroad."

10,000 Chinese to Shanhaikwan.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 20.—Paul Lessar, Russian Minister at Pekin, has telegraphed that Yuanshaikli, commander-in-chief of the Chinese army, intends to send 10,000 men from Paotingfu to Shanhaikwan.

The Varing's Losses.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 20.—The official report of the Chemulpo fight gives the losses on the Variag at one officer and thirty-three men killed, two officers slightly wounded and seventeen men severely wounded. There were no losses on board the Korietz. The officers and crews of both ships behaved nobly.

Only Three Intact.

London, Feb. 20.—"An American squadron is expected here," telegraphs the Che Foo correspondent of The Morning Post, under date of Feb. 19, "and it is reported that Americans intend to land a force of marines.

"There are rumors of possible trouble with Germany, who claims exclusive rights in Shantung.

"Only three Russian warships at Port Arthur remain intact."

10 Warships Crippled.

New York, Feb. 20.—The Russian warship Bayan, according to a cable to The World from Tokio, is reported to have been the vessel most damaged in the last torpedo attack on Port Arthur (Sunday, Feb. 14). The Japanese attacked with torpedoes at a distance of only 50 yards. As the results of the attacks at Port Arthur, ten Russian warships are crippled. It is believed that no further naval engagements will take place in the open, as the Japanese torpedo boats can do destructive work most expeditiously and most cheaply.

Two New Cruisers.

Tokio, Feb. 20.—The crews of the Nisshin and the Kasuga, the two cruisers purchased by the Japanese Government from Italy, were formally received yesterday in Tokio. The men were brought from Yokohama on a special train. There was an enormous crowd of spectators. The officers of the cruisers were given a dinner last evening.

WHAT CANADA WOULD DO.

Would Have to Defend Her Eastern and Western Coasts.

Ottawa, Feb. 20.—(Globe special.)—The officials at the Militia Department are not blind to the possibilities that may arise in connection with hostilities in the Far East. If Great Britain becomes involved in the struggle Canada may have to defend its eastern and western coasts. The effective defence of this country would be the greatest service Canada could render to the British Empire. In the case of war it would leave the British forces free to strike a blow elsewhere. There is reason to believe that inquiries are secretly being made as to the length of time it would take to mobilize and equip troops for the defence of those parts of Canada most open to attack. It is no secret that Lord Dundonald would like to be in a position to place 100,000 men in the field in case of emergency. But the best that Canada could do just now, perhaps, would be to place 50,000 or 60,000 men in the field, all of whom, however, would not be armed with the Lee-Enfield rifle. But any deficiency in that regard could be quickly made up by the Ross rifle factory, which has now begun to manufacture small-arms. The Ross rifle is said to be a much better weapon than the Lee-Enfield. It is fervently hoped that the occasion for a call to arms may not arise; but it is well to be prepared for eventualities. "Defence, not defiance," is regarded as Canada's motto.

No Censor in Russia Now.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 20.—The Russian Government yesterday abolished the censorship upon all news and other telegrams going abroad. The lifting of the embargo, which has existed for generations upon the free transmission of news from Russia, came as a direct result of consideration of the subject by the Czar. In some respects the action is regarded as the most important since the emancipation of the serfs.

The internal censorship is to be retained, but foreign despatches are to be entirely free. Inasmuch as a state of war exists telegrams from the theatre of hostilities will be subject to the same kind of military censorship enforced in all countries under similar circumstances.

Russia Refuses U.S. Exequatur.

Washington, Feb. 20.—Secretary Hay has been informed that Edwin V. Morgan will not be granted an exequatur by the Russian Government authorizing him to act as United States Consul at Dalny. Mr. Morgan is now on his way from Washington to his post. He will sail from San Francisco and touch at Yokohama, at which point the State Department will be able to advise him a month hence what course to pursue.

Called Back Again.

Paris, Feb. 20.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Figaro cables that the Russian squadron at Jibutil, French Somaliland, on the Gulf of Aden, has been ordered to return to Cronstadt. The Russian squadron at Jibutil consists, so far as is known, of the battleship Oslabya, the cruiser Aurora, the cruiser Dmitri Dunokoi and a number of torpedo boat destroyers. It was reported from St. Petersburg, Feb. 15, that this squadron had been instructed to remain at Jibutil until further orders. It has been suggested that the stopping of these warships at Jibutil might lead to international representations. Jibutil being a neutral French port.

CHINA'S NEUTRALITY.

What the Note to Japan Says and the Reply of the Latter.

Washington, Feb. 20.—China's note to Japan regarding neutrality says that special preparations have been ordered for the guarding of Mukden and Shinnking, the sites of the Imperial mausoleums and palaces. A garrison has been despatched to all the districts west of Liao, which have been evacuated by Russia. China engaged, however, not to take such steps "as will make a rupture of friendly relations in Manchuria," adding that "there are localities still in occupation by foreign troops, and beyond the reach of the power of China, where the enforcements of such rules of neutrality, it is feared, will be impossible. The three eastern provinces, as well as the rights pertaining thereto, shall remain under China's sovereignty, whatever side shall gain the victory and shall not be occupied by either of the powers now at war."

Japan's Reply There To.

Tokio, Feb. 20.—Japan's reply to China regarding the neutrality of the latter agrees to respect it so long as Russia does. Japan will not wantonly destroy property nor disregard the rights of citizens. But in the event, however, that they should extend aid and comfort to the enemy of Japan, the Imperial Government reserve to themselves the right to take such action as the circumstances require.

"It remains to say, in conclusion, that the war is not being waged by the Japanese for the purpose of conquest, but solely in defence of her legitimate interests, and, consequently, the Imperial Government have no intention to acquire territory at the expense of China as a result of the conflict. The Imperial Government also wish the Imperial Chinese Government to clearly understand that whatever action may be taken by them on Chinese territory, which is made the theatre of war, will be the result of military necessity and not impairment of Chinese sovereignty."

Sails on Wednesday.

Ottawa, Feb. 20.—H. A. Little, who is to represent the Canadian Government in the conference in London with the representatives of the Russian Government to assess the damages suffered by the owners of sealers seized by Russian warships arrived here yesterday morning. He sails on Wednesday for London, Eng.

Total Baltimore Insurance Losses.

Baltimore, Feb. 20.—The total gross loss of all the fire insurance companies is $32,864,894, of which $6,000,000 falls upon the local companies. The estimated total of salvage is $1,769,762, which leaves a net loss to the insurance companies of $31,295,132.

DEVONSHIRE EXPLAINS

Tells the Lords Why He Resigned From the Cabinet.

Relations With Former Colonial Secretary Chamberlain Had Long Been Strained—Is a Convinced Free Trader and Could Not in Honor Stay in the Administration—Lord Lansdowne Replied—Third Majority of 51.

London, Feb. 20.—(C.A.P.)—The Duke of Devonshire in the House of Lords, which was crowded with peers, peeresses and members of the Commons, yesterday entered into full particulars concerning the reason for his withdrawing from the Cabinet. He said he was long troubled in his relations with Mr. Chamberlain. Premier Balfour wished him to resign with Mr. Ritchie and others, but he preferred to remain as a restraining force. When he became aware that Chamberlain had resigned he suggested to Mr. Balfour that Mr. Ritchie and Lord George Hamilton, having resigned on a misapprehension should be asked to reconsider. But Mr. Balfour said he had no intention of asking further consideration of his Sheffield speech. He then decided to resign, as he was a convinced free trader, and he declared emphatically he would continue to advise those respecting his authority and give no support to any Chamberlain candidate. Personally, as chairman of the Iron and Steel Company, he had no complaint against a policy to retaliate against America and reserve the home markets for ourselves, but the Government of the country should take the broader view that dumping was only an intermittent evil.

Lord Lansdowne replied that it would be diplomatic folly for the Government to divulge prematurely the use they may make of the discretion they proposed to ask Parliament to invest them with. His view this moment was that European powers were contemplating further additions to their hostile tariffs against Britain. Protection of preferential tariffs is not proposed, but while we say this we do not desire to be bound so that at no future time under no circumstances should we be prepared to contemplate the possibility of a "mutual, advantageous arrangement with the colonies to whom we owe so much. If free discussion of that question is being looked upon in the light of the possibility of doing something to draw the colonies closer I will be the first to rejoice."

The vote for the third time this session resulted in 51 majority for the Government.

Address Agreed to.

London, Feb. 20.—In the House of Commons yesterday, the Home Secretary, Akers-Douglas, in behalf of the Government, moved the closure of the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne, which was carried. The address, as a whole, was then agreed to without a division, and the House adjourned.

ROYAL EULOGY FOR BOBS?

King Takes Prompt Steps to Atone For Government Coldness.

London, Feb. 20.—The royal eulogy of Lord Roberts, contained in the special army order issued Thursday evening, in which King Edward took leave of Lord Roberts as commander-in-chief of the army, is commented upon as avoiding an awkward dilemma.

The exceedingly curt manner in which the War Office dismissed Lord Roberts deeply incensed the late commander-in-chief, and this feeling was shared by the public to such an extent that it threatened to lead to a serious attack on the Government in Parliament.

The King's first intimation of his disapproval of the War Office treatment was to invite Lord Roberts to Buckingham Palace, where marked attention was shown to the field marshal. This has now been followed by the general army order, which was sent out by the King personally, not, as usually, through the War Office.

Prohibits Mixed Teaching.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 20.—The House yesterday, by a party vote, passed the Day Bill prohibiting coeducation of the races, in any educational institution in this State. The bill affects Berea College, where white and negro pupils are taught together. The bill was amended so as to permit corporations conducting such schools to maintain separate schools, which must be at least 25 miles apart.

Captain Guilty of Manslaughter.

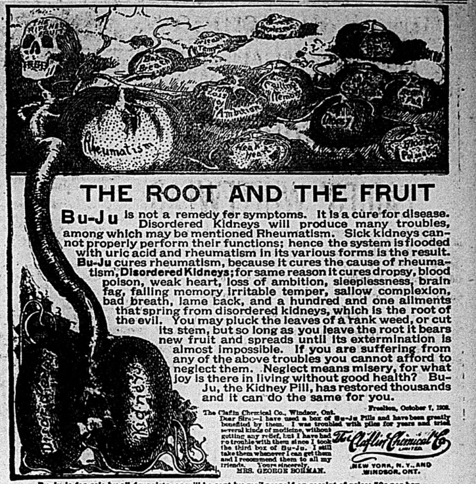
Victoria, B. C., Feb. 20.—The coroner's jury inquiring into the cause of the loss of the steamer Clallam and fifty-four lives on Jan. 8, delivered their verdict yesterday, finding Capt. Roberts guilty of manslaughter, and Chief Engineer Delauney criminally culpable. Delauney is severely censured for negligence and incompetency. Capt. Roberts is now in Southern California.

"Lake Michigan" Beached.

London, Feb. 20.—The British steamer Lake Michigan, Capt. Owen, from St. John, N.B., Feb. 5, and Halifax, Feb. 8, for London, has been in collision with the British barque Matterhorn. The Lake Michigan is seriously damaged amidships. Her engine room and stoke hole became full of water, and the steamer was finally beached in a sinking condition.

Drove Over 90-Foot Cliff.

Halifax, N.S., Feb. 20.—Patrick Walsh, lighthouse keeper Lingan, drove over a 90 foot cliff in a snowstorm Monday night. The body was found yesterday morning by a searching party.



THE ROOT AND THE FRUIT

Bu-Ju is not a remedy for symptoms. It is a cure for disease. Disordered Kidneys will produce many troubles, among which may be mentioned Rheumatism. Sick kidneys cannot properly perform their functions; hence the system is flooded with uric acid and rheumatism in its various forms is the result. Bu-Ju cures rheumatism, because it cures the cause of rheumatism, Disordered Kidneys; for same reason it cures dropsy, blood poison, weak heart, loss of ambition, sleeplessness, brain fag, failing memory irritable temper, sallow complexion, bad breath, lame back, and a hundred and one ailments that spring from disordered kidneys, which is the root of the evil. You may pluck the leaves of a rank weed, or cut its stem, but so long as you leave the root it bears new fruit and spreads until its extermination is almost impossible. If you are suffering from any of the above troubles you cannot afford to neglect them. Neglect means misery, for what joy is there in living without good health? Bu-Ju, the Kidney Pill, has restored thousands and it can do the same for you.

Freelton, October 7, 1903.
The Claflin Chemical Co., Windsor, Ont.
Dear Sirs:—I have used a box of Bu-Ju Pills and have been greatly benefited by them. I was troubled with piles for years and tried several kinds of medicine, without getting any relief, but I have had no trouble with them since I took the third box of Bu-Ju. I still take them whenever I can get them and I recommend them to all my friends. Yours sincerely,
MRS. GEORGE BORMAN.

McMULLEN'S LONG "TERM"

Eight years in the toils when South American Kidney Cure gave him his liberty.

Michael McMullen read in the newspapers of South American Kidney Cure, and when doctors tried hard and had failed to cure him, he, with the faith of a prophet commenced the use of this greatest of Kidney Specifics. In his own words: "Gravel and Kidney Disease had been the bane of my life for eight years. Thanks to South American Kidney Cure to-day I am a well man. I wish I could have every kidney sufferer within the sound of my voice for long enough to tell it." 30

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN

When buying clothing, beware of the man who offers you $10 and $12 suits or overcoats for $3.98 or $4.76. Then again, do not be governed too much by the marked price—look to the value, the worth, the texture, trimmings and make of the goods themselves. A comparison thus made will show conclusively that the prices we quote are lower than goods of equal worth or quality can be bought for elsewhere.

Up to the hour of going to press the Russians had not blown up any more of their own war vessels.

A good deal of coal has come in on the railroad in the last couple of days, and it is likely that all immediate danger of a famine is past.

What do you think of Russia, a power that would dominate the whole earth if she could? Wages in Russian factories are two cents an hour and upward. There are thousands who work for a cent an hour, and tens of thousands who do not receive thirty cents a day for ten, eleven and more hours' work. Isn't there enough of Russia on earth, for a long time?

The London Outlook says: A fifteenth century MS. contains the following prognostication:

But the laste ende thereof ys goods,

DANGER OF LIVING WITH CONSUMPTIVES.

Is real danger, because the sputum of affected persons diffuses itself itself through the air and finds lodgment in the systems of others. If exposed to consumption use fragrant healing Catarrhozone, the most efficient germicide known. No case of catarrh can withstand Catarrhozone, which cures this loathsome disease thoroughly. Cold in the head is cured in a few minutes, and bronchitis, asthma and lung trouble are cured to stay cured if Catarrhozone is employed "I don't know any remedy so good for catarrh and bronchitis as Catarrhozone," writes N. UNTIMELY CHEERS.

The Misplaced Enthusiasm of an Ex-Corpse in Ireland.

It was the rule in Ireland at one time that after an execution the body should hang an hour, but the sheriff, from mistaken lenity, would on some occasions look away after the prisoner had been turned off, while the friends of the culprit would hold up their companion by the waistband of the trousers so that the rope would not press upon his throat.

When the hour was expired the deceased was put into a cart, which was driven at a gallop along the stony road. The jolting generally brought the prisoner to. One such recovery was so complete that the resuscitated man sat up in the coffin and gave three cheers.

One of his friends was so shocked at this indecent conduct that he hit the ex-corpse on the head with his shillalah and finished him. The question then arose whether the assailant could be tried for murder, but it was ruled that no man could be successfully charged with the murder of a man who was already dead in law.

Are Women Really Stingy?

Are women meaner in giving than men? It cannot rightly be urged that they are. Women, after all, in buying or in giving are commonly making use of money that others have earned. They have been trustees of other people's money for 2,000 years, and long use has made them careful of their trust. Of course the petty meannesses of a certain kind of woman have afforded infinite opportunities for men's jests and contempt, but those petty meannesses are nothing in comparison with the great meannesses of really sordid men.—London Spectator.

Coast Line of the Philippines.

A geographical magazine makes the interesting statement that the Philippine Islands have a coast line double that of the main part of the United States. The measurement given is 11,444 statute miles, while the total area is stated as 115,026 square miles. In the Philippines there is one mile of coast line to every ten miles of area; in the United States the proportion is 1 to 555. It is said that 3,000 islands and islets can be counted on the charts.

WEEPING AT A WEDDING.

A Chinese Marriage Is a Moist and Solemn Ceremony.

A Chinese marriage is a solemn ceremony—no talk, no levity and much crying. The solemnity of a funeral prevails. After the exchange of presents the bride is dressed with much care in a red gown—brocade or silk, if she can get it; her eyelashes are painted a deep black, and she wears a heavy red veil attached to a scarlet headdress from which imitation pearls hang over the forehead. A feast is spread upon a table, to which the blushing bride is led by five of her friends. They are seated at the table, but no one eats. Deep silence prevails, when finally the mother starts crying, the maids follow, and the bride joins in the chorus. Then all the bridesmaids leave the table, and the disconsolate mother takes a seat beside the chair of state, where the bride sits. The bridegroom now enters with four of his men friends. The men pick up the throne on which the bride sits and, preceded by the bridegroom, form in procession and walk around the room or into an adjoining room, signifying that he is carrying her away to his own home. The guests then throw rice at the happy couple, a custom we have borrowed from them.

Macedonian Girls.

In Macedonia girls usually marry at the age of thirteen or fourteen, and a husband will pay £15 to £20 for a wife if she is a good reaper and expert at housework and spinning. When girls from the villages marry townsmen no money is paid, the bride instead bringing her trousseau with her in exchange, as it were, for the privilege of becoming a "town lady." In the latter case the bride most likely will be required to do little or no work in the fields, and that is the great ambition of most girls there.—London Globe.

BOER LEADER VILJOEN.

Will Marry Miss Mary Belfort, Popular Music Hall Artist.

The well-known Boer leader, General Ben Viljoen, is about to enter the ranks of the Benedicts, his affianced wife being Miss May Belfort, the popular music-hall artist. Miss Belfort, who is well-known to London audiences, first met General Viljoen five years ago, when she was in Johannesburg fulfilling a music-hall engagement, and she captivated him by singing a song in the Boer dialect. When the war was over the two again met in London, and were later fellow-passengers on a liner to South Africa. The result is that a few weeks ago Miss Belfort and the General arrived in England an engaged couple. Miss Belfort is now fulfilling several London engagements which will include one of six weeks at the Palace theatre. General Viljoen has meanwhile gone to America to arrange for a Boer exhibition at St. Louis. All being well the marriage will take place in February.

How We Cure Weak Men.

Give me a man broken down fr[illegible] [illegible]osses, hard work or worry from any cause which has sapped his vitality. Let him follow our advice for three months, and we will make him as vigorous in every respect as any man of his age. We will not promise to make a Hercules of a man who was never intended by nature to be strong and sturdy. Even that man we can make better than he is, but the man who was once strong and lost his strength, we can make him as good as he ever was. We have many testimonials to show any one applying at this store, these are people who do not wish there names made known through the newspapers Read this,—for a long time I have been a great sufferer from nervous trouble, I was unable to attend to business and could not sleep at night. I tried all the leading doctors in Belleville, but they did me no good. I went away to specialists which gave the same result. By this time I was pretty well discouraged and had almost given up, when my son persuaded me to try the Gilmour Belt, which I did, and after using it for three months began to feel like a new man. Any one who needs treatment for this disease, can make no mistake on this great Belt. I would not take one thousand dollars for mine if I could not get another."

"For many years have had rheumatism very badly, especially before a storm. I would suffer for days at a time with pain I could hardly endure. I tried all the doctors and they gave me up saying there was no relief for me. At last I tried the Gilmour Electric Belt and after using it for a time began to improve, and am today a pretty good man from its use. I can recommend this Belt to any one suffering from rheumatism."

"I have been bothered with kidney and bladder trouble for nearly twenty years. I could get nothing to do me any good. I was induced by a friend to try the Gilmour Electric Appliance with the special attachment for treating such cases. After using it for a few weeks, began to feel better and can say am getting better. Any one suffering from this ailment can make no mistake on this appliance."

This is the most powerful Electric Appliance in the world, if there is such a thing as a cure in Electricity, which everyone knows there is, this appliance will surely give it.

You vill likewise have read of their fareaching power and influence. Indeed uch things are universally admitted, ut even those who talk and write so ilibly do not really guess the extent of hat power. Not alone does it extend ver the east, near and far, but the vest is also brought within its influnce. These societies absorb men of very grade, and, had he cared to peak, it is highly probable that the Chinese embassador could have exlained the meaning of the egg shaped ign. Of course if you were to ask him e would shake his head, for the Chiaman, like all orientals, is a natural iar. He will lie even when he gains othing by it. Imagine then what he vould do when the truth might injure im. It is curious how in all these years our rulers seem to have learned nothing of the Chinese character. I grow furious when I read of them treating the yellow monkeys with gentlemanly forbearance and conciliation. There are times when to stand too much upon the gentleman is a bad thing. As a rule people who do that sort of thing have nothing else to stand upon. The oriental respects no one but his master. Conciliation is but a sign of weakness. No man bothers much about conciliation when he knows he can thrash his opponent. Peking is not London. It is not even St. Petersburg. You will presently see what the gentlemanlike conduct of the Russians will accomplish.

"But this is all beside my story, though at times my indignation runs away with me, and I say my say, which is wrong, for no sensible man should let himself get angry with that which he cannot alter, which is equivalent to saying that no sensible man except the politician should take politics seriously. I fear my interest is a selfish one as regards China. I loathe the pestilential monkeys. I have longed for the roar of our guns. I have dreamed of the jack waving over the Forbidden City, over the rich provinces of the Yang-tse. And I shall see nothing.

"I dare not enter into a detailed account of my early wanderings in that country; but, as you may have already guessed, I was more or less of a rolling stone, and one day I rolled against Kung. The impact was not a hard one. No corners were chipped off, no damage done. We smiled and shook hands and vowed an everlasting friendship.

"Ostensibly a boatbuilder at Fuchau, Kung was in reality the head of one of the largest secret societies of the empire, that of the Hidden Meaning, known to foreigners as the Boxers.

"This society embraced men of all ranks and all ranges of intellect, from the low cooly to the high official. Kung's father, so the story went, had once been a person of some consequence at Peking, but having fallen under the displeasure of the Son of Heaven he had been duly decapitated. Kung's family had therefore to fly to avoid the imperial wrath, and Kung, being a man who neither forgot nor forgave, took to plotting.

"Little by little the importance of this society increased, and Kung was willing to prove to me that its power dominated six provinces. His own freedom from arrest was proof of the power he wielded. Indeed he played upon me to such an extent that I already saw him seated upon the dragon throne dispensing provinces to his trusted servants. In those days it was anything for a merry life and a short road to fortune. I was promised both. My western intellect would prove of incalculable service to the cause. In Europe, Australia, America, the society numbered many white men, but none in China, for none who might have joined could speak Chinese with any fluency. Therefore I might count upon ten thousand advantages. I duly became a member of the Society of the Hidden Meaning.

"Shortly after my inauguration, which was attended by many oaths and mysteries, I was offered the command of a vessel which traded up and down the coast, and I soon found that my new associates were as good as their word. Many an excellent piece of business came my way, and nothing more was exacted of me than that I should occasionally carry cargo of which it was not necessary for me to see the bill of lading and passengers of whom I knew not the legal status. This I found extremely profitable and somewhat inclined to my way of thinking, for it enabled me to fulfill the dream of my life and marry your mother. But it so happened that I was no longer my own master—as what man is? Hence my frequent journeyings and long stoppages abroad. Then came the climax and the subsequent cause of all my misery.

"I had just concluded a trip from Chemulpo, in Korea, to Tien-tsin and was about to betake myself ashore in the due course of business, when a cooly advanced across the deck to me and without speaking a word slipped a paper into my hand. It was not the first time such a thing had happened, so that upon opening the paper I was not at all surprised to see the symbol of the society. This was that elliptical, egg shaped sign seen on your mother's forehead, on the gateposts, on the stable door at the killing of the horses. It is the sign that you may one day see on my forehead unless I can elude the emissaries of the society. Why such a symbol was chosen is no doubt obvious to you. It is meant to represent an egg and is symbolical of what may be inside the shell unseen by human eyes. Simple as it appears, it is an allegory of deep meaning and justly illustrates the title of the society. When you see it, open wide your eyes and watch the man walking by your side, avoid shadows and all dark places and men with yellow skins and strange eyes.

"I turned to the man who had brought this missive, who was standing watching me from the stern of the vessel, and, waving him to me, learned from him the spot chosen for the assignation. Up to that moment I had no knowledge of Kung's presence at Tien-tsin, believing him to be still at his place in Fuchau, nor could the messenger offer an explanation or give me the slightest information. Like all the members of the society, he spoke with the utmost reserve, a commendable habit in a community where each man was a spy upon the other.

"However, late that night I put in an appearance at the appointed place and was received by Kung and some score of the chief members of the society. I could not help wondering what business had brought him so near the capital, though had I known that the stout, surly looking fellow on his right was the governor of the imperial province of Pe-chi-li, I might have guessed that something of the utmost importance was in the air. As it was, I knew that it was for no ordinary business I had been summoned.

"Nor was it. The plot, briefly explained, was the capture of Peking, the deposition of the emperor and the setting up of a Chinese as against a Mantchoo dynasty. I fairly gasped for breath as this scheme was unfolded, foreseeing certain failure in such a gigantic undertaking. But this did not seem to disconcert Kung and his friends. A thousand men had been secretly armed. The Tartar governor of the capital was one of the revolutionists. He would open the gates; the rest was easy. The imperial family were to be put to the sword, wiped out root and branch—the only way to prevent trouble with pretenders in the future. The populace, once assured of the end of the Mantchoo dynasty, would rally to the new order of things.

"As Kung deliberately unfolded this gigantic scheme, which from time to time was met with a 'wah' of approval from his listeners, I thought that he addressed more of his remarks to me personally than I cared to receive. Round and round the stolid faces of his council wandered his piercing eyes, but as I came within their radius they seemed to fix and glitter into mine. I tried hard to think that this was only fancy, that he paid no more attention to me than to others present, but my instinct had not erred. Kung had accented some of his remarks especially for my benefit.

"After he in no ambiguous language had outlined the principal features of this gigantic scheme some whispered conversation took place between the leaders, and to my gradually increasing dismay I saw that their looks were constantly centering upon me. Then after a few preliminary remarks Kung disclosed the part I was to play in the conspiracy.

"The success or failure of their plans rested upon the attitude of Lowan, the taotal, or chief magistrate of the capital, a vigilant guardian, an incorruptible official. He had already been approached, the result of which was that the would be corrupter was now languishing in prison. Therefore Lowan had to be suppressed, and, to make a very long story short, I had been chosen by the council as the instrument of its vengeance. So far, as Kung explained with rather a mischievous curling of the mouth, I thought, I had not been called upon to prove my loyalty to the cause. Not that it was ever doubted—this he explained quite readily—but this was an undertaking which required a clear brain and a firm hand, and the council had done me the honor of intrusting me with this most important mission.

"I listened steadily enough, but my heart was black with rage. What a state my folly had brought me to. It was one thing to give the cause my moral support, another to go and commit deliberate murder. But the fiat had gone forth, and I knew that those yellow devils would give me short shrift if I evinced the least sign of hesitancy. Therefore I at once proclaimed my willingness to obey the behest of the council and further declared that they had overwhelmed me with honor. Who was I, a foreign devil, a barbarian, that I should be intrusted with this glorious mission? It was incredible that I should be singled out for so much honor. The knowledge of their belief in my loyalty was sweeter to my heart than honey to the lips. It was preferable to the possession of the ten thousand blessings which for the virtuous are laid up in heaven.

"Sounds of approbation greeted this graphic illustration of my modesty. It was 'wah' and 'ugh' and 'wah' again, for though to western ears such compliments would sound inflated and absurd they are to the Chinaman the polite currency of everyday usage. But Kung, who knew English and much of western ways, looked at me in a manner which left no doubt in my mind as to how much he valued my protestations. But he was a cunning fiend, and any tool was good enough for him to work with.

"When I left the assembly that night, I carried with me my whole plan of action, a plan carefully constructed by Kung himself. I was to proceed to Peking without delay and kill Lowan. Once the society was assured of his death, and this meant that they must have tangible proof, the march on the capital would be attempted. Kung gave me to understand that this proof of my loyalty would be duly rewarded and that I should not be called upon to act again. He even held out prospects of my retiring to England on a competent fortune. Those who fought should share the spoils of victory.

"I went back to my ship feeling the most craven and contemptible hound in the universe, and had it not been for some one on the other side of the world I might have ended the bad business there and then by blowing out my brains. When in my folly I had mixed myself up with these people, I never dreamed of being chosen to do such work as this. I was down on my luck, and they had put money in my way, and, though perhaps possessed of a somewhat philosophic conscience, believe me I was never entirely devoid of what good people call scruples.

"Now, I knew this thing had to be. There was absolutely no way of escaping it. The society was all powerful; its will must be obeyed. Flight was not to be thought of. I knew that henceforth every movement of mine would be watched and duly reported. Any sign of wavering, any suspicion of double dealing, and my days would be short in the land.

"And yet I could not murder. I am well aware that many strange tales have been told of Bob Kingston, but no one can ever say that he struck a man in the dark. If he did things he never cared to boast of, it was all for the sake of some one who loved him, some one whom, in spite of appearances, he never ceased to love. And let this be with you always when you judge. I think this is something that I owe myself—a little thing, perhaps, a very small virtue. But we men of small virtues cling tenaciously to them. Can you blame us? They are all we have.

"My orders were imperative. I was to delay no longer than was necessary for my preparations, so early the next morning I left Tien-tsin and set out for the capital, dressed, of course, as a Chinese, the false scalp which I always wore providing me with the necessary pigtail. It was fine weather, and nothing but my thoughts marred the pleasantness of the journey. I guessed in-

Get My Book if Sick

Don't Send a Penny.

Don't send a penny.

Just wait till you see what I can do.

Let me take the risk. Let me prove up first what Dr. Shoop's Restorative can do. The Restorative will gain your friendship, your endorsement if you test it. And for a whole month you can test it without the slightest risk.

I will tell you of a druggist near you who will furnish six bottles of

Dr. Shoop's Restorative

A Month on Trial.

I will absolutely stand all the cost if it fails. If you say "It did not help me," that ends it as far as cost to you is concerned. Do you understand me? I am telling it as plainly, as clearly as I can. I want you to know absolutely and without doubt this offer is made on honor. I have the prescription that cures. My only problem is to convince you that Dr. Shoop's Restorative will cure—is an uncommon remedy. A common remedy could not stand a test like this. It would bankrupt the physician making the offer. And I am succeeding everywhere and here is the secret of my success. I found invariably that where there was a weakness the inside nerves were weak. When there was a lack of vitality the vital nerves lacked power. Where weak organs were found, I always found weak nerves. Not the nerves commonly thought of but the vital organs' nerves. The inside—the invisible nerves."

This was a revelation. Then my real success began. Then I combined ingredients that would strengthen, that would vitalize these nerves. That prescription I called Restorative. It is known the world over now as Dr. Shoop's Restorative.

Thousands are accepting my offer and only one in each forty writes me that my remedy failed. Just think of it. 39 out of 40 get well, and these are difficult cases too. And the fortieth has nothing to pay. That is a record I am proud of. It is wrong to stay sick when a chance like this is open. If well, you should tell others who are sick of my offer. Don't let a sick friend stay sick because he knows not of my offer. Tell him. Get my book from him. Do your duty. You may be sick yourself sometime. Sick people need help. They appreciate sympathy and aid. Tell me of some sick friend. Let me cure him. Then he will show to both of us his gratitude. Your reward will be his gratitude. Send for the book now. Do not delay.

PUTTING BABY ASLEEP.

If baby is restless or sleepless do not give it "soothing" medicines to make it sleep. These medicines always contain opiates, and you are merely drugging the little one into temporary insensibility—in fact you are placing its life in peril. Restlessness and sleeplessness is usually the result of some trouble of the stomach or bowels, and if this is removed the child will sleep naturally, and awake bright and healthy. Baby's Own Tablets cure all stomach and bowel troubles, and the mother has a solemn assurance that the medicine contains no opiate or harmful drug. Mrs. Louis Reville, Gawas, Ont., says:—"My baby suffered from colic, cried a great deal and was very sleepless. After giving him Baby's Own Tablets the trouble disappeared and though giving him an occasional tablet since, he has always been healthy, and is now a strong, rugged child. No mother should ever be without the tablets in the house." You can get Baby's Own Tablets from any dealer in medicine or if you write to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., the tablets will be sent by mail at 25 cents a box.

There is nothing like Sunlight Soap for Household Utensils.

When you have to use hard water it is not an easy matter to wash household utensils. To do good washing you should have good soap and soft water (rain water). If you use hard water you must have good soap, and the best soap you can get is Sunlight Soap because it softens the hard water and makes a copious creamy lather. Use Sunlight Soap for all household purposes and the results will surprise you.

Those Stolen Bank Bills.

The Hamilton Times, in noting the fact that some of the unsigned bank bills stolen from Napanee had been found in that city, says: Dominion bank bills, which were stolen at the time that the Napanee branch bank was robbed several years ago, are in the possession of some local hotelmen and a well known sporting man. They are $10 notes of the issue of series A, dated Jan. 2, 1898, and the numbers are between 46,000 and 47,000. The bills are dried up, and very brittle, indicating that they had been buried and had become damp, and were since dried out with intense heat."

Piles To prove to you that Dr. Chase's Ointment is a certain and absolute cure for each and every form of itching, bleeding and protruding piles, the manufacturers have guaranteed it. See testimonials in the daily press and ask your neighbors what they think of it. You can use it and get your money back if not cured. 60c a box, at all dealers or EDMANSON, BATES & Co., Toronto.

Dr. Chase's Ointment

THE PUBLIC should bear in mind that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has nothing in common with the impure deteriorating class of so-called medicinal oils. It is eminently pure and really efficacious—relieving pain and lameness, stiffness of the joints and muscles, and sores or hurts, besides being an excellent specific for rheumatism, coughs and bronchial complaints.

Nothing so certainly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their afflictions from a neglected [illegible] the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state.

SAMUEL TO COME BACK.

Fugitive Deputy Returning Officer to Give Evidence Monday or Tuesday.

Toronto, Feb. 20.—Ald. Ramsden, Alfred Maguire, George Robertson, Bernard Kelly and a number of ward workers who were working for various candidates, were in the box during the day, together with Durance and George Thompson. Much interest centred in the New Year's Eve tour of Controller Richardson, Ald. Ramsden and others in Kelly's hack through the ward, and especially the gathering at George Robertson's home on Centre street, where it is alleged plans were layed for controlling the election in that part of the city.

Sam. Thompson, the fugitive returning officer, will be in the witness box of the civic investigation Monday or Tuesday. At that time a full confession, covering all knowledge of crooked election methods he possesses, will have been placed in the hands of Mr. Riddell. Arrangements were practically completed Thursday night by which the fugitive agreed to return and tell a story "that will reveal a sickening condition of municipal corruption in high places."

It is said Thompson has never been out of the city. A warrant has been issued for his arrest, and will be executed if he does not give himself up.

GAMEY AT NEWMARKET.

Man From Manitoulin Enthusiastically Received By Conservatives.

Newmarket, Feb. 20.—The annual meeting of the Liberal-Conservative Association of North York was held here yesterday.

At 1 o'clock the public began to pour into the hall to get a seat to hear the "Man from Manitoulin." At 2 o'clock every seat in the hall was taken, and the speaking commenced at 2.30, when F. J. Roche of Toronto, addressed the meeting. A. A. Mahaffy, M.P.P., was the next speaker, and proved to be quite entertaining.

A telephone message was received from T. H. Lennox, expressing his regret at not being able to be present, being engaged on a case in court at Barrie.

For two hours and a half R. R. Gamey, M.P.P., kept the audience spell-bound, while he criticized the policy of the Government and related the attempt to bribe him, clinching every point with proofs. The meeting closed with cheers for the King, J. P. Whitney, R. R. Gamey and T. H. Lennox.

C.P.R. Express Derailed.

Sault Ste. Marie, Feb. 20.—The C. P. R. express, which left yesterday afternoon for Montreal, was ditched near Desbarats, thirty miles from here, caused by spreading rails. All the cars except the locomotive went off the track, but though a number were bruised and injured there will be no fatalities. Traffic will be delayed for some time. Wrecking crews have gone out from here to the relief.

Six Shot, One Will Die.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 20.—In an effort to close up a pool room that has operated for a long time in the outskirts of Madison, Ills., across the river from St. Louis, three constables, augmented by a posse of citizens, and bearing warrants for the arrest of six men, precipitated a riot late yesterday, which resulted in the shooting of six men. One may die.

Hays Off For London.

Montreal, Feb. 20. — Charles M. Hays left New York yesterday for London. It is understood that the general manager of the Grand Trunk goes to England for the purpose of submitting the Grand Trunk Pacific's modified agreement with the Dominion Government to the half-yearly meeting, which takes place in London in March.

116 May Be Burned.

Racine, Wis., Feb. 20.—Late last night the city authorities were notified that the County Insane Asylum, four miles from the city, was on fire, and, owing to the cold weather and lack of fire-fighting facilities, was in danger of being destroyed. It is said there are 116 inmates in the institution.

SCHOOL SAVINGS BANKS

Mr. Preston, South Brant, Brings the Matter Upon the House.

Endorses the Idea, Is Supported By Mr. Whitney, and Gets Minister of Education to Say That Perhaps the Time Was Approaching When the Government Would Move in That Direction—Bills Introduced.

Toronto, Feb. 20.—There was very little to command the attention of the Legislature yesterday afternoon and the House sat only a hour. Mr. Preston of Brant, brought up the question of the establishment of savings banks in public schools, and gave the idea a complete endorsation, urging that the Government do likewise. Mr. Whitney supported Mr. Preston, and the Minister of Education went as far as to say that perhaps the time was approaching when the Government would take the matter up.

Bills Introduced.

Hon. Mr. Latchford introduced a bill amending the act respecting the granting of land to the Thunder Bay, Nepigon and St. Joe Railway. The bill gives power to the Government to grant land in Thunder Bay instead of Algoma. The lands are to be within 24 miles of the railway, instead of 18, and they must not be situated on the east side of the railway south of Lake Nepigon. This prevents the company from securing the water powers of the Nepigon River. The time for the commencement of the road is extended to April 1, 1905, and the completion to April 1, 1906, and the time for locating settlers on the lands is extended to 10 years from April 1, 1904, instead of 10 years from April 1, 1901.

Hon. Mr. Harcourt introduced a bill relating to the Toronto Board of Education.

A bill was introduced by the Provincial Secretary enabling county councils to enter into agreement with cities or towns for the extention of the water supply and sewerage system to Houses of Refuge; and to issue debentures for Houses of Refuge without obtaining the consent of the ratepayers.

Mr. Lee's bill to amend the Public Schools Act provides that cities and towns shall contribute to the salary of county board examiners, and another bill seeks to reduce the number of pettit jurors empannelled to 36 instead of 48 as at present, except in York, Wentworth, Middlesex and Carlton Counties.

The time for introducing amendments to the Municipal Act expired on Friday. Mr. Duff had a bill of this nature, and Hon. Mr. Gibson suggested that its provisions be incorporated in other municipal act amendments before the House.

Dead Meat Industry.

The Premier informed Mr. Duff that the Government had no definite plan in regard to giving assistance towards the establishment of a dead meat industry, by bonus, or otherwise.

To Mr. Smyth (Algoma), the Commissioner of Public Works said the Government had received no petitions for grants for drainage in the Townships of Balfour and Rayside, and the Government was not considering the question of making any such grants.

The Attorney-General told Mr. Clark (Bruce) that the charter of the Vermillion Gold Mine in Denison Township was forfeited, but on cause being shown the forfeiture was cancelled, and the company is now selling the property. The mine was no longer regarded as an asset of the province.

Hon. Mr. Harcourt said, in reply to a question by Mr. Murphy, that classes in cooking and domestic science had not been discontinued at the Provincial Normal School at Ottawa, and that there was a room there properly equipped for the purpose.

The Government would introduce a bill relating to the revision of the fees of certain magistrates, the Attorney-General informed Mr. Hoyle.

In reply to Mr. Murphy, the Commissioner of Public Works said the Government was not aware that the Government of Quebec had granted a license for commercial fishing in Lake Temiskaming. He was advised by the Deputy Minister of Fisheries of Quebec that a license had been granted for fishing for local consumption, and that licenses for fishing for export had been refused. Since then the Government had impressed on the Provine of Quebec the undesirability of granting commercial licenses and had received no reply.

Taken Off Sinking Boat.

Boston, Feb. 20.—Six maimed and suffering sailors, who had been picked up nearly frozen to death, and the body of another, who died of exposure, were brought into port yesterday by the steamer Orion, from Baltimore. The men, who comprised the crew of the Boston schooner S. C. Tryon, were taken from the boat in which they had struggled with sea and tempest for fourteen hours. The Tryon had hit an ice floe and was sinking when the crew left her.

A Prohibition Convention.

Toronto, Feb. 20.—On or about March 15 a prohibition convention for the Province of Ontario will be held in Toronto. The exact date will be announced as soon as the executive of the alliance can be sure of having the proposed temperance legislation before the convention for its consideration.

Flour Advances in Price.

Winnipeg, Feb. 20.—Both milling companies advanced the price of flour another 10 cents yesterday. This makes price for best qualities of Ogilvie Milling and Lake of Woods Milling Companies $5.30 per barrel.

So Many People Ask

Why on earth are you selling Wall Papers at HALF PRICE this time of the year.

WELL its just like this—We still have about 3,000 rolls of 1903 Wall Papers left and with our reputation for carrying the very newest in Wall Papers it would not pay us to put this small balance in with our 1904, and call them new.

We don't do that kind of business. We prefer giving our customers who are not so particular about having the very latest, these goods at bargains. So we are selling all 1903 papers this month at HALF of the regular prices, so as to start March with nothing but 1904 papers which are now flooding our warehouse.

All Fancy Goods and China —not Staple—for the balance of the month of February at Half regular price—this makes home beautifying doubly cheap.

Yours In Decorations

During the winter months our workmen have been kept unusually busy decorating some of the best homes of the city.

TO SAY THAT our decorative work is a success—is putting the matter mildly—you have just to witness this for yourself in observing any one of the many city homes we have given decorative attention during the past two years.

Our success is because of a knowledge of the decorative trade begot of study and experience both in wall hangings and the decorative art—the two go hand in hand—the one without the other is absolutely lost.

NO better time for you than the present for selecting, new wall hangings now arriving.

No better time to have your work done than during the later winter months and the earlier spring.

We are prepared—with a liberal staff of experienced workmen —the best obtainable in their several branches and our prices will meet with your approval every time.

IS YOUR DOCTOR BILL LARGE?

Best way to keep it small is not to call the doctor, but use Nerviline instead. For minor ailments, like colds, coughs, chills, cramps, headache and stomach trouble Nerviline is just as good as any doctor. It breaks up a cold in one night, cures soreness in the chest, and for neuralgia, toothache and rheumatism you can't get anything half as good as Nerviline. The fame of Nerviline for cramps, colic and pain in the stomach extends far and wide. Good for everything a liniment can be good for and costs but 25c for a large bottle.

Sports and Pastimes

The Visitors Were Outclassed.

The Toronto Marlboros, who were scheduled to play here last night, defaulted, but, in order not to disappoint the Belleville public, sent down a picked team to play an exhibition game, the said team being, so one of the Marlboro supporters told us, both faster and cleverer than the team which defaulted. In front of the net they presented "Eddie" Geroux, of the senior Marlboros, whose work this season has had all Toronto enthused. The little chap gave a marvellous exhibition, and but for him the Bellevilles would surely have run up a cricket score. Time and again the locals would go down the ice in lightning combination, but Geroux would stop the shot and clear quicker than greased lightning. That is where he excels—he can clear while the ordinary goal-keeper is thinking about it. It is safe to say, judging by his work last night, that the Ottawas will find Geroux a hard nut to crack when the Stanley Cup games begin next week. The remainder of the visiting team was made up of intermediate Marlboros, Waverleys and Westerns, and they gave a very fair and fast exposition of the national game. Against a team of their own calibre the visitors would show up brilliantly, there is no doubt of that, but the locals, in weight, speed and experience, fairly outclassed them last night. However, the visitors would break away very fast once in a while and showed glimpses of brilliant hockey. The local team showed their usual speed and combination. One or two of them hardly seemed to be up to form, while another one or two uncorked a couple of new tricks, which should be very useful when the clash comes with Stratford, providing, of course, we get that far. The positions of the players were changed somewhat last night, as Winchester, the goal-keeper, played on the forward line a good part of the game, and the spectators shouted with laughter to see Winnie, with his slouch hat and pads on, going down the ice like a runaway Clydesdale, clipping right in with the Red and White combination. It seems to be Winnie's ambition to score goals, and if somebody doesn't hypnotize him and order him to stay in his place he will surely do it. Chaucer Elliott was referee, and the rink contained a very good crowd of spectators when he blew his whistle for the game to start. The local team was the same as usual, the visitors presenting this aggregation:

Marlboro goal.
Geroux
Thayer
Purse
H. Anderson
Quigley Thoms Anderson

At the start the visitors set a furious pace and seemed to be fairly holding their own. They were bothering the local defence quite a bit. The Red and White forwards went down three abreast and McGuire shot when not more than a yard from Geroux, and that little terror stopped the puck and cleared before "Dike," who was following up fast, could reach him. It was a lightning piece of work. Then the scene of play changed, and the visitors scored the first goal. For some little time the play was still fairly even; then the speedy Toronto lads began to slow up quite a bit, and shots came thick and fast at Geroux, who, if he was looking for practise in stopping, surely got barrels of it last night. Belleville got the 2nd, 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th goals, the half-time score being 8-1.

In the second half the Toronto lads seemed to have got their second wind, while the locals, apparently realizing that they needed a little amusement, proceeded to "monkey" with the visitors, who, by attending strictly to business, scored the 10th, 11th and 12th goals, making the score 8-4. Then the home team dropped their funny tactics and got the 13th, 14th, 15th and 16th, the 17th and 18th going to the visitors and the 19th to Belleville, the final score being 13-6.

Caught in the Net.

The visitors were a very gentlemanly lot of young fellows.

Geroux is the quickest little man ever seen in this neck of the woods.

McGuire was hurt a couple of times. He is the most unfortunate hockey player in the business.

The local team is now in its best form of the season.

The officials were: Timers: for Belleville, Mr. McFee; for Toronto, Mr. Smillie; umpires, for Belleville, Mr. Gilmour; for Toronto, Mr. Barrott.

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

Advertising is a splendid thing, but some people in Belleville are getting more of it than they hanker after.

The Toronto Marlboros have decided to play only club members when they go after the Stanley Cup, which is both correct and sportsmanlike. In this connection the Toronto Telegram says: "Marlboros have decided to stick to the team that won the O.H.A. championship in their Stanley Cup games. And while their chances of winning the silverware may not be enhanced thereby, it must be admitted that their decision is sportsmanlike. While it would be wise to have the weight of Ardagh or Forrester on the forward line, the Dukes owe it to the men who have victoriously carried their colours thus far that they should have a chance to test their skill in the greatest competitions the hockey world affords. And while the addition of outsiders might be an improvement, it is just possible that men who have played together all season will do better than a new forward line, even if the latter does look stronger individually. Will Marlboros bring the cup east? Perhaps. Tom Phillips thinks the Dukes have a good chance, and Tom ought to know. He's been there. But to beat Ottawa on Ottawa ice under an eastern referee is a big undertaking. Anyway, win or lose, the Dukes can be depended upon to put up a fight that will neither disgrace themselves nor the association they represent.

Mr. A. B. Cox, of London, has a letter in the Toronto News, bearing on the Peel case, which shows that there are two sides to every question. Mr. Cox says, in part:

"In Harry Peel's case, all difficulty of decision vanishes. He is a young man, not only of good, but of singularly high character. Part of the evidence before the Association—a letter from one of the best known clergymen in the Province—describes him as being in all that such a description implies, a thorough Christian gentleman. Is it any wonder that the majority of the executive feel strongly that such a man, whose sin against amateurism occurred when he was a boy of nineteen, who for two whole years has played no game of hockey and who during that time has refused, not one, but numbers of tempting offers to re-join the professional ranks, should no longer be debarred from participating in Canadian amateur sport? Applications for reinstatement should undoubtedly be scrutinized with the greatest care, and due penalties for hockey transgressions should undoubtedly be exacted, but we are dealing with boys playing games, and not with criminals, and we are trying to promote amateurism in a country where professionalism in lacrosse and in baseball are a constant counter-educative force. To efface from the hockey list every lad who does foolish things is merely to create an ever-lasting body of players, whose only outlet lies in the formation of professional clubs and associations. The Evening Telegram professes to fear that this decision marks a deterioration from the high standards which have hitherto governed the executive. Deterioration, however, does not come from the honest exercise of individual opinion. There will be danger of degeneracy when the committee ceases to do justice to the humblest applicant who comes before it, and when it becomes a mere slavish recorder of autocratic opinion."

YOUTHFUL COMRADES WERE AT DEAD LAD'S FUNERAL.

IMPRESSIVE SCENES AT OBSEQUIES OF LATE ARTHUR P. COOK YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

A large number of sympathizing friends, including the pupils of No. 2 and other schools, were in attendance yesterday afternoon at the obsequies of the late Arthur P. Cook, who met such an untimely death on Thursday evening. Owing to the serious illness of the father, and others members of the family being sick, the remains were not taken home, but services were held in the undertaking rooms of Tickell & Sons. Dr. Crothers conducted the services which were very impressive. The casket was carried to the hearse by Chief Newton, Officers Hayes, Downs and McCrodan. The boys from No. 2 school and some others, headed by Messrs. F. E. O'Flynn, Chairman of the School Board, and J. T. Luton, walked behind the hearse to the top of Murney's hill. The floral tributes were beautiful, consisting of a cross from the police force, an anchor from the teachers and pupils of Octavia street school; wreaths from Bridge Street Sunday School and Mr. Luton's Bible Class, and a bouquet from the dress making department of Ritchie & Co. The remains were placed in the vault at the cemetery.

PROF. GILL'S LECTURE.

AN INTERESTING SUBJECT APTLY TREATED LAST NIGHT.

Prof. Gill, of Queen's University, Kingston, who has charge of the Government electrical department of the School of Mines, lectured here last evening in the assembly hall at St. Agnes' School. His subject was "Recent Developments in Electricity," which was ably treated showing its use for heating, lighting and power purposes. The speaker illustrated his remarks and also exhibited electrical appliances. Mr. W. S. Morden was Chairman. A vote of thanks to the lecturer was moved by Rev. D. F. Bogert and seconded by Col. Ponton. During the evening Miss M. Stork rendered two solos.

Steacy v. Stayner.—Judgment (G.A.B.) in action tried without a jury at Belleville. Action to recover $920 and notarial fees and interest on a promissory note made by one T. A. Stayner (now deceased), a brother of defendant, to plaintiff's order, and endorsed by defendant. The note was the last of a series of renewals made and endorsed in the same way, the original note having been for $1,700. The plaintiff and defendant were from the beginning accommodation endorsers for T. A. Stayner, who discounted the note with the Bank of Montreal at Brockville. Plaintiff paid the note, and seeks to recover the whole amount from defendant. The defence was that both plaintiff and defendant were endorsers for the accommodation of the maker, and admitted that plaintiff was entitled to recover one-half of the amount of the note, but denied any other liability. When the note was endorsed by dedorsed by defendant it was simply a blank form, which was afterwards filled up to plaintiff's order, and plaintiff placed his signature below defendant's name on the back of the note. Held, that the rights and liabilities of plaintiff and defendant as accommodation endorsers are governed by Macdonald v. Whitfield, 8 App. Cas. 733, and that plaintiff is only entitled to recover from defendant as a co-surety of the maker one-half the amount paid. Judgment for plaintiff for $460.65, with interest from October 6, 1902, together with costs up to filing of defence. Plaintiff to pay defendant's costs since filing defence. Set-off pro tanto to be made. E. G. Porter (Belleville) for plaintiff. J. A. Hutcheson, K.C., for defendant.

MOSES' BURNING BUSH.

A Natural Curiosity Which Tends to Explain Biblical Miracle.

Kew gardens, London's celebrated horticultural grounds on the Thames, has a new plant which is of uncommon interest because of the light which it seems to throw on one of the most famous of the Old Testament miracles. This plant has just been brought from the Arabian desert, and numerous scientists declare it to be identical with the "burning bush" which Moses saw burst into flame at his approach and blaze for some time without being consumed. The plant at Kew, which grows to the height of five or six feet, possesses the remarkable property of exhaling an inflammable gas from its flowers, which, on being approached by a light, takes fire and burns brightly for a few moments. The plant in the meanwhile remains uninjured owing to its sap.

In the hot deserts of Arabia, where the plant naturally grows more vigorously than at Kew, a larger quantity of this gas is exhaled, and it is probable that the fierce rays of the sun frequently cause it to take fire. It cannot be said that the discovery of this plant and its strange characteristics adds greatly to the impressiveness of the Bible story, but there it is, to be regarded as you please.

In appearance the "burning bush" plant suggests an arid, sterile habitat. Its leaves are of a dull sage green color, and the gas exhaling blossoms are pale pink.

It is not generally known that numerous flowers give forth gases in a small degree, notably the lily of the valley and the meadow sweet. The blossoms of both these plants exhale the fumes of deadly prussic acid by night, and all flowers throw of considerable quantities of carbonic acid gas in the darkness, this being why it is unhealthy to keep flowers in a bedroom.

Official Whisker Remedy.

Why use a razor? Why pay the barber 15 cents for a shave and 10 cents extra for not cutting your throat? The answer isn't "Let your whiskers grow" either, for Dr. Wolfram E. Dreyfus, chief chemist of the New York city department of charities, has compounded a little mixture which if rubbed over the face will do the trick as quickly and as well as the finest Sheffield razor. This is the wonder working compound: Barii sulphidi, 25 parts; saponia pulvis, 5 parts; talci veneti pulvis, 35 parts; tritci farinae, 35 parts; benzaldehydi, as much as necessary.

Dr. Dreyfus has been working for a long time on this "pulvis depilatorius," or shaving powder, and after many experiments he says that he has found something that is satisfactory and harmless.

The several ingredients mentioned above when mixed together make a powder. For the new scientific razorless shave you take one teaspoonful of the powder and mix it with three teaspoonfuls of water, making a paste which you apply to the face in a moderately thick and even layer with a brush from your otherwise discarded shaving outfit. After four or five minutes moisten the lather with a sponge and in five minutes more you can wash the mixture off, leaving a beardless, gashless face.

The new hair grows in much more slowly, but otherwise the effect is the same as that of a razor shave, except the cost of the new process, which is hardly worth considering.

Household Brevities.

Good housekeeping is applied humanitarianism.

A blanket under the sheet adds much to the warmth of a bed.

A little sal soda added to hard water will soften it when all else fails.

A teaspoonful of sugar in the stove blacking will add to the luster of the stove.

Rag carpets find favor as floor coverings in many houses now. They are of modern production, of course.

Leather bags, etc., may be freshened up by rubbing them well with a soft cloth dipped in white of egg.

Various causes have been assigned for "wrinkles around the mouth." Somebody now says they are due to talking too much!

Often a good washing in water to which ammonia has been added will remove much of the lackluster appearance of silver, but when it is badly tarnished there is nothing better for burnishing than whiting and ammonia.

A Genial Carver.

It was my good fortune once to be invited to dine with an eminent clergyman of New York city who was noted as a genial host and for the grace with which he presided at his table. Placing a fork in the turkey, without rising in his stirrups, but sitting in his chair, the good doctor laid the bird, well carved, nicely on the platter, entertaining all meanwhile with his wit and edifying humor. In admiration of his skill, I said, "Doctor, some day you must give me a few lessons in carving." "Indeed I will," he replied, with a smile, "but you will find it easy if you will always remember to cut off both wings the first thing you do when you begin to carve." "May I ask why the wings should be cut off first, doctor?" I asked. "Why? So the turkey will not fly all over the table."—Cor. Good Housekeeping.

Stuffing For Poultry, Lamb or Veal.

Chop a small onion and fry it slowly in a tablespoonful of butter only golden yellow. Add a teaspoonful of sifted thyme and summer savory and a tablespoonful of lemon juice. In a small saucepan mix a cupful of fine bread crumbs with a liberal lump of butter and hot water or stock to moisten slightly and add the onion. Beat a raw egg thoroughly and mix with the whole. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

Peanut Wafers.

To make delicious peanut wafers, chop one pint of the shelled nuts very fine, mix them with three eggs well beaten, add two tablespoonfuls of milk, a little salt and a cupful of sugar creamed with two tablespoonfuls of butter. Add enough flour to make a soft dough, roll very thin, cut into strips and bake.

Chocolate Fudge.

Take two cups of granulated sugar, one cup of milk, one-fourth cake of chocolate, a piece of butter the size of an egg. Boil rapidly, stirring all the while. It is delicious if eaten while warm.

UNDER THE ROSE.

The Term Which Stands as the Symbol of Closed Lips.

Sir T. Browne, in his "Inquiries Into Vulgar Errors," dated 1646, says of the old phrase sub rosa, "The expression is commendable, if the rose from any naturall propertie may be the symbole of silence," and goes on to quote some Latin lines which represent the rosebud folded in its sheath as an emblem of closed lips.

He also speaks of the secrecy to be observed "in society and compotation, from the ancient custome in Symposiacke meetings to wear chaplets of roses about their heads."

Others derive the expression from the fable that Cupid gave a rose to Harpocrates, the god of silence, as a bribe to prevent the disclosure of the amours of Venus.

There are many records of roses carved upon ceilings in early and in more modern times as reminders to guests that words spoken in convivial moments should not be repeated.

Stole Six of the Cannon.

Some persons, with a penchant for cannon, have, according to recent English papers, purloined six from the grounds of the famous Rotunda on Woolwich Common. All are of historical interest, and no trace of them has been discovered, in spite of the most vigorous efforts of the police and military authorities. The cannon are described as follows: A brass faucon, 1661. On the base ring is the inscription, "Gerard Koster me fecit Ao. 1661." (Gerard Koster made me in the year 1661.) The dolphins have been broken off. The vent is bouched with iron. Two figures of mermaids on a star beneath a crown and on the guns. Length, 3 feet 3[illegible] inches, calibre, 2.75 inches.

Bronze one-pounder, bearing the ordnance arms on the reinforce, and on the base, "A Schalch fecit me, 1727." Calibre, 1.6 ins., total length, [illegible]5 ins.

Bronze three-pounder, 1766. On the base ring, "J. et P. Verbruggan fecarunt 1776." Length, 3 feet, calibre, [illegible].92 ins., weight, 1 cwt. 94 lbs.

Brass swivel one-pounder cannon, time of George III., whose cypher with others is on the cannon, date about 1[illegible]85. The base ring bears an inscription, "Fydip P. Verbruggan, Woolwich" Calibre, 2.04 ins., total length, 3 ft. 6 ins.

Brass cannon, 1769. On the first reinforce a coronet; on the base ring the inscription, "In bburg ggossen." Length, 3 ft. 5 ins.; calibre, 2 ins.

Brass cannon from Borneo, without date; length, 4 ft. 11 ins.; calibre, 1.5 ins. There is a ball in the bore.

DUODECIMALISMS.

In Theory the Number 12 Is a Better Unit Than Is 10.

Herbert Spencer was ever opposed to the metric system. He was no such fool as to call the present British reckoning in pounds, shillings and pence satisfactory. His point was that the number 12 was a better unit than 10. Twelve is twice divisible where 10 is only once divisible. One-quarter of 10 is 2½, not an integral number. There are other reasons, based upon the observed workings of the human mind, all tending to show that to reckon in dozens is more natural than to reckon in tens as soon as man grows beyond the finger counting stage.

In scientific duodecimalism new characters would have to be designed for 10 and 11, while 12 itself would be written 10. The number now called 144 would be written as 100, and 1,728 would be 1,000. The present number 100 would be 84. In the course of a hundred years or so, when people had got used to it, the duodecimal system would be just as convenient as the decimal. Twelve inches would make a foot, twelve feet a rod, and so on.

In theory duodecimalism is sound.

But it is not an easy thing to change a people's standards of money, weights and measures.

What She Meant.

"Didn't I hear your wife refer to you as the human mince pie?" said the curious person.

"Yes," answered Mr. Sirius Barker.

"Is that a compliment"

"Not exactly. She means that I never agree with anybody."

As Usual.

"When I looked at this picture last week I failed to observe those goats down in the corner."

"Probably they butted in since then."

Ancient Cooking School.

We of the twentieth century are inclined to think of cooking schools as belonging exclusively to our day and generation. Therefore it may be news to many people that as long ago as the reign of good Queen Anne a Mr. Kiddee had a school of cookery in Queen street, Cheapside, and another in Holborn. Here is his advertisement—the original is on good paper, with a neatly engraved border:

> To All Young Ladies:
>
> At Edward Kiddee's pastry school, at Little Lincoln's Inn Fields, are taught all kinds of pastry and cookery, Dutch hollow works and butter works on Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays, in the afternoon, and on the same days in the morning at his school in Norris street, St. James Haymarket, and at his school at St. Martin's le Grand on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays, in the afternoons.

What Dutch hollow works may be none of the cooking schools of today seems to know, but they sound good.

Digestive System is Deranged.

At This Season of the Year—High Living and Little Exercise Bring On Dyspepsia and Other Troubles.

Disorders of the digestive system are not uncommon at this season of the year.

In cold weather there is a danger of overeating and a tendency towards the excessive use of highly seasoned food and stimulants.

The result is much suffering from indigestion, liver and kidney derangements and constipation.

If people could only understand how promptly and effectively such disorders are overcome by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, this great family medicine would be even more popular than it is to-day.

Unlike any other medicine these pills have direct and combined action on kidneys, liver and bowels, and for this reason reach and cure the most complicated ailments.

Dyspepsia and billiousness, liver complaint and kidney trouble, stomach troubles and constipation, backache and headache disappear in wonderfully short time when Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are used.

By assisting the kidneys in eliminating the poisonous waste matter, by helping the liver to filter the bile from the blood, by regulating the bowels Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver pills prevent and cure the most painful and fatal diseases known to man.

Mrs. Owen Cummings, Deseronto, Ont., states:—"I was in very poor health when I began to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I had been a great sufferer from constipation and stomach trouble and was weak and run down in strength. I was gradually growing worse every day and finally decided that I would have to do something. Hearing of many being cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, I began using them and soon noticed a marked change for the better. I continued this treatment until I was cured of constipation and my stomach was restored to a healthy condition. It only took about three boxes of pills to entirely cure me."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

NO SECRET.

There is no secret about Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. The label tells the whole story. There is a knack in making it. The only secret about it is the secret of its success.

This year, when cod liver oil is very scarce and high, all kinds of cheap, inferior oils are used to take its place, and all sorts of things presented as substitutes. Think of petroleum being taken as a substitute for cod liver oil!—too absurd. Think of the so-called wines, extracts and cordials of cod liver oil!—they are simply the shadow without the substance; no food value in them.

Scott's Emulsion—"The Old Reliable" is the same yesterday, to-day and forever.

Its quality and purity can be absolutely depended upon at all times.

We'll send you a sample free upon request.

Died at Berlin.

Berlin, Feb. 22.—Mrs. Elizabeth Harriett Moyer, relict of the late P. E. W. Moyer, editor of The Berlin Daily News, died at her residence, "The Retreat," here yesterday afternoon, aged 59. The deceased was born in Toronto and was the eldest daughter of the late Ald. William Ardagh of that city, who died in 1881. W. A. E. Moyer, of The St. Catharines Journal, is a son.

Big Fire at Woodstock.

Woodstock, Feb. 22.—At about 8 o'clock yesterday, fire was discovered in the store owned by Mrs. Kendall, and occupied by J. O. Trotter, clothier. Before the fire could be subdued the store and its contents were completely destroyed. Total loss on stock estimated at $19,000; insurance, $7,000; loss on building as yet unknown; insurance, $5,000.

RUSSIAN FLEET IS OUT

Four Vladivostock Warships Off Southern Japan.

OTHERS WATCHING FOR JAPS

Sounds of Cannonading Heard Saturday Off Minomisaki, on the Northern Part of Shimane Peninsula—Japanese Steamer Followed For Seven Miles Off Fusan—A Naval Engagement Not Unlikely—Jap Torpedo Boats Attempting Approach on Port Arthur.

Tokio, Feb. 22.—A telegram from Matsuye, a fortified town of southwestern Japan, reports that cannonading was heard on Saturday morning off Minamisaki, on the northern part of the Shimane Peninsula.

The crew of the Japanese steamer Tamagawayaru, which has arrived at Shimonoseki, reports that she was followed seven miles off Fusan, Corea, by four warships. The latter abandoned the chase near Tsushima Island, midway between Shimonoseki and Fusan.

Naval Engagement Not Unlikely.

Four Russian warships that were at Vladivostock when the war started cut their way out of the ice there, and have previously been reported as threatening the northern coast of Japan. Once they were falsely reported sunk by the Japanese. If they are now off the south coast of Japan, as indicated in the above despatch, they are a menace to the Japanese transports carrying the big army to Corea, though the latter are probably convoyed by a strong squadron of warships. A naval engagement is therefore not unlikely.

Watching For Japs.

Aden, Feb. 22.—The Peninsula & Oriental Company's steamer Mongolia encountered at noon on Saturday, 460 miles north of Aden, a Russian battleship and four torpedo boat destroyers. After the vain attempt of a destroyer to cut off the Mongolia, all the warships gave chase, but, being unable to overtake her, they signalled her to stop. The Mongolia obeyed and a destroyer, after a close scrutiny, signalled "Beg to be excused." The fleet is evidently hoping to capture Japanese ships.

Japs About Port Arthur.

Port Arthur, Feb. 22.—Sounds of desultory firing at sea are heard almost nightly, and yesterday morning firing was again heard. This is doubtless due to the attempted approach of Japanese torpedo boats, but nothing serious has developed. The garrison is in excellent spirits and is firmly convinced of the ultimate success of the Russian arms.

The Novikrai prints a long article invoking historical precedents to prove the illegality of the Japanese declaration that coal and victuals will in cases be treated as contraband of war. The paper describes Japan's attitude as barefaced presumption and urges the neutral powers to disregard and not to refuse to supply belligerent ships with coal to carry them to their nearest home port.

It follows, therefore, The Novikrai says, that the British Government should allow Russian ships at Singapore to take on sufficient coal to enable them to reach Port Arthur.

Razed Within 2 Months.

Che Foo, Feb. 22.—The Russian military authorities are pouring troops into Port Arthur as fast as possible. All non-combatants are leaving, and every preparation is being made for a protracted seige. Nothing has transpired anent the Japanese movements, but high officers declare Port Arthur will be taken within two months. Reliable information as to their plan of campaign cannot be obtained, but the greatest activity prevails.

To Defend Port Arthur.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 22.—A despatch from Port Arthur announces that, by order of Viceroy Alexieff, an irregular volunteer corps is being raised to defend that fortress. The men will be provided by the state with arms, rations and the necessary clothing. It is thought, the despatch adds, that Japan regards foodstuffs consigned to Port Arthur as absolute contraband of war, and that she will undertake the capitulation of Port Arthur by a siege.

Russian Merchant Ships Warned.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 22.—The Minister of Finance has warned all Russian merchant ships to remain south of Shanghai, as the Japanese have a squadron composed of one battleship, two first and two second-class cruisers and eleven torpedo boats, off Amoy, China, for the purpose of intercepting merchantmen.

Czar to Take Command.

Rome, Feb. 22.—According to The Agenzia Libera, the Czar will go to the Far East at the beginning of spring, to take command of the army.

Wirenius Called Back.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 22.—The report that Admiral Wirenius, who, with his squadron has been awaiting orders at Jibutil French Somaliland, had been instructed to abandon his voyage to the Far East is confirmed. The squadron will probably return to the Baltic.

Toga's Cruisers All Right.

Tokio, Feb. 22.—The reports from various quarters saying that Admiral Toga's fleet was partly crippled in the operations at Port Arthur are unfounded. It was necessary to send a single large ship to Sasebo for repairs. Two torpedo destroyers have been damaged, but not in fighting. Five New Russian Warships.

Berlin, Feb. 22.—The five new Russian battleships which have been in course of construction for some years have now been completed, and are ready for sea. They will comprise part of the new squadron which is being organized for the Far East, and is to sail whenever the necessary arrangements are completed.

Russian Gunboat Not Wanted.

Shanghai, Feb. 22.—Urged by the Japanese consul here The Taotai ordered the Russian gunboat Mandajur to leave the harbor before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, but the order was ignored. It is reported that a Chinese squadron has been ordered here to enforce The Taotai's demand and to enable Japanese steamship companies to resume service between Japan and Shanghai.

Ships Pass in the Night.

Island of Perim, Red Sea, Feb. 22.—A squadron of warships passed here at midnight Friday, bound for Suez. It was believed to be the Russian squadron recently at Jibutil, French Somaliland.

Japs Seize Russian Steamer.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 22.—A Russian correspondent of the Associated Press at Port Arthur reports that the steamer Shilka left Vladivostock, Feb. 3, and arrived at Tsushima (a Japanese island northwest of Nagasaki), Feb. 6. Here the steamer was seized, and, without explanation, taken to Nagasaki Bay.

The French Squadron.

Brest, France, Feb. 22.—The torpedo boat destroyers Pistolet and Javelin will leave here for Algiers on Wednesday to join the destroyers Mousequet and Frande and the cruiser d'Assas. All the warships will then proceed to the Far East.

LOST LIFE FOR OTHERS.

Two Men Die in Brave Attempts to Save Others.

Ithaca, N.Y., Feb. 22.—In a brave attempt to save the life of Ames G. Allen of Chicago, with whom he was skating on Cayuga Lake, Louis T. Dickinson of New York City, a senior in the college of law at Cornell, lost his life yesterday. The two young men had skated as far as Atwater, 18 miles north of Ithaca, when Allen broke through the ice. While attempting to pull him out Dickinson fell in and sank. Allen was dragged ashore after having been in the water more than half an hour.

Gave His Life For Another.

New York, Feb. 22.—William Mara, a member of the cadet battalion of St. Bartholomew's parish, lost his life yesterday while rescuing women from a fire at a boarding house in East 61st street. When there was a call for help the young man was in uniform and dashed into the house and carried out a young Roman. He died of suffocation. Many women in a hysterical condition or overcome by smoke were rescued from the house. The property loss was small.

FROZEN TO DEATH.

Aged and Rich Old Woman Found Dead By Her Bedside.

Wiarton, Feb. 22.—What appears to be a case of death by freezing, or foul play, was discovered six miles west of here, at Oliphant, yesterday morning. An old lady named Mrs. Cochrane was found dead by her bedside, frozen stiff. For years the old lady has lived a secluded existence, in a little shanty in the woods. She was the possessor of a good bank account. The severity of the recent storm and her helplessness make it probable that she was the victim of the weather. There was no wood and little to eat in the house. An inquest will be held.

Rev. Mr. McLaren Badly Burned.

Winnipeg, Man., Feb. 22.—Serious disaster was averted by prompt action of church attenders at the Presbyterian Church service at Stonewall last evening. A lamp over the pulpit exploded and spread fire in all directions. The flames were extinguished, but not before the pastor, Rev. Mr. McLaran, was badly burned about the face and hands. The damage to property is slight.

Out Of The Beaten Path

Is the way of the man who originates—of the maker's who strives to produce a better article than his competitor.

The merchant who buys clothing made by firms who do not deviate from the time-travelled Clothes Trial and who—because it was good enough for our forefathers, offers the same style ot clothing today is following the "beaten path."

OUR clothing is manufactured by firms who have dared to go out of the "beaten path"—by firms who originate and manufacture "modern" clothing.

These firms are composed only of YOUNG MEN THIS IS THE SECRET of their success.

We have already received several shipments of our spring clothing.

If you have heretofore been prejudiced against Ready-to-Wear Clothing—overcome this for once and try OUR MODERN garments. You will find them the DIFFERENT kind.

THE WEST AND THE G. T. P.

The following from the Winnipeg Tribune (Liberal), shows that the sentiment in the west against the Grand Trunk Pacific scheme is not confined to Conservative organs; the west is solid against the bungled-up scheme. The Tribune says:

"The Ottawa Government will take note of the fact that the grain growers of Manitoba are not supporters of a policy by which it is intended to build a line of railway from Winnipeg to Moncton at a cost of considerably over $100,000,000, and then hand it over to a private company for at least half a century; nor are they supporters of a policy by which the credit of the country is to be loaned to a private company to build up a line of railway from Winnipeg to the Pacific coast, the ownership of which will remain in private hands in perpetuity. The resolution passed by the Manitoba Grain Growers' Association at Brandon reads:—

> 'In view of the continued dissatisfaction arising out of our present transportation system in Canada, we avail ourselves of this opportunity of reaffirming our confidence in Government ownership of railways as the ultimate solution of the transportation question, and in this connection beg to state that nothing short of actual ownership and actual operation in the interests of the people will be satisfactory to the public.'

"This is the plainest English; it is a protest against the present iniquitous scheme of the Government, having in view the throttling of genuine Government ownership for half a century to come. The grain growers of Manitoba believe with Mr. Blair, head of the Government Railway Commission, that so far as the welfare of the country is concerned, 'there is no object, good, bad or indifferent, to be attained by the Government's course. It is not only the destruction of the Intercolonial Railway (which should be extended westward), but it is a sheer unjustifiable squandering of the public money.' The farmers of Manitoba, who are the mainstay of the west, want actual ownership and actual operation. They are practically a unit in their opposition to the Government's great gift operation, the unwisdom and folly of which is becoming more apparent each day. The original scheme was passed in haste; close friends of the Government, Mr. Blair tells us, were in a hurry; they stampeded the Premier. His best friends advise him to-day to change his policy."

We are greatly obliged to our customers for their quick appreciation of

Our New Chewing Taffy

TIMELY TOPICS.

Some of those pictures we see in shop windows nowadays are awfully lightly clothed for this weather.

• • •

"Why, doctor, you're getting very grey," said a citizen to a local medical man yesterday.

"Grey!" said the doctor, "well, if you had as many pneumonia cases as I have to look after I guess it would make your hair grey, too. It is positively shocking almost, to think of the amount of serious illness there is in and around this city. I never saw anything like it, and hope I never will again."

Which shows that doctors have feelings, though we don't always give them credit for it.

A fellow up west has discovered a scheme for making hens lay in cold weather. He throws their feed on straw, so that they have to scratch for it. The exercise, he says, will make them lay in the coldest weather. Nothing like exercise.

That wave of patriotism which is said to be sweeping over Russia will probably turn out to be a cold wave.

• • •

"All the world is arming for the fray," and, in case the war does become general, some military reputations will become sadly frayed.

• • •

"And they are still fighting in the Philippines!" Gracious! Isn't it about time that war was over?

• • •

"Decidedly cold to-morrow," says Old Probs. Where is that base deceiver who said the backbone of winter was broken?

• • •

The Russian fleet is now at sea, and the Russian generals appear to be likewise.

• • •

Emperor William has been writing some more letters, of the fool variety, as usual. His latest epistle was to the Czar, "expressing the heartiest sympathy." If there is one situation more than another that a sensible man would be liable to keep out of "Billy of the Mailed Fist" can be depended on to butt into it.

• • •

Perhaps somebody hypnotized poor Sam Thompson, of Toronto, and made him believe he was handling a Christmas turkey when he operated on those ballot boxes.

• • •

Some folks are looking for an early spring, but that fellow who was cleaning off a Front St. roof got an early fall this morning.

A panic was caused on the Paris Bourse owing to the rumor that Russia had defaulted the payment of her coupon due on Government bonds. Like the manager of the local hockey team, the Parisians don't think much of defaulters.

The wind to-day made a mournful sound. Hard to say whether it was caused by blowing through the wires or through the whiskers of the men who were shovelling the snow off the roofs.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

COMIC OPERA TO-NIGHT.

Comic opera is a form of amusement that never palls on the ordinary theatre-goer. Therefore the visit of the Wilbur Opera Company to the Carman for two nights and Tuesday matinee should be doubly welcome. The old favorite, "Mascotte," will be presented, and the company is particularly strong in singers and funny comedians, among whom are Miss Minnie Emmett, the prima donna; Marion Langdon, as alternate; Martin Pache, Franklin Fox, Henry Peakes, Tom Smith Martin, W. A. McGraw, Charles Van Dyne, Ethel Hunt, Lottie Reick and others, besides a chorus of pretty girls. To fill in time between the acts Manager Fullwood has engaged several vaudeville acts of a high-class order.

Cemetery Lot in Litigation.

County Court was held Saturday by Judge Lazier to determine the owner of a lot in the Belleville Cemetery. Fred Butler, the plaintiff, bought the lot in November, 1884, but got no deed at the time. In May, 1884, a deed of the lot was issued by the cemetery company to the plaintiff and his sister, Emma, the defendant, jointly. There was a lively conflict of testimony as to how the deed came to be issued in this form, the plaintiff contending that the whole lot should have been deeded to him and the defendant that it should have been deeded all to her. Nearly every member of the family gave evidence on one side or the other, as well as the cemetery officials, and a mass of documents were examined. Judgment was reserved. W. C. Mikel for plaintiff; Porter & Carnew for defendant.

New G. T. R. Agent at Napanee.

The freight department of the Grand Trunk Railway here seems to be a favorite place to get reliable men from, whose services meet with reward. Within a short period Mr. S. A. Larke has been appointed agent at Trenton. Mr. Purdy, agent at Oshawa, subsequently at Napanee. Mr. Ryan, cashier of the freight department at Port Hope, and now Mr. Cole Hamly has received his appointment as agent at Napanee. The business men and carters will regret Mr. Hamly's removal, as he has been an obliging, painstaking official, but will congratulate him on his promotion.

THE LENTEN SUMMONS

PREACHER SOUNDS UNIVERSAL CALL TO ALL CLASSES.

TO ANNUAL SPIRITUAL DUTIES

"Sanctify Ye a Fast; Call a Solemn Assemblage," Applies to the Rich and the Poor Alike, the Social Devotee, the Business Man, the Humble Worker and the Homekeeper—The Spring Fast.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by William Baily, of Toronto, at the Dep't of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 21.—In this sermon the preacher sounds the Lenten call to all classes—the social devotee, the business man, the humble worker and the homekeeper, the rich and the poor alike—as a summons to the annual duties of the season of spiritual preparation. The text is Joel i, 14, "Sanctify ye a fast; call a solemn assemblage."

The Presbyterian Church has enrolled among its leaders many intellectual theologians. Entitled to a prominent place among them by his learning, philosophic acumen and sanctified common sense is Dr. Francis L. Patton, formerly president of Princeton University and now President of Princeton Theological Seminary. Many of his weighty utterances have impressed me, but none more than one he made on the value and usefulness of the Episcopalian Church.

His words in substance were: "I believe the Episcopalian Church is one of the most effective churches in existence to-day. I believe in its ritual; I believe in its teachings. If I were not a Presbyterian, I would certainly be an Episcopalian. But, though I love and honor the Episcopalian Church, I also believe that the most absurd of monstrosities is a Presbyterian in his form of worship trying to ape an Episcopalian. While we are Presbyterians let us remain Presbyterians. When we want to become Episcoplaians in our form of worship, in responsive readings and in all that the Episcopalian service implies, let us become Episcopalians. But do not let us try to change the Presbyterian pulpit into a chancel or the grand old simple service of the Presbyterian Church into a concert by a surpliced choir and into the liturgy of the Episcopalian Church."

Amen, say I, to the sound advice of Dr. Patton. The simple doxology, the two or three congregational hymns, the chapter read from the Bible, the earnest prayers and the doctrinal as well as practical sermon can never be excelled as a service for the grand old church which the names of John Calvin and John Knox and Thomas Chalmers and Thomas Guthrie and Lowell Mason and William Taylor and John Hall have made immortal. But, though I would not have the Presbyterian Church adopt a ritual, I still insist that the Episcopalian Church has not an exclusive title to all the good things she may hold dear. Especially do I affirm that she has not a sole right to her spring fast, which starts with Ash Wednesday and closes with Easter's dawn. 'Way back in Joel we read the command, "Sanctify ye a fast; call a solemn assemblage." If that divine command is still in force for us as for God's ancient people, is there a better time for its observance than the period preceding our commemoration of the passion and resurrection of our Lord? It was at this season of the year, too, that the Master withdrew to the desert before the beginning of his ministry and there, fasting for forty days, prepared for the ordeal of his temptation. It will be well for Presbyterians as for Episcopalians to meditate on that experience of our Lord and draw near to him in our hearts. We must have self abnegation for sin before we can truly have closer union with God. Therefore the purpose of this sermon is to show why the Episcopalian Lent should become a Presbyterian Lent, also why the "spring fast," which is the time of the "lengthening of days," should be observed all the world over by all Christians, no matter to what individual churches they may belong.

The Episcopalin Lent, in the first place, calls a halt to the social dissipations now being practiced in all the large cities. It cries, "Peace, be still!" to the social whirlpool, which is gradually sucking down its many struggling victims as Peter was once being drawn into the depths of the Galilean lake. It says to the women of the "social abyss," "You have something higher to live for than a nightly round of receptions and parties and a never ending succession of afternoon teas." It says to the young men of the "social abyss," who, under the power of stimulants, are trying to work in the store day by day and to dance almost every night until 1 or 2 o'clock in the morning, "Young man, you had better stop and consider to what purpose you are devoting the best energies of your life." It warns the social devotee of the spiritual danger of his course, as a noted New York capitalist warned him of the financial danger, when some time ago he said: "The young men who will not succeed in business are those who night after night may be found in the ballrooms and the dance halls and at the city clubhouses drinking a little, playing cards a little and eating expensive dinners. They are sometimes called the drones of society. This is a misnomer. Like some small insects that sport for a day in the summer sunshine, they are minute destructives. Their lives in the economy of social life make one of the petty agencies of degeneration."

Was not the capitalist right? Are not the ball-room and the dance hall and the clubhouse a continual menace to success in business? Can a young man go to a progressive euchre party and play cards until 11 o'clock and sit down to a midnight banquet and then be in the right physical and mental trim to sell goods in the store the next morning? Is not the social shrine also a very poor foundation upon which to build the altar of Jesus Christ? Is not most of its influence spiritually depleting? Some time ago I read a wonderful book entitled "The Call of the Wild." The central figure of that story was a magnificent dog, a cross between a St. Bernard and a Great Dane. He was stolen from his California home and sent far north into the Klondike regions, where he was compelled to drag the miners' sleds over the Alaskan snows. Jack London, the writer, with a master hand traces him from a great, big, loving house dog down and down until he is a dog thief among dog thieves. He traces his degeneracy down and down until at last the bayings of the wolves call him into the darkness of the northern forests, and "the call of the wild" is answered by "the response of the wild."

Is not society's call too often "the call of the wild?" In the social world when you give a banquet do you not for the most part ask only those in your own social set? Do you obey the divine command, "When thou makest a dinner or a supper call not thy friends nor thy brethren, neither thy kinsmen nor thy rich neighbors lest they also bid thee again and a recompense be made thee. But when thou makest a feast call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind, and thou shalt be blessed, for they cannot recompense thee, but thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just." Is not society's call often "the call of the wild" because it is a call to selfishness, the call of only doing good to them who do good to you? Is it not often the call merely of wealth to associate with wealth and social caste with social caste? Oh, ye worshipers at the social shrines, better heed to-day the Lenten call! Better snuff out the many lights of the ball-rooms and the banquet halls! Know ye not that during the "spring fast" the lowly Nazarene is knocking at the door of your hearts trying to get in?

The Episcopalian Lent, in the next place, is a protest against business absorption. It says to the merchant, the manufacturer and the professional man: "You have a right to work. Indeed, you must work and work hard if you are to support your family and meet the financial necessities which are yours. But, oh, man, you have no right to make the acquisition of money the chief object of your life any more than you have a right to live to eat. 'By the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread.' But that sweat should not make thee indifferent to God or to the higher purposes of life, for which thou wert created."

But the great danger of money making is that the acquisition of wealth may become a passion. The calls of the money market become so great and urgent that an average business man does not feel that he has time to stop and think about his relations to God. But though the business world would demand all of a man's energies, the Lenten season comes into a busy merchant's life and says, "Oh, man, you should never be too busy to take time to think of your responsibilities to God!"

The Episcopalian Lent, in the next place, is a time for spiritual housecleaning. As the "spring fast" immediately succeeds the time when the business man takes an account of stock, we find the spring fast comes just before the days when the housewives are turning the houses upside down in their semi-annual attacks upon the dust and the moths. It is the time which we husbands dread, but it is the housecleaning time, which every prudent wife declares is essential for the physical health of her family. It is absolutely necessary to keep physical dirt out of a house, yet in spite of all precautions it will keep creeping in everywhere. Although the workmen in the Philadelphia mint are as careful as they can be, the dirt and the fine particles of gold will sift through the floor cracks. So great are these siftings that every year the floor is taken up and the dirt is separated from the gold, and thousands of dollars' worth of gold are thus collected for the United States treasury. In spite of all our precautions the minute, innumerable stains of sin will creep into the heart. Therefore each year it is very desirable to obey the call to the Lenten spring fast.

Once a year is certainly not too often to take a spiritual accounting and to conduct a serious self examination. The call to a fast should reach the ear of every Christian. What does that mean? Shall our wives and mothers and sisters go to the grocer and the butcher and the baker and say, "We do not want any more meat or vegetables or bread for the next forty days?" Does it mean that all the members of a home shall go without physical nutrition, as Dr. Tanner fasted for forty days and Leonard Thress fasted for fifty days and Rev. C. H. Dalrymple fasted for thirty-nine days and Milton Rathburn fasted for thirty-six days and Estella F. Kuenzel fasted for forty-one days? Oh, no. The habit of fasting, inspired by boastful folly and the desire of seeing how long we can live without tasting food, is just as sinful as the opposite extreme of gluttony, to see how much one can eat without utterly destroying the smooth workings of the digestive organs.

Spiritual housecleaning does not mean the complete abstinence from physical food. It does mean emphatically the reconsecration and the rededication of the domestic fireside to Jesus Christ through self abnegation. It means that we shall have prayers at the cradle. It means that we shall have prayers in the bedroom and prayers in the parlor and prayers in the sitting room and prayers in the kitchen and have the dining room spread with a gospel banquet of the "bread of life."

The Lenten season in the home means simply the spiritual preparation for Christ to visit the home. When Martin Farquhar Tupper, the famous English poet, came to visit us in Brooklyn we gave to him the very best room in the house. We gathered together the most famous literary men of the city to meet him. At that party Horace Greeley came, and William Cullen Bryant came and read his "Thanatopsis," and George William Curtis came, and I think John G. Whittier came. I well remember my mother giving to me Tupper's popular book, "Proverbial Philosophy," and saying: "Read that book. You should know who Martin Farquhar Tupper is before he comes, and then you can honor him as he should be honored." In like manner the Lenten season in the home is an appropriate time for the spiritual preparation for Christ's coming to the home. The children should be told all about him and be prepared to welcome the Saviour as a friend. The cook and the chambermaid should be told all about him, so that they may know how Christ loved Martha, the busy cook, as well as the gentle Mary who sat at his feet. Home friends should be told all about him, so that they also may come in and honor the divine guest. We should prepare to greet Christ not as a stranger, but as a long loved and anxiously awaited friend.

The Lenten season is an annual plea for the spiritualization of the church. Ministers of the different Protestant Churches are more and more getting into the custom of going into a "retreat" at least once a year, where by fasting and prayer they may spiritually prepare themselves for their ecclesiastical ministrations. At least once a year as church members we should go into a spiritual "retreat." In that "retreat" we should call upon our Heavenly Father that the Holy Spirit may bless us in our relationship with our midweek prayer meetings and Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor Societies and bless us in our relationship to his great church at large.

After Jesus Christ drove the money changers out of the temple, were the attempts to secularize the house of God into a place for mere educational and literary and musical and social and financial enjoyment forever abandoned? Do not some of us, consciously and unconsciously, fall into the error of coming to church merely on account of the oratorical gifts of the preacher? Did not thousands upon thousands of worshipers sit at the feet of a Beecher, a Cumming, a Rowland Hill and a John Wesley, not because they were worshiping God, but rather because they were worshiping a brilliant man?

We know that the finest living musical composer of Italy leads the Vatican choir and the finest organist of all London is master of St. Paul's famous organ and that Plymouth church was not more noted for the fact that it had one of the greatest of musicians, who was able to make its organ pipes weep and sob as well as sound a mighty hosanna. Are not some of our churches on account of their wealth being more and more secularized into mere social clubs? Do not many professional men go to church not for the spiritual good they may get out of those churches, but that they may be able to come in touch with those who worship in those congregations? Is it not becoming more and more the custom for the members of the church boards of trustees to judge of the success or the failure of the church by the criterion of money—by the way that church in its collections is able to take in as well as give out wealth?

Oh, yes, my friends, the church members should heed the Lenten summons. They should heed the spiritual call, which soars above the discordant ones of the busy marts even as the clear note of the thrush may be heard above the bedlam of the woods sounding the reveille of the morning. They should hear the Lenten call which says to the clergyman, "Oh, ordained undershepherd of the Christian pulpit, down on your knees and pray!" Lent calls to the elders and deacons and Sunday school officers, "Down on your knees and pray!" It calls to the lay members, whether bediamonded and in silks or in humble homespun, "Down on your knees in prayer!" Oh, that we might all heed the spiritual Lenten call and make Christ's church a veritable "house of prayer."

Thus, my friends, the spring fast calls to the men in the social world and to the men in the business world and to the men in the home and to the men in the church to come to prayers. It calls at this time because on the coming Ash Wednesday we shall celebrate the beginning of one of the most triumphant and yet saddest times of all Christ's earthly existence. The Jordanic baptism was just over. Christ was about to begin his divine mission. We know not how far the human nature he assumed may have obscured for the time the divine attributes he possessed. It may be that in those forty days of solitary thought and prayer he realized more clearly than in his former years the sublimity of his work and of his scarifice. He saw what his work was to be. He saw how he must carry the burden of man's sins and die for man and be resurrected before he could return to his Father's throne.

May this coming spring fast of the Lenten season be to you also a time of spiritual awakening. May it be a time when you will not only realize that God has a glorious earthly work for you to do, but a time when you can realize that after work is done you shall live on and on and with Christ and never die. May you during the next coming forty days be much in prayer, much in earnest beseechment. May you also feel and know that the way you are to be best fitted for that earthly work is by the depth of your repentance as well as by the height of your glorious and triumphant faith.

Workingman's Underprice Store.

THE GREAT EASTERN STOCK COMPANY

Distributors of General Merchandise.

Opened their doors Saturday, Feb. 20th, and we feel highly gratified at the success made possible, not only because we proved our classification as the underpriced store to the attendants, but because you and your friends have shown such widespread interest in this new store.

"We are large buyers," "big capital," buy mill ends in English, French and German goods stopped in transit. This syndicate has three buyers in the market every day in the year, and you will find it much to your advantage to make this your trading place, as we propose to make this store the storm centre for underpriced merchandise. We figure a nimble nickel is worth a slow dollar.

Keep in mind the place—look for the red ticket, the bargain indicator. Every preparation is being made for fast selling, "it's the new idea." Everybody waits on themselves.

Silence is the fence around wisdom, be wise, buy now and wear a smile that won't come off.

W. B. Barnes,

SALES MANAGER.

Jean Paul Richter once observed that if a lady officer wanted to give the word "Halt!" she would do it in the following strain: "You soldiers, all of you, now mind what I say. I order you as soon as I have done speaking to stand still, every one of you, on the spot where you happen to be. Don't you hear me? Halt, I say, all of you!"

Upon this a strongminded woman made the following comment: "Now, M. Jean, it was an unlucky day on which you wrote that sentence. May you never hear anything but that little, concise word 'No' from every rosy pair of lips you meet. May you halt wifeless through life. May your buttons be snappish, your strings knotty and your stockings full of holes. May your bootjack be missing, your feet corny and your shaving water cold; your razor dull, your hair stand up, your collar lie down. May your beard be porcupiny, your whiskers thinly settled and your mustaches curl the wrong way. May your coffee be muddy, your toast smoky and your tea water bewitched; and, with a never dying desire for affection, may you crawl through creation a meek, miserable, nasty, forlorn, fidgety, fussy, ridiculous, ruined, dejected old bachelor."

THE ABUSED OYSTER.

Fattened For the Vulgar Crowd and Deprived of His Fine Flavor.

The oyster in his glory is a rich, dark colored, shapely inhabitant of salt water. He is plump, but not swelled up, and has a delicious, incomparable salty flavor which nobody who really knows him and has the taste to appreciate him would ever dream of spoiling with crude condiments. But rarely will the oysterman send such an exquisite creature to market. It is not fat enough or white enough for the vulgar crowd. So he puts it in fresh, or nearly fresh, water to "fatten"—that is, he draws out the fine natural juices by a process of osmosis and substitutes therefor a quantity of water which distends it like a balloon and makes it just as tasteless. But it looks fat like a scrawny Christmas turkey judiciously fed by an air pump. Then it is put before the American as an oyster, and the American, who judges his food and drink largely by labels, pours over it salt, pepper, tabasco, Worcestershire, horseradish or what not and thinks it is all right. He might as well have any sort of sea urchin that was soft and puffy and wet as a vehicle for the concoctions which he used to make himself believe that an oyster tastes like something.

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN

When buying clothing, beware of the man who offers you $10 and $12 suits or overcoats for $3.98 or $4.76 Then again, do not be governed too much by the marked price—look to the value, the worth, the texture, trimmings and make of the goods themselves. A comparison thus made will show conclusively that the prices we quote are lower than goods of equal worth or quality can be bought for elsewhere.

A QUESTION OF COLOR.

The Matter of Height Didn't Seem to Figure in the Scheme.

The young man considers himself a man of resources, although he is not as sure about it now as he was a few days ago. He has been very attentive to a certain young lady, and he was calling on her at the time that he partially lost confidence in his resourceful mind.

It is unnecessary to narrate what passed between them upon the occasion in question, but at the time the young lady's sister entered the room he was in the act of folding the young lady to his manly bosom.

Of course he desisted at once, as young men generally do under such circumstances, but he was not embarrassed—not a bit.

The young lady's sister said, "Excuse me," and started to leave the room, when his resourceful mind began to work. He felt that he ought to say something and say it right away.

"Don't go," he said; "we've just been measuring to see which one is the taller."

She paused in the doorway and looked at them intently.

"You're both about the same height," she said quietly, "but sister is much the redder."

Then she went out, and he was embarrassed—just a little.

ANCIENT BABYLON.

Its Great Wall Was One of the Wonders of Those Days.

According to Herodotus, the ancient city of Babylon stood on a broad, level plain and was an exact square of fourteen miles each way, making the entire circuit of the city fifty-six miles. It was protected both by a wall and a moat, the latter being broad and deep and kept constantly filled with water. But the wall was the wonder of wonders, being 93 1-3 feet in width and an even 200 feet in height. This monster barrier was provided with 100 gates, all of solid brass, the lintels and side pieces being in bronze. Cross walls ran along the banks of the Euphrates, each provided with twenty-five gates, which corresponded to the number of streets running in each direction from the river.

The most remarkable edifice inside the wall was the temple of Bel, a pyramid of eight square stadia. On the summit of this pyramid stood a pure gold image of Bel forty feet high, two other smaller figures of the same precious metal and a golden table forty feet long and fifteen feet wide. This wonderful city first came prominently into the history of the world in the year 747 B. C., but since the time of Alexander the Great it has been a ruin, the site having at one time been entirely lost.

This is Washington's birthday, and our cousins across the line will to-day dig up a lot of new fairy tales about the man who couldn't tell one himself.

Said a lady to The Intelligencer: "Why don't some of the men take hold of the Old Boys' reunion for next summer, and do something!"

The newspaper man admitted that he was not much good at conundrums.

"Why," went on the fair speaker, "my brother is working in a small city up west, and he writes us that there are ten Belleville boys there, all of whom intend to come to the reunion, if there is one. It would be a splendid thing and good for the city, too. I'll tell you, if the men won't take it up you'll have to get the women to do it. They will make it successful, too."

* * *

There is undoubtedly a lot of hard common sense in that remark. If the ladies go after the Old Boys they will surely get them, and that's no idle midwinter joke. But why don't some of our prominent citizens or public bodies take this matter up? Everybody is anxious to help it along and it would be a fine thing for the city, besides furnishing unlimited enjoyment for large numbers of people. Come now, gentlemen, either tackle the job yourselves or turn it over to the Ladies' Aid.

TENDENCY OF THE TIMES.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

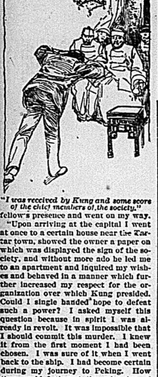
THE YELLOW MAN.

A THRILLING STORY OF THE BOXERS IN CHINA.

BY CARLTON DAWE.

Copyright, 1900.
By Paul R. Reynolds.

distinctively that I was followed every step of the way. Indeed more than once, unless I was much mistaken, I could have laid my hand on the society's spy. But that occasioned me no concern, for Kung did not do business on a haphazard principle. I ignored the fellow's presence and went on my way.



"I was received by Kung and some score of the chief members of the society."

"Upon arriving at the capital I went at once to a certain house near the Tartar town, showed the owner a paper on which was displayed the sign of the society, and without more ado he led me to an apartment and inquired my wishes and behaved in a manner which further increased my respect for the organization over which Kung presided. Could I single handed hope to defeat such a power? I asked myself this question because in spirit I was already in revolt. It was impossible that I should commit this murder. I knew it from the first moment I had been chosen. I was sure of it when I went back to the ship. I had become certain during my journey to Peking. How then could I thwart the scheming of Kung and his confederates, how save myself? To leave the capital without accomplishing my purpose would be to court instant death, for death was the punishment of those who disobeyed the mandates of the society. To betray the society was a last thought, but it was one that had been knocking at the door of my brain, and now it entered. There was for me no other way of escaping my destiny. I must murder Lowan or betray my friends. Stay! There was still another way. I might commit suicide. But, truth to tell, this last resource did not appeal to me. The society would make me a murderer. Was I not justified in grappling with such a fate?

"When one wishes to justify oneself, the adaptability of the human conscience is nothing short of marvelous. I wished to believe that I would be doing right in betraying this awful plot, and I had little difficulty in convincing myself of the genuineness of that belief. I offer no excuse for my double dealing, and I solicit no apology. It was a matter of life and death, and I was not base enough to murder nor heroic enough to die.

"Accordingly I sought out Lowan and after due precautions unfolded the whole conspiracy, and he, cunning dog that he was, commended me highly for my devotion to the throne and promised to overwhelm me with riches if my story should prove true. The discovery of such a plot as this would mean for him a viceroyalty at least. The emperor did not forget those who served him well. The Son of Heaven was the cornerstone of wisdom, the fount of all human intelligence. To encounter the glory of his august smile was to enter the radius of paradise. Lowan had visions—visions.

"Well, we arranged our plot so nicely that the conspiracy was nipped in the bud. Most of the ringleaders were apprehended and many of the rank and file, but Kung, the brain, the soul, of the society, escaped.

"With him alive, even though crippled and a fugitive, I knew that it was but a poor life I carried about with me, though you may take it for granted that I had so arranged matters with Lowan as to appear still a faithful servant of the society. And here again I wish emphatically to add that I offer no apology for this subterfuge. It was a case of committing a foul murder or laying bare this monstrous plot. There was no middle way, no half measures. It was kill or be killed. I chose that which I considered the wiser course, though I have taken leave to doubt the wisdom since. Kung was a diabolical miscreant, absolutely devoid of pity or conscience, a man who never allowed one touch of humanity to interfere with his plans. Curses on his yellow face and his pig eyes! I see those eyes now. They peer at me through the window, they glare up at me from this paper as I write, they haunt me in my dreams! Kill him! Kill him!

"Well, Lowan was as good as his word. He paid me well and smuggled me safely to Hongkong. From thence I went a round of the islands, and when I came back I believed that the Society of the Hidden Meaning was a thing of the past. True, Kung had escaped, but most of the other leaders had been taken and summarily executed. This, so I thought and hoped, meant a death blow to the organization. Presently I was to be disagreeably surprised.

"I had returned to Shanghai from a trip to the Philippines, and on the second day of my arrival, about 10 in the evening, as I was going down to my ship, a cooly sidled up to me and slipped a paper into my hand. I guessed instinctively what it meant. I remembered all too vividly the last time such a thing occurred. I was rather glad of the night.

"However, I drew near a lamp and opened the missive. It was a square sheet of black paper, in the middle of which was the vermilion sign of the society. So the snake had been only scotched after all.

"I turned round and discovered the cooly by my side.

"'Well?' I said.

"'The master waits,' he answered.

"My first impulse was to ignore this command, make my way to the ship and fortify myself. And then I thought of the man beside me and wondered what his orders were. Acting quickly, for a sudden thought had come, I put out my hand to seize him, but he sprang back so sharply that I was foiled in the attempt. Looking about me, I thought I saw two shadows farther down the road.

"I now realized that this was a serious business, that the society, under the indefatigable Kung, had been reconstructed and that I was suspected. I knew, moreover, that to be suspected was equivalent to condemnation. The Society of the Hidden Meaning had a short way with traitors real or imaginary.

"Again I looked about me, and the two shadows seemed to be nearer. The cooly still kept a respectful distance, but he continued to repeat, varying the repetition slightly: 'Come, follow me. The master waits.'

"'I will,' said I, 'but first I must go to my ship.'

"'The master cannot wait,' he replied. 'The ship can.'

"'It is imperative that I should go.'

"'It is imperative that the master be obeyed.'

"I cursed the master for all that he was worth, but noting my hesitation, the man grew bolder.

"'You must come,' he said.

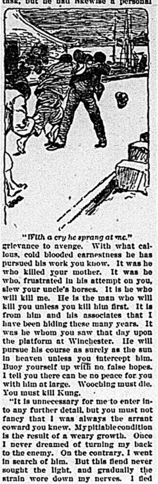
"'Tell the master that I will see him hanged first!'

"His reply to this outburst was a low whistle, and out of the shadows glided two forms. As they approached the fellow grew bolder, and I saw the blade of a knife flash as he raised his hand. With a cry he sprang at me, mingling with his curses the words 'death' and 'traitor.'

"The attack was so sudden that I had only time to throw up my arms, into one of which, as I received his charge, he buried his knife. That is why my left hand hangs so limply now. But with my right I drew my revolver, and as the other two men rushed upon me I fired hastily, bringing one to the ground. I fired again and again, but in my excitement missed the mark, and the two men, muttering excited curses, began warily to close in upon me, when the sound of voices down the road reached my ears. Immediately I cried aloud, 'Help! Help!' An answering shout came back and a clatter of feet. Then, cursing bitterly, my two assailants flung their knives at my head and with a bound disappeared into the night. Luckily, four Englishmen making their way down to the river had heard the firing and hurried forward. Had it not been for their opportune arrival, Kung would have had the satisfaction of counting me among his many victims.

"From that day to this I have never known a moment's peace. The getting away from Shanghai was but a small thing. Go where I might, Kung's myrmidons were at my heels. I knew this, and I had to guard against it, consequently for years I have not dared to trust even my own shadow. I soon learned that the society was on my track and that Wooching, the son of Mang-wah, one of the council who had perished in the futile plot against the throne, had been requisitioned by Kung as the avenger of the society.

"I knew Wooching slightly. He was an exceedingly intelligent and desperate man, one who had lived some years in Australia and as a consequence spoke English with remarkable fluency. For their purpose the society could not have chosen a better sleuthhound, for not alone did he bring an exceedingly clever brain to bear upon his task, but he had likewise a personal grievance to avenge. With what callous, cold blooded earnestness he has pursued his work you know. It was he who killed your mother. It was he who, frustrated in his attempt on you, slew your uncle's horses. It is he who will kill me. He is the man who will kill you unless you kill him first. It is from him and his associates that I have been hiding these many years. It was he whom you saw that day upon the platform at Winchester. He will pursue his course as surely as the sun in heaven unless you intercept him. Buoy yourself up with no false hopes. I tell you there can be no peace for you with him at large. Wooching must die. You must kill Kung.



"With a cry he sprang at me."

"It is unnecessary for me to enter into any further detail, but you must not fancy that I was always the arrant coward you knew. My pitiable condition is the result of a weary growth. Once I never dreamed of turning my back to the enemy. On the contrary, I went in search of him. But this fiend never sought the light, and gradually the strain wore down my nerves. I fled from place to place, but could not shake him off. Numberless traps were set to catch me, but by good luck I managed to escape, though once a knife found its way to my leg and gave me this cursed limp.

"When I wrote to your mother from Australia, I had every intention of coming by the ship which brought the letter, but learning at the last moment that the society was on my track, I abandoned the intention. I discovered that two Chinamen had taken passage by the same ship. Wooching, who had been apprised of my intention to come home, paid his visit accordingly.

"And now one last word. Do not lull yourself with false hopes. The society is rich and powerful and will spare neither trouble nor expense to achieve its end. Its influence is farreaching; it has agents everywhere. It is a powerful protector, but an implacable enemy. At the first glance things seem hopeless for you, but in reality I think they are not. This vengeance upon me and mine is chiefly a personal matter, for there was much between Kung and me of which I need not speak. Wooching, perhaps not unnaturally, considers me guilty of his father's death. If he and Kung were removed the vendetta would end. The other chiefs of the society have not that personal interest in our destruction which urges on those two to vengeance.

"Should you, therefore, ever entertain the idea of bearding the lion in his den, go to Hongkong and find Koon-Si, the carpenter. You will know him by the slit in his left nostril. Tell him that the writing of Kung is once more seen in the land. He will know what you mean.

"And so I repeat once more: Wooching must die. You must kill Kung."

CHAPTER XIII.

WHAT HAPPENED IN LEICESTER SQUARE.

The long silence which followed the reading of this manuscript added a grewsome impressiveness to the narrative. My uncle, sitting low in his easy chair, pulled away at his pipe, a gloomy frown straightening his brows and adding a look of grim intentness to his face. My brain tossed and tumbled like a chaos of waters, amid the roar of which I heard a voice crying: "Wooching must die. You must kill Kung." Again I saw the little man as he opened our gate at Windsor on that fateful day, the politest cutthroat in the world. I could hear the soft, throaty accents, so deferential and full of deep respect, as he made his inquiries. I read now the meaning of that look as he put the question, "Are you Captain Kingston's son?" I saw my mother as she stood that evening in the porch and waved a last farewell to me. The impulse which prompted me to run back and throw my arms about her neck was a warning, if I could only have read it. What an escape had been mine! I looked at my Uncle Jim and thought of that night in Maidenhead and the bone clapping Christy. How strangely it had all worked out.

Presently Jim laid aside his pipe and rose to his feet.

"Well, Davie," he said, "what do you make of it?"

Truth to tell, my brain was in such a whirl that I could not marshal my ideas. I only knew that the tale was horrible and that it affected me horribly. But I replied: "Everything that's bad. My father has left me a fine heritage."

"Aye," he answered, "but let us not talk of that. I think there is no reason why we should doubt the veracity of the story."

"None, I am sorry to say. I have seen too much during the last two years."

"Well, then, we must set our house in order, unless"— He stopped and looked me up and down, a singular, penetrating expression playing about his eyes.

"Unless we follow out his wish?"

"Precisely."

"But we cannot kill."

"Neither can we allow ourselves to be killed. You would not hesitate to shoot a wild beast that threatened you. These men are worse than wild beasts, for they have human intelligence and the resources of civilization to aid them. One thing is certain, they know neither pity nor fear. It is not enough for them that they have punished the traitor. They mean to wipe out the traitor's brood. It matters nothing that you or your mother never did them harm. You must pay bitterly for the sins of others. Now this is an iniquity which should be put an end to, and that can only be accomplished by the suppression of Kung. How we are to bring about such a consummation I haven't the least idea, but of one thing I am certain—the world is not big enough for the three of us."

It was horrible, but perfectly true. I felt it. I had seen too much of the doings of the Society of the Hidden Meaning. I knew with what tenacity they clung to the work in hand, and I had no hope whatever of their abandoning the enterprise, no matter what obstacles there were to be surmounted. The result then would be a life somewhat similar to my father's, a death which could not be prolonged indefinitely.

"What do you propose?" I asked.

"It is evident," said he, "that one of two things must happen—either we kill Kung or he kills us. I gather from what your father says that the death of Kung, coupled with that of Wooching, will probably end the feud, as they are the only two chiefs left of the original council who take a personal interest in the vengeance. Wooching is probably here in this country. If we could lay our hands on him, the law would relieve us of all moral responsibility concerning him. With Kung it is different. He is in China and apparently beyond the reach of any law. If we want him, we must look for him in his native land."

"Go to China?" I gasped.

He smiled. "Why not?"

"But surely that would be to court instant annihilation."

"Not necessarily. It is just possible that it may be safer than this. Kung not improbably will credit us with the wish to avoid him. The matter is very serious, Davie. I, as you know, am a man of peace, but if peace is denied me, then I have no objection to war. We each have a personal debt to pay—an obligation which it is our bounden duty to fulfill. I know your mother was good enough to forgive the hand that struck her down, but, you see, the vengeance does not end there. As sure as we are living men our turn will come, unless we make ourselves masters of the situation."

I had no doubt that he was right, though I shrank from such a foolhardy enterprise as seeking Kung in his native land. If we could not guard against his emissary in our own country, surrounded by police and the appliances of civilization, how could we hope to succeed in the very stronghold of the yellow fiends? My uncle admitted the apparent soundness of my argument, but the idea of penetrating into the enemy's country had taken possession of him, and nothing that I could say made him waver in his design.

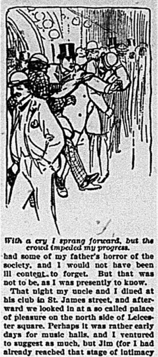
"At all events," I said, "we cannot be sure that these men mean to continue the vengeance. It is just possible that my father in his hatred and fear of Kung may have overstated his case. Ought we not to wait for some sign, watching always? What if they are satisfied?"

"It matters nothing," he replied. "I am not. Are you?" This rather bitterly, I thought.

I did not answer, but looked at him in a way that was more effective than words.

"Sorry," he said apologetically. "You know what I mean. But nothing can satisfy me until I have brought Lucy's murderer to book. I believe the old man to be right. He knew what he was talking about. We shall have to settle with Wooching and Kung."

Deep in my heart I was of the same belief, but if the truth must be told I had some of my father's horror of the society, and I would not have been ill content to forget. But that was not to be, as I was presently to know.



With a cry I sprang forward, but the crowd impeded my progress.

That night my uncle and I dined at his club in St. James street, and afterward we looked in at a so called palace of pleasure on the north side of Leicester square. Perhaps it was rather early days for music halls, and I ventured to suggest as much, but Jim (for I had already reached that stage of intimacy which permitted the use of the Christian name) protested that we had supped enough of horrors and that it was sometimes advisable to forget. He was like that, not much given to sentimentalisms, and I have found that it is not your puling, whining man who feels the most, though he usually commands the most sympathy. Jim made but a small bubble with his excitement, but I, who read his face like a book, could tell by his mouth or the look of his eyes how much he felt.

As usual the Empire was very full that night, and as we moved about among the crowd, the lights, the bustle, the well dressed men, the gaudy women, all made such a complete change that I congratulated myself upon coming and my uncle in insisting upon his wish. Indeed, wedged in the gay throng, I forgot for a time the Society of the Hidden Meaning and the shadow that hung over me. Kung was a bad dream which I had dispelled; Wooching a yellow phantom that had passed from before my eyes.

But I was not permitted long to enjoy this sweet hour of forgetfulness, for as we left the theater I, looking around as one will in a crowd, saw a man standing on the curb, who arrested my thought even though my eyes swept past him. Back they came instantly, and I recognized in a moment Wooching, the man with the strange eyes.

With a cry I sprang forward, but the crowd impeded my progress, and after nearly knocking down two men a third brought me up with an oath. I stammered an apology which, unless my memory fails me, was received with another unflattering adjective. But, unheeding this, I sprang out on to the road and was immediately almost run down by a hansom, the driver of which loaded the air with a further contribution of choice billingsgate. But after rushing wildly for a dozen yards or so I pulled up, nonplused. The man was nowhere to be seen.

Here my uncle joined me, and, laying his hand on my arm, he gasped out, "What is it?"

"I saw him. He was here a moment ago."

"He?"

"The man with the strange eyes."

Jim ground out an oath.

"Which way did he go?"

I pointed along Coventry street.

"I would have had him, too, if the crowd had not blocked me."

"You are sure it was he?"

I was so sure that I did not take the trouble to be emphatic, even though every nerve of me was a-thrill with excitement.

"Then let us follow."

We moved westward among the people, who were now very numerous, owing chiefly to the emptying of the theaters in the neighborhood. But, though we intently peered into each face, we failed to encounter the object of our search. Then we stood for a time at the corner of the Pavilion, just where Shaftesbury avenue empties itself into that ocean of light and life which people call Piccadilly circus—the brightest, gayest, saddest spot in the whole world.

In such a place one might as well search for the proverbial needle in the bundle of hay, as expect to find an insignificant little personage who had every intention of not breaking cover. But still we stood watching the people, the bewildering rush of cabs and carriages, the honest citizen hurrying home to bed, the young dandy with the immaculate shirt front and hat tipped saucily on one side, who is a little weak at the knee perhaps, but who is "seeing life," don't you know; the gray haired roue, the dawdling vagrant. These, with the rattling of vehicles, the laughter and curses of men and women, the hoarse shouts of the newsboys, make up a babel unapproachable in any other capital.

After a time, to the infinite risk of life and limb, we ventured to cross the circus. Then, eyes open, ears alert, we continued our journey homeward, reaching our rooms without encountering anything that might be termed suspicious. It was with a feeling of relief, and yet with a relief which did not dissipate my fears, that I heard the front door close. For the moment no doubt we were secure, but the man rose threateningly before the mental vision, a sign and a symbol which could not be blotted out.

However, nothing happened that night, and on the following morning I for one had lost many of my fears. My uncle was still very grave, and I could see that the shadow of Wooching was making life for him absolutely intolerable. But he said nothing, and we descended the stairs together, and so out into the street. Then, as I gently pulled the door to, I saw something just below the number which made me start. I looked again and could no longer doubt.

It was the elliptical sign of the Hidden Meaning.

My uncle, who had passed some paces down the street, finding I was not by his side, here turned and beckoned me to him. I, however, called to him instead, a movement evidently betokening much mystery, for he quickly retraced his steps, his face eagerly asking the question, "What is it?"

For answer I pointed to the door, and as his eyes encountered the sign I saw a startled look leap to them. He stepped up closer to it and peered at it intently. Then he surveyed me with a wondering look, in which I detected alarm and a profound anxiety.

"Let us go in," he said.

He opened the door and rang for the porter, and him he subjected to a searching examination concerning the lodgers and the would be lodgers. But the man could give us no satisfactory information. The rooms were full—they had been for some time previous to our arrival, and, though many people had called to make inquiries, he could not recollect any one in particular resembling our description of Wooching.

My uncle then nodded to me without speaking, and together we mounted the stairs to our rooms. Throwing his stick and gloves on the table with a bang, he turned and faced me, and I saw that his eyes had grown hard and desperate, and I knew that his blood ran wickedly. His fair skin wore a dark, ominous flush which only visited it in moments of intense anger.

"Well," said I, "what's it to be—flight or fight?"

"Fight," he answered grimly. "To fly would be to live your father's life and eventually to meet his death. No; we must stand our ground and meet Mr. Wooching with his own weapons. He has very kindly warned us. If we neglect the warning, we shall deserve to suffer."

"Why should he have warned us?" I asked.

He was silent for a few moments, during which he walked the length of the room. Then he said, "I don't know, unless it's vanity."

"Vanity!" Surely this was the strangest form vanity had ever taken!

"Yes; of a kind—that is, supposing he did it, which is not probable."

"Then you think he does not work alone?"

"I am sure of it. That sign may be merely a warning to his associates. Remember what your father said. The society has agents all over the English speaking world. We shall be shadowed day and night. Come here."

He had been standing by the window peering into the street, and as I approached him he drew suddenly behind the curtain and waved for me to do likewise. Unhesitatingly I obeyed, though ignorant of the reason. I took up a position on the other side of the window and peered out into the street, but seeing nothing unusual there I turned inquiringly to him. "What's the matter?"

"You see that man in the billycock hat and the gray trousers?"

"Yes."

"Watch him."

The person thus described, who seemed an everyday individual of the better class artisan or shopman type, would, in an ordinary way, have attracted no attention in the streets. One would meet thousands of such men in a walk from Charing Cross to the bank. I myself, gazing upon him, would have seen him with my eyes only. The brain would have retained no impression of his unimportant personality. But now I looked at him with other eyes, with eyes which were full of suspicion, and I saw that he loitered in a way which was uncommon with people of his class in Dover street. I saw, too, that his eyes were fixed upon one object, and that object was our house. Though his hat was pulled well over his forehead, I could see his eyes glancing up in our direction from under the brim.

Slowly he passed along the street, and at the second lamppost up he stopped. Against the farther side of it he leaned; but, though he occasionally glanced about him, I could see that his attention was really engrossed by our end of the street. And yet further to add to the mystery, if mystery there were, he suddenly left his lounge against the lamppost, and we saw him disappear around the corner of the next street.

More puzzled than ever, I looked at my uncle for an explanation, and I saw a grim smile play about his mouth. His eyes had come back to the Piccadilly end of the street, and, following the direction of his gaze, I saw it center upon a burly policeman who rolled with lordly nonchalance along the pavement.

Quickly putting two and two together, I turned to my companion for confirmation. He nodded approvingly, as though he read my thoughts.

"Quite right. I believe that man to be there for no good purpose. His sudden exit into Stafford street, just as the constable appears, is, to say the least of it, a trifle suspicious. Of

THE WORST KIND.

After Piles have existed for a long time and passed through different stages, the suffering is intense—pain, aching, throbbing, tumors form, filled to bursting with black blood.

Symptoms indicating other troubles may appear to a thoroughly Pile-sick person.

This is when Hem-Roid, the only internal, the only absolute Pile cure, brings the results that has made its fame.

It will cure the most stubborn case in existence and a bonded guarantee to that effect goes with each package.

It is to be had at the drug store.

Don't let the child suffer. Instant relief and a permanent cure is obtained with

DR. SLOCUM'S
COLTSFOOTE
EXPECTORANT

It heals and soothes throats that are worn and inflamed with coughing, arrests the progress of disease, and effects a complete cure speedily.

Sold by all druggists. Price 10c. and 25c. per bottle. Dr. Slocum, Limited, Toronto.

THEY DROVE PIMPLES AWAY.—A face covered with pimples is unsightly. It tells of internal irregularities which should long since have been corrected. The liver and the kidneys are not performing their functions in the healthy way they should, and these pimples are to let you know that the blood protests. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will drive them all away, and will leave the skin clear and clean. Try them, and there will be another witness to their excellence.

The biggest brave does not always make the best chief.

Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial is a speedy cure for dysentery, diarrhoea, cholera, summer complaint, sea sickness and complaints incidental to children teething. It gives immediate relief to those suffering from the effects of indiscretion in eating unripe fruit, cucumbers, etc. It acts with wonderful rapidity and never fails to conquer the disease. No one need fear cholera if they have a bottle of this medicine convenient.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

Sleeplessness.—When the nerves are unstrung and the whole body given up to wretchedness, when the mind is filled with gloom and dismal forebodings, the result of derangement of the digestive organs, sleeplessness comes to add to the distress. If only the subject could sleep, there would be the oblivion for a while and temporary relief. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will not only induce sleep, but will act so beneficially that the subject will wake refreshed and restored to happiness.

No prayer ever failed to be heard because it was too short.

A WONDERFUL CURE.—Mr. David Smith, Coe Hill, Ont., writes: "For the benefit of others I wish to say a few words about Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery. About a year ago I took a very severe cough, had a virulent sore on my lips, was bad with dyspepsia, constipation and general debility. I tried almost every conceivable remedy, outwardly and inwardly to cure the sore but all to no purpose. I had often thought of trying Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, so I got a bottle and when I had used about one-half, the sore showed evident signs of healing. By the time that bottle was done, it had about disappeared and my general health was improving fast. I was always of a very bilious habit and have used quinine and lemon juice with very little effect. But since using 3 bottles of the Vegetable Discovery, the biliousness is entirely gone and my general health is excellent. I am [illegible] years old. Parties using it should continue it for some time after they think they are cured. It is by far the best health restorer I know."

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

THE PUBLIC should bear in mind that Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil has nothing in common with the impure, deteriorating class of so-called medicinal oils. It is eminently pure and really efficacious—relieving pain and lameness, stiffness of the joints and muscles, and sores or hurts, besides being an excellent specific for rheumatism, coughs and bronchial complaints.

Seven hundred British subjects are yearly born at sea.

These two desirable qualifications, pleasant to the taste and at the same time effectual, are to be found in Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator. Children like it.

Much talk, many lies.

To get relief from indigestion, biliousness, constipation or torpid liver without disturbing the stomach or purging the bowels, take a few doses of Carter's Little Liver Pills, they will please you.

The average watch represents but 12 hours of human labor.

They make one feel as though life was worth living. Take one of Carter's Little Liver Pills after eating; it will relieve dyspepsia, aid digestion, give tone and vigor to the system.

On occasion knowing what one wants is as difficult as getting it.

That tired, languid feeling and dull headache is very disagreeable. Take two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring, and you will find relief. They never fail to do good.

Nothing so suddenly obstructs the perspiration as sudden transitions from heat to cold. Heat rarifies the blood, quickens the circulation and increases the perspiration, but when these are suddenly checked the consequences must be bad. The most common cause of disease is obstructed perspiration, or what commonly goes by the name of catching cold. Coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., if attended to in time are easily subdued, but if allowed to run their own course generally prove the fore-runner of more dangerous diseases. Nine-tenths of the consumptives date their afflictions from a neglected [illegible] the diseases that are caused by wet feet, damp clothes, or exposure are more numerous than are generally supposed. One of the most efficacious medicines for all diseases of the throat and lungs is Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It promotes a free and easy expectoration, which frees the lungs from viscid phlegm by changing the secretions from a diseased to a healthy state.

Have you tried Holloway's Corn Cure? It has no equal for removing these troublesome excrescences, as many have testified who have tried it.

SHIP "HARD AGROUND"

A distressing skin disease had well nigh wrecked his good ship "Health," but Dr. Agnew's Ointment came to the rescue and it's timely aid relieved the distress and brought him safe to land.

C. H. Howard, a prominent steamboat man, of Rangeley, Maine, writes:—"Enclosed find thirty-five cents for a box of Dr. Agnew's Ointment. I bought a box in Portland recently for a distressing case of skin disease, and it did me so much good that I want to try another box. It is the only remedy that has ever given me any relief and I believe it will cure me." 35 cts. 38

Who Need Glasses?

(1) Many children need them, some parents say they do not want their children to "begin" wearing glasses if they can help it. That is all right, but in many cases before they find out they cannot help it, it is too late to save the sight of one or possibly both eyes. Many such cases have come under our examination, that might have been prevented by wearing the proper glasses in time. Bring your children to us if they do not need glasses we will tell you so.

NURSERY NOTES.

A sour feeding bottle may cause a baby's death, because it may set up severe diarrhea, which is always dangerous for infants.

Don't keep the baby in the house one minute that it is possible to have it out of doors. A baby kept out in the air and sunshine will not be cross and irritable.

A child has a natural dislike for "showing off," and if you make it acquire a taste for such a proceeding you will have to spank it later for being forward and impudent.

An infant's skin is very sensitive and tender. Therefore glycerin should be well diluted before applying it to the chafed surfaces, which annoy and pain the little one so afflicted.

Don't give young children pickles, condiments, strong tea or any kind of alcohol unless a doctor prescribes this last as a medicine. Such things are very injurious to the little creatures' stomachs.

Children should never, if it can be avoided, be given twice cooked meat, and greasy things should always be avoided. The great thing in catering for them is to have everything very plain, but very good.

Care of Baby's Mouth.

A talk on the care and feeding of infants was given under the auspices of the department of health by Dr. Samuel Doskow of Philadelphia recently. Infection by means of the mouth and infantile dentition was the subject.

Dr. Doskow said: "After every meal wash the baby's mouth with a solution of borax in water. Wrap a piece of soft cloth around the finger, then dip it in the solution and wipe out the mouth and upper surface of the tongue. If the baby is fed on the bottle the rubber nipple should be put in boiling water for a few minutes before it is used. In doing this fermentation of the milk will be prevented, and as a result there will be no colic.

"Don't give the baby soothing sirup or similar medicines while it is teething. If the baby suffers much let a dentist or a physician lance the gums freely.

"It is absolutely necessary to keep sweets from children in order to preserve their teeth. Sweets cause a fermentation that destroys the tooth structure. Children's teeth should be cleaned before they are put in bed and before and after each meal."

Feet Getting Larger.

"Athletic exercise is undoubtedly adding cubits to the stature of the modern girl, but," remarked a shoe merchant, "it is likewise increasing the length of her feet, increasing them indeed into such wonderful proportions that the perfect mine of small jokes we used to hear about the pedal extremities of Britain's daughters is entirely exploded.

"Having paid these young ladies the compliment of imitating their training, the humorist now finds that his countrywomen's feet have developed the proportions he once found so ludicrous.

"The time when to possess tiny feet was a thing to be desired is past, the athletic girl having changed all that. The proper and beautiful thing nowadays is to be of classical dimensions. As it is shape, not size, that makes or mars the beauty of a foot, the sensible woman hails this evolution with delight, proving that the change is owing to the wholesome outdoor life of the really modern girl."—Washington Post.

Soap Bags and Soap Jelly.

Do not throw away bits of toilet soap. Keep a jar to put them in. Make bags of fine cheesecloth 4 by 6 inches. Fill with bran, a few bits of the soap and, if you have it, a pinch or two of orris. Tie the bags at the top. Do not fill them full, as the bran swells in the water. Oatmeal may be used as well as bran. These bags make the nicest kind of wash rags. Another use for the bits of soap is to put some of them in a jar and pour in alcohol or cologne, not quite enough to cover the soap. This will make a jelly which will be found useful in shampooing or in the bath, as it dissolves quickly in the water. Add a few drops of lavender or rose to the alcohol and soap just before using. The above may be useful on occasions.

Wrinkled Clothes.

I have often, says a writer in Good Housekeeping, taken the wrinkles out of a cloth skirt or jacket and restored the fresh look by hanging them over a line in the bathroom, then closing all the doors and windows, turn on the hot water and let it run till the room is filled with steam. Leave the clothes to hang undisturbed in the vapor for two hours, then open the room and let the garments dry in the fresh air. You will be surprised and gratified to see how they will be renovated by this simple process. Soft silk can be treated the same way.

The First Tooth.

A child's first tooth should not be pulled until it fairly drops at the touch, says Harper's Bazar. If it is taken from the jaw before the permanent tooth is well formed the jaw shrinks. When the permanent tooth appears, being larger than its predecessor, it does not find the proper room which growth of the jaw would otherwise give, and the results are those overlappings so disfiguring, so painful and so costly to remedy.

Women In Sport.

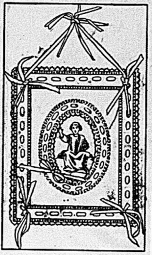
It is an interesting fact that when women take up a sport, however manly, they acquire almost as great a precision and skill therein as the men. Of course a woman never gets quite so much practice nor can she stand being out in all weathers. Still, the fact remains that in accuracy women can compete very fairly with men, the best against the best.

PRETTY PICTURE FRAME.

It Is Made of Tan Sheepskin and Decorated With Burnt Work.

The picture frame here shown is made from tan sheepskin decorated with burnt work, and it may be easily made at home from the directions given:

To make the picture frame cut a piece of light wood 9 by 11 inches or any size desired. Lay the braid on the leather and with a pencil make the exact outline in the front. Stitch with silk on the pencil line for outer edge and pink. Stitch a second row near the first on the inside. Leave a half inch space and stitch two rows like the first. If the frame is for an oval picture draw the exact outline in the center, stitch two rows and pink the inside of the oval. Leave another half inch space from the first oval stitching, then stitch two rows as before. In this half inch space punch rows of holes half an inch apart, through which should be run laces the size of a shoe string cut from the straight edge of the leather. Tie the laces in a bowknot at one side. Take four laces for the sides, leaving the ends long enough to tie in knots at the corners. With a gimlet bore four holes through the board to correspond with the ones in each corner of the leather. Cover the board with silk and paste smooth paper over the front. Lace the leather to the board at the lower corners by passing a lace from the back of the board, having a knot at the back. Run straps for the hanger from opposite sides of the upper corners and tie the ends in with the laces to form large knots at the corners. Glue the leather to the board an inch from the outer edges on the sides and bottom, leaving the opening at the top for the glass and picture. When thoroughly dry slip the glass and photograph in at the top of the frame. This will push the leather out and give the effect of a padded center. Decorate the frame with rows of burnt dots.—Woman's Home Companion.



LEATHER PICTURE FRAME.

Imaginative Childhood.

Every healthy boy and girl needs an immense deal of play not only with the legs and hands, but with the imagination. Childhood ought to be surrounded by a broad zone of mystery and wonder. The unimaginative childhood makes the drudge in middle life and the cynical man in age. The childhood that is rich in imagination brings the artistic quality into work and distills so much sentiment into the soul that in all the relations of life there is underneath its cares, responsibilities and preoccupations a touch of romance, and life without a romance is not only prose, but prose that kills. The world needs more dreamers. There ought to be more lovers and poets among men; there cannot be too many of them. But lovers and poets and heroes are not made in middle life; they are made in childhood, and they are made by appeal to the imagination.—Outlook.

A Hygienic Hint.

Hygiene authorities strongly advise the alternate day system for the wearing of outer clothing. They urge the danger of daily use for any article of clothing. Outer clothing, it is also advised, should upon removal be hung in a current of fresh air and thoroughly brushed. The practice of placing woolen garments, warm from the body and filled with the dust of the street, in closed closets is said to be most injurious to health. For shoes, as well as all other unwashable articles of apparel, a thorough airing every other day is advised as being both economical and healthful.

Creamed Potatoes.

Creamed potatoes a la Vienne in the strictest sense, since the recipe was obtained there by a traveling American cookery authority, require, first, potatoes boiled without peeling in very little water and plenty of salt. Peel them when cool and cut them in thin, round slices, cover them with boiling cream and allow them to simmer until the cream begins to thicken. Add pepper, salt if needed, a tiny bit of mace, a little unsalted butter and a few drops of lemon juice. Serve at once.

A Sachet Hint.

To make your own sachets buy the powder and sprinkle on thin cotton inside the silk bags or pour on it half a teaspoonful of the oil of the perfume you desire, to which a few drops of glycerin are added. The glycerin keeps the perfume from evaporating. This gives a vigorous and diffusive perfume, pleasant for the rooms, and the sachets to hang in the closets or on backs of chairs should always be treated in this way by perfumed oil fixed with a little glycerin.

So Many People Ask

Why on earth are you selling Wall Papers at HALF PRICE this time of the year.

WELL its just like this—We still have about 3,000 rolls of 1903 Wall Papers left and with our reputation for carrying the very newest in Wall Papers it would not pay us to put this small balance in with our 1904, and call them new.

We don't do that kind of business. We prefer giving our customers who are not so particular about having the very latest, these goods at bargains. So we are selling all 1903 papers this month at HALF of the regular prices, so as to start March with nothing but 1904 papers which are now flooding our warehouse.

All Fancy Goods and China —not Staple—for the balance of the month of February at Half regular price—this makes home beautifying doubly cheap.

Yours In Decorations

During the winter months our workmen have been kept unusually busy decorating some of the best homes of the city.

TO SAY THAT our decorative work is a success—is putting the matter mildly—you have just to witness this for yourself in observing any one of the many city homes we have given decorative attention during the past two years.

Our success is because of a knowledge of the decorative trade begot of study and experience both in wall hangings and the decorative art—the two go hand in hand—the one without the other is absolutely lost.

NO better time for you than the present for selecting, new wall hangings now arriving.

No better time to have your work done than during the later winter months and the earlier spring.

We are prepared—with a liberal staff of experienced workmen—the best obtainable in their several branches and our prices will meet with your approval every time.

Quietly Wedded.

A quiet wedding took place on Saturday morning at the residence of Mr. S. A. Gardner, Octavia street, when his daughter, Miss Minnie Annetta, was married to Mr. John Connor, of Sidney. Rev. J. Ferguson performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Connor left shortly after for a trip to Toronto and Niagara Falls.

How's This?

LATEST WAR NEWS.

THE INTELLIGENCER'S AFTERNOON DESPATCHES ARE TWELVE HOURS IN ADVANCE OF THE TORONTO MORNING PAPERS.

Chinese Minister at Berlin Announces That China May at Any Time Send Soldeirs Into Manchuria.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

New York, Feb. 22. — The Chinese Minister here, says a cable from Berlin, has proclaimed that China's neutrality is only temporary, and that the Chinese Government may any day decide that its continued neutrality is neither possible nor desirable.

The Minister adds "Thirty thousand well drilled Chinese troops are stationed in the Province of Chi-Li ready at a moment's notice from Pekin to enter Manchuria. Our nation admires the Japanese, and sympathizes decidedly with their efforts."

London, Feb. 22. — The Japanese minister here, Baron Hayashi, does not credit the report that 2500 Russians have been killed in an outpost engagement at the Yalu river, as he says there is no Japanese force in the vicinity large enough to inflict such a loss.

The only naval development Baron Hayashi expects in the near future is a possible attack on the Japanese fleet by the powerful Russian torpedo flotilla at Port Arthur, hitherto unused.

The latest advices of Baron Hayashi lead him to believe that the Japanese troops may now wait possibly two or three months before undertaking aggressive operations in Manchuria.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

The senior championship of the O.H.A. was decided on Saturday night by Marlboros' victory over Perth. In the intermediate series there are still five clubs left, viz.: Belleville, Midland, Thessalon, Watford and Stratford. These clubs, according to the Toronto Star, will play off as follows: Midland and Thessalon, sudden death game at Sudbury to-night; winner to play home and home games with Belleville, first game in Midland on Friday, the 25th, return at Belleville the following Tuesday, March 1st. In the western semi-finals Watford plays at Stratford on Tuesday and Stratford at Watford on Thursday. The winners of the eastern and western sections will play off for the championship. Good judges think that Midland will easily defeat Thessalon to-night, and the Stratford-Watford game is looked on as a walkover for the Classic City lads. It is rather disappointing to think that Belleville is compelled again to play the first game of the round away from home, especially as the Midland club, according to all accounts, is going to be a hard nut to crack, but such is life in the O.H.A. The Junior O.H.A. championship now lies between Barrie, Listowel and the Beechgroves of Kingston. Barrie and Listowel will play off on Tuesday and Thursday, and the winners will tackle the Beechgroves in Toronto next Saturday.

Strike, who a few weeks ago was a member of the Picton team, played with the Wanderers of Montreal in a Federal League game on Wednesday night against Cornwall. The Wanderers won by 8 to 3.

Kingston News: "The Boys with the Auburn Hair" is what the Toronto crowd dubbed the Belleville team. McMillan, McGuire and Kennedy certainly lent color to the occasion.

Globe:—"The senior Marlboros may arrange home and home games with Belleville."

Here's hoping they do. A good many people in this vicinity think the locals could hold the Senior Dukes down well, if they didn't beat them. The games would be worth going many miles to see.

The senior St. George's will play in Peterboro to-night.

The first game for the Stanley Cup will be played in Ottawa to-morrow night, between the Ottawas (present holders) and the Marlboros. Here's luck to the Dukes, though their chances, at this distance, don't appear any too rosy.

Results on Saturday night: Marlboros 19, Perth 6; Quebec 9, Montreal Victorias 7.

Louis Bruce, the most popular baseball player Toronto ever knew, was married on Saturday last.

TROTTING.

The Abbot is Dead.

New York, Feb. 21.— The Abbot, 2.03 1-4, the former champion trotter of the world, a gelding which sold at public auction in Madison Square Garden for $26,500 and all in all one of the greatest race horses in the history of the trotting turf, is dead at the farm of his owner, John J. Scannell, at Fishkill on Hudson. In his career the Abbot was noted for many things, among them being:—

At seven years of age he was the champion trotter of the world, with a record of 2.03 1-4, made at Terre Haute, Ind., September 25, 1900.

In 1899 he raced through the Grand Circuit in the free-for-all class, and was not beaten.

In a trial at Lexington, Ky., he trotted a mile to waggon in 2.03 1-2.

In six years he started 34 times, 23 of which he won.

He started in 1891 in two match races against Cresceus, and was beaten in both. The first race was at Brighton Beach, $12,000 being the stake. The second was at Readville, Mass., and $20,000 was the prize.

He could trot quarters better than 30 seconds and a half in a minute.

His gait was as nearly perfect as possible.

BOYS CLOTHING.

The clothing Oak Hall sell for boys is better than most stores sell. The cloth is better, the trimmings better and the tailoring better. Not only that, but you will invariably find the price lower. Of course you know, we are sole agents for Sanford's celebrated boys' clothing.

HAD A 30-FOOT FALL.

THE NARROW ESCAPE OF JOSEPH LAMARCHE THIS MORNING.

A number of persons were this morning standing on Front street, near the Albion Hotel, intently watching Mr. Joseph Lamarche cleaning snow off a roof. From the fact that he was in no way protected it was felt by some of the onlookers that he would slip and fall to the walk beneath. Such was the case, and it was almost a miracle that the man was not seriously, if not fatally, injured. The snow and ice fell in a body, carrying Lamarche with it to the sidewalk. There being a considerable quantity of light snow into which he fell, the force of the fall was broken. The distance from the edge of the roof to the walk was 30 feet. Some of the bystanders rushed to Lamarche's assistance, but he quickly got upon his feet and announced that he was in nowise injured.

BRONCHITIC ASTHMA A HEAVY BURDEN.

Asthma is bad enough, but when bronchial symptoms are added the poor sufferer has almost an intolerable existence. An absolute specific is found in fragrant, healing Catarrhozone, which cures chronic cases that other remedies won't even relieve. "For years," writes Capt. Macdonald, of Montreal, "I battled with the agonies of bronchitis asthma. Often I couldn't sleep for nights at a time. I spent thousands on doctors and medicines, without relief, but one dollar's worth of Catarrhozone cured me. Catarrhozone can't fail; it's guaranteed. Two months' treatment $1.00; trial size 25c.

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

NOTES OF SERVICES IN BELLEVILLE'S DIFFERENT PLACES OF WORSHIP.

Rev. Dr. Chown at Bridge St.

Rev. Dr. Chown, of Toronto, who is Secretary of the Department of Temperance and Moral Reform in connection with the Methodist Church, preached in Bridge Street Church last evening to a good congregation, considering the inclement weather. His subject was "The Kingdom of God, with some Modern Applications." Previous to announcing his text the Rev. gentleman stated that this new department of church work was inaugurated at the last General Conference of the Methodist Church and this was the first anniversary in Belleville of the movement. The object is to improve our national life, to set before the world a Christ-like appearance. The idea is to Christianize the laws of our land, to have social and political purity within our borders. His text was from Hebrews, 11th chapter and 13th verse:

> "These all died in faith, not having received the promise, but having seen them afar off, and were persuaded of them and embraced them, and confessed that they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth."

The text referred to the patriarchs, who were heroes and stood as lighthouse sentinels warning all to keep off the shoals, which were dangerous ground. They believed that this was God's world, that He made it and owned it. They were men of living faith. They believed that righteousness was the first and most practical thing in life, and endeavored to live up to that ideal. A righteous world was God's primeval thought. The Kingdom of God was Jesus' text and the main purpose of His life. The gospel and its great purpose is to make Jesus the King of Kings and Lord of Lords. The atonement of Jesus was a means to an end, and that end is the coming of the time when the will of God will be done on earth as it is in heaven. There must be many great changes even in this country before this can be accomplished. The liquor traffic must die; evil literature must be done away with; the immoral theatre must be suppressed, and political corruption must go. The latter is robbing this beautiful Dominion of ours of its fair name. He hoped the time was not far distant when all would stand out for political honor. In the Governmental arrangements of our country to-day we do not seek righteousness first, but prosperity. We should see to it that men placed in prominent positions in our City Councils, Legislatures and the Dominion Parliament are men who will seek to improve our cities, Provinces and Dominion on the line of righteousness. If we so put Jesus in all our affairs righteousness will reign.

Tabernacle.

In the morning Rev. Dr. Chown occupied the pulpit and preached an able discourse, his subject being "The Kingly Man and His Work." In the evening the Pastor, Rev. Geo. Brown, preached. His text was from Hebrews, 3rd chapter and 12th verse.

Emmanuel R. E. Church.

At yesterday morning's service the Rector, Rev. Mr. Gilliland, preached a thoughtful sermon on the parable of the talents. Everybody had a talent of some kind, which God would demand an account of. Some had money, others natural gifts, and it was the duty of all to use those talents to the glory of God, for when the Lord of the Harvest came he would hold all to account for their sins of omission as well as commission.

St. Andrew's.

The Pastor, Rev. M. W. Maclean, preached at both services yesterday and his discourses were much appreciated. In the morning his text was from 2nd Corinthians, 9th chapter, 6th and 7th verses, the theme being in reference to "The Cheerful Giver."

Christ Church.

The Rector, Rev. W. B. Heeney, officiated at both services yesterday, preaching earnest and forcible sermons. In the evening his text was from St. Luke, 5th chapter and 20th verse:

> "And When He saw their faith He said unto him, Man, thy sins are forgiven thee."

Other Church Notes.

At St. Michael's Church, yesterday, Rev. Monsignor Farrelly prayed feelingly for the late Arthur P. Cook and his family, imploring that God would soften the blow to the latter.

In Bridge St. Church Sunday School there was a memorial service for the dead lad, who was a member of the Sunday School. Appropriate hymns were sung and prayers offered for the deceased's family.

Christian Science.

Our lesson subject yesterday was Christ Jesus, and it clearly demonstrated to those present that Christ Jesus was, and is the way shown, as we read 1st Timothy 2.5. "For there is one God, and one Mediator between God and men—the man Christ Jesus." And its correlative passage in the Christian Science text book, science and health, by the Rev. Mary Baker G. Eddy, page 38: "Jesus mapped out the path for others. He unveiled the Christ, the spiritual idea of divine love.—Com.

JUDGMENT GIVEN IN ICE CUTTING CASE.

POLICE MAGISTRATE FLINT FINDS FOR THE DEFENDANT.

The following judgment was handed down by Magistrate Flint on Saturday:

King vs. Ward Gould. — Defendant is charged with cutting a hole in the ice sufficiently large to endanger human life on water open to the public, and leaving such hole while in that state, whether frozen over or not, unenclosed by bushes or trees, or unguarded by a guard or fence of sufficient height and strength to prevent any person from accidentally riding, driving, walking or skating from falling therein. The charge contains the provisions of the Statute applicable to this case. There is a further provision, which enacts, that every one whose duty it is to guard such hole, or opening, or place, is guilty of manslaughter, if any person loses his life by accidentally falling therein, while the same was unguarded. Every person has a right to cut ice on a river, or lake, which is public property, but subject to the limitations prescribed by law. The opening must be enclosed by bushes or trees, or guarded by a guard, or fence, of sufficient height and strength to prevent a person from accidentally falling therein. I am of the opinion that it is not a sufficient compliance with the law to surround the aperture by the snow shovelled from the ice. So many small skating rinks are made on rivers and bays, for skating purposes, which are always surrounded by a barrier of shovelled snow, so that a person might very easily mistake an opening, skimmed over by a thin coating of ice, for such a rink, and so lose his life. Human life is too precious to be exposed to such a risk. The opening must be entirely enclosed by bushes or trees, or guarded by a guard or fence of sufficient height and strength to prevent accidents to human beings. The responsibility of people cutting ice is very great. A person neglecting to obey the law, and by his negligence causing loss of life, is guilty of the very grave crime of manslaughter. If no such accident occurs disobedience is punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both. In this case the evidence did not show that the defendant had cut the hole, or was responsible for leaving it unguarded. The case is, therefore, dismissed.

COME HIGHLY RECOMMENDED

MANAGER OF THE KINGSTON OPERA HOUSE HIGHLY PLEASED WITH THE WILBUR OPERA COMPANY.

Manager Carman received the following letter from Mr. W. C. Martin, manager of the Kingston Opera House:

My Dear Carman. — The Wilbur Opera Co. are all O.K. You can safely recommend them to your patrons. You can see by our papers what we think of them. The plays selected for Belleville are among the best of their repertoire. For a small company (comparing them with "San Toy," "A Chinese Honeymoon," etc.), I think they are as good if not better than any I have played in my experience. Truly yours,

W. C. MARTIN.

Impossible to Make British Empire Permanent.

Frederic Harrison Argues That This Is the Lesson Taught by the Changing Conditions of Modern Life—Sir Gilbert Parker Heard From—The Graphic on Canada—The Yukon's Lovely Climate.

London, Feb. 22.—(C.A.P.)—Frederic Harrison, lecturing on Imperialism, said it was impossible in the changing conditions of modern life to make the British Empire permanent. Canada being drawn socially, commercially and politically to the United States. The Australian group would become an Americanized Republic, smart, selfish and vulgarized. They regard Britain not as a mother, but as a grandmother. New Zealand was more democratic and gave us mutton, swagger and impudence, but not manners or literature. Once Britain lost the command of the seas the Empire would tumble to pieces like a pack of cards.

Parker Heard From.

London, Feb. 22.—(C.A.P.)—Sir Gilbert Parker, M.P., addressing a tariff meeting at Bristol, said that Britain for five years had been receiving a preference from Canada representing an increase of £6,000,000.

Graphic on Canada.

London, Feb. 22.—(C.A.P.)—The Graphic, dealing with Canada's economic progress, says the import figures for 1903 are $460,000,000, a surprising result in the case of a country whose population is less than 6,000,000. It is especially gratifying that the spirit of speculation reaching its climax in 1902 has subsided with beneficial results to the general economic situation.

Yukon's Lovely Climate.

London, Feb. 22.—(C. A. P.)—C. Chataway of Cambridge planted some flower seeds exposed to over 80 degrees below zero farnheit at Dawson City eight winters ago. As they are growing well, he says it is evidence the Yukon is not a barren waste horticulturally.

Fortuitous Collection of Atoms.

London, Feb. 22.—(C. A.P.)—The Daily Mail, in a leading article on the importance of Premier Balfour in the Cabinet, says that Mr. Balfour is the controlling force in the Treasury bench. With him it is a passable fighting instrument, but without him merely a fortuitous concentration of discordant atoms.

To Look After Him.

London, Feb. 22.—(C.A.P.)—The railway porter, finding Lady Mount Stephen's necklace, has been dismissed from the company's service for retaining it six days. Lady Mount Stephen has paid him a reward and has offered to find him work.

Like French-Canadians.

London, Feb. 22.—(C.A.P.)—The Times, referring to the conciliatory work of the progressive party in Cape Colony, says the Dutch are now able to play the same equal part freely and loyally taken in the great dominion by the French-Canadian in Quebec.

Indians Ended a Feud.

Winnipeg, Man., Feb. 22.—The long-standing feud between the family of Roderick Thomas, a Hudson Bay fur trader, and the Indians about Lac du Hackett is ended. His body has been found, hacked to pieces, 300 miles north of here. The mounted police are rounding up the Indians.

Dr. Jameson Succeeds.

Cape Town, Feb. 22.—Dr. Jameson has succeeded in completing a Cabinet.

RUSSIA RUSHING TROOPS

War Governor of Irkutsk Hurrying Them Over Lake Baikal.

MAY MOBILIZE WHOLE ARMY

Within Two Weeks 100,000 Men Will Have Been Added to the 300,000 Russian Troops Already in Manchuria—An Enormous Consignment of Artillery En Route—Port Arthur Authorities Say Japanese Have Landed in Corea Only.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 22.—Count Kutaissoff, war governor of Irkutsk, has returned to his post to hasten the forwarding of men and war material across Lake Baikal. It is reported all the steamers of the volunteer fleets are to be armed.

Military activity is proceeding on an ever-increasing scale, and all is in readiness for the mobilization of the entire Russian army should that become necessary. In a fortnight 100,000 additional troops will be in Manchuria. Three army corps of Siberian rifles have already been organized, and a fourth soon will become completed. There is also a brigade of Cossack artillery armed with excellent mountain guns.

Russian March to the Yalu.

Gen. Valkoff is in command of the non-combatants force at Harbin. Gens. Linevitch and Von Dratovitch are at Liaoyang (about half-way between Newchwang and Mukden). When the 10th Regiment is near Kinchow, the 9th Regiment near Liauchang and the 12th Regiment near Liaoyang, it is intended to commence a simultaneous march toward the Yalu River. While Major-Gen. Pflug is advancing the troops from Mukden to the Yalu he will, at the same time be strengthening his centre and preparing to defend the railroad and the north gulf coast in force.

An enormous consignment of artillery is en route, and it is said without hesitation that there were not over 275,000 troops in Manchuria and at Vladivostock when the war began. The administration authorities of Port Arthur asserts that the Japanese have landed in Corea only.

TALKS OF RUSSIAN REPULSE.

Vague Rumors of a Land Battle With 2,500 Lives Lost.

London, Feb. 22.—The cables are still absolutely silent with regard to the progress of the war, but there are vague rumors of land fighting. As an instance, the Paris edition of The New York Herald's correspondent at St. Petersburg talks of a Russian repulse on the Yalu River, with a loss of over 2,500 lives. These rumors are unconfirmed and from an unreliable quarter.

Japanese Forced Marches.

The Morning Post's Che Foo correspondent says he learns tens of thousands of Japanese are advancing by forced marches from various parts of Corea on the Yalu and that severe fighting is expected shortly. The Standard's Kieff correspondent hears that the Caucasus and Turkestan armies are to be mobilized. He adds that the rumor is not confirmed officially, but says if it is true it can only be interpreted as a veiled threat against India in certain emergencies. The Tien Tsin correspondent of The Standard reports the attack by 500 Chinese "brigands" on the Russian post at Foochow as probably an attempt to wreck the railway.

JAP OUTPOST CAPTURED.

Major Tatsaru and Five Armed Soldiers Taken By the Russians.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 22.—Major-Gen. Pflug, Admiral Alexieff's Chief of Staff, telegraphs from Port Arthur as follows:

"The situation here is unchanged.

"It is impossible to cross the Yalu River on the ice below Shackedtse.

"A sotnia of Cossacks passing through Wiju captured Major Tatsaru of the Japanese army, five armed soldiers and two Japanese civilians.

"The reports concerning the enemy are generally contradictory and scarce.

"Advices have been received confirming the report that troops belonging to the army of Yuanshihkai, Viceroy of the Chinese Province of Chili, are being sent to Sinchifu and Kupantse.

"Manchuria is quiet."

Another report says war maps and papers were found on the Japanese prisoners. It adds that the Coreans are observing a decidedly friendly attitude toward the Russian officers.

The Manchurian Railway is forwarding military trains without difficulty.

Japanese Sinews of War.

Tokio, Feb. 22.—The national loan has already been twice covered.

Russians Hang Japanese.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 22.—A despatch from Harbin, dated Feb. 20, says the railroad is in working order, and the Japanese who attempted to blow up the bridge over the Sungari River have been hanged. Bands of bandits who have been observed under Japanese leadership, are being pursued.

Russians Who Are Prisoners.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 22.—It is understood that the Russians taken prisoners in the Chemulpo fight will be brought home under agreement with France, Great Britain and Italy. These men will hence-forward be non-combatants. It is believed here that Viceroy Alexieff will exercise general supervision over the naval movements in the Far East.

To Relieve Americans in Corea.

Seoul, Feb. 22.—United States Minister Allen is endeavoring to bring all the American women and children from Northern Corea before hostilities actually begin. He has planned to assemble them temporarily at Ping Yang.

Gen. Kuropatkin Raised.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 22.—General Kuropatkin has been relieved of his functions as Minister of War and has been appointed commander-in-chief of the Russian army in the Far East.

Japanese Fugitives Maltreated.

Seoul, Feb. 22.—Japanese fugitives, who were maltreated at Port Arthur, arrived at Chemulpo yesterday, and the story of their ill-treatment has created great excitement among the people there.

Russia Favors Hay's Suggestion.

Washington, Feb. 22.—Count Cassini yesterday said Russia gladly and willingly favored the suggestion of Secretary Hay to localize hostilities, and "the highly prized friendly relations between the Washington and St. Petersburg Governments have in no way been interfered with."

Russian Scouting Parties.

Seoul, Feb. 22.—Two Russian scouting parties were seen yesterday close to Anju, nearly a hundred miles south of Wiju.

EDWARD THE PEACEMAKER.

King of England Offers His Services to Russia As Mediator.

London, Feb. 22.—Count Benckendorff, Russian Ambassador to the Court of St. James, is going to St. Petersburg to personally assure the Czar regarding the true state of British feeling on the subject of the pending war. It is understood that King Edward will intimate his readiness to act as mediator regarding the war in the Far East if the Czar so desires, and the Count will convey a personal message to that effect from the King to the Emperor.

Britain's Last Word Yet Unsaid.

London, Feb. 22.—The Foreign Office is waiting for the judgment of Berlin and St. Petersburg before having said the last word to Mr. Hay's proposals. The exclusion of Manchuria from the neutral sphere is considered by many diplomats as a dangerous precedent for either belligerent, since it implies that one of the richest and most populous provinces of China can be cut off and annexed by either Russia or Japan at the close of hostilities. Either power wishes to prohibit the other from doing what it considers itself licensed to accomplish.

King to Corean Emperor.

Seoul, Feb. 22.—The British Minister, G. N. Gordan, presented to the Emperor of Corea Saturday a monster silver cup sent by King Edward, in honor of the fortieth anniversary of the Emperor's accession to the throne. Returning thanks to King Edward, the Emperor expressed himself as highly gratified by the gift, and added that he much appreciated the presence of the guards of the British Legation, whom he regarded as his own troops.

The Kaiser to the Czar.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 22.—It is known that the Czar has received at least three personal letters from European sovereigns, expressing the heartiest sympathy. The potentates are Emperor William of Germany, King Christian of Denmark, and King Oscar of Sweden and Norway. The letter from Emperor William concluded with the significant words: "God is with us." The others are of the friendliest character and contain warm assurances.

Regulating War Correspondents.

London, Feb. 22.—Regulations governing the conduct of war correspondents in the field have just been announced. In the event of any contraventions of the regulations, or the instructions of the officer in command, war correspondents are made liable to court-martial.

Both Legs Frozen.

Fredericton, N. B., Feb. 22.—Arthur H. Shea, M.A., a graduate of the University of New Brunswick, and until recently engaged in private teaching here, was found at daylight yesterday morning dying unconscious in a snow bank without a vestige of clothing on him and his legs frozen from the knees down. He had been showing symptoms of insanity lately and left his home at 4 o'clock in the morning. After a search of two hours the fire department was called out and the men found him and took him to the hospital. His feet will have to be amputated to save his life.

Panama's Cabinet.

Panama, Feb. 22.—President Amador has appointed the following Cabinet:

Minister of Government and Foreign relations, Thomas Arias, Conservative; Minister of Justice and Public Instruction, Julio Fabregan, Conservative; Minister of Finance, Francisco Espriella, Liberal; Minister of Public Works, Manuel Quintero, Liberal.

Dr. Amador was inaugurated first President of the Republic of old Panama Saturday afternoon before the National Constitutional Convention.

Admits Stuffing Ballot Box.

Toronto, Feb. 22.—Sam Thompson has made a confession. In it he admits stuffing the ballot box, but says he was not paid for it. Wrong acts were done out of friendship, and he has resigned from secretaryship of Conservative Association.

500 Albanians Killed.

Salonica, Feb. 22.—Another battle occurred between the insurgant Albanians in North Albania and Turkish troops, Feb. 18. The Albanians were beaten; 500 men were killed or wounded. The Turks also lost heavily.

Fatal Blast Furnace Explosion.

Buffalo, Feb. 22.—Two men were asphyxiated, one was burned to death and several were seriously injured in an explosion of blast furnace gas at the plant of the Lackawanna Steel Company yesterday.

MAY BE A WRECK.

C.P.R. Lake Michigan Is Still Ashore Near Dungeness.

London, Feb. 22.—The Canadian Pacific Railway's Canada Line steamer Lake Michigan, which collided with the bark Matterhorn Friday, is still ashore near Dungeness. Owing to a heavy wind it is feared that the vessel will become a wreck. Tugs from Dover have succeeded in getting water aboard for the cattle, but they are unable, owing to the heavy sea, to supply the Lake Michigan with pumps. Forty-six members of the crew were landed at Dover Saturday night, where they were supplied with clothing. The crew returned to the vessel yesterday. It is believed the Lake Michigan is damaged below the water line amidships.

THIBET MISSION AT A HALT.

Gen. MacDonald and His Flying Column Back at Chumbi.

London, Feb. 22.—Col. Younghusband's mission to Thibet at present is at a complete standstill. Gen. MacDonald with a flying column has returned to Chumbi. The big Thibetan force assembled at Gurn has dwindled to 2,000 men, and there is nothing to indicate what will be the next phase in the event of the Dalai Lama maintaining his present attitude.

The Indian Government has taken the greatest pains to emphasize the fact that the mission entirely is political, and is sole object the amicable settlement of outstanding difficulties with the Lama Government. It lays stress on the fact that Col. Younghusband has the most careful instructions not to excite hostility, while Gen. MacDonald has been ordered to act on the defensive only, his sole duty being to safeguard the commissioners.

PARIS FACTORY FIRE.

Fourteen People Dead—Jumped From Windows to Escape.

Paris, Feb. 22.—Fourteen employes of a celluloid comb factory in this city lost their lives yesterday in a fire which was started by an explosion of gas. About twenty other employes were injured.

The explosion, which occurred in a room in the fourth storey, drove bricks and pieces of glass against a house on the other side of the street, and immediately afterwards enormous jets of flame burst out of the windows. Soon the entire structure was on fire. Simultaneously with the appearance of the flames, a number of men and women employed on the upper storeys, and who had been eating their luncheon, appeared at the windows and shrieked for assistance. Three men attempted to drop from a window to a balcony beneath, but, missing it, fell to the pavement below and were killed.

Would Win Either Way.

"Would you still want me to be your wife if my father was a poor man?" asked the beautiful heiress.

"Yes," the duke replied after a little pause. "In that case I would be enough of a curiosity to get rich exhibiting myself."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Digestive System is Deranged.

At This Season of the Year—High Living and Little Exercise Bring On Dyspepsia and Other Troubles.

Disorders of the digestive system are not uncommon at this season of the year.

In cold weather there is a danger of overeating and a tendency towards the excessive use of highly seasoned food and stimulants.

The result is much suffering from indigestion, liver and kidney derangements and constipation.

If people could only understand how promptly and effectively such disorders are overcome by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, this great family medicine would be even more popular than it is to-day.

Unlike any other medicine these pills have direct and combined action on kidneys, liver and bowels, and for this reason reach and cure the most complicated ailments.

Dyspepsia and biliousness, liver complaint and kidney trouble, stomach troubles and constipation, backache and headache disappear in wonderfully short time when Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are used.

By assisting the kidneys in eliminating the poisonous waste matter, by helping the liver to filter the bile from the blood, by regulating the bowels Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver pills prevent and cure the most painful and fatal diseases known to man.

Mrs. Owen Cummings, Deseronto, Ont., states:—"I was in very poor health when I began to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I had been a great sufferer from constipation and stomach trouble and was weak and run down in strength. I was gradually growing worse every day and finally decided that I would have to do something. Hearing of many being cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, I began using them and soon noticed a marked change for the better. I continued this treatment until I was cured of constipation and my stomach was restored to a healthy condition. It only took about three boxes of pills to entirely cure me."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

Perfect Digestion Means Health.

A Good Stomach Keeps Every Part of the Body in Perfect Condition and Disease Cannot Break In.

A POSITIVE CURE FOR BAD STOMACHS.

You Can Also Enjoy Mince Pie If You Take Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

If your stomach is all right, you are all right. Why are growing boys nearly always healthy? Because they have not abused their stomachs by excessive eating and drinking and weakened or destroyed the functions of that organ. Because they eat what Nature demands of good wholesome food and then take plenty of exercise and run and romp and help out in the process of digestion and keep their stomachs strong and well. The same is true of men who lead active outdoor lives and engage in physical activity. Their digestion is perfect, the food nutriment is properly assimilated, the blood is pure and healthy and you seldom hear of them being affected with headache, backache, kidney trouble, liver trouble, constipation or any other of the common ills that always afflict those with bad stomachs.

If there is anything wrong with you, be sure your stomach is right. If it is not right, get it right and do it in the right way—that is the natural way.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are a natural remedy for all stomach disorders and weakness. They possess exactly the same properties that the gastric juices and other digestive fluids of the stomach possess and they actually do the digestive work of the stomach and enable that organ to rest and recuperate and become sound and well. They act in a mild, natural manner and cause no disturbance in the digestive organs. They prevent any fermentation of the food which causes sour stomach.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets instill health into every part of the human body. They compel perfect digestion of the food and perfect assimilation of the food nutriment. Every organ and part of the body is kept in repair and good health necessarily results. At the same time the stomach, being relieved of the work of digestion, gets well and strong.

A prominent Detroit physician says: "I prescribe Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets for all cases of stomach trouble. I have tried many prescriptions, including a number of my own, but find nothing that gives such universal relief as this remedy. They are natural, harmless and thoroughly effective in their work, and while I have a natural antipathy to patent medicines, I do not hesitate to prescribe and recommend Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets on all occasions."

The above is no exception. The best physicians are prescribing them all over the land. They can be had of any druggist for 50 cents a box, and if your own doctor is real honest with you, he will tell you frankly that there is nothing on earth so good for dyspepsia as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Preference to New Zealand.

Ottawa, Feb. 23.—After careful consideration of the recent tariff of New Zealand, under which a preference was granted to Great Britain and Canada, the Dominion Government have reached the conclusion that the tariff of New Zealand is on the whole as favorable to Canada as that of the Dominion is to the far distant island colony. Accordingly an order in council has been passed extending to New Zealand the Canadian preference of 33 1-3 per cent.

Probably Fatally Hurt.

Essex, Feb. 23.—George Robertson of Chatham, who has been drilling a well here for the M.C.R., was probably fatally hurt yesterday afternoon. A chain or hook holding up an oak block weighing over forty pounds broke and the block fell 30 feet, striking the man's skull as he looked up to see what was the matter. His skull was crushed in so that he cannot live. He is about 35 years of age, and has a family at Chatham.

Murder Trial at Brantford.

Brantford, Feb. 23.—The spring assizes opened here yesterday, Mr. Justice Street presiding. The grand jury was selected, and the charge of murder against Kennedy was made. After considering the evidence for three hours, the jury brought in a true bill against the prisoner. The trial will open this morning at 10 o'clock.

RUSSIA APPEALS NOTE TO THE POWERS

Charges That Japan Repeatedly Violated the Law of Nations.

Threatening the Neutral Port of Chemulpo and Attacking the Russian Fleet at Port Arthur Prior to a Formal Declaration of War Made the Grounds of Complaint — What Russia Expects From the Other Nations.

Washington, Feb. 23.—Russia is addressing to the powers a vigorous communication charging Japan with repeated violation of the law of nations. The note is to the following effect, although the text is not yet obtained:

"That the Russian Government, believing all civilized powers to be faithfully desirous that the law of nations shall be strictly adhered to in the present war, respectfully calls the attention of the neutral Governments to these two instances in which Japan has violated this law:

"In threatening the neutral port of Chemulpo, where warships of many nations were gathered demanding the departure from that port of the Russian men-of-war Variag and Korietz, under penalty of attack within the harbor, and

"In attacking the Russian fleet at Port Arthur on the night of Feb. 8-9, and, on the following day, these several attacks having taken place prior to a formal declaration of war and before the Japanese minister at St. Petersburg or the Russian minister at Tokio had left their posts.

"It is also claimed that the attack took place after a communication from the Japanese minister to the Russian Government, expressing the hope that the interruption of diplomatic relations would be brief."

In the diplomatic corps the news of Russia's intended address to the powers has caused great interest. A diplomat whose government is inclined to sympathize with Russia said that the Russian Government did not expect other nations to pass on the attack at Port Arthur, but as to the threatened attack on Chemulpo, he said, were reported to have protested against the action of the Japanese Government, and if it were true that the American commander refused to join with the other foreign commanders in protesting to the Japanese commander against his action, he thought it likely the action of the commander of the Vicksburg would be the subject of an exchange of views between the St. Petersburg and Washington Governments.

Russia Not Prepared.

London, Feb. 23.—The latest advices of Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Minister to Great Britain, lead him to believe that the Japanese troops may now wait possibly two or three months before undertaking aggressive operations in Manchuria. He said:

"We have found that Russia is so unexpectedly unprepared that I should not be surprised if the Japanese land forces contented themselves with establishing a thorough organization and advancing as the construction of the railroad towards the Yalu River progresses. Russia appears to be less prepared than was China in 1895.

"I believe that only three trains a day can be run through Manchuria. Supposing these are equally divided between troops and supplies, as would be necessary, Russia could not perceptibly strengthen her land forces before April. Japan's naval coupe has been so unexpectedly successful that I rather think our troops will take their time. The shallow inlets are now frozen over, retarding the disembarkation of our forces. This is especially true at Port Arthur, where a near landing of troops is impossible, owing to the ice."

Baron Hayashi does not credit the report that 2,500 Russians have been killed in an outpost engagement at the Yalu River. He says there is no Japanese force in that vicinity large enough to inflict such a loss.

Hakodate Not Bombarded.

Nagasaki, Feb. 23.—The steamer Stolberg has arrived here from Vladivostock with twenty white foreigners, 1,500 Chinese and fifty Japanese. She brings in addition forty survivors of the Japanese steamer Nakonoura Maru, which was sunk by the Russian cruiser squadron from Vladivostock on Feb. 11. Two men were drowned during their transport to the Russian ships. The survivors were well treated and provided with return passages. The Vladivostock squadron intended to bombard Hakodate, but a snow storm prevented the vessels from entering the Straits of Tsuruga.

Dowager Empress Dead.

Victoria, B. C., Feb. 23.—Leaders of the Chinese reform party confirmed yesterday news of the death of the Empress Dowager of China and rejoice exceedingly at the fact. The head of the party here say that China will now see a revolution of unprecedented dimensions, with the object of placing China as a nation amongst the modern people.

A Black Sea Understanding.

New York, Feb. 23.—Turkey, according to a cable to The Herald from its correspondent in St. Petersburg, has lent a willing ear to the diplomatic suggestions of Russia that the Black Sea fleet should one day be found unexpectedly in the Mediterranean. Turkey will be given a free hand in settling the Balkan difficulties in the war which the coming months are deemed sure to bring. Such egress from the Black Sea would release a naval force which would turn the vital question of the command of the sea in the Far East in favor of Russia.

WAR SURE TO COME.

Bulgarian Government Has Declared State of Siege over 19 Miles.

London, Feb. 23.—Telegrams from Vienna and Salonica, published here yesterday morning, give alarming but unconfirmed details of preparations pointing to a war between Turkey and Bulgaria.

The Sofia correspondent of The Daily Mail telegraphs the Bulgarian Government has declared a state of seige over a zone 19 miles wide extending along the frontier from Taustandil over the Black Sea, with a view of preventing incursions of armed bands.

Blockaders Get Preference.

The Hague, Feb. 23.—The arbitration tribunal, considering the claims of the blockading powers against Venezuela has decided that Great Britain, Germany and Italy have the right to a preference of 30 per cent. of the customs duties at La Guayra and Puerto Cabello, the litigants to pay their own costs in the procedure, and divide equally the costs of the tribunal. The United States is commissioned to carry out the decision within three months.

Passing of Sir Leslie Stephen.

London, Feb. 23.—With the passing of Sir Leslie Stephen, K.C.M.G., president of the Ethical Society, who died yesterday, England loses one of her most distinguished men of letters. He was born at Kensington Gore, London, on Nov. 28, 1832, and was educated at Eton, King's College, London, and Trinity Hall, Cambridge, where he graduated B.A. in 1854 and M.A. in 1857. His first wife was Harriet Marion, youngest daughter of the great novelist, William Makepeace Thackeray. While at Cambridge he took holy orders, but afterwards relinquished them in the passing of the Clerical Disabilities Bill in 1870. Leslie Stephen settled ultimately in London and became a regular contributor to The Pall Mall Gazette and Fraser's, MacMillan's and The Fortnightly Magazine. In 1871 he took the chair as editor of The Cornhill Magazine. In 1882 he resigned the chair of Cornhill, and became the editor of The Colossal Dictionary of National Biography for the conception and plan of which he was largely responsible. At the distribution of coronation honors in 1902 he was made a K. C. B.

Two Schooners Wrecked.

New York, Feb. 23.—During a dense fog, high sea, and wind, two vessels went ashore yesterday near Bellport, L. I., and the other near Long Branch, N.J. They were the Benjamin Cromwell, Capt. McClean, with lumber from Charleston, B.C., to Halifax, N. S., valued at $12,000; and the Olive T. Whittier, Capt. Whittier, of Portland, Me., laden with lumber. Only two of the crew of eight of the Cromwell were saved. The ten men on the Whittier were rescued.

B.C. Miners Met.

Victoria, Feb. 23.—The second annual convention of the British Columbia Mining Association opened here yesterday with an attendance of 200 delegates from all parts of the province. Several drastic suggestions affecting mining conditions in this province are to be argued.

Lake Michigan in Bad Way.

London, Feb. 23.—The British steamer Lake Michigan, from St. John, N. B., which was beached in a sinking condition near Dungeness, after a collision with the barque Matterhorn, had two feet of water in her first hold, 23 feet in her second hold, 21 feet in her third hold, 26 feet in her fourth hold and 25 feet in her engine room.

Cattle Are All Right.

London, Feb. 22.—The cattle on board the Lake Michigan are all right and have food and water for two days. Pumps have been put on board, and it is hoped that with a continuance of the fine weather the vessel can be floated within 48 hours.

"VILLAINOUS CUSTOMS TAXES."

"These villainous Customs Taxes are impoverishing and ruining our people." Such was the language used by Sir Richard Cartwright in 1896, when discussing the tariff of the Conservative party. To emphasize this strong language, the then Mr. Laurier added: "We are a low tariff people," and, as if these strong denunciations were not sufficient, Sir Richard declared that the Conservative policy was "bleeding the people white" with its enormity of taxation.

It is well for the people to reflect for a moment and compare the taxation of the periods when the Conservatives governed, and that of the "low tariff people" now. From 1890 to 1896 there was collected under the Conservative Administration $146,695,355, and from 1896 to 1903, under the low tariff people, no less a sum than $195,315,790; $48,620,435 of an increase. An increase of taxation of a little over $8,000,000 a year! If the customs taxation was "villainous" under Conservative rule, what is it under Liberal rule? This is a question which may be fairly left to the tax payers to answer.

This is not the whole story. As time rolls on, taxation rolls up. Since June 30th, 1903, customs collections have been still more active, (to use the forcible language of Sir Richard, who in the good old days when he was an uncompromising Tory, The Globe denounced as a "mixer and muddler of figures") in "bleeding the people white," for from that date to the 31st of December, 1903, the people have paid in duties $20,698,489, as against $18,018,520 for a like period ending 31st December, 1902, an increase of $2,679,969. Again, if the Conservative customs taxation was "villainous," what language should be used to adequately describe Liberal customs taxation? The tax payers when casting their votes can answer the question.

TIMELY TOPICS.

We are told of a young man, now on a visit in this city, who landed in Kingston on Sunday last from Cape Vincent, N.Y. He came by stage, had no baggage, and claims to have been taxed 25 cents by the Customs Officer. The young man didn't mind the quarter, but thought he was being imposed upon. Perhaps he was.

Capt. Bruce Carruthers, of Kingston, has been appointed commander of the new Signal Corps, recently authorized by Parliament. The appointment is a worthy tribute to a brave and efficient soldier.

SOUND ADVICE.

PLAIN WORDS SPOKEN BY HIS LORDSHIP BISHOP MILLS—SCORED EUCHRE PARTIES.

At Kingston on Thursday Bishop Mills addressed a gathering of ladies on "Womanhood." He is reported thus in the Whig:

"A woman can do almost what she pleases with a man," said the bishop, "if she goes about it prayerfully, patiently and wisely. There are exceptions to every rule, but the majority of men would be better and truer, if women used their influence for the right. Women don't realize their power. They don't make their homes what they might, and the men go out to their clubs and unhappiness ensues. Clubs for unmarried men are all right, for married men they are a mistake. The club idea for women has taken deep root in the United States, and has unfortunately crossed the border into Canada. Some women think it is well to copy men. It is a great mistake. I must say I have the utmost contempt for mannish women. The afternoon card party for women, in vogue in many cities, is a degenerating tendency of the day. While women in hot and darkened rooms, eagerly play for gain, their husbands and sons are given the choice between a lonely house, and seeking companionship outside their own home. Thus instead of women elevating, sustaining and inspiring they are weakening home ties, and degrading their own lives, and the lives of those about them.

CROSSED THE DARK RIVER.

RECENT VICTIMS OF THE GRIM REAPER IN THIS VICINITY.

MARY E. O'NEIL.

Mrs. Mary Ellen O'Neil, widow of the late John O'Neil, died yesterday at the residence of her son, Mr. James O'Neil, 8th con. of Thurlow. Deceased was 66 years of age and had resided all her life in Tyendinaga and Thurlow. She was a member of the Roman Catholic Church. Her son is the only remaining member of the family.

IRENE DESHANE.

Irene Deshane, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Deshane, of Foxboro, died yesterday. The little one had been ill for some time.

JOHN BRINTNELL.

Mr. E. Brintnell received a telegram this morning announcing the death of his brother, Mr. John Brintnell, which occurred last evening at Hensell, Ontario. Deceased, who was 74 years of age, was born in the Township of Thurlow. Some 50 years ago he removed up west, where he has since resided. He had been ill for some years. A widow and a family of seven children survive. Mr. Brintnell was a member of the Orange Order, in religion a Methodist and in politics a Conservative.

RICHARD P. COOK.

On Friday last Mr. Richard P. Cook died at Unionville, Mich., aged 96 years. The aged gentleman was born in this county and resided nearly all his life in the Township of Thurlow. Only recently he went to Michigan on a visit to his daughter, Mrs. Austin Hayes, where he died. Mr. Cook was in religion a Quaker. The remains arrived here to-day and were taken to the residence of his son, Mr. L. A. Cook, who resides on John street in this city. A family of two sons and nine daughters survive. Police Officer Cook is a nephew of the deceased.

Backache

is more than tiredness. Hard work does not bring sharp, shooting pains. And a dull, nagging pain—that a night's sleep won't drive away—is never due to weariness.

Nine times in ten, backache says Kidney Trouble. Pain is nature's way of telling you that your Kidneys are weak—that they cannot do nature's work—that they want help to get well and strong again!

GIN PILLS

are the greatest help that sick kidneys can have. They relieve the pain, strengthen the weak parts, and completely cure all Kidney Troubles. They are prepared solely to cure the Kidneys. They do that one thing—do it quickly, thoroughly, completely.

We know what wonders GIN PILLS are. That's why we authorize any druggist to refund your money if they fail.

CANADIAN RAILWAYS HAVE BEEN HARD HIT.

EARNINGS DECREASED AND EXPENDITURES INCREASED — HOPES THAT THE WORST IS NOW OVER.

Montreal, Feb. 21.—Mr. D. McNicoll, General Manager of the C.P.R., speaks as follows on the results of the recent extreme weather:—"This has been the worst winter that railways have experienced in many years. It not only has cost large sums of money, but it has been very trying to both locomotives and men. I think the worst is over now, but there are indications of a quick thaw, which will be dangerous to railways on account of washouts. We have not lost as heavily as the G.T.R., but our loss is one of many thousands of dollars. It may be hard to conceive of drifts reaching the height of twenty-five and thirty feet, but among the mountains and in the open country of western Ontario the wind blows at a tremendous rate per hour, and the temperature drops as low as twenty-five and twenty-six degrees below zero. Our reports of earnings for January and February show many decreases. Our decrease in earnings for the first two weeks in February is estimated at about $235,000. Some people are of the opinion that we are to blame for the delay of the passenger trains, but they evidently are not aware of the immense sums which we lose through these storms. Our actual losses can be classed under five different headings:—(a) Expenditure for the coal that is used by the snow ploughs; (b) expenditure for the extra coal used in propelling trains; (c) the loss through being unable to transport freight; (d) money expended for wages of men who are employed to shovel the tracks; (e) the loss through various accidents.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"THE MASCOTTE" LAST NIGHT.

What do the theatre-goers of this beautiful city want? Here they have a chance to see comic opera at popular prices, put on by a good company, and won't turn out. It is really too bad. The Wilbur Opera Company last night presented the old favorite "Mascotte" to a small audience, the opera being well put on and sung, deserving a full house. The cast was a good one, the principals being fair actors and good singers. Miss Marion Langdon, as "Bettina," the mascot, was excellent, "Pippo" being well sung by Mr. Martin Pache. The perennial "Gobble Duet" was beautifully rendered. Mr. Tom Smith Martin made a funny "Prince Lorenzo," and the remainder of the cast were quite equal to the demands made upon them. To-night the company presents "The Bohemian Girl," and can be depended on to give a tuneful presentation of the immortal opera.

Selling to a Minor.

Edward Naylor, bar tender for Mr. James McGoldrick, and also the latter, were charged jointly with selling liquor to a minor. It is alleged that a lad named Joseph Simpson, aged 17, on Saturday last, obtained liquor from Naylor, with the result that he became intoxicated. Naylor pleaded not guilty. Simpson, in the witness box, testified as to his age and also swore that he obtained liquor from Naylor.

After some evidence had been taken the case was adjourned until Thursday. Mr. W. C. Mikel represented the city in the matter.

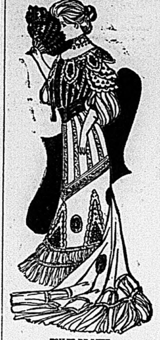
TOILETS DE LUXE.

TWO GOWNS OF MUCH ELEGANCE ILLUSTRATED AND DESCRIBED.

The Increasing Luxury and Elegance in Dress—Gold Again to the Fore — A Finely Plaited Treble Flounced Skirt.

Evening gowns form no exception to the increasing luxury and elegance in dress, as may be realized from the two specimens here submitted for consideration.

Shaded sea green silk striped with lace insertion or fancy galloon forms the basis of the very original toilet de luxe. Some of these insertions peep out through the diaphanous silk muslin of the flounces. Tabs of deep cream lace display traceries of gold thread and raised bunches of gold grapes are conspicuous.

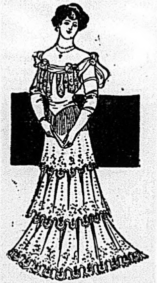


TOILET DE LUXE.

Gold tassels droop from the looped up sleeve in greenish blue silk muslin, and the purse ends of the fancy front are divided by a straight band of the same quaint moss green shades as the deep belt in panne.

The treble flounced skirt of the dinner gown is built in forgetmenot blue muslin over a white taffeta foundation. It is finely plaited all round the waist and enriched with a formal silk and chenille embroidery. Along the vandyked edges runs a narrow cross band of straw colored silk piped with a silver and gold cord. At the feet white silk puffings fill in the open triangles of the wide flounce. Double rows of tabs in keeping simulate a short vest in front of the pointed bodice in silk muslin. Draperies form full short sleeves, with choux of muslin in a lighter tint. A Lalique jewel with pearl strands shines on the left shoulder at a short distance from a glorious spray of roses.

Velvet of unparalleled softness and freedom from weight furnishes one of the fashionable materials of the season. Guipure is used about the corsage, together with fur, while the skirt may be left simple, in voluminous folds.



A DINNER GOWN.

Satin gowns are again bordered with mink or sable, and ermine represents the evening fur of latest chic.

AMY VARNUM.

Homemade Cements.

A homemade cement that will mend broken crockery is worth knowing about. Here are several formulas: Unslacked lime or plaster of paris mixed with the white of an egg till the consistency of cream is excellent. Plain white lead will do also, and, moreover, this is one of the few cements that will resist water and heat. One other that is waterproof is made by dissolving ordinary white glue in warm milk.

Twelfth Night Cake.

For Twelfth Night, Jan. 6, bake a round loaf of poundcake (put a pea and a bean in the batter) and ice with a plain icing. When firm, arrange alternately small red and white candles on the top so as to form a five pointed star, piping a rose of icing round each candle and garnishing with a wreath of holly.—Table Talk.

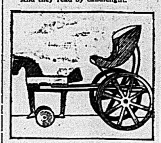
FOR YOUNG FOLKS

GRANDPA'S TOY.

It's a Funny Old Wagon, but He Thinks It Is Just the Thing.

When grandpa was a little boy—
  And that's a faroff day,
For now grandpa is very old
  And never thinks of play—

Grandpa lived in the good old times
  When "everything was right."
They had no carpets on the floors,
  And they read by candlelight.



GRANDPA'S TOY WAGON.

And his toy horse looks very crude,
  Its tail is like a broom;
The wagon is high and funny
  And has but little room.

But grandpa thinks it the nicest toy
  That ever yet was made;
He would not for an automobile
  This queer old wagon trade.

I suppose when you are grandpas
  You'll think your toys were great Way back in the days when you were young,
  But you'll be out of date.
—Ruth Titus in St. Nicholas.

A House Moving Worm.

The bagworm is a little smarter than his cousin the caterpillar. Both make very snug little silken houses for themselves, but the bagworm lives in his and moves it around from place to place. When he becomes tired of living in one neighborhood he simply crawls halfway out of his silken sack and, holding on to it with his back feet, walks away on his front ones, pulling his house along after him. Of course the house must be very strong to stand being dragged about like this, so he weaves in little twigs which make it very firm.

After awhile the bagworm fastens its little house to the limb of a tree, crawls inside and changes itself into a pupa. Not satisfied with this, the male worm crawls out again and becomes a moth. The poor female meanwhile stays in her house, lays some eggs and then dies.

Birds Plant Trees.

An old time Arizona woodchopper says the blue jays have planted thousands of the trees now growing all over Arizona. He says these birds have a habit of burying small seeds in the ground with their beaks and that they frequent pine trees and bury large numbers of the small pine nuts in the ground, many of which sprout and grow.

He was walking through the pines with an eastern man a short time ago when one of these birds flew from a tree to the ground, stuck his bill into the earth and quickly flew away. When told what had happened, the eastern man was skeptical, but the two went to the spot and with a knife blade dug out a sound pine nut from a depth of about an inch and a half. Thus it will be seen that nature has her own plan for forest perpetuation.

Weeping Fish.

There was a little girl taken recently to visit the aquarium in New York. She was much interested in the strange fishes and in deep thought took in the entertainment in her own way.

That evening she gave her father a vivid and original account of it.

"Daddy," she said, opening her eyes very wide and talking excitedly, "we went today to a live fish store. They had the fish in glass cages just to make them think nothing was the matter. Most of the fish swam around and did not mind when they slammed the glass sides, but one fish, daddy, stood right up on the tip of his tail! And there were tears streaming down his poor little cheeks, and I know he was praying to be let out of there!"

Hidden Towns.

Large holes in the ground, such as are used to catch animals in, and the name sometimes given to a small town—Pittsburg.

A boy's first name and something most boys are fond of—Williamsport.

The head man of a gang of workmen and 2,200 pounds—Boston.

A sharp, sudden blow and something to make a boat go—Bangor.

The opposite of old and something that every sailor likes to come to—Newport.

A place from which water may be obtained and a plot of ground—Springfield.

A boy's nickname, what the boy is and the French word for town—Jacksonville.

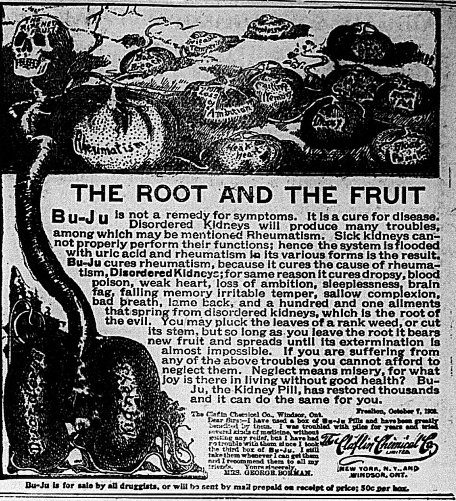
Birds Fly.

A nice little game for little folks is this:

Have everybody place his forefinger on the edge of the table and whenever the leader says, "Birds fly" or "Pigeons fly" or "Hawks fly" or "Crows fly" (or any other bird), everybody must raise his finger.

But whenever the leader says, "Dogs fly," "Horses fly" (or any other animal that has no wings), not a finger should be lifted.

If any one lifts a finger at the wrong time he must pay a forfeit. Also, if any one fails to raise a finger at the right time he, too, must pay a forfeit.



THE ROOT AND THE FRUIT

Bu-Ju is not a remedy for symptoms. It is a cure for disease. Disordered Kidneys will produce many troubles, among which may be mentioned Rheumatism. Sick kidneys cannot properly perform their functions; hence the system is flooded with uric acid and rheumatism in its various forms is the result. Bu-Ju cures rheumatism, because it cures the cause of rheumatism, Disordered Kidneys; for same reason it cures dropsy, blood poison, weak heart, loss of ambition, sleeplessness, brain fag, failing memory irritable temper, sallow complexion, bad breath, lame back, and a hundred and one ailments that spring from disordered kidneys, which is the root of the evil. You may pluck the leaves of a rank weed, or cut its stem, but so long as you leave the root it bears new fruit and spreads until its extermination is almost impossible. If you are suffering from any of the above troubles you cannot afford to neglect them. Neglect means misery, for what joy is there in living without good health? Bu-Ju, the Kidney Pill, has restored thousands and it can do the same for you.

Dear Sirs:—I have used a box of Bu-Ju Pills and have been greatly benefited by them. I was troubled with piles for years and tried several kinds of medicine, without getting any relief, but I have had no trouble with them since I took the third box of Bu-Ju. I still take them whenever I can get them and I recommend them to all my friends. Yours sincerely,

Underprice Store.

THE GREAT EASTERN STOCK COMPANY

Distributors of General Merchandise.

Opened their doors Saturday, Feb. 20th, and we feel highly gratified at the success made possible, not only because we proved our classification as the underpriced store to the attendants, but because you and your friends have shown such widespread interest in this new store.

"We are large buyers," "big capital," buy mill ends in English, French and German goods stopped in transit. This syndicate has three buyers in the market every day in the year, and you will find it much to your advantage to make this store the storm centre for underpriced merchandise. We figure a nimble nickel is worth a slow dollar.

Keep in mind the place—look for the red ticket, the bargain indicator. Every preparation is being made for fast selling, "it's the new idea." Everybody waits on themselves.

Silence is the fence around wisdom, be wise, buy now and wear a smile that won't come off.

TO CURE FEVER CHILLS

And such complaints as "Shivers" and ague we recommend Nerviline very highly. Twenty drops of Nerviline taken in hot water with a little sugar three times daily not only stops the chills, but knocks out the disease completely. Nerviline has a direct action on fever chills and removes the conditions causing them. In stomach and bowel troubles Nerviline never fails. It's pleasant to the taste, quick to relieve and always cures permanently. Get a 25c bottle to-day.

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN

When buying clothing, beware of the man who offers you $10 and $12 suits or overcoats for $3.98 or $4.76 Then again, do not be governed too much by the marked price—look to the value, the worth, the texture, trimmings and make of the goods themselves. A comparison thus made will show conclusively that the prices we quote are lower than goods of equal worth or quality can be bought for elsewhere.

A WISE OLD FOX.

One Who For a Long Time Cleverly Eluded the Hounds.

In common with other people who have looked after fox coverts I have often been puzzled by the disappearance of well known foxes and have become convinced that the more intelligent foxes, after they have been before hounds several times, often turn their wits to account to avoid being hunted. In a small covert that I know well there was always a fox. A fine big fellow he was. I have more than once met him when taking an early ride as he loped quietly homeward after his night's foraging. He never seemed to mind being seen. When the season opened he gave us one or two capital runs, on the second occasion only just saving his brush by scrambling into an unstopped drain in our neighbor's territory. After that he was never to be found when hounds came. Yet he was seen about as usual at other times. One day when walking near the covert one of the terriers, who knew all about foxes, took a line to an old tree in the hedgerow and began to whimper and scratch at the roots. A careful examination showed nothing. The tree was not difficult to climb. It proved to have a hollow trunk, and there, at the bottom, was my friend curled up fast asleep. His mask smiles on me as I write. After a seven mile point and on a good scenting day he met his fate.

MARVELS OF MEMORY.

Feats of Famous Men That Seem Almost Beyond Belief.

Some examples of the marvels of memory would seem entirely incredible had they not been given to us upon the highest authority. Cyrus knew the name of each soldier in his army. It is also related of Themistocles that he could tell by name every citizen of Athens, although the number amounted to 20,000. Mithridates, king of Pontus, knew all his 80,000 soldiers by their right names.

Scipio knew all the inhabitants of Rome. Seneca complained of old age because he could not, as formerly, repeat 2,000 names in the order in which they were read to him, and he stated that on one occasion, when at his studies, 200 unconnected verses having been recited by the different pupils of his preceptor, he repeated them in a reverse order, proceeding from the last to the first.

Thomas Cranmer committed to memory in three months an entire translation of the Bible. Euler, the mathematician, could repeat the "Æneid," and Leibnitz, when an old man, could recite the whole of Virgil, word for word. It is said that Bossuet could repeat not only the whole Bible, but all of Homer, Virgil and Horace, besides many other works.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Hurrah! for the cold wave that didn't turn up.

* * *

Front street, just at present, is about as tough-looking a main thoroughfare as one would see in a day's journey.

* * *

"Excuse me," as the roadway said to the sleigh, "I'm all broke up to-day."

* * *

"After me the deluge," as February said to March.

* * *

Many far-seeing people are already clearing out their cellars. They expect to gather in considerable moisture this spring.

* * *

The railroads expect washouts when the spring freshets come. That's nothing, we know a house where there's a washout every week.

* * *

Many people, who have weathered the winter so far, are fearful of the March winds. Cheer up! March can't possibly be any worse than some of the months we've had already.

* * *

We don't believe that story of a robin being seen on College Hill yesterday morning, even if a member of the Board of Education says he saw it. It's a little too early for robin stories.

SLEEP IS PRICELESS.

BUT IT CAN BE OBTAINED BY SIMPLE METHODS.

Are you a hard worker? Are you overcome with fatigue at the end of each day's labor, and instead of retiring to bed with a feeling of satisfaction at the prospect of a night's repose, do you wait the hour of bedtime with dread and shrinking?

Is it your unhappy lot to be awakened every night, just as you have dropped off to sleep, by an intense, uncontrollable itching of the rectum? Do you then endeavor to relieve the sensation by scratching so desperately that the skin becomes raw and lacerated, and you finally sink into the sleep of exhaustion?

If so, you do not need to be told that you are afflicted with itching piles. You have probably tried every remedy you could hear of, with but temporary relief, if any, and have concluded there was nothing left for you but to drag out a miserable existence. As a drowning man grasps at a straw, so should you eagerly devour the words of W. O. Milbury, 70 Pearl street, Reading, Mass.

"I am pleased to state that I bought one fifty cent box of Pyramid Pile Cure at the drug store, and used about one half of it, and it not only cured me of itching piles, but also of constipation, a trouble of about fifteen years standing. I have tried almost everything without any lasting benefit, but I can honestly and truthfully state that Pyramid Pile Cure has entirely cured me, as I have had no return of this terrible itching, which used to keep me awake by the hour, night after night. If the old trouble should ever return I will know just what to do, but I guess it won't for it is now six or seven months since I first used this wonderful remedy."

We vouch for the authenticity of this testimonial, and as Mr. Milbury found relief and a cure, so you may also. Do not delay, but buy a box and try it to-night, and do not allow any dealer to sell you "something just as good." You will do well to write Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., for their little book on the causes and cure of piles, which is sent free for the asking.

St. Patrick's Purgatory.

Mediæval songs and legends, which are rich in all sorts of mythical and fantastical lore, locate the entrance to St. Patrick's famous "purgatory" on the island of Lough Derg, Ireland. The opening itself was through a cave, the existence of which was revealed to the saint by Christ, who informed the good Patrick that any one with the moral courage to go down into the cavern would be saved the pangs of the real "purgatory" after death. Patrick built a monastery at the entrance of his earthly "purgatory" and secured the way to the pit by an iron gate provided with strong chains and locks of peculiar and intricate workmanship. Lough Derg, next to Jerusalem, was the most celebrated spot on earth during the middle ages. Thousands visited "purgatory" every year, and the whole island had the appearance of a populous city.

THE YELLOW MAN.

A THRILLING STORY OF THE BOXERS IN CHINA.

BY CARLTON DAWE.

Copyright, 1900,
By Paul R. Reynolds.

course it may be merely a coincidence, but we shall see. If I am not mistaken, he will return by way of Albemarle street and Piccadilly."

"But this is an Englishman," I began. "Surely he"— and then I stopped, feeling very foolish. I was going to suggest in the face of my father's confession that Englishmen would not mix themselves up with the Society of Hidden Meaning.

Jim saw the hesitation and smiled.

"My dear Davie," he said, "you must not imagine that we have only Woo-ching to fight. The society is rich. There are always plenty of men ready to earn good wages. One has only to go into the streets and look at the faces of the people to imagine how easily the society would gain recruits."

With a sigh I assented. With so much murder and robbery rife for problematical gains, how very easy it would be to find workmen when the wage was assured. It seemed to me that the ground beneath us was slipping more rapidly than ever.

We accordingly set ourselves to watch, Jim stationing himself at one side of the window, I at the other. I saw the spy slowly enter our street from the Piccadilly end. We watched the man walk on until he reached the end of the street, and there he took up his stand and began slowly to fill a pipe. Then my uncle picked up his gloves and cane.

"We had better go now," he said. "That fellow saw us enter. He must see us go out again or he may suspect us of watching. I must go and see Waring. We shall certainly lose that fellow in the crowd. Quick, there's an empty hansom coming along the street just now!"

I snatched up my hat and gloves, and together we bundled down the stairs, opening the door in time to hail the cab. With a nonchalant step we crossed the pavement.

"Bank," said my uncle as he balanced himself on the step.

I, following, took a leisurely look up the street. The man with the billycock hat had left his stand and was hurrying in our direction. I caught a last glimpse of him as we shot round the corner into Piccadilly. He was still a good hundred yards behind.

CHAPTER XIV.

A DESPERATE EFFORT.

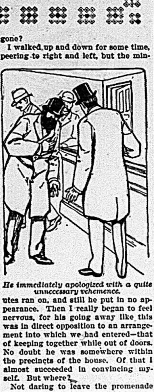
To know that you are a marked man, the object of a hatred which nothing but your death can appease, is to be saddled with the companionship of horror and fear. To sit with locked doors, to know no moment of respite waking or sleeping, forever to feel the contact of the revolver in my hip pocket, to distrust every man in the street who brushed against me—this was my life, and little wonder if I found it intolerable and sought for change among men who merely sought for pleasure.

And thus it came about that I invariably dragged my uncle to one of the pleasure houses within the vicinity of Leicester square, for there, amid the glitter and the hum of life, I always felt safe and had some chance of partly forgetting the doom that was laid upon me.

On this particular evening, after dining in the vicinity, we strolled into the Empire and mixed with the well dressed nondescripts who patronize that temple of art. Here, as usual, we met acquaintances to whom we merely nodded or passed a brief good night, as the case might be. But one, a stockbroker friend, came and buttonholed my uncle, and, seeing that they wanted to talk business, I strolled on. When I returned, he was nowhere to be seen.

This in itself was not a very alarming matter, but a fruitless search from one end of the promenade to the other caused some slight misgivings. What had become of him? Where had he gone?

I walked up and down for some time, peering to right and left, but the minutes ran on, and still he put in no appearance. Then I really began to feel nervous, for his going away like this was in direct opposition to an arrangement into which we had entered—that of keeping together while out of doors. No doubt he was somewhere within the precincts of the house. Of that I almost succeeded in convincing myself. But where?



He immediately apologized with a quite unnecessary vehemence.

Not daring to leave the promenade for fear he should return during my absence, I went to the bar at the far end and ordered a drink, which I well remember receiving from a weary, worn creature whose pallid face proclaimed an intimate acquaintance with the least delightful side of life. Grouped around the bar were about a dozen men of various ages, some with the youthful bloom still on their faces, others of the mottled, flushing stamp whose features are an unfailing index to their lives.

I ordered my drink, drank while the soda fizzed and then placed the tumbler upon the counter while I turned about to quiz the approach to the bar, for I was not without hope of seeing my uncle thread his way through the throng and come toward me. However, he failed to put in an appearance, and one by one the men moved off and made room for new arrivals, and the fellow who was next to me, a man with a somewhat full, dark brown beard, accidentally touched my foot in passing. He immediately apologized profusely and with a quite unnecessary vehemence, I thought. Indeed the little accident seemed to excite him greatly and fill him with an alarm which was quite disproportionate to the offense. I smiled a ready forgiveness as he moved off, and not until he was gone did I seem to recollect the wild, nervous glance of his eyes as he stared a moment into my face. Under other conditions I might have thought seriously of it. Nevertheless I watched him with some interest as he disappeared in the crowd.

Discovering no sign of my uncle amid the moving throng and feeling that I had held my place for a reasonable period, I turned with the intention of finishing my drink, when my eyes encountered those of a pale faced young gentleman who was leaning on the end of the counter. He started suddenly, as though he intended to speak, but hesitated as quickly, restrained, so it appeared, by a second thought. I in the meantime took up the tumbler and was about to raise it to my lips when once more my look instinctively wandered his way. His eyes were fixed upon me with a keenness which I failed utterly to fathom, and, seeing, no doubt, the curious interrogative expression of my face, he came instantly toward me. I at once lowered the glass and watched him intently.

He was an ordinary young fellow, with an insipid mustache and fair hair pressed close upon his head; perhaps not a strong man physically or intellectually, but apparently of some class.

"I hope you will pardon me," he said. "I have not the pleasure of knowing you, but—but"—and he seemed extremely nervous—"I think I ought to tell you what I've seen. You will pardon the liberty?"

"Certainly."

"Then I'm afraid it will seem an absurd question to ask. Have you—have you any enemies?"

I started and looked him squarely in the eyes, but he withstood the scrutiny without the flicker of a lid.

"Excuse me," I said, now thoroughly on my guard, "but you must surely recognize the incongruity of addressing such a question to a stranger."

"I do," he replied.

"Then why do you ask?"

"Because I have just seen something which—which, to say the least of it, is singular. Do you remember the man with the beard who a minute ago apologized for treading on your foot?"

"Perfectly."

"Well, I saw him, while your back was turned, drop something into your tumbler."

"Good heavens!"

Involuntarily the exclamation escaped me. A convulsive shiver swept me from head to foot. The young man, watching intently, must have seen my face blanch, for he added hastily:

"I hope I haven't frightened you, but I thought it looked suspicious and that I had better speak."

"Thanks, a thousand times!" I said. "I have enemies. It was good of you to speak." I seized his hand and shook it warmly, scarcely noticing the limp fingers which returned no answering pressure.

"Oh, don't mention it," he replied. Then he added in another key, "If I were you, I'd chuck that stuff away."

I took up the glass and looked at it, but could distinguish nothing which would lead me to suppose that it had been tampered with. I smelled it, with a like result. Then I became curious to know of what this drug consisted of which I could detect no sign.

"I think I shall preserve it as a piece of evidence," I answered. "I can detect nothing suspicious in it."

"Let me try," said he, and as I handed him the glass I turned to the pale faced girl behind the bar and asked her for a bottle of some description.

The young fellow was still peering into the glass when I once more looked his way, and presently he held it out, with a shake of the head.

"I also am at a loss to detect anything the least bit suspicious. It is very curious."

As he spoke he handed the glass back, but somewhat carelessly, for as my fingers touched it he let go, with the result that the thing fell crashing to the floor.

"Oh, a thousand pardons!" he cried. "Whose fault was it—mine or yours?"

I admitted with some chagrin that we were both at fault, but the unforeseen had happened, the evidence was destroyed, and there was nothing more to be said about it. Nevertheless I was extremely annoyed, and in my heart I censured him greatly for his carelessness; but, as nothing further could be said on the subject, I thanked him once more, bade him good night and moved off.

I looked vainly for the gentleman with the beard, though I had little hope of discovering him. Indeed, but for his stumbling over my foot I doubt if I should have noticed him at all. Having completed his work, he had made good his escape. Perhaps from some vantage ground he might still be watching me, watching the effect of his work; but, if so, I saw nothing of him. However, I thought it highly probable that he had put some distance between him and the theater.

Presently I beheld my uncle advancing toward me through the crowd, and as he came up he smilingly asked if I thought he had been lost.

"That chap Cockerton," he explained, referring to the stockbroker, "would insist upon dragging me round to see the manager. A little spec he has on; wants me to join. But no, thanks! Very good, but not good enough for me. I know Cockerton, and once on a time I used to know theatrical gentlemen." And he favored me with a profoundly knowing smile, a smile I always associated with the city, and a cleverness which did not appeal to me. I once saw a Jew financier tap his nose and look in a similar manner, and I thought immediately of fat pork. It is curious, when one comes to think of it, how the sight of a fat, middle aged Jew will conjure up pictures of pig.

But, evidently seeing the agitation in my face, the smile faded from his, and, advancing closer, he whispered, "Why, Davie, what's the matter?"

"I've had a squeak."

"What, here? Good heavens! How?"

In as few words as possible I told him. His face grew drawn and haggard as he listened, and when I had finished he clutched me by the arm and drew me to him.

"This is awful, Davie," he whispered. "Forgive me for leaving you; but here, in the midst of all this life and light, how could one dream they would attack us here? And the young fellow who warned you—where is he? I should like to speak to him."

We searched for him, but without success. The performance was nearing its close. Already many people had left. The young fellow had evidently taken his departure.

"I am sorry," said my uncle. "I should like to thank him and learn a little of the man with the beard. You would know this young man again?"

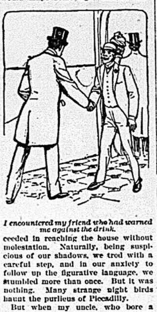
"Undoubtedly."

"Had you ever seen him here before?"

"Never to my knowledge. He was quite the ordinary, well dressed sort of person. I should not have noticed him had I not caught him staring so strangely at me."

"Anyway, it was lucky he spoke," and his hand tightened on my arm. Dear old Jim.

We left the theater and walked home, almost hoping that the enemy would make some sign, but we succeeded in reaching the house without molestation. Naturally, being suspicious of our shadows, we trod with a careful step, and in our anxiety to follow up the figurative language, we stumbled more than once. But it was nothing. Many strange night birds haunt the purlieus of Piccadilly.



I encountered my friend who had warned me against the drink.

But when my uncle, who bore a candle in his hand, arrived before the door, I saw him start and then raise the light as though he wished to examine something. Peering over his shoulder, I saw distinctly the sign of the society, traced with the now familiar vermilion pencil.

I confess that this last proof of the desperate daring of our enemies completely overwhelmed me. If, as my uncle had said, their object in thus displaying the sign was to frighten us, they succeeded thoroughly. At least, as far as I was concerned. To me the combat seemed a hopeless one. What ordinary being could hope to cope successfully with such persistent fiends? This, coming so soon after my escape at the theater, unnerved me completely. No miracle would have surprised me then.

My uncle, without speaking, opened the door, and together we entered and made a thorough search of the apartment, but here we found no trace. Then he rang for the porter, and from him we learned that two men had come about 7 o'clock to look for rooms, but what they were like, beyond being little men and dark, he could not say.

We thanked him, and he withdrew. Then my uncle, turning to me, addressed me for the first time, using, strange to say, precisely the same words my father had so often employed:

"Davie, we must pack up."

I offered no shadow of an objection to my uncle's proposal, and after breakfast on the following morning we drove to Victoria and took train for Brighton. Upon our arrival in Brighton we drove to the Metropole.

Needless to say, our first promenade along the front was not made with our eyes shut, but no one resembling Woo-ching, or the spy of Dover street, was seen. Nor later on, when people came to dring tea in the winter garden, was anything of a suspicious nature discovered. But an hour or so after as I was passing through the vestibule I encountered my friend of the Empire, the young fellow who had warned me against the drink.

Recognizing me, instantly he held out his hand.

"Ah, how do you do? This is a delightful surprise. When did you come down?"

"This morning. And you?"

"About an hour ago. Delightful place, Brighton, isn't it?"

"Very."

I thought he seemed a trifle excited, and I noticed that his slim fingers felt very cold as they rested against my palm.

"Stopping here, I suppose?" he asked next.

"Yes."

"So am I. Awfully glad to have met you."

"Thanks very much. You may be sure after the service you rendered me last night that I fully reciprocate"—

"Pooh!" he said. "Don't mention it. I thought it looked fishy, and I spoke. Let's say no more about it, at least as far as I am concerned."

He opened his case and offered me a cigarette, taking one himself. Then he struck a match and held it to me, for which I duly thanked him. But my thanks merely added to his embarrassment. He struck me as being a singularly nervous young gentleman.

I thought he was not quite so presentable by daylight as he had been in the artificial glare of the theater. His face, of a sickly, pallid tone, showed unmistakable traces of an irregular mode of life. His eyes were narrow and blue and shifty, the pupils of which seemed to remind me of pricking pin points. Indeed I might go so far as to say that a closer acquaintance with the young gentleman, who, by the way, was not so young by daylight, did not impress me with an ardent desire to cultivate him.

I think he read something of my thoughts, for he had a shrewd face, and he accordingly smiled somewhat amusedly.

"Always begin a heavy night at the Empire," he whispered confidentially. "Brighton next day. No pick me up like it. Fellows are awful fools. You don't dissipate?"

"Well," said I, not altogether relishing the fact that my virtues were so clearly imprinted upon my face, "it all depends on what you call dissipation."

He smiled almost offensively, I thought, yet in a way which many people would have called clever. At all events, it deepened my first impression of him, which, in spite of my gratitude, was not altogether complimentary.

Just then my Uncle Jim came along, and I immediately introduced my new friend.

"This is my uncle, Mr. Davie. This is the gentleman who warned me in the Empire last night."

"Pleased to meet you, sir. May we exchange cards?"

We all three immediately took out our cases. The stranger's card bore the legend "Mr. Cyril George Wentworth."

"I am delighted to meet you," said my uncle warmly. "My nephew has fully described the incident of last night. I believe we are greatly indebted to you, sir."

"I hope not, indeed. Perhaps, after all, I may have been mistaken. The man's action was certainly suspicious, but it was all done so quickly that it is just possible I may have imagined the worst."

My uncle looked serious.

"Unfortunately, I am unable to think so. No doubt Mr. Kingston has told you that we have enemies?"

"I believe he did say something to that effect," replied Mr. Wentworth, "but I hope your enemies are not of the desperate class?"

"I hope not, indeed," said Jim, the wily one. "But you will admit that your story is a little stimulating?"

"Well, yes," he admitted, "it certainly is if one takes it seriously."

"I take it very seriously," answered my uncle gravely.

"Then it is possible that your enemies are desperate?"

"I am afraid it is. Tell me, what was this man like who tampered with the drink?"

Mr. Wentworth screwed his face up and tapped his head in a vain effort to recollect.

"Upon my soul, he was a very ordinary individual with a beard. That beard is about the only thing I seem to remember."

"Was he fair or dark?"

"Oh, dark, decidedly, and, now I come to think of it, rather foreign looking."

"That's he!" cried my uncle.

"He?" echoed our new acquaintance.

"A gentleman I would give ten years of my life to meet."

"Oh," said Mr. Wentworth, "is it as serious as that?"

Jim smiled rather apologetically, as though just a little ashamed of his vehemence. Mr. Wentworth watched him narrowly, and watching, saw the brow contract, the honest eyes grow hard and cold. Perhaps, too, he summed up the physical capabilities of the man before him. I think he could not very well ignore them, for whenever my uncle's thoughts ran on the society, the martial spirit of the Davies asserted itself and commanded respect.

"If you ever see that man again," he said, "remember I should like to meet him."

"I shall introduce him without fail."

Our acquaintance smiled and passed on, arranging the flower in his buttonhole as he neared the door.

As his figure disappeared through the street door my uncle shook his head.

"I don't quite understand that fellow. What a beastly complexion he's got."

CHAPTER XV.

A COLLECTION OF CURIOS.

Later on in the evening, as I was going up to dress for dinner, I encountered Mr. Wentworth once more.

"Hello!" said he. "What floor?"

"Third."

"Mine also."

We got out of the lift together and walked down the passage, he chatting glibly of what he had seen and what he had been doing with himself that day. Opposite his door he stopped and invited me within.

"Half an hour yet to dinner. I suppose you can dress in ten minutes?"

"Less, I think, if the need arise."

It was a bedroom similar to my own. Indeed the rooms of a hotel have a wearisome likeness to each other—a chilly bareness that makes one feel a stranger and a wanderer.

I noticed on his dressing table several quaint curios of an eastern pattern and drew his attention to them.

"Yes," he said; "I'm a bit of a curio hunter. This Malay creese," he continued, taking up a villainous looking weapon with an inlaid handle, "has a gruesome story of its own. I got it with the weapon as one gets a pedigree with a dog; but, whether real or faked, I can't say."

"And the story?"

"The man who owned this ran amuck and killed seven people. Jealousy, I believe. But, Lord, you can never credit half the tales you hear."

"The weapon looks sinister enough to have such a history."

He laughed. "I think a curio is of no value without a personal history. In fact, I insist upon getting a history with the article, real or spurious. I never inquire too closely. It doesn't do. We are all very fine fellows, but we might easily be finer. Now look at this pistol," said he. "It is very old and is of Chinese or Korean manufacture. History traces it back to Chi-King, a celebrated prince of the Ming dynasty. Who Chi-King was or what was the Ming dynasty I haven't the remotest idea, but the dealer I bought it from in Wardour street spoke of them with such an air of familiarity that I did not like to display my ignorance by asking questions."

The weapon referred to was a curiously wrought, old fashioned flintlock, not unlike the clumsy contrivances of three centuries ago, and yet from the appearance of the metal I had no doubt whatever that the dealer of Wardour street had manufactured this antique firearm as easily as he had traced its history.

"It doesn't shoot, I suppose?"

"Good heavens, no! It couldn't even if you found the man who was heroic enough to test it."

I handed it back to him. He took it and smilingly asked if I was not anxious to hear its history.

"No, thanks. Some day perhaps. It's getting rather late now."

"I see. You think I've been mad probably. Fortunately I don't take such trifles seriously. But these pictures are the real thing. A friend of mine, who has been to China, bought them in Canton. Painted on rice paper, I believe. Awfully delicate stuff. Be very careful, or you'll stick your fingers through it."

He opened a portfolio and displayed a dozen or so of glaring pictures, stiff, and crudely colored in the approved Chinese style. There were pictures of junks, mandarins in gorgeous robes of office, Tartar generals on unnatural looking horses, women playing guitars and several pictorial expositions of the torture.

Turning to him, I suggested that he seemed exceedingly fond of Chinese curiosities, to which he frankly replied in the affirmative.

"Their civilization is so different from ours, their ways of life so strange. It is the change, the complete change, which fascinates me. The great longing of my life is to go to the far east, and one of these days I hope to avail myself of the opportunity. The idea doesn't seem to fascinate you."

"Well, no, I can't say that it does."

"Strange how tastes differ. Why, in my rooms in Cork street I have a splendid collection of curiosities. You must come and see them one day when you return to town."

Of course I declared that I should be delighted. There was no reason why I should tell this stranger that anything pertaining to China or the Chinese was to me significant of all that was horrible in my life. It was a long story and one best kept to myself. It was not every one who would care to associate with a marked man.

I turned once more the closer to inspect a superb series of torture pictures, when of a sudden there was a flash, a muffled report, and a bullet sang by my eyes. In an instant I was on my guard. Springing around I encountered the scared white face of Mr. Wentworth. He was still holding the smoking pistol in his hand, that quaint weapon of eastern design, and his agitation was so great that he trembled violently.

WHAT HAPPENS AFTER FIVE HOURS.

Dr. Bouchard, the eminent French physician, has furnished facts which show that if food is retained in the stomach more than five hours it becomes fermentative and putrefactive,—not digestive,—and that this is the starting-point of disease.

Eating too much starchy foods

This food mass becomes putrid.

Generates gas.

The stomach dilates.

There is a seeming lump-weight, burning, or belching.

Blood, fibre, tissue, and cells begin to absorb poison from the stomach and alimentary canal instead of nutriment, and right here is the producing cause of Constipation, Diabetes, Bright's Disease, Uterine and Ovarian troubles, Rheumatism, Gout, Nervous and Mental Distress, Bronchitis, Heart Affection, Pulmonary Consumption, Jaundice, Liver and Skin Diseases.

Inability of the stomach to properly handle food is mainly caused by overeating, drinking too much liquid, gases generated from slow digestion, preventing the mixing of food with gastric juice to properly prepare it for use in the body.

Dr. J. S. Leonhardt worked for years in perfecting Anti-Pill, so that it would guarantee regular stomach action, and its astonishing cures are proof of its mission being fulfilled; of its being the greatest System Treatment in the world. 50 cents of druggists, or mailed to any address by WILSON-FYLE Co., Niagara Falls, Ont. Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer Complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

On occasion knowing what one wants is as difficult as getting it.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, relieves the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation. —Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap, considering their excellence.

Seven hundred British subjects are yearly born at sea.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

UNTOLD MISERY. — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED. AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia. (Signed), T. S. McINTEE.

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kinloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years, and have recommended it to all sufferers I know of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption."

ASLEEP AT THE THROTTLE.

TRAIN TAKES WRONG ROUTE WHILE ENGINEER NAPS FOR AN HOUR.

Louisville, Ky., February 22.—With Engineer Dick Foreman fast asleep and an inexperienced fireman on duty, a Baltimore and Ohio train ran twenty-five miles to-day on the "Big Four" tracks. Near Otisco, Ind., the train, in switching, took the "Big Four" tracks and continued its run for nearly an hour. It was at the "Big Four" bridge entering Louisville that the crew became aware that the wrong route had been followed.

The conductor stopped the train and the engineer awoke with a snort. It took him several minutes to ascertain his mistake and then the train was backed slowly to Otisco. The conductor and members of the crew had never noticed the mistake of tracks, though they observed the changed scenery as they sped along.

Foreman had fallen asleep a few miles from Otisco and had a nap of over an hour. The green fireman was shovelling coal with superhuman energy and he gave no thought to his destination.

Kingston Whig: If the Bay of Quinte Railway is successful in its negotiations to secure the Marconi system of wireless telegraphy for its line, it will be free of all entanglements and difficulties of the present system of imperfect insulation, wires and other adversities attendant on the wire circuit. The company surely shows a commendable spirit of progress in its efforts to establish this system, and like many other ventures of the Rathbun Company of which this railway company is an adjunct, it will be the first in this connection as it was the first in installing the roller flour milling process, the first to establish terra cotta works, Portland cement works, wood alcohol works, and to make illuminating gas from pine saw dust in Canada.

Among the good things may be especially mentioned an article by the editor on "The Conquest of Asia by Russia"; Sir Robert Balls' "Recent Advances in Astronomy," and others on "The Discovery of Gold in Australia," "Peru and the Pizarros" and "The Breadth of Herbert Spencer's Teaching." The fiction, poetry, "Men, Women and Events" corner, and the illustrations are, without exception, excellent.

So Many People Ask

Why on earth are you selling Wall Papers at HALF PRICE this time of the year.

WELL its just like this—We still have about 3,000 rolls of 1903 Wall Papers left and with our reputation for carrying the very newest in Wall Papers it would not pay us to put this small balance in with our 1904, and call them new.

We don't do that kind of business. We prefer giving our customers who are not so particular about having the very latest, these goods at bargains. So we are selling all 1903 papers this month at HALF of the regular prices, so as to start March with nothing but 1904 papers which are now flooding our warehouse.

All Fancy Goods and China—not Staple—for the balance of the month of February at Half regular price—this makes home beautifying doubly cheap.

Yours In Decorations

During the winter months our workmen have been kept unusually busy decorating some of the best homes of the city.

TO SAY THAT our decorative work is a success—is putting the matter mildly—you have just to witness this for yourself in observing any one of the many city homes we have given decorative attention during the past two years.

Our success is because of a knowledge of the decorative trade begot of study and experience both in wall hangings and the decorative art—the two go hand in hand—the one without the other is absolutely lost.

NO better time for you than the present for selecting, new wall hangings now arriving.

No better time to have your work done than during the later winter months and the earlier spring.

We are prepared—with a liberal staff of experienced workmen—the best obtainable in their several branches and our prices will meet with your approval every time.

HER HUSBAND WAS A WRECK, NOW A PERFECT MAN.

Montreal.

Dear Sir,—I do not know how to express my gratitude to the Samaria Prescription Co. for the remedy which you sent me about four weeks ago. It produced an astonishing effect on my husband. Pen cannot express the feeling of gratitude I have for you, but, however, accept a thousand thanks.

It is to you that I owe the life of my husband, who was before a wreck in health and business. To-day he is a perfect man, and I can state that he has not been for the last three years, since he had started to drink. Please find enclosed $3.00 more for another treatment for one of my friends, whose husband is in the same condition as mine was. You will address it to me, as she does not want her husband to know she is giving it to him. Yours truly,

CITY COUNCIL IN REGULAR SESSION.

Nothing Very Startling Came Up, and the Session Was a Brief One.

Possibility of a New Furniture Factory Coming to Belleville—What They Want.

Extension of Water Mains—Collection of Fines and Fees—Other Matters.

At the Council meeting, held last evening, Mayor Chown and all the Aldermen, with the exception of Ald. Magrath, were present.

The following communications and accounts were read:

From Mr. H. B. Hunt, asking to be appointed City Assessor for 1904.—Referred.

F. Dolan	$42.01
Waterworks	11.32
Rathbun Co.	35.70

Reports.

Reports from the various committees, as already published, were read. On motion the Council went into committee of the whole on reports, Ald. McFee in the chair.

The Executive Committee's report was first taken up and the various items of expenditure were passed without discussion.

The recommendation that the city renew the policy with the Ontario Accident Company for $700, insuring the city against accidents, was passed, and the Gas works employees were included.

The purchasing of cement for the building of granolithic walks was left in the hands of the Chairmen of the Public Works and Executive Committees.

The Surveyor was authorized to procure cedar for the repairing of the lower bridge.

No action was taken in Mr. A. Grills' claim for looking after the meat market, as the Council had not employed him to do so.

Enquiries.

Ald. Sulman asked if, under the Waterworks Act, the committee had a right to expend money in extending the mains without going to the people.

The Solicitor said that it could be done only to the extent that it could be paid for out of the year's revenue.

Ald. Gordon asked if the city would provide a free site for, exempt from taxes for 10 years and give water power to a furniture factory, employing from 35 to 50 men, which might be brought here.

Ald. Sinclair suggested that Ald. Gordon, as Chairman of Industries, write the concern and get a definite proposition to lay before the Council. Every effort should be made to encourage the industry to come here.

Ald. Panter asked whose duty it was to collect the fines and fees of the police court. His reason for asking was that Chief Newton had spoken to him about the matter. Only about $10 had been paid over recently, and a portion of that was an old fine.

The Clerk stated that parties should pay him, but they did not. Sometimes the money for a fine or a portion of it was paid to the police and sometimes to Mr. Flint, then it was paid over to him (the Clerk), who paid it over to the Treasurer the same day.

Mayor Chown stated that the by-law, which was read, defined the duties of the Clerk and stated that he was the Clerk of the court.

Ald. Panter said there appeared to be a rather loose way of collecting the fines, many of which were just given in instalments.

The Clerk said that he had no way of knowing when and how the money was paid, excepting as it came into his hands. He had asked that it be paid over to him, and he knew of no reason why it was withheld if such was the case. During the past few weeks but little had been done in the court. He or his clerk always attended the court proceedings.

The matter was allowed to drop.

Introduction of By-laws.

Ald. Panter introduced a by-law in regard to sale of lands for taxes.

The Council went into committee of the whole on by-laws, Ald. Ketcheson in the chair

The by-law was passed through its various stages and numbered 1141.

Motions.

Ald. Sulman moved, seconded by Ald. Marsh, that in addition to the granolithic walks recommended to be built, two additional pieces be constructed, namely, on west side of Front street from Queen's Hotel to No. 1 fire hall, and west side of George street, from Victoria Avenue to Forin street.—Carried.

On motion the Council adjourned, to meet at call of the Mayor.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

Well, Midland trimmed Thessalon last night, 4-2, and many sighs of relief have gone up. Just think, if Thessalon had won, the boys would have been compelled to go to New Ontario for their next game. It's bad enough as it is, for Midland, where the Reds do the act next Friday night, borders on the Georgian Bay. The boys are doing considerable travelling this winter, sure.

The Toronto St. Georges didn't go to Peterboro last night, four of their players being sick, so they said.

The Barbers and Bakers played hockey last night, the former winning by 4-0.

The Toronto Telegram is evidently enamored of Phillips, of the Marlboros. Speaking of his work against Perth it says: "Phillips, as usual, was always the star. He is certainly a wonder, and there is no one playing on any forward line to-day that is his equal. He was all over the ice, now rushing, and then in a flash he was back again behind his line to take up the puck on the return. His work was marvellous in its speed, in its stick-handling, in its accuracy, in its shooting—in everything that goes to make up fast, clever hockey."

Our friend "Cully" Robertson also hands Belleville this bouquet: "With Perth champions of two eastern groups of seniors one stops to wonder what teams like Belleville and Stratford are doing in the intermediate class. Either one of them would give Perth a beating and have something to spare."

The same great authority is evidently not much enamored of the Marlboros chances in the Stanley Cup games, as he says: "Marlboros are off to Ottawa, and they "jest natchally" think they've got a chance to win that Stanley Cup. But they'll have to play different hockey than they played Saturday night to do it. Of course, you say they played well enough to win, and if they play well enough to win in Ottawa all will be well. But somehow the Dukes did not get together like a great team. Their defence should be all right. Geroux is undoubtedly as good a goal-keeper as Toronto ever produced, not excepting the modest though much touted Dutchy Morrison. Charlton at point was the find of the season. If he keeps up his great lifting and forgets to carry the puck across the front of the goal he'll keep the Ottawa defence from sleeping. Dr. Wright does not do much fancy work, but he's always on the job. He does a lot of that quick fast work that keeps his forward line well up on the other goal. And a strong attack is the best kind of defence. On the forward line, of course, Phillips is the star. Somebody remarked Saturday night that he played rover, right and left wing, and second cover point. They have none like him in Ottawa. His speed takes him up with a rush and finds him playing defence when the other fellows come back with the puck. Birmingham in such company is valuable. His trickiness and shooting are tacked on to Phillips' speed in such a way as to give them their full value. McLaren, too, is playing the game of his life, and then there's Winchester or Earls—and it surely should be the former. And when you go over the team piece by piece and remember that they are always just good enough to win and not a bit better, somehow your confidence rises a few degrees. And then you think of Ottawa's reputation, of Ottawa ice, of an eastern referee—and you hope for the best, but decide to take the Ottawa end of the betting."

The Berlin club, champions of the W.O.H.A., is the last to challenge for the Stanley Cup. The Trent Valley League champions will be the next.

The betting on to-night's Stanley Cup game is 2 to 1 in favor of the Ottawas.

The Marlboros made a good impression on the spectators who saw them practise, but that won't be a marker to the impression that awful Ottawa defence will make on the Toronto boys.

HOCKEY.

Midland 4, Thessalon 2.

Sudbury, Feb. 22.—The game here to-night between Midland, winners of groups 7 and 8, and Thessalon, winners of groups 9 and 10, resulted in favor of Midland by a score of 4 to 2. The game was the cleanest and fastest seen here this season, and though Midland won out Thessalon gave them the game of their lives. The teams were:

Midland (4)—Thompson, goal; Hanley, point; Fenton, cover point; English, Kemp, Miller and Gould, forwards.

Thessalon (2) — Rothera, goal; F. Shaw, point; A. Shaw, cover point; A. McKay, N. McKay, Cullis, Towne, forwards.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

THE INTELLIGENCER'S AFTERNOON DESPATCHES ARE TWELVE HOURS IN ADVANCE OF THE TORONTO MORNING PAPERS.

Russians Say War Will End in August or September, When the Japanese Will be Driven Into the Sea.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

St. Petersburg, Feb. 23.—"The war will end in August or September in the complete defeat of the Japanese," said a high authority to-day in touch with the Russian plans.

"When our forces are concentrated and ready they will finish by driving the Japanese into the sea. Frankly, it seems to us that the Japanese either have utterly failed to appreciate Russia's resources or have counted on the aid of Great Britain or the United States, neither of which ever contemplated becoming involved."

OUTCOME OF A HORSE DEAL.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS ALLEGED AGAINST WILLIAM MILNE.

Some four weeks ago Robert Burris, who resides near the G.T.R. station, sold a horse and a portion of a set of harness to Wm. Milne for $15, some of the money being paid. Milne became dissatisfied with the bargain and asked Burris to take back the animal, as he did not want it. Burris refused, claiming he did not have any use for the horse and had no place to keep it. This morning when Burris went out to his barn he was surprised to find the horse tied to the door. Before doing anything he consulted the Magistrate, with the result that Milne will have to answer a charge of cruelty to animals. In the meantime the horse is being properly cared for.

Important Meeting of the Board of Trade To-night

There will be a meeting of the Board of Trade to-night at the City Hall (the Magistrate's office) for the discussion of business of importance to every citizen of Belleville. There should be a large attendance of members and of citizens generally.

"LEGITIMATE BUSINESS," SAYS MR. PHILLIPS.

NEW STOREKEEPERS PROTEST AGAINST PAYING TRANSIENT TRADERS' LICENSE.

Previous to the Council meeting last evening Mr. Phillips, of Trenton, who is interested in the new store just opened up here, was present in the Mayor's office to protest against the paying of a license of $250, which is the amount exacted under the Transient Traders' By-law. Mr. Phillips stated that he did not think the sum should be asked from him or the concern. The store had been rented for a year, with an option of five years' lease. Whilst he personally would not live here, two married men, with families, would reside in the city. It was the intention to keep the business going. If the Council would agree to it he would be willing to give a bond for the amount and Mr. Jas. Gordon, the landlord, would also go upon the bond to insure the city. If the business did not continue then the city could collect the tax. If this was not satisfactory he would give them his personal cheque for the amount.

Ald. Sinclair said that the city had in the past lost money which was rightly due because the tax had not been collected.

Mayor Chown could not see how the Council could make any change in the by-law in this case. If the store was a fixture then the matter could be arranged.

Mr. Phillips said they intended to do a legitimate business in the city, and acknowledged that the Council was perfectly right in protecting the merchants.

The matter was allowed to drop here without any further action being taken, and it was not again brought up in the Council.

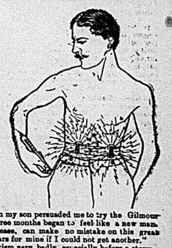
How We Cure Weak Men.



Give me a man broken down from excesses, hard work or worry from any cause which has sapped his vitality. Let him follow our advice for three months, and we will make him as vigorous in every respect as any man of his age. We will not promise to make a Hercules of a man who was never intended by nature to be strong and sturdy. Even that man we can make better than he is, but the man who was once strong and lost his strength, we can make him as good as he ever was. We have many testimonials to show any one applying at this store, these are people who do not wish there names made known through the newspapers Read this,—for a long time I have been a great sufferer from nervous trouble, I was unable to attend to business and could not sleep at night, I tried all the leading doctors in Belleville, but they did me no good. I went away to specialists which gave the same sult. By this time I was pretty well discouraged and had almost given up, when my son persuaded me to try the Gilmour Belt, which I did, and after using it for three months began to feel like a new man. Any one who needs treatment for this disease, can make no mistake on this great Belt. I would not take one thousand dollars for mine if I could not get another."

"For many years have had rheumatism very badly, especially before a storm. I would suffer for days at a time with pain I could hardly endure. I tried all the doctors and they gave me up saying there was no relief for me. At last I tried the Gilmour Electric Belt and after using it for a time began to improve, and am today a pretty good man from its use. I can recommend this Belt to any one suffering from rheumatism."

"I have been bothered with kidney and bladder trouble for nearly twenty years. I could get nothing to do me any good, I was induced by a friend to try the Gilmour Electric Appliance with the special attachment for treating such cases. After using it for a few weeks, began to feel better and can say am getting better. Any one suffering from this ailment can make no mistake on this appliance."

This is the most powerful Electric Appliance in the world, if there is such a thing as a cure in Electricity, which everyone knows there is, this appliance will surely give it.

BLOWN UP BY A MINE.

Russian Pilot Boat Meets Fate When Going to Pilot British Steamer Chingping, Which Had Been Fired On.

Wei-ai-Wei, Feb. 23.—The British steamer Chingping, belonging to the Chinese Engineering and Mining Company of Shanghai, has arrived here from Port Dalny, and reports that she also was fired upon by the Russians and was hit seven times around her water line. A Russian pilot boat that was coming out of Port Dalny to pilot the Chingping was blown up by a mine.

Can't Tell What a Day May Bring.

New York, Feb. 23.—The Chinese minister here, says a cable to The World from Berlin, with an ostentation, that has been entirely foreign to him, has proclaimed that China's neutrality is only temporary; that no one, even the astutest diplomats, can tell what change a day will bring forth in China's attitude. Thirty thousand drilled troops wait only the order to invade Manchuria in favor of the Japs.

U. S. Meditating.

Washington, Feb. 23.—United States naval officers are considering earnestly the strengthening of the American Asiatic fleet, in view of the vast interests of the United States in the Philippines and in China and Corea, and the probability that disturbances may necessitate their protection at any time. While the fleet is regarded as too small, there is a desire to avoid exciting the suspicion of interfering.

CANADA AND FRANCE.

Three Reports Received at Ottawa From Canadian Commissioners.

Ottawa, Feb. 23.—The Department of Trade and Commerce has received three reports yesterday morning from the commercial agents at Paris, Birmingham and Leeds. Mr. Pomdron of Paris says that there is a market for Canadian corundum in France.

He has talked it over with an important official as to Canadian corundum getting the advantage of the minimum tariff, and learned that if Canada would reciprocate by reducing its duty on an article not now included in the French treaty then a recommendation would be made to the French Parliament to admit Canadian corundum as crushed emery at $8 per ton. To get this done would require an act of the French Parliament.

J. B. Jackson of Leeds writes that the shipowners of Hull are anxious for a direct service with Canada. If there were a direct service there would be plenty of trade, and the British people would prefer to handle Canadian goods instead of American if they got the opportunity.

JAPAN CAPTURES 4 TORPEDO BOATS

Squadron Used Russian Signals in Fresh Bombardment.

JAP ADMIRAL TOGO ATTACKS

Strong Russian Force Reported to Be Moving Southward of Wiju and Anju—General Jap Advance Planned to Begin To-day—Opposing Patrols Already in Touch, and a Battle Is Imminent—Russians Fire on British Steamer.

London, Feb. 23.—The Nagasaki correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, under date of Feb. 22, reports that the Japanese squadron has captured four Russian torpedo boats at Port Arthur by means of using Russian signals. This despatch appears to confirm reports from various quarters of a fresh attack on Port Arthur by the Japanese. The report reached Nagasaki from Che Foo, and it adds that the Russian crews of the four torpedo boats have been transferred.

May Have Been Earlier Attack.

No other news of this attack has been received in London, but the Che Foo correspondent of The Morning Post, in a despatch dated yesterday, says the statement is current that the Japanese torpedo boat destroyers, in the attack on Port Arthur of Feb. 14, sunk or damaged two Russian battleships, in addition to the torpedo boat already reported. It is possible, therefore, that the report of The Telegraph's Nagasaki correspondent also refers to the earlier attack.

The report that large bodies of Cossacks and other troops are occupying Newchwang and Hsinmingtin are unfounded.

British Concentrating.

A Daily Mail despatch from Hong Kong says a British squadron is concentrating there, and that a corresponding French concentration of warships is occurring at Saigon, Indo-China; this is supposedly a result of the Anglo-French understanding.

According to the Nagasaki correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, the American squadron, the vessels of which are variously reported at Che Foo and Shanghai, is going to demonstrate at the mouth of the Yalu River.

Indefinite Reports Printed.

Indefinite reports of the movements of troops in the vicinity of the Yalu River, and statements of attempts to cut the Siberian Railroad, are also published this morning.

The Wei-Hai-Wei correspondent of The Times describes a visit to Chemulpo, on Feb. 19, and the Japanese landing of rations there, which he says demonstrated that the Japanese military organization is superior to that of any European power. A general Japanese advance along the Pekin road to Pingyang, Corea, the correspondent continues, is expected shortly.

Japan's Possible Intent.

It is believed that while the sea power of Russia at Vladivostock is intact, the Japanese will not attempt to land on the eastern coast of Corea. As an evidence of Japan's intention, it is worthy of note that her cruisers are busy patrolling towards the northwest of Corea, and that she is not landing artillery at Chemulpo.

Everything suggests an immediate dash for a strategic position in Northern Corea, the correspondent concludes, and it is possible the Russians are considerably farther south than is supposed.

A Tokio correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company says he learns from a reliable source that the Russian minister to China, Paul Lessar, has successfully bribed Chinese officials, with the result that the instructions given the gunboat Mandjur to leave Shanghai were cancelled. The Japanese Government considers this to be a breach of Chinese neutrality, and is taking steps in the matter.

Admiral Togo Attacks.

Tokio, Feb. 23.—It is reported here that Vice-Admiral Togo has again attacked Port Arthur. It is impossible to confirm the statement, but the navy department says it has had no news from Togo yesterday. It is considered very probable that the vice-admiral has made another attack on the Russians, as he is engaged in blockading Port Arthur.

Jap Advance To-day.

Seoul, Feb. 23.—Reports have been received that a strong Russian force which concentrated south of the Yalu River and occupied successively Wiju and Anju, is now moving southward. A general Japanese advance begins to-day, and as the opposing patrols are already in touch, a battle is imminent. The Russian force consists largely of Cossacks.

Japanese Inciting Brigands.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 23.—Heavy snows and blizzards over the Siberian railroad, especially east of Baikal, are largely increasing the difficulties of transporting troops, besides better enabling Chinese brigands to operate. Japanese agents are reported at North Vladivostock inciting the brigands to action.

Beef and Vegetable Scarcity.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 23.—Port Arthur is said to be entirely out of beef and vegetables and drawing upon Dalny for a slim supply. The Pronto was sent from Port Arthur to Dalny for refugees. While leaving Port Arthur with all lights out she was fired upon by a Russian cruiser, fifteen shots striking her upper works. The entrance to Dalny is honeycombed with mines.

Alexieff at Harbin.

Yinkow, Feb. 23.—Viceroy Alexieff and his full staff have just arrived at Harbin, where headquarters have been established.

CLOSE OF BUDGET DEBATE.

Correspondence Touching Dismissal of License Inspector of South Wellington.

Toronto, Feb. 23.—To-day the Legislature will probably get through with the budget debate. A night session is on the program, and it may be midnight before the vote is taken. Mr. Sutherland (South Oxford) has the floor, and after him the Minister of Agriculture and W. R. Smyth (Algoma) will speak.

Dismissal of W. S. Cowan.

At yesterday's session the Provincial Secretary laid on the table copies of correspondence relating to the dismissal of W. S. Cowan from the office of license inspector of South Wellington. From the return it appears complaints were made to the department that the inspector had failed in his duty.

School Board Deadlock.

Dr. Barr moved the second reading of the bill to amend the Common Schools Act. The object is to give the casting vote to the Mayor or Reeve of a municipality in case of a deadlock on the organization of a school board.

Hon. Mr. Harcourt said there was a defect in the present law, but the remedy suggested was not a good one. The bill was referred to the Legal Committee.

Mr. Little (Cardwell) moved the second reading of his bill to amend the Municipal Act.

Mr. Gamey moved the second reading of his bill to amend the Public Schools Act, relating to the taking of the assessment in the unorganized portion of a school section.

The Minister of Education said there was a difficulty to be overcome, but he asked that the bill be withdrawn and promised to undertake to find some way to remedy the present state of affairs.

Mr. Smyth (Algoma) introduced a bill respecting voters' lists in unorganized territories. The bill provides that the act stand as it was previous to amendment, when the voters' lists were revised once a year.

Mr. Whitney secured an order for the return of copies of Orders-in-Council with reference to the payment of employes at Sault Ste. Marie, with copies of all correspondence before and after relating to such payments.

The County Council of Lennox and Addington has petitioned the Legislature against any change in the method of electing County Councils.

The Premier entertained the Press Gallery to luncheon in the Speaker's chambers at noon yesterday.

Manitoba Politicians in Toronto.

Toronto, Feb. 23.—The King Edward has under its roof quite an aggregation of western politicians. Premier Roblin came in last night from Prince Edward County, where he has been visiting his aged father. Hon. Robert Rogers of Premier Roblin's Cabinet is also here, with John Arbuthnot, three times Mayor of Winnipeg; H. A. E. Evans of The Winnipeg Telegram, and several others of less note. Hon. Thomas Greenway, ex-premier of Manitoba, is likewise here.

Two Men Lost.

New York, Feb. 23.—Two men were lost by the steamer York Castle, which arrived yesterday from Delagoa Bay, in an attempt to give aid on Feb. 21 to the American schooner Willie L. Newton, about 200 miles southeast of Sandy Hook.

BRITISHERS IMPRESSED

The Colonial Trade Engages Their Earnest Attention.

William Hewins, Secretary of the Tariff Commission, Tells of Its Work and Possible Effect It May Have on the Destiny of Our Race—Replies of British Manufacturers to Questions Issued.

London, Feb. 23.—William Hewins, secretary of the Tariff Commission, lecturing on an Imperial tariff, said that the Imperialist movement was not the creation of a day, but was a deep undercurrent which was bound soon to find its expression in a representative body within the kingdom. Politics did not determine economics, but the reverse was the case if they cast their eyes back to the great movements.

To the colonies and other relations in the most distant parts of the world, this movement of Mr. Chamberlain would be seen to derive its greatness from its being an embodiment of some of the most vital movements moulding the destiny of our race. The most gratifying result of the replies given by the British manufacturers to the Commissioner's questions was the great importance attached to the colonial trade. However fascinating Mr. Chamberlain's scheme was to the imagination, it was the material wealth of the Empire which was the basis of its power.

He believed that in continental opinion British manufacturing industries were sinking into third place, and soon our capitalistic supremacy would disappear unless it was founded on perfectly sure grounds. The Tariff Commission's work was progressing silently; it would be better able to capture the position afterwards. Men of position and the intelligent classes would soon demand its adoption.

Australian Penny Post.

London, Feb. 23.—(C.A.P.)—The Australian Government contemplate introducing the Imperial penny postage as adopted. By a system of poundage rates in the ocean mail service it is estimated that £50,000 annually will be saved.

Move With Colonies.

London, Feb. 23.—(C. A. P.)—Joseph Chamberlain in a letter to Premier Seddon of New Zealand, just published, says that unless we move on similar lines to those on which our great colonies are moving we can make no progress nor have that closer union within the Empire on which the future of the British race depends.

Against Home Rule.

London, Feb. 23.—(C.A.P.)—Earl Grey (Liberal-Unionist) has written a letter stating that since the object of the Liberal-Unionist Association was to prevent a home rule Government coming into power, it is unnecessary to examine the fiscal belief of its members.

Digestive System is Deranged.

At This Season of the Year—High Living and Little Exercise Bring On Dyspepsia and Other Troubles.

Disorders of the digestive system are not uncommon at this season of the year.

In cold weather there is a danger of overeating and a tendency towards the excessive use of highly seasoned food and stimulants.

The result is much suffering from indigestion, liver and kidney derangements and constipation.

If people could only understand how promptly and effectively such disorders are overcome by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, this great family medicine would be even more popular than it is to-day.

Unlike any other medicine these pills have direct and combined action on kidneys, liver and bowels, and for this reason reach and cure the most complicated ailments.

Dyspepsia and billiousness, liver complaint and kidney trouble, stomach troubles and constipation, backache and headache disappear in wonderfully short time when Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are used.

By assisting the kidneys in eliminating the poisonous waste matter, by helping the liver to filter the bile from the blood, by regulating the bowels Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver pills prevent and cure the most painful and fatal diseases known to man.

Mrs. Owen Cummings, Deseronto, Ont., states:—"I was in very poor health when I began to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I had been a great sufferer from constipation and stomach trouble and was weak and run down in strength. I was gradually growing worse every day and finally decided that I would have to do something. Hearing of many being cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, I began using them and soon noticed a marked change for the better. I continued this treatment until I was cured of constipation and my stomach was restored to a healthy condition. It only took about three boxes of pills to entirely cure me."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

WHAT AND WHY.

Why should substitutes for Scott's Emulsion be refused?

Because they do not begin to offer the equivalent of food-value contained in Scott's Emulsion.

Why should special care be taken to avoid so-called wines, cordials and extracts of cod liver oil?

Because they contain a large percentage of alcohol and afford only temporary stimulation.

Does not Scott's Emulsion also stimulate the body?

Yes, but it is stimulation through nourishment.

What vital food principle is involved in the action of Scott's Emulsion?

Direct and perfect nourishment without tax on the stomach.

MURDER OF IRENE COLE

Joseph Kennedy on Trial For Crime Committed Sept. 30.

Man With a Very Red Face, Who Has Not Been Seen Since the Date of the Murder, Sought By Louis Heyd, K.C., As the Probable Criminal—A Biscuit Box Also Wanted—Kennedy Exhibits Intense Interest.

Brantford, Feb. 24.—The trial of Joseph Kennedy, charged with the murder of Irene Cole in this city on Sept. 30 last, began yesterday morning before Mr. Justice Street. Some difficulty was experienced in selecting a jury. Louis F. Heyd, K.C., for the prisoner, challenged fourteen and James E. Day, Crown prosecutor, four. The following jury was finally sworn: A. Johnson, R. A. Hartley, Herbert Depen, Henry Cleater, John K. Martin, David Morrison, Robert McKay, David Cavin, W. Kemp, John G. Brown, Frank Lundy, William Hamburg.

Prisoner's Intense Interest.

The court room was crowded. Kennedy watched the proceedings with intense interest all day. He is looking the picture of health and evidently his four months of jail life have done him good. The flush of drink has disappeared from his face. He walks with a firm step. There is none of the nervousness which was so evident in the preliminary hearing. In fact, he is a new man. For the most part of the day the evidence was much the same as at the preliminary hearing.

Saw Kennedy on the Dyke.

In cross-examining Constable Chapman, Mr. Heyd brought out a new point, which may yet have a great deal to do with his effort for the defence. On the night previous to the murder, Constable Chapman said two men were in the police station, named Leonard and Jennings. They were released on the morning of the murder. Leonard had a very red face. When questioned if he looked like the prisoner, the constable said he could tell them apart if he saw them together.

Another new feature was concerning a biscuit box which was found in "The Willows" shortly after the crime. Mr. Heyd intimated that he wanted to find out who bought it and where it was bought. It is reported that counsel for the defence will connect this box with Leonard and Jennings, of whom nothing has since been heard.

Of the other witnesses yesterday afternoon, the Potter children swore they saw Kennedy on the dyke beckoning to some one on the afternoon of the murder. Several employes of the Waterous Company said they saw the prisoner on the road near "The Willows" at noon on Sept. 30. William McIntyre swore he saw Kennedy turn down the path leading to "The Willows" shortly after noon. Other witnesses told of seeing the prisoner later in the afternoon coming from "The Willows."

William Stewart repeated his story of meeting the prisoner on the bridge and noticing his trousers were damp.

Noticed Nothing Peculiar.

John Hartman, proprietor of the Butler House, told of Kennedy being in his hotel at 4.15 o'clock in the afternoon of the crime. He noticed nothing peculiar about him, except that he was drinking.

Mrs. Campbell repeated the story of Kennedy's attempting to buy a chicken for his little girl.

Crown witnesses will again be called to-day.

Mr. Day for the prosecution is of the opinion a verdict ought to be rendered by Thursday night.

Freight Train Ditched.

Renfrew, Feb. 24.—The eastbound freight, which left Renfrew yesterday morning at about 8 o'clock, had three cars ditched about three miles from Sand Point. A broken wheel, trainmen think, caused the accident. No one was injured. The sidings are full of cars here, and a long freight is at Haylas Station, seven miles west.

Mr. Gamey at Port Perry.

Port Perry, Feb. 24.—The Conservatives of Reach, Port Perry and Scugog met here yesterday afternoon. Charles Colden, S. J. Fox, M.P.P., and R. R. Gamey, M.P.P., addressed the gathering. The last named spoke for nearly three hours. An overflow meeting was held last night.

Wanted More Money and Quit.

Ottawa, Feb. 24.—A. G. Doughty, Dominion architect, wanted $2,500 instead of $1,900, and has resigned.

FOREST TREE NURSERY

Portion of the Agricultural Farm Will Be Set Apart at Once.

Proposal Was Made By Hon. John Dryden in the Legislature—Trees For Planting in Two and a Half Years—The Debate on the Budget Continued—New Taxation Schedule Changes.

Toronto, Feb. 24.—In the Legislature yesterday the debate on the budget was continued by Mr. Sutherland (South Oxford).

Hon. Mr. Dryden, Minister of Agriculture, followed. He spoke at considerable length on the agricultural resources of the province, on the educational program inaugurated by the department and then made the important announcement that the Government decided to establish a forest tree nursery on the Ontario agricultural farm for the supply of good trees suitable for reforestration. On this question he said: It was a strange thing, that in the life of a generation so much of the area of the province had been denuded of timber. Some of this land was unfit for farming and pasture, and it was proposed to help the farmers to procure suitable trees for planting by setting apart a small area at the Agricultural College farm as a forest tree nursery, where forest trees would be grown. It was expected that the seeding would be commenced within a few months, so that in two or two and a half years the first lot of trees would be ready for planting. Meantime an educational campaign would be begun, and steps taken to affect such organization as might be needed to cover a portion of the province, and in this way the work would spread until it embraced the whole province.

Mr. Dryden said none of the products of the farm had flowed into the Provincial Treasury through taxation, but on the other hand out of the resources of the province the Government was able to contribute towards the wealth of the farmers. He regretted that there was so much talk of West Elgin and North Waterloo, which subjects nauseated the people of Ontario, he was just a little bit afraid.

Mr. Eilber made the feature of his speech a protest against the unfair discrimination practiced by the railways to the detriment of farmers living on branch lines.

Mr. Sam Clarke (West Northumberland) went on till 10 o'clock and will finish to-day. After paying some attention to the previous speaker, he hit on a new idea, which was that it would be far better to build spurs to the Temiskaming Railway into districts desirable for settlement than to push on north just for the sake of going north. The Government did great things when it built the road. He was for Government ownership.

Mr. Pense, Kingston, presented a petition in the Legislature yesterday praying for some changes in the bill amending the charter of the Kingston Street Railway Co.

A number of bills were read a first time.

Daniel Derbyshire, president of the Eastern Dairymen's Association, called on the Minister of Agriculture yesterday to ask for an increased grant towards the payment of cheese instructors. The sum given last year was $4,000 for 22 instructors, and Mr. Derbyshire wants it doubled.

TAXATION BILL MODIFIED.

Malting Classed As Manufacturing—Hotels Reduced to 25 Per Cent.

The special committee on assessment again grappled with the new taxation bill yesterday morning. There were several deputations present to argue for a change in the draft bill as it effects certain tax-paying classes.

It was agreed that malting should be treated on the basis of manufacturing concern and assessed at 50 per cent.

Hotels were reduced from a 50 per cent. to a 25 per cent. basis. Shops stay at 50 per cent.

Departmental stores will remain at 50 per cent.

The Attorney-General submitted an amendment to the bill providing that when a man is engaged in a business concern he shall be assessable on his salary and on his dividends from other companies, but not on dividends from his own company. This was adopted.

Rebels Were Routed.

St. Thomas, Danish West Indies, Feb. 24.—The U. S. cruiser Columbus, which left San Domingo Monday, arrived here yesterday morning. She confirms the reports that severe fighting occurred Feb. 16 and 17 outside San Domingo City. The insurgents were completely routed, losing four generals and many other officers killed, wounded or made prisoners.

One Year For Murder.

Kishineff, Russia, Feb. 24.—At the resumption yesterday of the second trial of prisoners connected with the massacre here, Kurban and Rotar, accused of murdering Abram Kogan, were acquitted, but the former was condemned to a year's imprisonment for participating in the riots. The damage suit was dismissed.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Now that the Board of Trade has taken action in the matter of the Trent Valley Canal and a public meeting is arranged for, it is to be hoped that our citizens will take a proper interest in the matter. That the canal, if completed, will be of great benefit to the country no one doubts, and the development of electric power, which will be one of the "side issues," will vitally concern this city. Therefore it behooves all our people to take a live interest in this matter, and show by their presence at the meeting next Monday night that they are in line with the people of other places whose voices have been raised in favor of the canal's completion.

• • •

As to the proper terminus of the canal, we don't think one sensible, unbiased man can be found who doubts for a moment that Trenton is the proper place. The idea of trusting grain barges to the rough waters of Lake Ontario is folly. The natural outlet of the canal is on the Bay of Quinte.

• • •

The Board of Trade, we believe, acted wisely in placing itself on record in favor of the Council's action re the Gas works. In fact we know of no stronger endorsation the measure could have than that of a body composed of our leading business men. The absence of such action might have been commented upon; its presence should certainly result in good.

An exchange says: "Japan's young navy is already rich in the tradition that teaches the officers and crew of a torpedo boat that their lives and their vessel are well lost if they can put a battleship or a cruiser out of action." If there are any positions vacant on Japanese torpedo boats we beg to decline one of them at once.

One good result of this awful winter has at last been found. It is said that the maple sugar crop will break all records this spring.

THE KING AND THE TAILORS.
(Philadelphia Record.)

At a dinner of the Tailor's Society of London the president, in proposing a toast to the King, said that King Edward never wore the same suit of clothes twice, and, "if only for this, tailors ought to be grateful to His Majesty."

• • •

It may interest some people to know that it is a crime against British laws for any British subject to take service in the army or navy of any foreign state which is at war with any foreign state at peace with Great Britain, and that the offence is punishable with fine or imprisonment, or both. This should be interesting to many young Canadians who wanted to fight for Japan.

• • •

The Czar, it is said, will personally command the Russian army before long. That reminds us of the man who was his own lawyer and had a fool for a client.

It would appear, judging by The Globe's comments on the Stanley Cup hockey match in Ottawa last night, that the best thing the O.H.A. can do is to withdraw the Marlboros and let the Belleville team take their place. Little things like body checks don't jar our Red and White boys.

Christ Church Lenten Lectures.

Every Thursday evening at 8 o'clock (during Lent) a service of about twenty minutes' duration will be held in the Alberta Hall on Front street, under the auspices of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew of Christ Church. These services will be followed by a lecture of not more than half an hour upon some subject of general Christian interest. An effort is being made to secure addresses from several prominent laymen. The subject for tomorrow evening will be "The Introduction of Christianity into Britain," and will be given by Rev. Wm. Bertal Heeney. All are heartily invited to attend. There will be no entrance fee, but a collection will be taken up to defray expenses of lighting and heating the hall which Mr. Alford has kindly placed at our disposal gratis.

CHILDREN'S EARS.

Guard Them From Injury Both From Within and Without.

Be careful of the children's ears. The hearing apparatus is a piece of very delicate mechanism, no more suited to rough treatment than is the ball of the eye. It can be easily injured by the introduction of a foreign body or by a blow from the outside. Small children sometimes push things into their ears by way of experiment. In this case the child's guardians should keep perfectly cool and send for a physician at once. The child must not be shaken and punished until the object is removed, and above all the nurse or mother must not grope for it with hairpin or tweezers, for that is the way to push it farther in or to wound or even rupture the delicate drum membrane, an accident which may be followed by complete deafness and even death should a serious inflammation ensue.

There is perhaps one exception to this rule of leaving a foreign body alone until the doctor comes. Occasionally insects fly into the ear and cause great anguish by buzzing and fluttering about. They can be speedily disposed of by dropping in a little sweet oil or lukewarm salt water.

As to injury from the outside, children should be carefully guarded against any games which include loud shoutings directly into the ear, and it is surely needless to add that pulling the ears and above all boxing the ears as a form of punishment should be held a criminal offense. It may induce partial and temporary deafness, complete deafness and even death.

THE MODEL HOSTESS.

She Must Have Imperturbable Calm and Ready Tact.

An imperturbable calm and a ready tact are the two important factors in the making of a model hostess. Secure these, and you need never fear for the success of any of your entertainments. There is no quality more to be desired to make a woman a social success than that of tact. Its possessor knows the right thing to do and the right time for doing it and thus gains a reputation for cleverness and for many virtues which a tactless woman would never win from her circle of acquaintances, no matter how excellent her qualities of both heart and head. The tactful woman is not only a patient listener, but she is a thoroughly good one. She knows no weariness even when she has heard the same story more than once from the same person, and she smiles in the right place and appears to enjoy hearing jokes as much as her companion enjoys telling them. Tact is a weapon guided with a multitude of precautions and feminine wiles by the wise woman, and it is only the wise who possess it.—Cooking Club.

DRESS HINTS.

Don't be conscious of your dress and gloves and veils and jewels and expect every one else to admire them.

You need not wear expensive clothes in order to be smartly gowned. But see to it they are stylish, tasteful and carefully chosen.

Girls with brown or fair hair can wear pink or blue. Pale shades of green are becoming to almost any one of the fairer types and all shades of yellow to brunettes.

You can wear pale silver blue even if you are a brunette, with olive complexion. Blue is not for the blond alone. Indeed, most blonds look better in shades of red. Yellow is another color for you.

Rub light gloves with fine bread crumbs after each time of wearing. If you allow them to get very dirty home cleaning is seldom a success, but treated in this way they will look nice for quite a long time.

The Care of Oilcloth.

When washing oilcloth, whether for the table or floor, use no soap if desirous of preserving the polish. Skimmed milk is serviceable, but milk rots rubber. Hot vessels, onion juice and such drippings discolor light oilcloth. Varnish floor oilcloths and linoleums fall and spring to rejuvenate their appearance and to lengthen their days of use. Heavy canvas, painted yellow and spotted with shadier colors, makes a durable and handsome kitchen or entry carpet. New canvas absorbs much paint, but will outwear many common oilcloths, washes easily and saves the floor and the good wife's muscle. Wherever else one may economize let it not be in floor paint. Next to washing and hot weather cooking scrubbing comes on the list of wife killers.

Salmon Loaf.

Next to canned tomatoes canned salmon is about the most indispensable of the things that come in tins. Canned salmon is almost as good as the fresh fish as it comes to our city tables, though not nearly so fine as the freshly caught fish. A salmon loaf is recommended for luncheon. Drain and chop a can of salmon, add the yolks of three beaten eggs, a half cupful of bread crumbs, quarter of a cupful of melted butter, salt, pepper and a little minced parsley. Lastly beat in the stiff whites of the eggs. Bake in a buttered tin for half an hour.

She Dresses Windows.

Chicago has a woman window dresser in the person of Miss Sarah Minor, who is said to be a past master in the art. Five years ago she went to Chicago and secured a position to design fancy boxes, baskets and other receptacles for candy and to assist the man who had charge of the window display. So close a study did she make of the work of decorating that when he gave up his position she received full charge of the windows. Now she is regularly employed by State street firms to trim their windows.

The anniversary of the City Mission will be held on Thursday evening of this week. Dr. Morrison and Rev. Dr. Crothers will give addresses and there will be solos by Miss Holton and Miss Vermilyea. 22-24

We are told that hotels now are using for scrubbing their wooden and marble floors and cleaning wood work and paint, as well as dishes and glassware, Lessive Phenix. Even the great hostelry The Windsor, Montreal, uses it. The manager says it is cheaper than bar soap, and the work done by it far more satisfactory. They use it in their laundry.

USING UP OLD SHOES.

A Thrifty Housewife Makes Rugs of Worn Leather.

The thrifty housewife has discovered a new use for old shoes. She makes rugs out of the uppers. For this purpose she saves all her old shoes—her husband's, the children's and her own.

As fast as the shoes are discarded it will be a good plan to cut the tops off and after cleaning them lay them carefully away in a box for future use. The first step is to cut a pattern—diamond, star, square, oblong or right angle triangle. If the latter is desired it should measure four inches along the straight sides. Two triangles can be cut from each shoe top. To make a rug 22 by 36 inches will require the uppers from eighteen pairs of shoes.

To lace the leather together purchase eyelets like those used in shoes for 25 cents a box. One box contains several hundred eyelets. By means of an awl punch holes in the leather strips and fasten the eyelets at the same time, or, if eyelets are not desired, merely punch holes with an awl and lace the strips together with shoestrings. Finish with a fringe of shoestrings. Line the entire rug with bright red broadcloth or flannel, slashing all the edges to the depth of three inches for an under fringe. The red will look pretty under the laces, and the rug will last a lifetime.

CHOCOLATE CAKE.

A Recipe That Will Produce a Delicious Confection.

Here is a recipe for making a delicious chocolate cake:

Put into a saucepan a cupful of sugar, a half cupful of milk, a half cupful of broken chocolate, the yolk of an egg and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Beat the mixture well and place on the stove until it begins to boil and becomes smooth, but do not let it get too thick. Then set it away to cool. While cooling beat a half cupful of butter until it becomes creamy, add a cupful of sugar and two well beaten eggs, a half cupful of milk in which a scant teaspoonful of soda has been dissolved, two cupfuls of flour and lastly the cooled mixture. Bake in four tins in a moderate oven for twenty minutes.

When the cakes are cooled spread over and between the sheets icing made as follows: Boil two cupfuls of granulated sugar with a quarter cupful of water for five minutes. Beat the whites of two eggs to a froth and pour the hot sirup upon them, beating all the while until well mixed. The icing may be used at once. If you do not wish to frost the sides of the cake a piece of stiff writing paper can be pinned around the cake.—Washington Star.

THE HOUSEHOLD.

Boil three or four onions in a pint of water, apply with a soft brush to gilt frames, and flies will keep off them.

Do not use soap in washing a stained or painted floor; use clear water in which a little borax has been dissolved.

To clean cut glass wash articles, let them dry and afterward rub them with prepared chalk and a soft brush, carefully going into all the cavities.

To extinguish a chimney on fire take a large handful of sulphur and throw it into the fire. When the sulphurous fumes ascend they will at once put out the fire.

A small tray of quicklime placed in closets after they have been thoroughly cleaned will be found excellent for keeping the air pure and absorbing moisture. The lime must be frequently renewed.

To clean a mirror try rubbing it with a ball of soft paper slightly dampened with methylated spirit, then with a duster on which a little whiting has been sprinkled, and finally polish with clean paper or a wash leather.

A Plea For the Hobby.

The individual life needs to be preserved in order to give interest and variety to the common life. The woman who follows fad too much is likely to find herself growing dissatisfied and fretful as the novelty of perpetual change wears off, but the woman with a good, steady, trustworthy hobby has a permanent means of escape from herself and from the weariness of the world. Selfish? Not at all, unless she rides it recklessly and without regard for other people's gardens. It seems to me that the most useful kind of selfishness is that which keeps one's own intellectual and physical life sound and cheerful and vigorous in order that one may be able to do some good to the cheerless and helpless.—Henry Van Dyke.

To Sterilise Drinking Water.

Here is a recipe for sterilizing drinking water and killing off the typhoid germ: Put four drops of tincture of iodine in half a gallon of water and permit it to stand at least half an hour. By the end of that time it will be as harmless as distilled water. Many persons have not the facilities for making distilled water. Boiling it also entails a certain amount of trouble. In either case the water is flat and unpleasant to the taste. The few drops of iodine impart practically no taste to the amount of water they sterilize, and at the same time they answer every medicinal purpose.

For Hands and Arms.

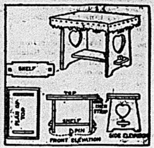
For "relaxing exercises" for hands and arms let the hands hang lifeless from the wrist and shake them as though there were no life in them. Hold the elbows out to the level of the shoulders and shake the forearms; move them back and forth in a lifeless way. Stand erect, with the arms at the sides, and twist the trunk right and left, swinging the arms lifelessly. For a fourth movement raise the hands slowly above the head and then drop them suddenly as dead weight.

A DURABLE FOOT REST.

One That Is Well Designed and Easily Made at Home.

The illustration given below shows a well designed foot rest, durable and easily made at home, as it is very simple.

It is made of seven-eighths inch stuff. The two end boards were nailed together before sawing to insure their being exactly alike. The pattern was marked out on one board and nailed to the other through the heart shaped space which was sawed out. A strip one inch square was nailed all around the underneath top, giving the appearance of a thick board. This was padded with about six layers of newspaper, over which a piece of silence cloth, such as is used on dining tables, was placed and tacked down here and there so that the leather cover folded under nicely. This was done before putting together. The sheepskin, which I bought at a bookbinders' supply house, cost 75 cents and was a tan shade. I colored the leather strips with red ink. The strips were made from scraps left after cutting out the square piece for the top, which measured 22 by 32, leaving ample room to turn under. The strips were stitched through before covering. The holes in the leather were made with a punch. The balance of the wood was stained and polished. The pieces were then ready to put together. Constant use will give the leather a dark, rich color. The actual cost of this foot rest was $1.65. The price in a store would have been $7.—Ladies' Home Journal.



PLAN OF FOOT REST.

THE FACE BEAUTIFUL.

A Good Massage Cream and the Way to Use It.

The lines of massage are upward and outward, from the middle of the forehead out over the temples, under the eyes and around the corners of the eyes in a rotary motion by the first two fingers, from the middle of the chin upward, from the corner of the mouth to the ear. For this purpose an excellent cream is made as follows: White petroleum, three and a half ounces; paraffin wax, a quarter ounce; lanolin, an ounce; water, one and a half ounces; oil of rose, three drops; alcohol, a dram. Melt the wax and add petroleum and lanolin. Stir constantly and beat in the water. When nearly cold add oil of rose and alcohol. Wash out thoroughly each morning. Here is a face wash to apply with soft cloth after washing: White castile soap in powder, twenty-two minims; lanolin, an ounce; tincture benzoin, one and a half drams. Mix with sufficient cold water to make milk-like cream. As a rule rouge is not very advantageous, but a harmless lip tint can be made: Attar rose, seven drops; alkanet root, half an ounce; oil of almonds, three ounces; spermaceti, half ounce; white wax, one and a half ounces.

Feminine Clothing.

There is a good deal seriously to be said about feminine clothing. As regards the general public, the most important indictment is against the trailing skirt, which rescues tubercle bacilli from the sunlight and brings them into the nursery and living room. But as regards the woman herself, a German doctor has published an exhaustive study of, among other things, the weight of feminine clothes, which weigh on the average 30 per cent more than men's, though woman is smaller and less muscular. One criticism of the corset may also be quoted—that the modern straight front article does its best to produce the type of figure which every anthropologist associates with the Hottentot. The author sides with every one who has studied the subject in advocating the bifurcated undergarment against the "winning note" of the "tempestuous petticoat," which, as Herrick forgot to add, protects against neither cold nor dust.

A Woman Astronomer.

Mrs. Williamina P. Fleming, who since 1897 has been curator of astronomical photographs at Harvard university, was born and educated in Dundee, Scotland. Her duties include the management and care of the university's collection of photographs. She must examine the 5,000 or more photographs taken annually at the southern station of the observatory at Arequipa, Peru, and an equal number taken at the observatory in Cambridge, and she also aids in preparing the manuscript and revising the proofs for the various publications of the observatory. Mrs. Fleming has made a worldwide reputation by her discovery of nearly 200 variable stars and of six new stars.

Honey In the Home.

Honey is a valuable medicine and has many uses. It is excellent in most lung and throat affections and is often used with great benefit in place of cod liver oil. Occasionally there is a person with whom it does not agree, but most people can learn to use it with beneficial results. Children who have natural appetites generally prefer it to butter. Honey is a laxative and sedative, and in diseases of the bladder and kidneys it is an excellent remedy.

GLOVES IN EARLY DAYS.

They Were Often Made to Represent the Man Who Wore Them.

In the early days everything was not regulated for the people, as it is now, by the government and the law courts. Europe was still young then, and people had rough and ready means of dealing with one another, of buying and selling or giving goods and property and settling disputes. A glove, as it was very close indeed to a man's hand, came in course of time to be looked upon as taking the place of the hand itself, and sometimes took the man's place and was made to represent him.

For example, to open a fair it was necessary then to have the consent and protection of the great lord in whose country it was going to be held. Those who wished to open the fair would come to the nobleman and petition him to be present. He might be very busy, or bored at the idea of having to go, yet he would know that it must be opened or his people would be discontented. So he would say to the leaders of the people: "No, my trusty fellows, I can't open the fair in person, but I will send my glove to do it. You all know my glove. Nobody has one like it in the country. It is the one my lady mother embroidered for me in colored silks and silver wire, and it has a deep violet fringe. You can hang it above the entrance of your fair grounds as a sign that you are acting with my permission. If any one disputes your right or touches his master's glove I will attend to him; that's all!" So the glove would travel in state to open the fair.—St. Nicholas.

Courage of a Horse.

Horses painfully contend on the race track for victory out of their own native courage and ambition—not under punishment, for, as a rule, the courageous horse will "stop" or "shut up," as the technical phrase is, when whipped or spurred at the finish of a race. In California some years ago a running horse broke one of the bones in a foreleg near the close of a heat, perhaps seventy yards from the wire. He faltered for a moment and then, recovering himself by a mighty effort, struggled on and won the heat practically on three legs.—Country Life In America.

HOW IT SPREADS.

The first package of Hem-Roid (the infallible Pile cure) that was put out went to a small town in the State of Nebraska.

It made the cure of a case of Piles that was considered hopeless.

The news spread and although this was only two years ago the demand prompted Dr. J. S. Leonhardt, of Lincoln, Neb., the discoverer, to prepare it for general use. Now it is being sent to all parts of the world.

It will cure any case of Piles. There is a month's treatment in each box.

Sold for $1.00, with absolute guarantee.

It is for sale by druggists.

Sold in Belleville by J. S. McKeown.

Orders for bookbinding should be left at this office. It is surprising how nice a volume can be made of these magazines, even though they are somewhat soiled from much handling. Books, magazines or periodicals bound or rebound in any style at very reasonable prices. Blank books, such as journals, ledgers, day books, with any kind of ruling, made to order. All work warranted first-class. THE INTELLIGENCER, Belleville.

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN

When buying clothing, beware of the man who offers you $10 and $12 suits or overcoats for $3.98 or $4.76 Then again, do not be governed too much by the marked price—look to the value, the worth, the texture, trimmings and make of the goods themselves. A comparison thus made will show conclusively that the prices we quote are lower than goods of equal worth or quality can be bought for elsewhere.

Plain Truth

Our perferences are always in strict accordance with the promise made in our "ads." We believe in the SUBLIMITY of PLAIN TRUTH. We are not in the business for purely philanthropic motives, but for the purpose of keeping our capital active, our mind and body employed, and making a few dollars for the benefit of ourselves. But we exercise a just consideration of our customers.

WHAT THE TREATY SAYS.

United States Gets Wide Strip Across the Isthmus.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The Panama treaty has been ratified. The vote was 66 to 14.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The principal feature of the Canal treaty as ratified follows:

Panama grants the United States in perpetuity a canal strip extending five miles on each side of the centre of the canal and across the Isthmus three miles in the Carribean and the same distance into the Pacific with the proviso that Colon and Panama are not included in the grant.

The United States exercises sovreignty over this territory, polices it and provides its law.

Monoply of transportation across the Isthmus is also granted the United States.

In return for these concessions the United States guarantees and will maintain the independence of the Republic of Panama.

Canal Will Be Dug.

Washington, Feb. 24.—As soon as he learned of the ratification by the United States Senate of the Panama canal treaty, M. Bunau-Varilla, the Minister from Panama, sent the following cablegram to President Amador of the Republic of Panama: "The Senate has ratified the Hay-Varilla treaty. This great historical fact insures the completion of the Panama Canal and the protection of Panama Republic."

Investigation Suspended.

Toronto, Feb. 24.—The civic investigation has been temporarily abandoned, waiting the decision of Justice Britton on Richard Lane's injunction application. Judge Winchester declared that he did not feel like continuing the case while the proceedings were pending in a higher court. Mr. Riddell had Sam Thompson ready to go into the box.

Germany's Little War.

Berlin, Feb. 24.—Col. Luetwein, governor of German Southwest Africa, cables that a number of Oyambos, under Capt. Nechale, attacked the police post at Amatoni on Feb. 2, and were repulsed with a loss of 60 men killed. A division under Lieut. Schultze had a fight with the Hereros at South Tsumana on Feb. 8, in which the enemy lost 10 men killed. The Germans sustained no casualties.

All Powers Impressed.

Paris, Feb. 24.—As a result of recent representations to the Porte, it is asserted authoritatively that Turkey, as well as the Balkan states, recognizes the Austro-Russian reforms as being in force, and will aid in their execution. All the powers are impressed with the importance of acting together in order to prevent war.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The remark has been made that something should be done to the roadway on Front street. At present carters who have to deliver goods find it hard to do so without a great deal of trouble.

"The oldest man in the world," said a gentleman on the street, "never saw a winter like this." And the youngest man in the world never wants to see another.

"Queer thing, the grip," said the man on the next block; "it hits some people in the eyes, others in the ears, others in the neck; but there's one place which never escapes—the pocket."

A BAGATELLE FOR CANADIANS.

THEY ACTUALLY DO THE WORK

FOOD EATEN IS WORTHLESS UNLESS DIGESTED—SOME STOMACHS MUST HAVE HELP.

Food taken into the stomach which, from the nature of the food or the condition of the stomach, is not digested, is worse than no food at all. This is a true statement as far as it goes and a great many dyspeptics go only this far with their reasoning. They argue with themselves that because their stomachs do not do the work given them they must be given less work; in other words, they must be starved. It would be just as sensible for a business man who is unable to do all his own work to cut down his business to his own capacity as it is for a man to starve himself to relieve his stomach. The sensible business man employs help and goes forward with his business. Likewise the sensible dyspeptic will employ help for his stomach and give his body proper nourishment.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets actually do the work assigned to them. They relieve weak and overburdened stomachs of a great portion of digestive action. Their component parts are identical with those of the digestive fluids and secretions of the stomach and they simply take up the grind and carry on the work just the same as a good, strong, healthy stomach would do it.

On this account Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are perfectly natural in their action, and effects. They do not cause any unnatural or violent disturbance in the stomach or bowels. They themselves digest the food and supply the system with all the nourishment contained in what is eaten and carry out Nature's plans for the sustenance and maintenance of the body.

How much more sensible is this method than that employed by many sufferers from weak stomachs. By this means the body and brain get all the good, nutritious food they need and the man is properly nourished and equipped to carry on his work and perform his duties. He could not possibly be in proper working condition by starving himself or employing some new fangled, insufficient food that does not contain enough nutriment for a year old baby. A strong man doing strong work must be properly fed and this applies to the brain as well as the body.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, by relieving the stomach of its work, enable it to recuperate and regain its normal health and strength. Nature repairs the worn and wasted tissues just as she heals and knits the bone of a broken limb, which is of course not used during the process of repair.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by all druggists at 50 cents a box and they are the one article that the druggist does not try to sell something in the place of that's "just as good." Their unqualified merit and success and the universal demand for them has placed them within the reach of every one.

THE YELLOW MAN.

A THRILLING STORY OF THE BOXERS IN CHINA.

BY CARLTON DAWE.

Copyright, 1900.
By Paul R. Reynolds.

"You are not hurt?" he gasped.

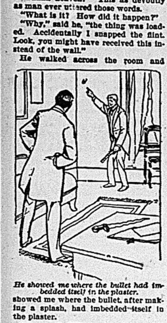
"No."

"Thank heaven!" This as devoutly as man ever uttered those words.

"What is it? How did it happen?"

"Why," said he, "the thing was loaded. Accidentally I snapped the flint. Look, you might have received this instead of the wall."

He walked across the room and showed me where the bullet, after making a splash, had imbedded itself in the plaster.



He showed me where the bullet had imbedded itself in the plaster.

"Heavens! What a providential escape! An inch or two more and"—

"Yes," I said, beginning to quake now all the danger was over. "I felt it almost scorch my eyes."

He threw the weapon down with an exclamation of disgust.

"People who sell old firearms without first ascertaining their condition ought to be criminally prosecuted," he proceeded energetically. "Chance, and chance alone, has averted one of the many tragedies with which the newspapers daily provide us. I have often wondered how people can be so careless; now I realize how easily an accident may happen. But thank heaven no harm has come of it. You will forgive me?"

"Willingly," I smiled, but I was still a bit shaky. "How were you to know the thing was loaded?"

"Aye," he echoed solemnly. "How was I to know?"

His distress was so evident and sincere that I began to make light of the matter, not wishing to deepen the concern which I saw so visibly affected him. No doubt it was a narrow escape, but misses never count. All the same it was lucky for me that I had suddenly thrown back my head, the better to view the pictures. Otherwise there would have been one more shooting fatality to record.

I left him with his protestations ringing in my ears and carried away with me the picture of a pallid face, a pale and quivering mouth, and two little eyes that shone like points of hot metal. It was not a pleasant picture, and as I entered my room I instinctively locked the door. For of a sudden a thought came to me, or rather, a thought that I had repeatedly striven to banish, assumed the aggressive and forced itself upon my attention. I strove to put it away as one of those things which do a man no honor, but it would not be denied. Presently it beat in upon my brain; it throbbed through every pulse; it turned me cold with a hopeless, sickening dread. Was the discharge of the pistol due to accident—or premeditation?

My uncle had not yet come in, so I had no one in whom I could confide, but the possession of this horrible doubt robbed me of all reason and sent me into a maddening maze of conjecture. Surely, surely this man, this Mr. Wentworth, a gentleman without doubt, and one of the numerous class to be found in the West End, could have no connection with Wooching and the Society of the Hidden Meaning? It was a monstrous thought, unworthy of me, unworthy of any honest man, and, as I have said, I sought to stifle it, but up it leaped like a flame which will not be suppressed. And yet I would give it no welcome which in any way might be construed as an encouragement, for as yet I had still some faith in man.

A few minutes later my Uncle Jim came in, and after listening to an apology for his absence (he had been paying a visit in the neighborhood of Palmeira square) he inquired the news. I accordingly told him of my second meeting with Mr. Wentworth and of the incident which had taken place in that gentleman's room.

There was no manner of doubt as to the direction his thoughts immediately flew. The old suspicious look leaped to his eyes; anxiety clouded his face in the most pronounced manner. He saw in this, as I was beginning rapidly to see, the hand of the society, and yet I hoped against hope. Heavens! It amounted to this—in every stranger I was to see a possible enemy! I could neither eat, drink nor sleep in safety. The thought turned me sick—sick to death of life and the world. And yet, dejected and hopeless as I was, there was an undercurrent of despair which made me cling madly to that which I felt assured was worthless.

"Were the circumstances at all suspicious?" queried he. "Did he, by word or act, lead you to believe that he was in any way connected with the society?"

"Neither by word or act. True, at times I did imagine things just as I fear a dark street, a man with an eastern face, but then I am always imagining things. The difficulty with me is to forget."

"You must not forget," said he gravely—"not for a moment. If you do, that moment will be the opportunity for which our enemy has waited. Poor lad, it's a terrible heritage, this, but it is ours, and we are men. It is frightful, this having to suspect every one with whom we come in contact, and heaven knows it is the very antithesis of my nature, as of yours. But what are we to do? I confess I do not like the look of things, and I did not like the look of Mr. Wentworth, but one would need to be a god to read the minds of men."

Wishing to believe that I had still some faith in man, I suggested that such accidents were not uncommon and that were we not so peculiarly circumstanced we should never dream of connecting with the incident a sinister design.

"True," he replied, "and that's where the curse of our position touches us acutely—we must suspect everything and everybody."

"And yet, if he is what we dread, how can you reconcile this incident with the warning he gave me in the Empire last night?"

"That, too," said my uncle slowly, his eyes fixing me with a serious, steady look, "has caused me an infinite amount of speculation. In these times, Davie, our own shadow may conceal the assassin. What if your liquor had not been tampered with at all?"

"But that seems incredible. I recollect distinctly the man with the beard stumbling over my toes and apologizing profusely. Oh, no; I fear there can be no doubt of the attempt."

"Well, I am not so certain. In the first place, it would be an infinitely risky thing to attempt at a crowded bar—this deliberate pouring of the contents of a bottle or a vial into a stranger's glass. Some one was sure to see the act. Some one, as it happened, did. But what if the man with the beard had been an accomplice? What if the whole story had been but a ruse to gain your confidence?"

I began to see things clearer, or at least I thought so. But it robbed me of the last vestige of hope. I would like to have combated my uncle's argument, but somehow I couldn't. There was a terrible force and reality in his indictment. I felt instinctively that it would have been a waste of powder to reply.

As we prepared to go down to dinner my uncle suggested that we should call on Mr. Wentworth, examine his curios and investigate the affair still further. But the knock at his door received no response. Jim knocked again, this time more loudly. A querulous query came:

"Who's there?"

"I."

"Who are you?"

"Davie."

"Oh!"

There was silence for a moment or two; then the voice said, "Anything important?"

"Oh, no; I only wanted to have a chat."

"Awfully sorry, but I'm in the middle of dressing. Will after dinner suit you?"

"Admirably."

"Good."

After dinner we searched the various reception rooms in vain for Mr. Wentworth, and as a last resort I ran up stairs and knocked at his door. A chambermaid with a bundle on her arm came along the passage, and from her I learned a rather startling piece of news.

Mr. Cyril George Wentworth had left the hotel about an hour previously!

CHAPTER XVI.

A WEST END TRAGEDY.

I cannot conscientiously say that this information, though broken to my uncle by me with bated breath, occasioned him any surprise. Something very like a look of inward comprehension flew from his eyes to mine, and I read there a decided confirmation of my worst fears.

"Humph!" he muttered. "I expected as much. Let us make inquiries."

We accordingly went to the office and there learned that Mr. Wentworth had left during the dinner hour. In reply to a further inquiry we were informed that a telegram had been delivered to him during mealtime. But to the individual in charge this meant nothing. People were always coming and going. To us, however, it had a fuller significance. Why had that young gentleman left so hastily?

"I think I should like to look at the room," said my uncle as we turned away. "Let us go up stairs."

On reaching our floor we rang for the chambermaid and by her were admitted to the room which had lately been occupied by Mr. Wentworth, but a minute examination disclosed no clew to the antecedents of that young gentleman. The girl regarded my uncle with a half curious, half superior smile of astonishment as he peered here and there, but her look was strangest of all as I pointed to the bullet splash on the wall.

"Law," she gasped, "how did that happen?"

I told her, and asked if nothing had been heard of the report.

"Nothing," she answered. "But I don't understand it."

"Nor I. But there is the proof."

Here my uncle, who had been closely examining the mark, turned and said: "I can't find the bullet, Davie. It has been extracted."

It was true, but why I could not imagine. Jim shook his head sagely.

"The police have a way of following up slender clews," he said. "No doubt the person who extracted this bullet had a very good reason."

The next morning at breakfast my uncle, who was an insatiable reader of the newspapers, stopped suddenly in the midst of a perusal of his favorite journal (we all have one) and looked me blankly in the face. "Davie," he muttered below his breath, "the devils have been at it again!"

My heart seemed suddenly to turn cold, for I knew to whom he referred.

"What is it? What has happened now?"

For reply he handed me the paper, pointing with his forefinger to a heading in large type. It ran thus: "Tragedy In a West End Hotel. Murder or Suicide?"

A mist seemed to swim before my eyes. I was almost afraid to read. Then I pulled myself together, my brain, with strange insistence, assuring me of the fact that it could not refer to any one who was dear to me because, with the exception of my uncle, there was no one in the world I loved. Not that I was too selfish to love, but my destiny had not given me a choice of friends.

Looking down the column I saw that a man had been found dead in his room at the Victoria hotel. His breast had been pierced by a dagger, and the weapon itself, a curiously wrought piece of eastern workmanship, probably Malay or Chinese, was now in the hands of the police. The gentleman, it seems, who had registered in the visitors' book as Mr. Charles Hilbury of Melbourne had but lately arrived in this country with his wife and daughter, both of whom were naturally prostrated with grief. The report went on to say: "No cause is assigned for the deed—if it be one of suicide, as the officials seem inclined to believe—as the gentleman was supposed to be in comfortable circumstances. This fact renders the mystery still more incomprehensible." Then followed a description of the man and the manner in which he was discovered. A couple of lines in connection with his personal appearance burnt themselves into my brain: "On the deceased gentleman's forehead there is a strange elliptical mark, which is evidently the result of some former accident."

I dropped the paper with the one word, "The Sign!"

"Yes."

Our further attempts at eating were a hollow mockery. After a few ineffectual efforts I abandoned even the pretense. My uncle drank copiously of his coffee and turned once more to the news sheet. The food lay untouched before him. When he looked at me again, the trouble had settled deeper on his brow.

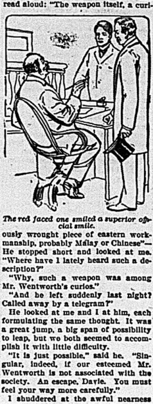
"What do you make of it?" I said, more by way of breaking the ominous silence than the expectation of gaining a new idea; for in my mind I had already sketched a vivid outline of the unhappy man's career. Needless to say we did not entertain the thought of suicide.

"It is evident," was the reply, "that this unfortunate Mr. Hilbury had, like ourselves, run counter to the society. How, or in what way, remains to be seen. Perhaps he may even have been an associate of your father. We shall see later on."

He folded his paper preparatory to rising.

"Did you notice," said I, "that description of the weapon?"

He opened the paper once more and read aloud: "The weapon itself, a curiously wrought piece of eastern workmanship, probably Malay or Chinese"—He stopped short and looked at me. "Where have I lately heard such a description?"



The red faced one smiled a superior official smile.

"Why, such a weapon was among Mr. Wentworth's curios."

"And he left suddenly last night? Called away by a telegram?"

He looked at me and I at him, each formulating the same thought. It was a great jump, a big span of possibility to leap, but we both seemed to accomplish it with little difficulty.

"It is just possible," said he. "Singular, indeed, if our esteemed Mr. Wentworth is not associated with the society. An escape, Davie. You must feel your way more carefully."

I shuddered at the awful nearness of the catastrophe, and to this day I cannot imagine why Mr. Wentworth did not use his dagger on me in preference to the clumsy contrivance of the exploding pistol. If one means to murder, there is no weapon to equal the knife. For once that a bullet brings down its intended victim it will miss a dozen times. But the knife, driven by a steady hand, rarely fails in its mission. It is the thing most to be dreaded by all people whose position causes the envy of less fortunate mortals.

Recognizing, then, its utility, I was at a loss to comprehend the reason for his neglecting the use of it—taking it for granted, of course, that the pistol was not fired by accident. And yet his choice of the pistol was not without wisdom. Had it succeeded it is doubtful if even a suspicion would have attached itself to his person. And how near he had been to accomplishing his purpose! Just that slight deviation of the head at the right moment had upset all his plans and given me another chance. The more I thought of it the deeper was I impressed with the belief that a special providence was watching over me. When one lives in a whirl of excitement, when one's nerves can no longer be counted upon to beat regularly, it is easy enough to fancy things. And, after all, unfortunate as I esteemed myself, I could not deny that I had some share of luck.

We returned to town that afternoon and in due course called at the Victoria hotel, but learned to our chagrin that the widow and her daughter had already left with friends. Where had they gone? The hotel officials did not know, but suggested that we should make inquiries at Great Scotland Yard, which was just round at the back. We thanked them, but did not take their advice. Unlike the police, we knew who had committed the murder; at least we had very few doubts. However, we thought that a glimpse of the weapon might confirm any lingering suspicion and with that object in view called at the police office and begged permission to inspect the knife, a permission which was peremptorily refused by a red faced savage clothed in a little brief authority.

"But I am not without information which may throw considerable light upon this crime," said my uncle.

The red faced one smiled a superior official smile.

"Yes; I know," he said. "I've 'ad 15 'ere already who can lay their 'ands on the murderer at a moment's notice."

"Do you know," said my uncle, "that your tone is hardly the one to adopt when speaking to a gentleman?"

"If gentlemen will come 'ere with such yarns"— he muttered as he turned his great back on us. The sentence was left unfinished, but it really required no completion. The tone, the movement and the shrug of the massive shoulders finished it as no words could.

If You Pity a Sick Friend

Tell Me His Name. Let Me Help Him.

Just write a postal card — only the cost of a penny. All I ask is the name of a friend who needs help. Tell me the book to send.

Then I will do this:—I will arrange with a druggist near him so that he may take six bottles of Dr. Shoop's Restorative. He may take it a month at my risk. If it succeeds the cost is $5.50. If it fails I will pay the druggist myself. And the sick one's mere word shall decide it.

Don't think that too fair to be possible, for I do just as I say. I do it to convince those who don't know me, and so that everyone who needs help will accept it.

I have learned that the cured ones are fair. I have furnished my Restorative to hundreds of thousand on just these terms, and 39 out of each 40 have paid gladly, because they were cured. I have willingly paid for the rest.

And I spent a lifetime in perfecting the remedy before I ever offered it to anyone. At thousands of bedsides, in hospitals and homes, I have watched it cure the most difficult cases that physicians ever meet. I learned that it does not fail, save where some cause — like cancer—make a cure impossible.

My success comes from strengthening the inside nerves. My Restorative brings back that nerve power which alone operates every vital organ of the body. Common treatments merely doctor the organs, and the results are at best but temporary. My remedy restores the nerve power that makes these organs act. No other treatment does that, and there is positively no other way to make weak vital organs well.

My book will explain this. It tells about the only remedy so sure that any man dare offer it on such a plan as mine. Won't you tell me a friend who needs it?

"You are an exceedingly intelligent fellow," said my uncle. "You ought to succeed."

After the first vain attempt to discover the whereabouts of the widow and her daughter we abandoned our inquiries. After all, we could only have heard what we knew or imagined, and our story, if accepted, would render us anything but desirable acquaintances. Therefore, after duly taking all things into consideration, we decided not to intrude upon the privacy of the ladies, but from a distance watch the efforts of the law, rendering such aid as we could. Indeed, our suspicions were written out and dispatched to Scotland Yard, and in due time we were waited upon by one of the chief inspectors, but as our story would serve no good cause by being made public it accordingly never reached the newspapers. But the police were duly informed of the society and its doings, and for some time afterward their vigilance was such that we ate, slept and walked in safety, knowing that our house was watched at night and that wherever we went a police officer was at our heels.

Unfortunately Scotland Yard had met its match in the society. Nothing that could by the greatest stretch of imagination be construed into a suspicious incident occurred during the three months we were under police protection. The reason was naturally a subject of much conversation between my uncle and me, he contending that the fear of detectives had rendered them impotent, I airing my hopeful views as to the grim tiger of a society being at last satiated. But he refused to share in the hope. Indeed, I sometimes harbored the belief that he had no wish for the enemy to withdraw. So far he had done nothing but stand upon the defensive, and his soul wearied of receiving thrust and stab. He longed to hear the advance sounded—to do some cutting and thrusting on his own account.

As there had been no sign of the enemy during the whole of the period we were under police surveillance I think officialism came to the conclusion that it had attached undue importance to our story, for we were somewhat curtly informed from headquarters that there being no longer evidence of danger our guard would be withdrawn forthwith. And it is not a little singular that two days after this notification as we sat at dinner in a well known house off Coventry street the waiter brought a letter to our table, inquiring as he looked from me to my uncle for "Mr. Kingston."

I held out my hand and took the missive and with but an ordinary amount of curiosity opened it. A sheet of paper somewhat curiously folded met my gaze. This I opened gingerly, for it seemed to me that the paper was a blank, and I was getting just a trifle weary of mysterious communications. However, it was not all a blank, for in the middle of it were these words, "Hold this up to the light." I did so and saw at once the reason of the request.

The paper had been so folded that the crease of the line made a perfect oval. It was the fatal sign once more.

I passed it on to my uncle, and he, who had been intently watching me, guessed the bad news from my face. He read the words and accordingly held the thing up to the light.

"Yes," he said. "There can be no doubt as to the meaning. I wonder where the gentleman is who sent it?"

But though he spoke nonchalantly I saw his mouth harden, and I knew that the old fighting blood was bubbling once more to the surface. He had long since passed the terrified stage and lived now in the hope of one day meeting the enemy. And I, too, was slowly gaining some of his spirit, the constant companionship of the Terror lessening the horror which surrounded it. I don't think it was the thought of fighting or the probable end that I feared so much. It was the secret, crawling method which engendered a most horrid uncertainty and put me upon the rack. This it was which had shattered my father's nerve and made him the wreck I knew, and this was the fear which had haunted me. But perhaps at bottom I was my father's son, and it would have been a strange ghost that could have cowed him at my age, or the stories they tell of him can have but slight foundation in fact.

My uncle looked around inquiringly for the waiter, but it was some minutes before that worthy returned. When he did, Jim held the letter up before the man.

"Who gave you this?"

"A gentleman, sir."

"Is he still in the room?"

"No, sir. He handed it to me as he was going out."

"Do you know him at all?"

"No, sir; not that I know of."

"Do you remember what he was like?"

For a moment or two the man warily scratched a dark chin.

"Can't say that I do, sir, though I rather fancy he was a foreign gent."

"Thanks."

The description was quite sufficient. "Foreign gent" was near enough to the mark. The waiter would hardly distinguish his nationality at a glance.

"Strange," said my uncle as the man departed with a load of empty dishes, "that we, the superior animals, should be so utterly lacking in instinct. We have evidently been within touch of our esteemed Wentworth and yet had no suspicion of it. An animal would have smelt danger; a man blunders into it. Yet the one has only instinct, the other reason. A pretty question, Davie: Has our intellect blunted our instinct?"

I believed it had, but I was in no mood to continue this philosophic vein. When he took that calm, rational view of abstruse problems, he was getting dangerous.

"The time has come for us to make a move," he said. "The police regard us more or less suspiciously. The murder of Mr. Hilbury is a thing of the past. The verdict has gone forth—murder against some person or persons unknown. It is but one more mystery added to the many. Some even have no doubt that it was a case of suicide, their efforts to trace the perpetrator having signally failed. But we know, and we must act accordingly. I admit I was not without hope that the society, having left us so long in peace, had at last grown weary of revenge; but this night's business has entirely dissipated that hope. Whether they mean to strike or merely to torture I cannot say, but one thing I know—I am weary to death of this awful manner of living."

"What do you propose by way of remedy?"

He paused, the attitude of the waiter arresting his attention. He called to him and sent him for fresh liqueurs. I opened my eyes. Jim smiled.

"I don't know, of course, but one can't be too careful. The fellow has an ugly jaw anyway, and he seemed to listen rather attentively."

I sighed. It was awful, this fear of every shadow.

"Yes," he continued, "it's rather unpleasant, isn't it? In fact, it's become unbearable."

"It has long been so to me."

"And to me, and what is more, it all appears so hopeless. I have no wish to frighten you, Davie, but how is it going to end?"

I feared it could only end one way, and I said so.

"In the triumph of our enemies? I believe so too. I have long believed it. Police have failed, we have failed, but the society never fails. It can be baffled, kept at bay, but it has infinite patience and a long purse. I tell you candidly, Davie, I am beginning to fear it; fear it, that is, in a manner that never appealed to me before. There is evidently no security for us in England. We must go abroad." This he said with a look which was half an interrogation.

"Willingly," I said, "but will our going abroad aid us? And where shall we go?"

I put this last question not without a certain inward suspicion, for I had not forgotten his wish, which I knew was not dead, though it had lain dormant so long, of bearding the lion in his den.

"You know," he replied, "I have always rather fancied that your father was guilty of a piece of good sense when he suggested that we should seek Kung in his native land, and you know that wisdom is a thing I have never accused him of before. To my thinking the very daring of the object is almost an inspiration, dangerous as it undoubtedly will be. If we can only give Wooching the slip"—

"Easier said than done."

"Precisely, but that is no reason why we should not try. Hitherto our open manner of living has taxed his cleverness in no way. He has known where to find us without the trouble of looking. Though you are inclined not to think so, I can assure you that human ingenuity is not infallible."

Truth to tell, the idea appealed to me strongly. Though to him I had not broached the subject for some time, I had thought none the less of this going to China. The awful restlessness and irritation caused by the yellow man's espionage had bred in me a feeling much akin to despair, and it was this despair which stiffened my back and

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

UNTOLD MISERY. — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia.

Who Need Glasses?

Many young people need them, particularly students, stenographers, bookkeepers, dressmakers, milliners, etc., who use their eyes much at close work, to prevent in many cases serious results from eye strain. In such cases we are particular not only to give glasses that will relieve eye strain, but make them so conform to the face, as even to add to the personal appearance. No charge for consultation.

BELLEVILLE, ONT.

WOMAN'S WORLD

MINNIE M. BELCHER.

She Is the Active Head of an Extensive Publishing House.

For energy, enterprise and independence Minnie M. Belcher, a pretty young woman of about twenty-seven, who is the very active head of an extensive publishing house in Albany, N. Y., leads the procession of business women formed by her progressive countrywomen. Mrs. Belcher fills an important position in the business world, managing the affairs of her own company, which publishes numerous subscription books and newspaper premiums and which does the largest business of any of the publishing houses of the kind in the country.

Before organizing this business Mrs. Belcher was at the head of her husband's old firm, the R. S. Belcher company of Pittsburg, to which she succeeded after his death.

Mrs. Belcher enlarged on her husband's novel plan of introducing certain books to the public through the newspapers, and shrewd business men of several years' experience found themselves outstripped by the up to date ideas of this woman, who had but a few months before entered the business world for the first time.

MRS. MINNIE M. BELCHER.

When after months of success Mrs. Belcher became dissatisfied with her business associates she was able without difficulty to organize a company of her own with a capital double that of the old company and in the shortest possible time. She chose Albany, N. Y., as the scene of her venture.

When she left the R. S. Belcher company of Pittsburg and organized the M. M. Belcher company of Albany, N. Y., all but three of her former employees applied for positions with the new concern, and this loyalty is a testimony to her great popularity.

Personally Mrs. Belcher is a delightful woman to meet, extremely fastidious as to her personal appearance, while her looks belie the business woman in the general acceptation of the term.—New York Herald.

Correct Dressing.

A clever writer gives this sage advice to young ladies apropos of correct dressing: "Remember this, the right sort of a man will never notice you are pretty if you wear the wrong things on workaday occasions. You can be attired charmingly, becomingly, attractively, but all your men friends will turn aside with a contemptuous smile, and other women (who know better than you do—an awful condition of affairs!) may tell you that you are 'dressed inappropriately,' making you feel like the nightmare when you went to King Edward's ball in a gingham pinafore trimmed with red worsted braid. No; the right sort of man admires you much more if you look mediocre in a Tam O'Shanter and a cravenette coat on a wet day than if you appear in your favorite chiffon blouse and rose wreathed hat. He will realize you have pretty feet clad in gray suede shoes in six inches of mud, but he will think you a fool at the back of his mind. There are so many women who have pretty feet, my dear reader, so many fools! And bear the reverse of the picture in mind, do not overdo short skirts and thick soles; do not cultivate a skin like that of a Gladstone bag nor hair like your favorite hunter's tail. There is a medium in all things, though so few women can seem to realize it. The true art of dressing well is to know where clothes come in second, and a very bad second too."—Pilgrim.

Throat and Chest Exercises.

Following are some arm movements for developing the throat and chest, to be used in connection with a breathing exercise: For what is called the side sweep arm exercise stand erect, with the arms at the sides, then lift them up vertically, inflating the lungs as the arms ascend. With the arms in vertical position raise up on the tiptoes and throw the head back, touching at the same time the backs of the hands overhead. As the arms slowly descend exhale. For the front sweep inflate the lungs as the arms are brought to a vertical position, look up and raise on tiptoes, keep the elbows straight and touch the thumbs when the arms are raised above the head. Exhale as the hands are returned to the side. Raise the arms in front of the body, with the hands relaxed and the back of the wrists upward. Then raise them above the head, bring them back and downward to the side, then up above the head again. Don't make these movements in a jerky, awkward manner, but slowly and harmoniously.

The Bane of Bashfulness.

The shy little girl who buries her face in her mother's skirts on the approach of a stranger makes a charming and picturesque figure. That same child, become a young woman and suffering the agonies of diffidence as a wallflower at a party, is an object for pity.

It may seem idle to try to overcome girlish diffidence by an ethical argument, but if once the timid girl can bring herself to regard the terrifying social group as simply her lessons and examples she may gradually find her fear melting into admiration and so into a wholesome imitation.

Social grace is largely the self forgetting ability to put oneself in another's place. All the easy give and take which is the chief charm of the husking in the country or the afternoon tea in the city is the result not of genius for conversation, but of practice in the art of entertaining. That art is acquired with far less toil than skill in playing the piano or in embroidery or in cookery.

The Hot Water Remedy.

A wornout woman who retires at night or lies down for a few minutes' rest at noonday with a feeling that sleep is impossible should try the hot water remedy. Simply bathe the face and temples, the wrists and cords of the neck, in water as hot as can be borne. For a daytime nap the dress should be loosened at the throat and waist, or, better still, the clothes should be removed entirely, just as when retiring for the night. A glass of hot water with a little sugar and a few drops of lemon juice is a favorite drink of Frenchwomen and is an excellent sleep producer. Eau sucre, as it is called, takes the place in France often occupied by tea here.

To Fluff the Hair.

To make the hair simply fluffy without curling it moisten it with a preparation of two grams alcohol or rectified spirits of wine, one ounce cologne, half ounce bicarbonate soda and four ounces rosewater. Every night rub every inch of the scalp with cold water, using a clean nailbrush, if you want to keep your hair in good condition. Once a week use a tonic. An excellent one is made of alcohol, one pint; sweet oil, one ounce; tincture of cantharides, one dram. Use a few drops of any essence you prefer to perfume it. A good way to apply any lotion to the head and hair is by means of a nailbrush or the finger tips.

Make Your Own Hatpins.

Making her own hatpins is the fad of the smart girl who likes variety in this line of jewelry. This is simple and inexpensive, for ordinary black or white hatpins can be bought for a cent apiece. The head is removed, and one, two or three Venetian beads are placed on the pin in its place. To hold in position gum arabic is poured in the cavity of each bead. It is a pretty idea to use a large turquoise bead with a small one at each side. One girl who possessed several Chinese garments removed the buttons, which were very artistic, had a jeweler plate them and made hatpins out of them.

Handkerchiefs.

To keep handkerchiefs a good color instead of dampening them before ironing proceed as follows: Put two quarts of tepid water, with five drops of blue and a small piece of lump starch, into a basin, and into this mixture dip each handkerchief separately, thoroughly wetting it, and then squeezing it as dry as possible. When all the handkerchiefs have been treated in this way spread them out smoothly on a clean cloth or towel until they can be ironed.

A Good Wife.

I heard Mrs. Robbins commended the other day as a remarkably fine woman. Her great merit had been demonstrated, her laudator said, by her making Charles Robbins such a good wife. That means of course that she has made a fairly good husband out of Charles. When you hear of women being good wives it is worth while to remember that the usual proof of a good wife is a good husband.—Harper's Bazar.

The Nurse's Dress.

A child's nurse should always wear wash dresses, and this is especially necessary if she is to care for a young infant. If the conventional black dress is to be worn it is best to have it made of sateen or other washable material; also it is very necessary that no pins should be about the waist or belt. Many an ugly scratch on baby's soft little cheek is due to a pretty pin in the nurse's collar.

For the Ironing Board.

The so called charity blanket makes an excellent cover for an ironing board because it is hard. The ironing sheet which goes over it should have tapes at each corner, if it is to be used on a table, to tie around the four legs; if on an ironing board it should be tightly tacked or sewed to the blanket.

Sweeping and Dusting.

Never sweep dust from one room to another nor from upstairs to the lower part of the house. Always take it up in a dustpan where you have previously placed some tea leaves. This prevents the dust from scattering again and returning to its old haunts.

What does a woman need more than anything else? Sympathy. Having sympathy, a woman is strong for all the battles of life; without it she is easily vanquished.

Do not give way to nerves, emotions or tears; they ruin good looks. No emotions, no wrinkles, is an old and tried beauty recipe.

Don't be jealous of the beauty, youth and success of others. Jealousy plants ugly lines in the face.

The habit of fussing is of all minor errors the one most to be deprecated in woman.

So Many People Ask

Why on earth are you selling Wall Papers at HALF PRICE this time of the year.

WELL its just like this—We still have about 3,000 rolls of 1903 Wall Papers left and with our reputation for carrying the very newest in Wall Papers it would not pay us to put this small balance in with our 1904, and call them new.

We don't do that kind of business. We prefer giving our customers who are not so particular about having the very latest, these goods at bargains. So we are selling all 1903 papers this month at HALF of the regular prices, so as to start March with nothing but 1904 papers which are now flooding our warehouse.

All Fancy Goods and China —not Staple—for the balance of the month of February at Half regular price—this makes home beautifying doubly cheap.

Yours In Decorations

During the winter months our workmen have been kept unusually busy decorating some of the best homes of the city.

TO SAY THAT our decorative work is a success—is putting the matter mildly—you have just to witness this for yourself in observing any one of the many city homes we have given decorative attention during the past two years.

Our success is because of a knowledge of the decorative trade begot of study and experience both in wall hangings and the decorative art—the two go hand in hand—the one without the other is absolutely lost.

NO better time for you than the present for selecting, new wall hangings now arriving.

No better time to have your work done than during the later winter months and the earlier spring.

We are prepared—with a liberal staff of experienced workmen —the best obtainable in their several branches and our prices will meet with your approval every time.

TENDENCY OF THE TIMES.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

TO CURE FEVER CHILLS

And such complaints as "Shivers" and ague we recommend Nerviline very highly. Twenty drops of Nerviline taken in hot water with a little sugar three times daily not only stops the chills, but knocks out the disease completely. Nerviline has a direct action on fever chills and removes the conditions causing them. In stomach and bowel troubles Nerviline never fails. It's pleasant to the taste, quick to relieve and always cures permanently. Get a 25c bottle to-day.

LAST OF SIDNEY'S OLD PIONEER RESIDENTS DIES AT GOOD OLD AGE.

Our Sidney Crossing correspondent writes, under date of Feb. 23:

The last of Sidney's old pioneer residents passed away at an early hour this morning in the person of Mrs. Eliza Lott, widow of the late Mr. Andrew Lott.

Deceased was in her 97th year, and until within a few days was in full possession of all her senses. Since the death of her husband some few years ago she has lived with her daughter, Mrs. John Carr, of this place. One son and two daughters survive, namely, Mr. Ransom Lott, of Trenton; Mrs. Bradney Burt, of Chicago, and Mrs. J. Carr. Mr. Byron Lott, of Stirling, is a grandson of the deceased. Funeral services will be conducted at the house on Wednesday, Feb. 24th at 1 p.m. Deceased was a devout member of the Methodist Church, and a woman dearly beloved by young and old. We extend our sincere sympathies to the sorrowing friends.

Dool-Nettleton Nuptials.

The Rockford, Ill., Register-Gazette, thus notes the marriage of a former popular young lady of this city: "Miss Esther Dool, of this city, and Frank Nettleton, of Capron, were married Wednesday at noon at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Margaret Dool, 621 Kishwaukee street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. John Henry Boose and was witnessed only by the immediate relatives of the young couple. Mr. and Mrs. Nettleton left for a brief stay in Chicago immediately after the wedding. On their return they will go to housekeeping on the groom's farm near Capron.

BRONCHITIC ASTHMA A HEAVY BURDEN.

Asthma is bad enough, but when bronchial symptoms are added the poor sufferer has almost an intolerable existence. Macdonald, of Montreal, "I battled with the agonies of bronchitis asthma. Often I couldn't sleep for nights at a time. I spent thousands on doctors and medicines, without relief, but one dollar's worth of Catarrhozone cured me. Catarrhozone can't fail; it's guaranteed. Two months' treatment $1.00; trial size 25c.

BOARD OF TRADE HELD A MEETING.

Trent Valley Canal Scheme Discussed and Endorsed—Trenton Terminus Favored.

Canal's Completion May Help Belleville in Way of Securing Power.

Important Resolution Carried Strengthening Council's Hands on Gas By-law.

A special meeting of the Board of Trade was held last evening at which two important matters were discussed, namely, the Trent Canal and Water Power and the proposed legislation in connection with the Gas Works.

Mr. C. M. Stork, President, occupied the chair. The members present were: Mayor Chown, Messrs. J. P. Thomas, Ex-Mayor Graham, Ex-Mayor Johnson, W. J. McCamon, J. F. Wills, C. B. Scantlebury, J. M. Farley, J. A. Tousaw, Ald. McFee, J. Barber, Geo. Wallbridge, W. W. Pope, A. E. Lewis, C. Clapp, R. Templeton, J. K. McCargar and Dr. Boyce.

The President's Remarks.

The President in his opening remarks stated that the meeting had been especially called to discuss an important matter, namely, the Trent Valley Canal and Water Power. At the last meeting of Parliament a Royal Transportation Commission had been appointed to gather information on the transportation question. This Commission would meet soon and it was desirable that the meeting be held in Belleville, if possible, or some adjoining place. If the canal was completed large water powers would be developed and this would no doubt be of great interest and importance to this city. He was a firm believer in having the canal completed and having the Bay of Quinte its terminus.

Ex-Mayor Graham.

Ex-Mayor Graham said he had attended a meeting in Peterboro in reference to the Trent Valley Canal scheme. The canal, if built, would no doubt come down the Trent River and if Belleville is going to improve it must secure cheap electric power. We should do all in our power to have that canal built for this purpose. The barges would also be available for the transportation of freight, and this would probably reduce freight rates and perhaps result in an improved service, although the G.T.R. was giving good service at times. By means of this canal we might also be able to get other railway connection and facilities. Peterboro was a central point, perhaps, but if the commission could be induced to meet in Belleville he was certainly in favor of having them do so.

Ex-Mayor Johnson.

Ex-Mayor Johnson stated that he had taken considerable interest in the transportation question. We have overcome the Niagara and the St. Lawrence, but the nearer waters have been neglected. We wanted this canal completed so as to have water connection between the Georgian Bay and the Bay of Quinte. He thought that, owing to the condition of affairs, the Canal would not be built so as to end on Lake Ontario at Port Hope. It was not the through freight but way freight that pays, and this is what we want. The power as it exists in the Trent River to-day is unlimited. We have a large interest in this matter and we should assist all we could in the scheme and send a delegation from the Board to meet the Commissioners.

A General Discussion.

Mr. McCamon asked if Mr. D. Gilmour, of Trenton, could be prevailed on to come down and give an address upon this matter, as he was conversant with the facts.

Mr. Stork, in reply, stated that his idea was to have a meeting of the citizens and invite Mr. Gilmour to give an address as he had various maps and was conversant with this matter in its every detail.

Mr. W. W. Pope said the building of the Trent Valley Canal, he considered, was endorsed by all, or nearly all, in this district.

Mr. Lewis asked what benefit to the city would the canal be.

Mr. Stork said it would no doubt give cheaper freight rates, which would be a decided advantage.

Ex-Mayor Graham said it would also be an advantage to Belleville in our being able to secure cheap power, which was much desired. If we had the renting of one of the contemplated dams on the River Trent it would be capital well invested. We would then be in a position to offer cheap power to any industry which might be disposed to come to the city.

Mayor Chown asked who would own that power.

Ex-Mayor Graham —"The Government."

Mr. Stork said that some private individuals owning property along the route might have something to say as to the disposal of the power.

Ex-Mayor Graham said these people would no doubt have the first privilege.

Mr. Johnson said we were just as well off practically as were the cities and towns in the vicinity of Niagara. We have the same thing here, although not on so large a scale. But all the power that is necessary could be secured.

A Public Meeting.

After some further discussion, Ald. McFee moved, seconded by ex-Mayor Johnson, that a public meeting be called for Monday next, and Mr. Gilmour invited to be present at the meeting.—Carried.

On motion the President and Secretary were authorized to draft a resolution to the commission endorsing the scheme.

The Gas Works.

Ex-Mayor Johnson said he had an important matter to bring before the meeting, namely, the Gas works. Some were endeavoring to thwart the will of the citizens in reference to the Gas works. He moved, seconded by Mr. Scantlebury, the following resolution:

Whereas at the last municipal elections of the City of Belleville the question of the purchase of the Belleville Gas works by the city was submitted to the votes of the qualified electors, with the result that a majority voted in favor of their purchase;

And whereas, after a scrutiny before Judge Lazier of the ballots cast at the said election on the said question, it was declared by His Honor that the by-law submitted by the City Council to give legal effect to the said purchase was duly carried by the people;

And whereas the City Council, as in duty bound, gave the final reading to the said by-law and it was duly passed and numbered;

And whereas, in view of certain active opposition to the declared will of the people of Belleville (exercised locally, but, it is believed, at the instigation of a company, or individuals interested in a company now supplying light to the citizens), the City Council has petitioned the Legislature to pass an Act declaring the said by-law to be valid, so that delay in acquiring the works, which need extensive repairs, may be avoided;

Now the Board of Trade of the City of Belleville hereby declares that this action of the City Council has the sanction of its members, and that public opinion in the city is in favor of it.

The mover said he was informed that a gentleman in Toronto had stated to a Belleville Alderman that the City of Belleville would not run the Gas works. This, he considered, was coercion. The citizens of Belleville, he believed, would not be coerced by any one gentleman in Toronto or any company. When the Mayor and City Solicitor appear before the Legislature with this resolution it will strengthen their hands. The Waterworks system had paid the city, and he had no doubt the Gas works would do so. He felt keen in this matter as a citizen, and he would not be coerced or intimidated by any one. He considered it his duty to bring this matter before the Board.

Mayor Chown said that at present we were not aware that there was opposition. There was street talk upon the matter, but nothing had openly developed.

Mr. W. W. Pope did not think there would be any opposition to the action proposed to be secured from the Legislature. The citizens had carried the by-law without any interference or strenuous efforts on behalf of the Council.

The motion was carried.

Mr. J. F. Wills did not know of any opposition to the measure and considered it would be unwise to publish the resolution in the papers. He made a motion to the effect that the papers be requested not to publish the resolution, but it was not seconded.

This concluded the business and the Board adjourned.

Dispatch From Paris Tells of Japanese Repulse at Port Arthur—Japan Guarantees Corean Independence—Russians Have Not Yet Crossed the Yalu.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

Paris, Feb. 24.—A despatch to the Havas Agency, from Port Arthur, says that four Japanese cruisers and two Japanese transports have been sunk in a fresh attack at Port Arthur. The despatch adds that the attack was repulsed and the Russian battleship Retvizan covered herself with glory.

Washington, D.C., Feb. 24.— Secretary Hay has received information that Japan has negotiated a treaty with Corea, whereby she guarantees the independence and integrity of Corea.

Tokio, Feb. 24. — Reliable reports from northern Corea indicate that the Russians have not yet crossed the Yalu River. Their scouts, it is reported, penetrated to the country south of Wiju but the main force still remains north of the river. The Japanese seem to be confident that the Russians are unable to assemble a sufficient force to attempt a movement into Corea. The Russian strength north of the Yalu is variously estimated from 20,000 to 40,000.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Barlow, Macdonald Ave., entertained a number of their friends last evening, the occasion being the tenth anniversary of their wedding. Quite an enjoyable time was spent.

Mr. W. R. Aylsworth, of this city, President of the Ontario Land Surveyors' Association, is presiding over the annual meeting, which is being held at Toronto.

Mr. J. W. Main, of Ottawa, who was visiting friends in this city, had a paralytic stroke last night, and was taken to the hospital this afternoon. He is in a very serious condition.

Mr. W. W. Power, of the Belleville Kilties Band and Main's Circus, left for New York to-day, whence he will sail for Liverpool. Mr. Power will visit many cities in England and the continent, looking out for dates for the band, and at the same time keeping his eyes open for novelties for the circus.

WHY BRAIN WORKERS BREAK DOWN.

Man is not a machine that keeps going as long as the steam is applied. He is a creature of blood, nerves and delicately balanced organism. Many don't realize this, but overwork their brains and break down. Brain workers need a strong, bracing tonic like Ferrozone to fortify their nerves and keep the blood pure and rich. Take Ferrozone and you'll do more work. You will have the strength, the ambition and the desire for work, because your system will be in first-class order. For your health and strength take Ferrozone regularly. Price 50c at druggists.

CLEARANCE SALE.

You know what this means—it means you'll have a chance to buy Quick & Robertson's winter clothing at very unusual prices. We are bound to make each season take care of itself, and to that end are offering some of the choicest things of the season way below value.

If you don't bore children and old people, you may think pretty well of yourself.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

The Ottawas beat the Marlboros in the first game of the series last night, though it seems probable that, had rough tactics been eliminated, the Dukes would have won. According to The Globe the Toronto lads were so badly pounded in the first half that they lost their speed and had not the heart to play their game in the second. The following from The Globe will be of interest, particularly the last sentence:

"So long as the game was hockey the Marlboros were the leaders. They combined better than Ottawa, skated faster and shot infinitely better. In fact, all through the game the Ottawas plainly exhibited an inability to shoot that would be a disgrace to an O.H.A. intermediate team. They are strong rushers, and when they get a goal it is usually by breaking through the defence and jamming the puck into the net from close quarters. Slashing, tripping, the severest kind of cross-checking and a systematic method of hammering the Marlboros on the hands and wrists are the most effective points in their style. In addition, they have a habit of hitting a man on the head when the referee is not looking and body-checking an opponent into the boards after he has passed the puck. The rubber is not the objective point at all, but the man must be stopped, and if he is put out altogether so much the better. A fast and powerful team like Belleville can beat Ottawa at the rough-house game and outplay them besides."

At the end of the first half the score was 3-1 in favor of the challengers, but the defenders finally won out by a score of 6-3. The next game will be played to-morrow night, though, according to The Globe, the Marlboros will be in poor shape for it. The Globe says: "The whole team are pretty badly used up. Even the goal-keeper, Geroux, did not escape, getting one of the cracks on the head that were so freely distsibuted."

Stratford beat Watford last night by the jug-handled score of 18 to 4, and look like sure winners of the round. A lead of 14 goals is a big one.

The following letter appears in the sporting columns of The Globe to-day:

Belleville and the Marlboros.

Sporting Editor Globe: Sir,—I was very much pleased to note in your paper this morning that there is some probability of the senior Marlboros and Belleville coming together. From their showing here last week there seems but little doubt that the eastern team will gather in the intermediate honors. It is my opinion, and I know that my views are shared by many others, that Belleville is the only O.H.A. team that has appeared at Mutual street this winter capable of giving the Dukes a good game.

I trust hockey enthusiasts may have an opportunity of seeing them meet. Sincerely yours,

OBSERVER.

Toronto, Feb. 23.

Toronto people seem considerably impressed with the Bellevilles. Home and home games with the senior Dukes would certainly be a great drawing card.

The local intermediate team will leave for Midland to-morrow, going by way of Toronto. Good luck to them.

Toronto Telegram: Now Belleville and Midland fight it out. And perhaps the fur won't fly in those games. It looks like each team to win its home game and a good referee to cut down the casualty column.

70 MILES OF RAILWAY

Destroyed By Japs Between Harbin and Vladivostock.

NORTHERN PORT EASY NOW

Fight at Port Arthur Is Almost a Constant One—Forty Thousand More of the Mikado's Troops Land at Chemulpo—Russians Cannot Repair Their Damaged Warships at Port Arthur Because All Mechanics Are Chinese.

London, Feb. 24.—The Che Foo correspondent of The Morning Post, under yesterday's date, says 40,000 more Japanese troops have landed at Chemulpo, and that he had received confirmation of the report that some Japanese have landed at Pigeon Bay, others at Talienwan, and that an engagement occurred on the night of Feb. 12.

Constant Fight at Port Arthur.

According to The Standard's correspondent at Seoul, the Japanese bombarded Port Arthur at intervals between the 8th and the 14th of February, inflicting, however, but slight injuries. The report is confirmed, this correspondent continues, that 70 miles of railroad track and some important bridges have been destroyed between Harbin and Valdivostock.

If the latter report is true it would be a great advantage to the Japanese, as Vladivostock is known to be very badly supplied, and it therefore could not long resist a Japanese attack. There is still, however, no news of actual operations of any kind.

In a despatch from Tokio, a correspondent of The Times says some hundreds of Cossacks reached Chong-ju, 30 miles south of the Yalu River, the afternoon of Feb. 20. Thirty troopers crossed the river at Kazan, the same evening, thus arriving within 45 miles of Pingyang, Corea. It is understood the Diet will meet the middle of March for the introduction of the war budget.

A correspondent of The Times at Wei-Hai-Wei says he hears that all the mechanics at Port Arthur, Dalny and Vladivostock, are Chinese, and that it is impossible for the Russians to repair their damaged warships.

Fight at Port Arthur Saturday.

Berlin, Feb. 24.—The Lokal Anzeiger yesterday in a despatch from Tokio says: "A fresh engagement took place at Port Arthur Saturday last. The details have not been announced by the Government."

Russians About to Come Out.

Che Foo, Feb. 24.—The bottled-up Russian fleet at Port Arthur is preparing to make a desperate dash for the open sea. As soon as the work of repair on the injured ships is complete the Russian fleet will make a combined attack on the Japanese squadron on guard.

Jap Attack on the North.

Nagaski, Feb. 24.—A strong Japanese squadron is nearing Vladivostock for the purpose of attacking the Russian fleet in the harbor there. It is said the ice has broken up and the Japanese are able to approach.

Battleground in Northern Corea.

London, Feb. 24.—Russian scouts are known to be at Anju, and it is believed two companies of Japanese are already at Pingyang. Immediate skirmishing is possible at several points. As an evidence of the Japanese intentions, it is worthy of notice that their cruisers are busy patroling toward the northwest coast of Corea.

They are now landing artillery at Chemulpo, and their transports are carrying sampans from Japan, all of which suggests the probability of disembarkation, independent of local conditions, farther north. Furthermore, while the troops landing at Chemulpo are variously estimated to number from 8,000 to 15,000, only a part of them is visible.

Everything suggests that the Japanese contemplate an immediate dash for a strategic position in Northern Corea, their activity implying that the Russians are alive to the situation. It is possible that the Russians are considerably farther south than is supposed at present.

The military situation entirely depends on the issue of immediate operations in the neighborhood of the Yalu River.

Japs Were Dressed As Coolies.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 24.—The Japanese, who were hanged by Russians in Manchuria, for attempting to blow up the railroad bridge over the Sungari River, were disguised as coolies. They were arrested just as they were about to make the attempt. Inquiry revealed that they were Japanese officers of the general staff, named Col. Assai of the Engineers, and Lieuts. Zonalascha and Kasurata of the Sappers. They were hanged from the girders of the bridge.

An Insult to Britain.

Berlin, Feb. 24.—It is said here that Russia will refuse permission to English army officers to witness the land operations of their army at the front. Other nations will, however, be accorded the usual facilities.

The Gunboat Mandjur.

Shanghai, Feb. 24.—Two Chinese cruisers are expected here to-day to settle the question of the refusal of the Russian gunboat Mandjur to obey the order of The Taotai to leave Shanghai.

Ambulances For Harbin.

Paris, Feb. 24.—In a despatch from Harbin, Manchuria, a correspondent of The Matin says ambulances are being sent there from all parts of Russia and that the Baltic railroad has furnished a sanitary train for 200 wounded.

A despatch from Port Arthur, published this morning, denies categorically the reports of a new attack by Japanese torpedo boats, and says they have been repulsed with losses every time they appeared in the roadstead.

The allegation is made, according to the despatch from Port Arthur, that the Japanese have dethroned the Emperor of Corea and annexed the country.

Russia's Formal Protest.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 24.—Foreign Minister Lamsdorff Monday sent the circular to Russian representatives abroad, outlined yesterday, of complaint that the Japanese had violated the law of nations.

War to Last Till September.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 24.—"The war will end in August or September in the complete defeat of the Japanese," said a high authority in intimate touch with the Russian war plans, whose opinion can be taken faithfully to reflect the belief in the highest official quarters.

Russian War Minister.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 24.—General Sakharoff, chief of staff of the military district of Turkestan, has been appointed to act as minister of war.

To Corea, via Canada.

Ottawa, Feb. 24.—Sir William Nicholson, Director-General of the British Intelligence Department, is a passenger on the Majestic to New York. He is on his way to Corea, via Vancouver, to study the military operations in the Russian and Japanese armies.

PUNITIVE COLUMN STARTS.

Will Operate Against Subhai Tribe in Aden Hinterland.

London, Feb. 24.—A column consisting of 200 of the Buffs, 150 of the 123rd Bombay Rifles, and two guns, all under Major Ravenhill, left here last Friday, telegraphs an Aden correspondent under date Feb. 8. Another column, composed of 200 of the Hampshire and 150 of the 102nd Bombay Grenadiers, with two guns, all under Major de Winton, left Musemir the following day.

Both are operating against the Subhai tribe in the Aden hinterland, which recently attacked a surveying party.

Troops Ordered From India.

A wing of the 94th Native Infantry, with six British officers, nine native officers and 340 men, under Major Whittal, has been ordered from India to Aden to support the escort of the boundary commission working in the hinterland.

Said to Be Steve Doyle.

Toronto, Feb. 24.—Steve Doyle, burglar, convict and desperate crook, who escaped from the Toronto police in the daring break for liberty last summer, made by himself and two companions—Quackenbush and Murphy— has been located. He is in his grave in London, where the bullets of the detectives of that city put him as the sequel of a dramatic battle with pistols two weeks ago when the surviving robber, "Texas," was captured. This is the conclusion of the persistent efforts of the provincial authorities to locate and capture the bold crook since he disappeared like a lightning streak the afternoon of Aug. 18, 1903, on the banks of the Don where he was so hotly pursued by the officers whom he so cunningly evaded.

Baronet Goes Insane.

Mentone, France, Feb. 24.—Sir Seton Gordon, Bart., became suddenly demented here and behaved in such a manner that he eventually was taken into custody and placed in charge of a doctor. He telegraphed to numerous hotels, ordering rooms for 300 imaginary friends, and created a scene at the British Consulate. He sent also a telegram to King Edward and the British Foreign Office, complaining of the way he had been treated.

Kill the Czar, Say Socialists.

Berlin, Feb. 24.—Socialists in Germany advocate the murder of the Czar.

WOMAN'S DANGERS.

THE LIVES OF ALL WOMEN BESET BY SECRET TROUBLES.

A Simple and Certain Method by Which the Ills of Girlhood and Womanhood may be Overcome.

Every woman's health depends upon her blood—its richness and its regularity. Sometimes it is hard to believe that nearly all common diseases spring from the blood, no matter how different they may seem. It is hard, for instance, to realize that rheumatism and indigestion are both the cause of bad blood, and both cured by good blood. But there can be no doubt in the case of the secret troubles of a woman's life, from fifteen to fifty. The blood is plainly the cause of all her irregularities in health. Then comes the signs of secret illness, the headaches, backaches and sideaches; the pale cheeks and dull eyes; the failing appetite and irritable nerves; the hysteria and biliousness; the weakness and languor; the distress and despondency and all the weary wretched feelings that attack women in their times of ill-health. And the blood is to blame for it all. When the blood is rich and red and regular there is little trouble in the life of maid or mother. That is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are worth their weight in gold to every woman. They actually make new blood. Every dose sends galloping through the veins pure, strong, rich, red blood that strikes at the cause of the secret ill-health. The new blood restores regularly and braces all the special organs for their special tasks. In this way Dr. Williams' Pink Pills banish the backaches and headaches, sharpen the appetite and the energies, soothe the nerves and bring back the rosy glow of health to faded cheeks. This is the special mission of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and there is no other medicine in the world can do it so successfully. Mrs. Geo. Danby, of Tilbury, Ont., has proved the truth of these statements and says so for the benefit her experience may bring to other suffering women. Mrs. Danby says: "I think Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a blessing to suffering women. For a long time I was a great sufferer from the ailments that afflict so many of my sex. I was extremely nervous at all times, suffered a great deal with headaches and indigestion. In fact I was in a most miserable condition when I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, but after taking them a short time I began to improve, and through their further use I am altogether like a new woman. I am sure if more women would take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills they would be convinced of the great good they can do."

What Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for Mrs. Danby they can do for every growing girl and ailing woman in Canada, if they are given a fair and reasonable use. But you must make sure you get the genuine pills, with the full name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People," on the wrapper around every box. To be had from dealers in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SEND THEM TO COLONIES.

Ablebodied British Emigrant Worth £300 to Canada—Major Seeley Against Protection—Sir John Gorst Likewise.

London, Feb. 24.—(C.A.P.)—Moreton Frewen, speaking at Nottingham, on the Empire and emigration, drew attention to the immense waste of the vital forces of the Empire, because, instead of being distributed by preference among the colonies, the emigrants of the past sixty years had been given over wholesale to our chief competitor—America. He estimated the value of an able-bodied British emigrant to Canada at £300, because, judging from the American returns the annual wealth product of this emigrant would be £100, and he would pay £15 a year to the federal local taxes. With ten emigrants as security, Canada could borrow £3,000, which would build and equip a mile of railway. Thus the Empire paid the railway built by emigrants not by financiers in Parliament.

Sir William Macdonald declared it was impossible to attract immigrants to Canada until the American fiscal system was adopted throughout the British Empire with the privilege of a free market and the prerogative of citizenship. The country to-day was tired of the cosmopolitan altruistic experiment, and was eager for a national policy to benefit the Empire.

Seeley Against Protection.

London, Feb. 23.—(C.A.P.)—Major Seeley, M.P., speaking of protection and preference, and their relations to Imperial defence at a free trade meeting, said the results of protection were a smaller mercantile marine, less varied employment, less contented people. The British naval reserve has drawn from the British mercantile marine and it would be a strategic disadvantage to adopt a policy that would mean diminution of the number of ships. He saw a divided Empire as the result of a preference in time of war.

Sir John Gorst said there could be no greater guarantee for the peace of the world or the safety of Britain than that she was supplied with food by the United States. The Americans would never allow wheat so be considered contraband of war.

Metric System Favored.

London, Feb. 24.—(C.A.P.)—The bill making the metric system compulsory in Great Britain in two years passed its second reading in the House of Lords yesterday.

Lord Wolverton of the Board of Trade, said it was a duty to find simple English words, instead of kilometre designation.

Lord Rosebery believed the adoption of the system would do more to benefit traders than all the fiscal remedies.

TOLD IN A FEW LINES.

A freight locomotive blew up near Kene, Pa., instantly killing the engineer and fireman.

The entire Third U. S. Regiment of Infantry is ordered to the Isthmus of Panama at the earliest possible moment.

Wm. Thornbury, one of the most accomplished mathematicians in the country, committed suicide at Brooklyn by asphyxiation.

The people living in the vicinity of Socorro, New Mexico, are becoming alarmed at the frequent recurrence of earthquake shocks.

Jerry Dugan, a section hand at Terra Haute, cut the throats of a widow and her two small children and surrendered to the police.

The suppression of instruction in France by religious orders will mean an expense of $12,000,000 for new schools and $1,300,000 annually for teachers.

Chief Leamon of the Glace Bay, N. S., fire department, was badly injured by a falling wall in a fire that did $8,000 damage to Thompson & Co.'s warehouse.

Mme. Eleonora Petrelli, once a world-renowned opera singer and widow of Prince Von Ptroff of Russia, has died in an obscure hotel in Chicago, alone and in want.

Convention Against Canadians.

Helena, Montana, Feb. 24.—A convention of Milk River Valley residents at Chinook has addressed a resolution to President Roosevelt and the Secretary of the Interior, calling their attention to the fact that the Canadians are building a great canal with a view to diverting the waters of the Milk River in Norther Montan. The President is urged to act promptly.

Free Passenger Seaked.

Washington, Feb. 24.—The question as to whether a passenger on a train riding on a free pass, who loses his life on account of an act of carelessness on the part of the railroad company stands on the same footing as a passenger who pays his fare, yesterday was decided by the United States Supreme Court against the free passenger.

Farmer Broke His Neck.

Galt, Feb. 24.—Abner Humphrey, a farmer, about 50 years of age, who lives near Sheffield, in Beverly township, while teaming a load of food to Galt Monday was walking beside the load when it upset, owing to the very uneven condition of the roads, and fell on Humphrey, breaking his neck.

Prince Ibraham Injured.

Cairo, Egypt, Feb. 24.—In an automobile accident on the road to the pyramids, which occurred yesterday, Prince Ibraham, nephew of the Sultan of Turkey, and two women, who were riding with him, were seriously injured. The chauffeur was mortally wounded and an Arab was killed.

Slavery, Says John Burns.

London, Feb. 24.—John Burns, M. P., speaking at Birmingham on the question of Asiatic labor in Africa, said that the men who had made Lord Milner their catspaw desired to introduce slavery under the folds of the Union Jack.

Digestive System is Deranged.

At This Season of the Year—High Living and Little Exercise Bring On Dyspepsia and Other Troubles.

Disorders of the digestive system are not uncommon at this season of the year.

In cold weather there is a danger of overeating and a tendency towards the excessive use of highly seasoned food and stimulants.

The result is much suffering from indigestion, liver and kidney derangements and constipation.

If people could only understand how promptly and effectively such disorders are overcome by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, this great family medicine would be even more popular than it is to-day.

Unlike any other medicine these pills have direct and combined action on kidneys, liver and bowels, and for this reason reach and cure the most complicated ailments.

Dyspepsia and billiousness, liver complaint and kidney trouble, stomach troubles and constipation, backache and headache disappear in wonderfully short time when Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are used.

By assisting the kidneys in eliminating the poisonous waste matter, by helping the liver to filter the bile from the blood, by regulating the bowels Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver pills prevent and cure the most painful and fatal diseases known to man.

Mrs. Owen Cummings, Deseronto, Ont., states:—"I was in very poor health when I began to use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I had been a great sufferer from constipation and stomach trouble and was weak and run down in strength. I was gradually growing worse every day and finally decided that I would have to do something. Hearing of many being cured by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, I began using them and soon noticed a marked change for the better. I continued this treatment until I was cured of constipation and my stomach was restored to a healthy condition. It only took about three boxes of pills to entirely cure me."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

Asked to Meet in Toronto.

Ottawa, Feb. 25.—The Railway Commission has been asked to meet in Toronto on March 2, by the Dominion Grange, the Dominion Cattle Breeders' Association, the International Shippers' Association and the Live Stock Breeders' Association, to hear complaints regarding freight rates and service.

63 Accused Prisoners.

Kishineff, Russia, Feb. 25.—The proceedings yesterday in the second trial of persons connected with the massacres here were devoted to hearing the charges against the prisoners accused of the murder of the Jewess, Koza. There are 63 accused persons. The trial is expected to conclude Feb. 26.

CROWN EVIDENCE IS IN

Kennedy May Escape Hangman Though Case Seems Strong.

Evidence Against the Man Accused of Slaying Little Irene Cole Is Almost Wholly Circumstantial and the Public Is Divided As to Guilt—Defense Will Rely Upon Partial Alibi to Secure Acquittal.

Brantford, Feb. 25.—The Crown's case against Joseph Kennedy, charged with having outraged and murdered little Irene Cole last fall, was practically closed last night. Two days were consumed and some thirty witnesses have been examined. To-day the defence will begin the introduction of about the same number of witnesses. The prisoner hopes to escape by a partial alibi and the casting of suspicion upon the two tramps—Leonard and Jennings—who were in "The Willows" where the victim's body was found about the time the appalling crime was committed.

Strong Case Presented.

A strong case has been presented against the accused, but almost wholly circumstantial. Sentiment is divided as to the man's guilt, and probability of conviction. Mystery attaches to some phases of the case, and this veil may prove too strong to permit the return of a verdict that would mean death. The very enormity of the offence charged, therefore, may prove the salvation of the accused. If Joseph Kennedy is not guilty the tragedy in the Brantford willows will go down in criminal history as on a parallel with that which involved little Glory Whalen at Collingwood, a year ago. It is scarcely possible that the police will look for the murderer if Kennedy is discharged.

GREAT INCREASE.

British Exports to Canada Have Made Wonderful Strides.

London, Feb. 25.—(C.A.P.)—Replying to Sir Frederick Milner, Gerald Balfour in the House of Commons, said that British exports to Canada from the time of the rebate in 1898 had risen from £583,800 to £1,105,011, in 1903.

Wait a Little While.

London, Feb. 25.—(C.A.P.)—In the House of Commons, replying to Sir John Colomb, Gerald Balfour said that the war in the Far East had been in progress too short a time to ascertain its effects on British or colonial commerce.

Winston Churchill said he would oppose Sir Edgar Vincent at the general elections with the Liberal support.

Miners Oppose Unnatural Law.

London, Feb. 25.—(C. A. P.)—The executive of the Bristol Miners' Association declines to supply the information asked by the Tariff Commission, stating they were not prepared to lend themselves to the passing of laws which are unnatural and ruinous to the commerce of the country.

Argyle's Irish Opera.

London, Feb. 25.—(C. A. P.)—The Duke of Argyle's opera "Connal and Breast of Light," is expected in the autumn. It will be a three-act story laid in Tara centuries before the English invasion.

LOCKING UP THE STOCK.

Grand Trunk Want Terms of Railway Contract Modified.

Ottawa, Feb. 25.—(Globe Special.)—It is learned that one of the points of the Grand Trunk Pacific agreement with the Government of which modification is sought is in reference to the $25,000,000 of common stock to be held by the Grand Trunk. The agreement as worded would prevent money being raised on any part of this stock. It would be locked up in the company's vaults, but could not be hypothecated. It is not improbable that some modification of the agreement may have been consented to, in order to allow the Grand Trunk to pledge some part of the stock as security for money advanced.

Committed For Trial.

London, Feb. 25.—Harry Burdell, alias "Texas," appeared before the magistrate yesterday, charged with burglary, and was committed for trial at the spring assizes.

A defective electric wire is said to have been the cause of a $50,000 fire in the Menzie window shade factory, Pacific avenue, Toronto, Wednesday afternoon.

Budget Debate Delayed Till Late in the Day Thereby.

Dr. Jessop's Natural Gas Resolution and Dr. Beattie Nesbitt's Two-Cent-a-Mile on Railways Motion, Stand Till Budget Debate Is Finished—Mr. Hoyle's Bill to Remedy Over Capitalization of Joint Stock Companies Defeated.

Toronto, Feb. 25.—The whole afternoon was taken up in the Legislature yesterday with routine matters, and the debate on the budget was not reached till the evening sitting.

Dr. Jessop's motion, that a memorial be presented to the Dominion Government praying that the export of natural gas to the United States be prohibited, and Dr. Nesbitt's, declaring against the granting of aid to railways except on the express condition that the passenger rate upon such road shall not exceed two cents a mile, were allowed to stand until after the debate on the budget.

Dr. Routledge gave the House a description of the operation of docking a horse's tail, while asking that his bill to prohibit the practice be given a second reading.

The bill goes to the Agriculture Committee.

Mr. McKay's bill giving an officer of the law power to take a pedlar before a magistrate, if the pedlar cannot produce his license on the spot, was read a second time.

Several municipal act amendments, proposed by Messrs. Brown, Rickard, Preston, Beck and Fox, were referred to the Municipal Committee.

Col. Matheson again asked when the Temiskaming accounts would be submitted, and Mr. Latchford said they would be ready during the present week.

To Prevent Over Capitalization.

Mr. Hoyle introduced a bill to amend the Ontario Companies' Act by calling on joint stock companies to furnish full information in their prospectuses for the guidance of prospective investors. Mr. Hoyle explained that his object was to prevent over capitalization and watering of stocks. The present bill did not give the protection to the investing public that it should. His bill proposed to legalize the payment of commissions to promoters of joint stock companies, but these payments must be defined in the prospectuses. He had practically made a transcript of the sections of the Imperial Act that apply to the conditions complained of. The Imperial bill had given general satisfaction after a trial of three years.

Would Not Fit in Act.

The Attorney-General, replying, said the object of Mr. Hoyle was meritorious, but the amendment proposed was entirely inconsistent with the Ontario Companies' Act. While Mr. Hoyle was not a lawyer he was a pretty good substitute for one, and had done his share of law reforming on the other side; but he would point out that the present act was designed to protect the investing public in the direction of the proposed amendment. While he was in favor of affording every protection the amendment of Mr. Hoyle would not do at all. He suggested the appointment of a Local Government Board, the same as they have in England, to pass upon every application of joint stock companies. It could assist municipalities in insisting on the carrying out of agreements made between municipalities and these companies. It would be well worth while for the House to consider such a proposition.

Provides For Redress.

Mr. Hoyle said the present act provided for redress if any misrepresentation is made in the prospectus of a company, but it did not provide for any omissions.

Hon. Mr. Stratton said very often men who subscribe for stock did not see the information contained in the charter, but took the word of enthusiastic promoters. It was impossible to make enactments that would entirely protect the unsuspecting public. Under our act, where misleading prospectuses are issued, the directors are made personally liable.

The bill was lot on a division.

The debate on the budget was continued by Mr. Clark (East Northumberland), and Mr. Macdiarmid.

Election of County Councils.

A deputation representing 23 county councils waited on the Government yesterday morning and opposed the proposal to return to the old method of electing county councils.

Future Greatness of Canada.

Toronto, Feb. 25.—At last night's monthly banquet of the Canadian Club the guests of the evening were Sir Sandford Fleming and W. F. Maclean, M.P. There was a large attendance of members who displayed a keen and appreciative interest throughout the addresses which were delivered by the speakers respectively on "Build up Canada" and on "Canada and the Canadian Sea."

Another Brakeman Killed.

Strathroy, Feb. 25.—B. H. Mudge, G.T.R. brakeman, fell off the top of a car yesterday, was caught by the wheels and dragged 200 yards. When the train was stopped he was dead. He was 25 and lived at Sarnia.

COLONIAL AID TO THE NAVY.

Australia has a smaller population and less resources than Canada, yet she contributes £195,610 towards the maintenance of the British navy, in addition to maintaining a training ship in her own harbors.

Australia's contribution towards the maintenance of the auxiliary squadron in Federal waters is, under the new agreement, which came into force on the 28th of August last, made up as follows:

New South Wales	£87,685
Victoria	42,400
Queensland	18,088
South Australia	22,892
Western Australia	13,464
Tasmania	11,061
Total	£195,610

New Zealand also contributes. What does Canada contribute towards the protection of her own commercial fleet? Nothing! Nor will the Laurier combination ever contribute a cent until forced to do so by public opinion. Their action in this matter is on the same line as that pursued in the sending of men to aid in the suppression of the Boers in South Africa. Public pressure alone compelled an unwilling Premier to act. Yet he and his colleagues now claim all the glory attached to the valor and achievements of the Canadian volunteers during that war.

Such is Canadian Grit-Rouge politics.

Kingston tailors, according to the Whig, say the corset for men has come to stay in that town. Oh! the dear little Willie Boys.

An exchange says: "Premier Roblin, of Manitoba, has returned to Toronto, en route home, after a visit to his father in Prince Edward County. This successful politician cleared $40,000 last week through purchases of wheat before the war raise.

A deputation from the different County Councils of the province waited on the Ontario Government yesterday in regard to the proposed changes in the make-up of County Councils, and it would appear, judging by the Premier's remarks, that he realizes there are some defects in the Bill, which, though passed, has not yet become operative. It is probable that a satisfactory arrangement will be arrived at.

They have had an unusually severe winter in New York, too, which has cost the city something like $12,000,000 more than usual for fuel, food, snow removal, charity and other expenses incident to the season. Disease and death have added immensely to the cost in other ways.

The question of taxation is always an interesting subject. The idea seems to have somehow got abroad among our citizens that Belleville has an abnormally high tax rate, whereas, in comparison with most cities in Ontario, we get off very light, indeed. From the Ontario Government there has arrived an interesting report, showing the rate of taxation and tax per head for the cities of Ontario during the year 1902. It should make "good readin'" for our citizens, and shows that, either as to the rate or amount of taxation per head we are not nearly so badly off as the people of many other places:

The retirement of Lieut.-Col. Harrison, of the Forty-ninth, owing to completion of term of service, marks the close of a military career of which any man might well feel proud. The men of the old Regiment will, one and all, regret to lose their energetic and popular Colonel. It is to be hoped that all succeeding commanding officers may live up to the standard set by Col. Harrison. If they do, neither the Regiment nor country will have cause to complain.

That "great" Russian victory turns out to have been the sinking of four old hulks which the Japs wanted sunk in order to block up the harbor at Port Arthur and bottle up the Russian fleet. THE MAN ON THE NEXT BLOCK THINKS

That if the Belleville Hockey Team get much more praise they will be getting "enlargiensis of the coco."

That there will be an awful run on the banks before long.

That the reason no public man in Belleville pushes the Old Boys' Reunion scheme is because he thinks some of the old girls, including his mother-in-law, might come.

That the Council seems to be suffering from a deplorably bad memory in regard to the Zwick's island water scheme.

That most of the water talk in the past turns out to have been gas.

That the girls seem to have done very little leap year business so far this year, but wait 'till June, and see how busy the preachers get.

That, when navigation opens, a close watch should be kept on the Annie Lake and Mr. O'Flynn's yacht; the Russians might come and try to seize them.

NATURE'S REMEDIES.

The Medicines That Are Used by the Backwoods Folks.

"When the bush farmer becomes afflicted with any of the numerous trifling ills which make mankind wretched," said the returned visitor from our northern country, "he does not waste much time on doctors, but goes straight to the woods or the attic for nature's own remedies. There is one old man whom I have met with pack basket on shoulder and shears and a rough board stool in his mittened hands going after yarrow, which, dried, is a standby for coughs when it has been made into a wicked looking brew. Fir balsam, coaxed drop by drop from the blisters which swell on the balsam fir at full moon, is a sovereign remedy for chest and lung complaints.

"Gravel weed, by which name they insult trailing arbutus, is excellent for the complaint which gives it its name, and bladder root has a desirable effect on the kidneys and neighboring organs. Sage tea, containing a little summer savory, is efficacious for worms in children, for which belmonia, also steeped, is also used. Sunflower seeds, steeped, strained and sweetened with molasses, will cure the whooping cough. Horseradish leaves, wilted and bound on the face and back of the neck, will drive away neuralgia, and a nutmeg, bored and tied around the neck, will keep it away. The nutmeg must be renewed about once every six weeks.

"Onions sliced, pounded and placed in a cloth and laid over the affected part will draw out inflammation. A red onion halved and with one part slightly scooped out and the cup placed over a carbuncle or a boil will speedily remove the pus and has saved life.

"There are many more of these simple remedies in the north woods pharmacopoeia which the wise ones have at their fingers' ends, and if they are not more widely used and money kept in the overalls of the thrifty natives it is because a lenient and more fortunate fate presides over the incomes of the medicos."

Samuel Smiles in His 90th Year.

Dr. Samuel Smiles is now in his ninety-second year, says The London Chronicle. Like so many authors of different varieties of talent, from Cowley to Conan Doyle, Dr. Smiles practiced medicine before he practiced his pen; and he was nearly forty-five, and complaining of being an old man, when his first book made a stir. But more than forty-five years have followed, during which he has enjoyed to the full the success of his life of Stephenson and of the work which followed it, "Self Help," of which a quarter of a million copies must now have been sold in England alone. Though Dr. Smiles' name appears on the title-page of a longish list of works, one book of his will be posthumously published. This is a volume of his memoirs, which cover a long tract of time—all the reign of Queen Victoria. Dr. Smiles knew Livingstone, whom he found an excellent story-teller; knew Gladstone and Bright; and had a correspondence with Cobden, which might be read with almost patriotic interest at the present moment. Queen Margherita of Italy won the homage of Dr. Smiles when he visited Italy about twenty years ago, and found himself a star of the first magnitude. In "self-helping" itself into unity Italy had in its mind many a modern and ancient instance of self-reliance cited by this great collector of anecdotes glorifying temporal success.

LIPTON'S

"Known quality" and "known economy" are the reasons for their popularity. No other teas in the world have such a sale as LIPTON'S TEAS

In the course of an address at Inveresk the other day, Sir Charles Dalrymple, M.P., said that he had, personally, from time to time, resented the old and almost profane remark that a Scotchman is one who keeps the Sabbath and everything else he can lay his hands upon. He was not quite sure but that he was inclined to affirm the saying. It is an excellent thing when they could see a Scotchman in these very much changed days who kept the Sabbath, and he thought a Scotchman had a perfect right to keep what he got his hands upon—if it belonged to him. (Laughter.) As Scotsmen they ought to hold together, but he sometimes thought that Scottish people were needlessly touchy. They fancied themselves attacked and fancied encroachments from England when none were intended. They had only to think of the positions held by Scotsmen in the affairs of the nation and wherever British rule extended, and in many places where British rule did not extend. Scotsmen had stamped their customs, methods and individuality on all that concerned the British Empire, and from the east and from the west, and from the north and from the south people came to Scotland, drawn to the various sacred shrines—shrines of natural beauty, of poetical memories, of literary and historical meaning. If they were not the predominant partner in point of numbers, he ventured to say that they were equally as predominant as any other in force of character, in education, in commercial activity, and in general science. There was no room for touchiness, for touchiness was foreign to greatness—touchiness was a note of smallness and was not worthy of Scotland. (Applause.)

Some Fearful Figures.

Mr. Stead, as a journalist, has an unfailing scent for the interesting contrast, the startling table of statistics, says The London Chronicle. And having noticed that one newspaper had organized a census of London's church-going population, he inaugurated his new "Daily Paper" with a census of the Sunday frequenters of the public house. Paddington is selected as a typical district; and the resultant figures will surprise many who have gone through life with eyes shut and imagining that formal Christianity has a real hold upon the lower middle classes. To put the case boldly and roughly, there are 142,600 people in Paddington. Of these 31,331 were found at church, chapel or meeting-hall, and 122,175 were found in public houses. From the fact that the men in public houses exceeded by more than twenty thousand the male residents of Paddington, we must infer that many paid more than one visit. Women in church are more than twice as numerous as men; of 81,625 there were found 28,118 visitants to licensed premises. But even these figures need not hurry us into hysterics, much as we may regret the comparative failure of the Church to attract Paddington. The public house is often the only place where friends can meet. The real sting of the tale comes with the children under fifteen years of age; for of these less than seven thousand were in church, and more than ten thousand were found entering the public house.

The Silver Bridge.

One of the customs observed at a Bohemian marriage feast is that of making the bride cross a silver bridge. The bride's father-in-law lifts her on to the table, where she walks on two rows of silver coins, at the end of which her husband stands and receives her into his arms. The silver bridge typifies the wealth with which her bridegroom hopes to smooth her path in life.

PROMOTION BY RETORT.

Apt Answers to Quaint Questions Which Pleased Suvaroff.

The great Russian soldier, Marshal Suvaroff, was in the habit of asking his men difficult questions, sometimes foolish ones, and bestowing favors on those who showed presence of mind in answering him. On one occasion a general of division sent him a sergeant with dispatches, at the same time recommending the bearer to Suvaroff's notice. The marshal, as usual, proceeded to test him by a series of whimsical questions.

"How far is it to the moon?" was the first query.

"Two of your excellency's forced marches," the soldier promptly replied.

"If your men began to give way in battle, what would you do?"

"I'd tell them that just behind the enemy's line there was a wagon load of good things to eat."

"How many fish are there in the sea?"

"Just as many as have not been caught."

And so the examination went on till Suvaroff, finding his new acquaintance armed at all points, at length put a final poser:

"What is the difference between your colonel and myself?"

"The difference is this," replied the soldier coolly. "My colonel cannot make me a captain, but your excellency can."

Suvaroff, struck by his shrewdness, kept his eye upon the man and soon afterward gave him the promotion for which he had hinted.

FROST FAIRIES.

The Wonderful Designs That Window Panes Picture.

When the frost fairies have a material ready for original design they often produce in the hours of darkness most exquisite decorations. The window panes are their drawing paper, and the window frames serve as picture frames on those particular occasions. There are said to be no less than a thousand forms of snow crystals, every one of them of the finest finish and of unimpeachable symmetry. Some are like the patterns in honiton lace, while others are elaborated with geometrical patterns so complex that it is difficult to analyze them. But on the window panes the frost pictures are by no means confined to what are "standard patterns" in snowflakes, but show the most various and dainty schemes of ornament. Some are like starry flowers, set with stars in the center and with starry shoots and comets flying into space around them. Others take the shape of leaves arranged in set form by some human designers. The endive pattern is among the most beautiful, the curves and "motive" being often scarcely distinguishable from those in which a goldsmith of the days of Louis XV. modeled the ormolu in which he graced some priceless vase of jasper or crystal. Scale patterns, like the scales of fishes, with striated lines upon the overlapping disks, wavy patterns, set with stars, fern patterns, moss patterns and formalized sprays of maidenhair are among the choicest on the list.—London Spectator.

Americans on Guard.

There is no record that any such order as "Put none but Americans on guard" was issued by Washington. Those who quote it do not know when it was supposed to have been issued. But it is a fact that on April 30, 1777, in an order issued at Morristown, N. J., for reorganizing the improperly called "Washington's bodyguard" he did say that he thought that men having an interest in the country would be less likely to prove traitors than foreigners. The order continued, "You will, therefore, send me none but Americans." Washington directed that this preference for Americans should not be made known, as he feared it might excite the many foreigners in the army.—Exchange.

How a Miser Selected an Heir.

As like affects like, so it is with misers, and gold will go where gold is. This is strikingly illustrated by the act of a celebrated Greek, one Dichoeus Dichoems, a descendant of the Byzantine emperors. This man, by the exercise of extreme niggardliness, managed to amass the sum of $50,000, an immense fortune in those days. Then came the question to whom should he leave it. One day a distant relative sent him a letter written upon a square inch of paper. This was sufficient. In the fitness of things the parsimonious correspondent became the miser's heir.

Unnecessary.

Cholly—A fellow told me today that I didn't know enough to go in when it rained. Miss Sharp—And what did you say? Cholly—I assuhed him it was quite unnecessary, doncher know, because I nevah go out when it rains.

Expensive.

Father—Yes, I admit my daughter will have a good dowry, but she has very expensive tastes. Lover—You amaze me. What does she ever want that is so very expensive? Father—Well, you for one thing.

Controlling Herself.

She—I want you to select the ring, dear. He—But I thought you wanted to. She—I did. But I'm afraid we can't afford it.

Conclusive.

She—What makes you think his advice is good? He—Because he never gives it unless it's asked for.

There are but three classes of men—the retrogade, the stationary and the progressive.—Lavater.

THE NAME MARY.

At One Time It Was Practically a Bar to Matrimony.

Mary as a Christian name was held in very singular veneration during the mediæval ages, and in some parts of Europe there existed a superstitious reluctance among men to marrying any one who chanced to have been so christened, or the bride elect was at least required to change this name for some other of less sanctity.

All Marys were at one time believed to be invested with extraordinary powers in connection with the affairs of life. Bearing the same name as the Blessed Virgin, they were considered worthy of more than common consideration, and their personal influence over their husbands especially was unusual; hence many men sought authoritative ordinances forbidding their wives to be known as Mary. Sovereigns, in some cases, dreading subjection to their partners, showed a marked distaste for Marys.

Thus Alfonso IV. of Castile, when on the point of wedding a Moorish maiden, made it a condition of the marriage that at her baptism, as a recent convert to Christianity, she should not take this name. In the articles settled for the union of Ladislas of Poland with Marie de Nevers there was a clause which bound this princess to change her name to Aloysa. Casimir I. of Poland, who married Mary, daughter of the Duke of Russia, required of her a similar sacrifice to popular sentiment.

RATS KNEW CAT WAS ABOUT

They Never Saw Puss and Were on Another Floor of House.

"I have observed recently a rather curious thing with respect to the relationship between cats and rats, and it has led to a rather interesting reflection," said a man who takes much interest in animal life. "For awhile the rats overran my place. At night there was no such thing as quiet around the house. They would scamper across the floor, bump up and down the steps and cut all kinds of capers. We secured a cat, and from the very time the cat appeared on the place the rats began to get scarce.

"There is nothing curious about this fact in itself. But to my personal knowledge the rats have never seen the cat. The cat has remained on one floor and the rats on another. There has been no chasing and no conflict between them. Now, I want to know how the rats know the cat is on the place.

"The inquiry has caused me to indulge the more interesting reflection, How far can a rat detect the presence of a cat by the sense of smell? Evidently at considerable distance. Else the rats at my place would not have known of the cat's presence under the circumstances. I'm quite sure that they have never seen the cat. But they know he is there just the same, and they have been awfully cautious since his arrival."

Dangerous Fishing.

Some years ago the New London sloop yacht Redhot, while cruising off Marthas Vineyard for swordfish, was struck by a wounded fish and so badly injured that she sank. The fish had pierced the bottom with his sword and in his blind attack had butted his head so hard against her timbers that they were shattered.

Actually not one of the fifty or sixty vessels that cruise for swordfish has a record of complete immunity. One craft was struck and rammed by swordfish twenty times in one cruise. Luckily none of the attacks was delivered under such circumstances that the fish succeeded in piercing her hull entirely, but the vessel was injured so badly that she needed a thorough overhauling after she made port.

The Earl of Leicester.

The Earl of Leicester on Jan. 2 attained the age of 81 years. The story of his life affords a fascinating study to those who are interested in agelinks. His father, the first Earl, was born 149 years ago. In the interval the British throne has been occupied by six monarchs, including King Edward. The grandson of the fourth Duke of Marlborough, Lord Leicester has seen that title change hands four times. Between the first marriage of his father and his own second marriage exactly 100 years, less three months, elapsed.

The first Earl married at the age of twenty-one; the present Earl married, for the second time, in 1875. The fact is so remarkable that when it was mentioned to Queen Victoria some years ago, she could not believe it until she had seen documentary evidence in proof. The late Earl was eighty-eight when he died; there seems every likelihood of his successor eclipsing his record. He lives a simple, healthy life, gets about his estate like a youth, eats his lunch of bread and cheese and onions seated beneath a hedge, and himself supervises the wonderful game preserves which make Holkham famous.

Ontario's Population.

The municipal section of the report of the Bureau of Industries has been published. It shows that during the year 1902 the population of Ontario was 2,037,267, an increase of 8,378 over 1901. The total assessment of the province is $859,943,263, an increase of $24,245,656 over the previous year. The taxes imposed for all purposes last year were $14,146,731, being an average of 16.5 mills on the dollar and $6.94 per head.

In 1901 the total taxes were $13,341,355, or $6.58 per head, making an increase for 1902 of $805,876.

The debenture debt, so far as obtainable, is $50,496,650, or $29.29 per head. The floating debt is $7,223,901, and the interest paid on loans and debentures was $2,709,554, or more than 20 per cent. of the taxes levied.

THE ROOT AND THE FRUIT

Bu-Ju is not a remedy for symptoms. It is a cure for disease. Disordered Kidneys will produce many troubles, among which may be mentioned Rheumatism. Sick kidneys cannot properly perform their functions; hence the system is flooded with uric acid and rheumatism in its various forms is the result. Bu-Ju cures rheumatism, because it cures the cause of rheumatism, Disordered Kidneys; for same reason it cures dropsy, blood poison, weak heart, loss of ambition, sleeplessness, brain fag, failing memory irritable temper, sallow complexion, bad breath, lame back, and a hundred and one ailments that spring from disordered kidneys, which is the root of the evil. You may pluck the leaves of a rank weed, or cut its stem, but so long as you leave the root it bears new fruit and spreads until its extermination is almost impossible. If you are suffering from any of the above troubles you cannot afford to neglect them. Neglect means misery, for what joy is there in living without good health? Bu-Ju, the Kidney Pill, has restored thousands and it can do the same for you.

The Claflin Chemical Co., Windsor, Ont.

Dear Sirs:—I have used a box of Bu-Ju Pills and have been greatly benefited by them. I was troubled with piles for years and tried several kinds of medicine, without getting any relief, but I have had no trouble with them since I took the third box of Bu-Ju. I still take them whenever I can get them and I recommend them to all my friends. Yours sincerely,

A Crushed Genius.

"So Josh didn't hold his position very long?"

"No," answered Mrs. Corntossel. "But it wasn't the boy's fault. It wasn't six weeks before he knew so much more about how to run the business than the man who owned it that they got jealous and discharged him."

How to Grow Ugly.

The natives of the upper Zambezi have a most disfiguring habit of removing the upper front teeth at the ages of from ten to twelve years. The only reason for following such an absurd and barbarous practice is that by so doing they imitate their oxen, which they look upon as sacred, and also are unlike the zebra, or quagga, which they view in a less favorable light, hating them with an intensity based on some hereditary tradition. The women pierce their upper lip to insert a stud or a small piece of ivory, which as they grow older is increased in size. They smear their hair with ocher and clay, training it out in numerous pigtails about two inches long. These are encouraged and lubricated by the fat of oxen, which is especially favored if rancid. In fact, they lose no conceivable opportunity of making themselves grotesque and hideous as possible.—Golden Penny.

New Use of Steam.

A revolution in the use of steam power is at hand—that is, if the hopes of Mr. Peter Thornley, a Burton-on-Trent engineer, are realized. Mr. Thornley has just completed a working model of a motor almost small enough to be carried in a typewriter case, which is said to be capable of developing 1,500 revolutions a minute and giving 15 horsepower, and it is claimed that the development of his invention may result in express railway engines running at twice the present speed at only half the cost, and in liners crossing the Atlantic in three days. All this apparently is to be accomplished by greater economy in the use of steam. A ton of coal, says Mr. Thornley, will produce as much power with his engine as eight tons with existing types. It sounds so remarkable that the expert tests announced as shortly to be made will be awaited with interest.

Eye Strain is Nerve Strain

Seamstress and Stenographer, Sewing Girl and Student Suffer Alike From This Trouble.

The eye is a complicated mechanism made up of a regular network of the most delicate nerve fibres.

When an unusual amount of work is required of the eye or when the eye is kept constantly at high tension nerve force is consumed at a tremendous rate and unless the system is strong and supported by an abundance of rich, red blood there follows physical collapse.

What hosts of pale and emaciated girls are found in our offices and factories, schools and workshops and what a large proportion of them are wearing glasses.

Their health and sight cannot possibly be improved except by a building up of the nervous system, and this can best be accomplished by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Whether you have strained your eyes and undermind your nervous system by needle work, office work or study, you will be benefitted by a month's treatment with this great food cure.

As your form rounds out and your eye sight improves, and your vitality returns, you will be forever grateful that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food ever became known to you.

You cannot afford to delay the use of this great nerve restorative, for every dose is bound to be of benefit to you.

Miss M. Bone, 29 Alexander St., Belleville, Ont., states:—"For some time past I have been troubled with nervousness, which was probably due to close confinement at school and as a result of the nerves being affected I was often quite dizzy. After having taken a course of treatment with Dr. Chase's Nerve food I can say that I am completely restored to health. This preparation seemed to have an upbuilding effect on my system and I am no longer bothered with dizzy spells."

A NERVOUS WAIT.

Weird Sensation When the Church Became Totally Dark.

"I went to a Fifth avenue church last Sunday night," said a man who is good once a week, "and quite unexpectedly got a new sensation. The church was brilliantly lighted, but something went wrong with the electrical apparatus, and all of a sudden most of the lights went out. Midway in the building two or three bunches of bulbs continued to shed a sepulchral twilight, but the pulpit was shrouded in darkness, and nervous members of the congregation began to fidget.

"This condition of affairs lasted for some minutes until the choir had finished an anthem. Then the preacher arose and requested the people to remain quietly seated for half a minute in total darkness, when the church would be fully illuminated again. With the words the few remaining lights went out, and for a space darkness like that of a coal hole prevailed.

"It was the weirdest, most uncanny wait I ever had. Every man and woman of the 800 or 1,000 in that church was as still as death almost. I suppose the darkness did not last a minute, but it seemed to me to be an hour. When the lights again leaped out there was a sigh of relief from every person in the church. I guess they all felt as queer about it as I did."

HORSEHAIR FOR BOWS.

Only Black or White From Russia or Germany Is Used.

There is a vast amount of horsehair annually used in the United States for making and repairing violin, violoncello and bass viol bows. All of the hair comes from Germany and Russia, in which countries the tails of horses are generally allowed to grow much longer than here. The foreign hair is also coarser in texture and tougher than that which grows on the American horse, and these qualities make the imported article more valuable than the domestic product.

There are only two kinds of horsehair suitable for making bows, and they are of white and black varieties. The former is used for violin bows, and the latter, which is heavier and stronger, is the best material for making bows for cello and bass viols, because it bites the larger strings better. The imported hair is put up in hanks of thirty-six inches long, which is five or six inches longer than the standard violin bow. A hank is sufficient for one violin bow, while two hanks are required to hair a cello or bass viol bow. There are about one and a half ounces of hair in a hank, which is worth from 20 to 30 cents, according to the quality of the hair.

THE ART OF BOXING.

Fistic Combats Were Highly Esteemed In Ancient Times.

Pugilism, the practice of boxing or fighting with the fists, was a manly art and exercise highly esteemed among the ancients. In those days the hands of the pugilist were armed with the cestus, leather thongs loaded with lead or iron. This form of athletic sport was at first only permitted to freemen among the Greeks, but gradually it was taken up as a profession and lost much of its prestige.

As an illustration of its early use we find in Virgil's fifth Æneid the record of a match between Dares, "with nimble feet and confident in youth," and Entellus, the veteran champion, "strong and weighty limbed," when the combatants—

Their arms uplift in air, their heads withdraw
Back from the blows, and, mingling hand with hand,
Provoke the conflict.

Pugilism has been a typical English sport from the days of King Alfred, but its golden age as a profession dates from the accession of the house of Hanover.—London Standard.

Living and Working.

Those who work without really living are much more numerous, including, as they do, billionaires and seamstresses with more than six small children.

Phil May's Habits.

The all night and next day habits of Phil May, the artist, have furnished material for many a story. Joe Tapley, the singer, said that he came across May one night and heard that the latter had not been to bed for four nights and days. He remonstrated, and May said: "Never mind, Joe; we'll make a bargain. Don't you lose any sleep on my account, and I promise that as soon as I feel tired I'll go to bed!"

The Boston Girl.

"Will you marry me?" he asked bluntly.

"No," replied the Boston maiden. But she added coyly: "I am not endowed with sacerdotal power. Put your question properly. Ask me if I will become your wife."

added a certain recklessness to my spirit. And, as my uncle had said, hitherto we had scarcely tried to throw our enemies off the scent, hoping they would commit some overt act which would bring us face to face. But in that we failed to realize our hopes. They had wisdom and patience.

He looked at me to see how I took his words and, perceiving an encouraging sign, continued:

"Believe me, Davie, the time has come for us to strike out."

We talked, I should think, for nearly an hour, during which we assiduously plodded through our second cigar. Upon one point we were resolved, we must leave London, and secretly. But how? There we stopped in spite of a score of ingenious plans. In fact, we stopped at the very beginning of them, for it was there we experienced the insuperable difficulty. How were we to elude the vigilance of the society?

CHAPTER XVII.

HOW WE LEFT LONDON.

We left the restaurant, and, having nothing else to do, like so many more unfortunate fellows about town, we wended our way eastward to Leicester square and entered the gaudy temple of pleasure where I had first met Mr. Wentworth. Here, shortly after our arrival, we encountered a rather highly placed official, the same gentleman with whom my uncle had formerly discussed the probabilities of a certain theatrical venture. That the incident had not been forgotten I very quickly learned, for the individual in question at once invited us to his private sanctum, mentioning by the way that the affair had taken sundry new developments.

Of that conversation and those developments I have nothing to say, as they don't concern us, but that chance meeting with the manager and our introduction to his sanctum gave us the very idea for which we had so racked our brains.

On a table facing us lay several properties in the shape of wigs for men and women and sundry other accessories of the stage. The manager, whose generosity was never in doubt, after maintaining a brisk conversation with my uncle for some five minutes or so, was suddenly called away, and Jim and I were left with nothing more to do than inspect the portraits of the pretty women which were scattered so profusely about the room. I frankly admit that I found the gallery of celebrities somewhat interesting, but not so my uncle. He had gone over to the table the better to inspect the wigs, and presently an ejaculation of his wheeled me round.

He was standing, looking my way, a curious smile playing about his mouth and brightening his eyes. In his hand he dangled that which I at first took to be a wig, but which upon a closer scrutiny proved to be a false beard and mustache.

"Davie, what do you think of this?"

He put the question almost gloatingly, a humor I failed to comprehend. What did I think of it? Why, what could anybody think of it but what it was obviously intended for?

"Can you guess its use?"

"I think so."

It seemed to me that this required no prodigious strain on the intellect.

"Then what do you think of the idea?"

I confess his mysterious language puzzled me, and no doubt my face reflected somewhat the state of my mind, for, as if reading my thoughts, he immediately fixed the beard on his face, and, lo! a perfect stranger stood before me.

"Wonderful!" I said. "What a transformation!"

"Yes," he replied. "I believe it will puzzle even our friends."

His meaning was no longer obscure. I grasped the idea with avidity.

"Excellent. I should never know you. Lend it to me."

I took the beard from him and, adjusting it to my face, which at that period was entirely clean shaved, looked at myself in a mirror. The change was startling in the extreme. A man of about 40 stared at me from the glass. Even the eyes were those of a stranger.

"Admirable!" cried my uncle. "I should pass you by in the street. We must try the effect of this upon our friend Wooching."

But as I laid the disguise aside I still saw many dangers abroad. It was one thing to adorn ourselves here in the privacy of the manager's room, but it was quite another to set out secretly from Dover street. This I was not slow to mention, and for the moment it staggered Jim, and something like a desperate look of hopelessness racked his face. But presently his brows contracted, and he threw back his head, a habit of his when acting upon a sudden resolve.

"We must go back to Dover street."

He saw my look of amazement and continued:

"To go back, I take it, would be a supreme act of folly. There would then be not the slightest hope of escaping the watchers. The present affords the very opportunity we require. My dear Davie, after all we are not without some luck."

"Explain."

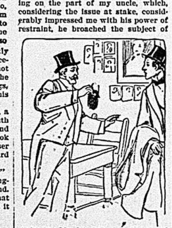
"We will borrow these disguises from our esteemed friend the manager, who at the present moment for certain reasons of his own is inclined to be exceedingly friendly, make our way out through the stage door and take the night mail to Paris."

"A pretty idea. But what about preparations for the trip?"

"This is no time for preparations. I have enough money on me to take us over. Once there I shall communicate with my bankers. What do you think of the plan?"

I thought it excellent, though I had some doubt as to its efficacy. However, that was in the hands of chance, and I was fast reaching that state of helplessness which reposes increased confidence in the powers of Providence.

Soon after this the manager returned full of the most profuse apologies for the length of his absence, an absence, by the way, which had not been quite so dreary to us as he seemed to imagine. Then, after some skillful fencing on the part of my uncle, which, considering the issue at stake, considerably impressed me with his power of restraint, he broached the subject of the disguises, and, as he had foreseen, the manager was only too willing to prove his good will.



In his hand he dangled a false beard and mustache.

"But there is something more," quoth Jim, looking mighty knowing, I thought. "We want to disguise ourselves here and go out through your stage door."

"Why, certainly," was the reply. Then, with a smile, "You haven't been doing anything, eh?"

"Nothing very bad, believe me. But we are going somewhere, and we want to surprise somebody. You shall have the properties back in a day or two without fail."

"Covent Garden, my dear old boy?" he added familiarly, with a chuckle. "Don't hurry yourself in the least. I hope we shan't want them for the next three months."

Thanks to his aid, the beards were satisfactorily adjusted, and he, experienced hand as he was, expressed himself delighted with the transformation. He then led us on to the stage, past many highly interesting females in gaudy costumes who were huddled in groups at the wings, and presently we emerged into the comparative gloom of a side street. This we traversed swiftly and a little further on hailed a passing cab, into which we sprang, directing the driver toward a well known house in the Strand.

"So far so good," said my uncle, throwing himself back with a sigh of relief as the hansom dashed off. "I think we have managed it all right this time."

I thought so, too, for though I had carefully scrutinized the street into which the stage door led I had seen absolutely nothing of a suspicious nature. That he had not his words proclaimed.

In the back parlor of a bar off the Strand we made our arrangements. First a time table was called for, and after discovering the hour of departure Jim added a £5 note to my little store with which I was to purchase my own ticket, for even yet we were not sure that our enemies would not be on the watch. Then we went out separately, enjoining each other not to leave the crowded thoroughfare upon any pretense whatever.

I lit a cigar and strolled up one side of the Strand and then down the other, my thoughts full of our projected flight. A strange adventure was this, and we were setting out upon it most strangely, clad as we were in evening dress and top hats. Fortunately the evening being a bit chilly we had worn our heavier overcoats. Without these I don't know how it would have been possible to undertake the trip at all.

In due time I presented myself at the booking office and bought my ticket. No sign was there of Jim on the station, but this did not alarm me much. I, however, looked closer for the appearance of some one else, but nothing suspicious was encountered until I made my way to the barricade. Then a man with a heavy fair mustache passed close to me and looked at me in a way that savored somewhat of scrutiny, but I passed on apparently oblivious of his presence, and soon the barrier, with its ticket punching dragon, was between us.

For the moment I had an inward fear that the society was after us. Then the knowledge that the departure, as the arrival, of all foreign trains is watched by the plain clothes police somewhat reassured me. I tried to hope that my gentleman was from Scotland Yard. If so, Wooching and his confederates would have greater reason than I to be afraid of him.

I walked slowly up the platform, peering into every carriage as I went along, but discovered no trace of my uncle. However, on my return, snugly ensconced in the far corner of a first class smoker reading a paper, a cap pulled well down over his eyes, was my estimable relative. A warning glance from him was all I received, though there was no one else in the carriage. I understood and sat myself in the corner farthest from him, a position which commanded a view of the approach to the train.

As the time of departure drew very near I hoped fervently that no one else would attempt to enter our carriage, but almost at the last minute an old gentleman with a superabundance of beard and hair came to the door and peered in. As, however, my esteemed relative greeted him with a cloud of smoke he stepped back quickly, muttered something about "smoking carriage" and passed farther up the platform. Almost immediately after we slid out of the station.

Well, we duly arrived in Paris without mishap, from whence my uncle wrote to his lawyer and also to his bankers, the latter of whom in course of time freely supplied us with the requisite funds, from which we purchased an outfit and then set off toward Italy, for we had decided, now that we were launched upon this expedition, to go right through with it and trust Providence to bring Kung to book. How it was going to happen heaven alone could tell. Sometimes I felt that we were like blind leaders of the blind and that we should stumble grossly, perhaps fatally. But something had to be done, and after all the thought of the uncertainty of the fate which awaited us out in China was not so intolerable as that certainty which awaited us at home.

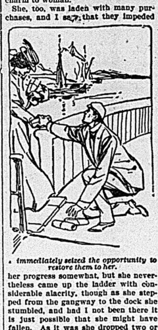
We decided to enter China by the roundabout way of Australia, and with that end in view hastened on to Naples, intending to join the ship there. Of the wisdom of this course I have no apology to offer, since we undertook it, but truth to tell I don't think either of us was in a dreadful hurry to encounter the redoubtable Kung. And then we had an idea that he would hardly look for us by the longest route, even if Wooching informed him of our flight, and it was still more probable that he would credit us with too much common sense and too wholesome a fear of the society to be guilty of such an apparent piece of madness. At least, so we argued from our hopes. There was absolutely no other foundation to go upon. I frankly admit that the thought of the enterprise did not stir me with any great enthusiasm. I had not a tithe of my uncle's deep rooted hatred. However, it was to come later, but from a different cause.

From an English newspaper purchased in Paris we learned the date of the departure from London of the steamer Omeo and accordingly so arranged matters that we arrived in Naples the day before her arrival at that port. We had now assumed fictitious names and traveled as friends. I was Mr. Frederick Gray, and my uncle was Mr. George Carter, we thinking it better to take ordinary common names than any which were high sounding or unfamiliar. Moreover, my father had accustomed me somewhat to this mode of procedure, so that I dashed off my signature in the hotel register without the slightest compunction.

An hour or so before noon of the following morning the ship duly arrived, and early in the afternoon we went off to her. At that time most of the passengers were ashore sightseeing, a few children and several old ladies being the only people about the decks. We accordingly sought out our cabin, a small one, which, by paying a trifle more than the ordinary fare, we secured to ourselves. Here ensconced we unpacked and generally made things shipshape. Then we went up on deck to smoke.

Watching the people arrive, many of whom were loaded with worthless purchases which were destined to adorn the walls of some far off antipodean home as a memento of "our visit to Naples," suddenly it became if anything more interesting, for from one of the boats a girl mounted the gangway, and her beauty, which her dark costume accentuated, seemed of that pensive melancholy type which in the opinion of some men adds an ineffable charm to woman.

She, too, was laden with many purchases, and I saw that they impeded her progress somewhat, but she nevertheless came up the ladder with considerable alacrity, though as she stepped from the gangway to the dock she stumbled, and had I not been there it is just possible that she might have fallen. As it was she dropped two or three of the parcels.



I immediately seized the opportunity to restore them to her.

Of course I immediately seized the opportunity, to restore them to her, making, I believe, a remark sufficiently apropos of the occasion. She replied, with a blush, apologizing for her stupidity, and then, failing to recognize me, for no doubt she had at first taken me for one of the passengers, she opened wide her eyes—and beautiful, big, gray brown eyes they were—favored me, I thought, with a startled look and then hurried on.

I watched her as she walked aft to the companion way, the half hope being mine that she might turn and look. But no. The little dark head never swerved an inch, and presently it disappeared below. Then the whistle blew, the boats sheered off, and presently the great ship began slowly to forge her way ahead.

CHAPTER XVIII.

PORT SAID.

That evening at dinner I again saw the young lady with the beautiful eyes, and charming she looked as she walked through the saloon in company with an older woman, a widow, to judge by her costume, and probably her mother. Exquisitely sweet and cool in her soft creamy gown looked the younger woman as she sat amid so many black coats, and her advent was like a breath of fresh air in a tropical city. I noticed that a big military looking man who sat next to her was prodigiously attentive, and insensibly I grew antagonistic toward him. Like a jealous woman, I began to pick him to pieces, and as he was by no means flawless I had what he might have called a field day. I wondered what relation he bore to her and almost shuddered as I thought of husband. You see, I was young and had an idea that married folk should more or less be physically matched.

Unconscious of my thoughts, the gallant gentleman made himself eminently agreeable all through dinner, and though I was too far away to hear what he said I saw by the looks of those about him that he was evidently a person with a considerable fund of humor. Not that the girl laughed much, though he seemed to address his remarks to her in particular. Occasionally a smile flitted over her face, a fugitive thing that vanished so swiftly it might have been afraid to be found there. Watching her intently and judging from the start she gave when suddenly appealed to, I knew her mind was preoccupied with something other than the chatter about her. Indeed the melancholy which I had already noticed, the startled, frightened look of the eyes, proclaimed the existence of a thought which could not be forgotten.

After dinner the sound of singing led me to the music room, and as I lounged in the doorway I beheld the military looking man singing to the girl's accompaniment. The ballad was extremely touching and described with much protestation the fact that the young gentleman would be "true till death." The singer put a power of pathos into the declaration and glanced down at the girl with the ardor of a 3-year-old but his face was very red, his voice no longer that of impassioned youth. She never looked up, which was exceedingly unkind. The raising of her thickly fringed lids would have revealed a bewildering world of loveliness to her admirer. It would have made him protest until there was no more breath in his body. Besides, it is so easy for a woman to look up from a piano, flash a dazzling glance at bewildered man and then leave him in the outer gloom of darkness and doubt. And don't the dear creatures know how to do it to perfection?

Being a stranger on board and regarded no doubt as something in the nature of an intruder, the first day was productive of little information concerning my fellow passengers, but on the second day, thanks to the garrulousness of an old gentleman who, like many old gentlemen, had made his neighbors' affairs the business of his declining years, I learned all I wished to know, which, after all, was not much and chiefly concerned two people—the girl with the pale, pensive face and the man with the warlike mustache. She, I was relieved to know, was not his wife, but a young Australian girl, Miss Hurst by name, who was returning home with her mother. The mother was the old lady in black who sat next to her at dinner—awfully sad story. Came home for a pleasure trip and lost Mr. Hurst shortly after landing. The military looking gentleman with the red face was Major Coghlan, retired—awfully brilliant. Shouldn't wonder if there's a wedding when we get to Melbourne. And so on and so on.

Somehow the major did not seem such a formidable creature after this, though he discoursed wars with all the hero's disdain of death and bandied the names of distinguished generals with the easy familiarity of an equal. He knew everything and everybody, and, with the natural garrulity of an Irishman, he did not hide his accomplishments, though he might have left one wondering how such a very extraordinary person was permitted to retire from a service which he did so much to adorn. Alas, a prophet hath no honor in his own country!

I can afford to treat the major lightly now, but then he was a person of some consequence in our little floating world, a man who "tuk the flure" and made himself heard. Over concert, theatricals or ball he was the presiding genius. He promoted sweepstakes on the day's run, got up cricket matches and tennis parties and, like the gentleman in the comic opera, was Lord High Everything.

Such greatness I did not envy him, for there are still a few positions which one may not aspire to, but I strongly objected to his taking possession of Miss Hurst every time she appeared on deck and behaving as though he were the only worshiper fit to approach the shrine. I am not ashamed to admit that the lady interested me greatly, and I was not content with a bow and a smile and a few words promiscuously dropped. But, thanks to the major, such for a long time seemed to be my only portion.

One morning, however, I found her alone, leaning on the rail looking into the sea, and though my advent startled her she quickly recovered herself and gave me a pleasant greeting. Then from the common objects of ship life we touched on many subjects, and she was in the midst of a glowing description of her native land when the major appeared upon the scene. I thought a shade crossed her face; I'd swear her pretty mouth pouted. It was foolish, perhaps, but as I looked I felt an inward joy.

"Been looking for you everywhere, Miss Hurst," he exclaimed. "Just made up a set and want you for a partner." He smiled his broad red smile and scanned me somewhat triumphantly. I bowed and was about to turn away, when she replied:

"Thank you, Major Coghlan. I won't play this morning."

"Oh, but it's crool of you," he replied, "and after all the preparations too"—

"I'm so sorry. There are plenty of players."

"Aye," he said boldly, "but it is quality we want, not quantity."

She turned aside without replying, and some one coming after him at that moment he apologized profusely for having to leave us. But his eye, as it caught mine, had no twinkle in it.

That was but one of many long conversations I had with her, for with the impetuosity of youth I flung down my gage to the redoubtable warrior, much to the amusement of the other passengers, who invariably spoke of us as the hated rivals. But that was only their little way. The major and I never forgot to treat each other with the most gentlemanlike courtesy.

The run across the Mediterranean was delightful. Feeling that I was free of the Terror I abandoned myself to the enjoyment of my new surroundings and lived each exhilarating day to the full. It was pleasant to survey the dark, far stretching circle of sea and know that we were cut off from all communication with our fellows. No one could harm us here. There was no ambuscade, no dark streets from which a man might spring and up which he might disappear. We were alone upon the waters, and I sometimes sighed at the knowledge that life could not be always thus.

When we arrived at Port Said, I made one of Miss Hurst's shore going party. I say Miss Hurst's because she seemed the planet round which we lesser satellites revolved, though Major Coghlan was, of course, the active leader of the expedition. He marshaled us in line, cast a severe military eye down our ranks and then gave the order to march and at the head of his unsoldierlike detachment led us through the town.

A wonderful fellow, the major, but his incessant chatter wearied me, and while he and my uncle were trying their luck at roulette I stole away and, joining Miss Hurst, who was standing near the door, suggested that we should pursue our investigations alone. She hesitated for a moment, then smiled, and together we walked along, expatiating upon the novelty of our surroundings, though the novelty was more mine than hers, as she had been ashore here during her voyage from Australia.

"But things are different now," she said. "My father was with us then."

It was the first time I had heard her willingly speak of him, and I noted the tone of utter sadness in her voice. I longed to tell her that I, too, had lost father and mother, only I dared not mention how.

"I have heard that he died very suddenly," I said, for I was interested deeply in anything that interested her.

"Yes," she answered, and hot as the day was I saw her shudder.

"I am so sorry."

She started. Her eyes sought mine and rested there.

"You did not know him?"

"No, but I am sorry for your sake."

"Thanks." Then she added in a low tone which was full of meaning, "You would be more sorry if you knew all."

We wandered a little farther on without speaking, both being, I take it, somewhat embarrassed or preoccupied with thought. Then, as we stopped at the corner of a street to view some wares in a window, an Arab approached us, doffed his fez and salaamed obsequiously. I turned sharply to the fellow with a "Well, what is it?" but instead of replying he presented Miss Hurst with a letter, salaamed again and without speaking walked off.

The girl, holding the letter in her hand, made no attempt to open it, but instead turned an inquiring pair of eyes to mine and murmured:

"Why should he bring me this letter? I don't know anybody here."

"Hadn't you better open it?"

She looked at the letter and then again at me, a movement proclaiming the utmost nervousness, then with an effort she tore the envelope. I, as in duty bound, turned aside once more to inspect the wares in the window, when a half stifled gasp suddenly caused me to face about. She stood there pale

If You Have These Symptoms

Send For My Book.

If you want to feel better.

If you want more strength.

If you lack ambition.

If you can't do things like you used to.

If you lack confidence in yourself.

If your nerve—your courage—is leaving you.

If you lack vim, vigor, vitality.

If something is eating away your constitution, write to me for the book you need.

The book tells of my discovery. Tells how after thirty years I found the cause of these symptoms, and many others, given above.

The book tells how by scientific experiment I traced out the causes that bring on chronic diseases. It tells how I perfected my prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative.

I found invariably that where there was a weakness the inside nerves were weak. Where there was a lack of vitality that the vital nerves lacked power. Where weak organs were found, I always found weak nerves. Not the nerves commonly thought of, but the vital organs' nerves, the inside—the invisible nerves.

This was a revelation.

Then my real success began.

Then I combined ingredients that would strengthen, that would vitalize these nerves. That prescription I called a restorative. It is known the world over now as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. After that I did not fail to cure one case in each hundred. In the extremely difficult cases my failures for five years were one in each forty treated. I found cancer incurable. Cancer is for surgery, not medicine.

Then how to get this prescription to sick ones everywhere was my thought. I must announce it in the public press. But, thought I, will they realize the truth of my discovery—the real power of Dr. Shoop's Restorative? Then a way came to me—like an inspiration. "I will offer it to the sick on trial. Then they will know I am sincere."

I wrote a reliable druggist in each city and village in America. They agreed to co-operate with me. Now by any sick one

Dr. Shoop's Restorative

Can be taken on trial. For a full month I will let you use it entirely at my risk.

Send no money. Just write me for the book you need. When I send it I will tell you of a druggist near by who will permit the month's trial.

Use the Restorative a month. Then decide. If you say to the druggist, "It did not help me," that will relieve you of any expense whatever. He will bill the cost to me.

This is my way of clearing your mind of all doubts as to what Dr. Shoop's Restorative can do.

No matter how prejudiced, you cannot dispute this absolute security I offer. You cannot resist an offer like this if you are at all sick.

If you have a weakness, write me. If you can't do things like you used to do them, tell me about it. Write in confidence. As a physician I will tell you a way to help. Get my book now—to-day.

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

A long portage makes a heavy canoe.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer Complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

On occasion knowing what one wants is as difficult as getting it.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

Will positively cure sick headache and prevent its return. Carter's Little Liver Pills. This is not talk, but truth. One pill a dose. See advertisement. Small pill. Small dose. Small price.

Much talk, many lies.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation.—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

Seven hundred British subjects are yearly born at sea.

A Sure Cure for Headaches.—Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alterative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

The biggest brave does not always make the best chief.

Will be Found an Excellent Remedy for sick headache. Carter's Little Liver Pills. Thousands of letters from people who have used them prove this fact. Try them.

Man must gather, first or last, the harvest he has sown.

The Well Known Strengthening Properties of IRON, combined with other tonics and a most perfect nervine, are found in Carter's Iron Pills, which strengthen the nerves and body, and improve the blood and complexion.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrap & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrap & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia.

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kimloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I knew of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption."

Holloway's Corn Cure is the medicine to remove all kinds of corns and warts, and only costs the small sum of twenty-five cents.

If you have a good business, it is always better to stay where you are.

"OIL OF GLADNESS"

South American Nervine has proved itself the "oil of gladness" to many a nerve-sick sufferer. It starts to work at the fountain-head of the trouble—the digestion. It tones the stomach, helps to assimilate the food, promotes healthy circulation, stimulates the flow of rich, red blood, accelerates the action of the organs.

South American Nervine cures nervousness, sleeplessness, neuralgia, nervous prostration, nervous choking, nervous twitchings, hot flushes, sick head-ache, dyspepsia, indigestion, and all kindred ailments. It is the very nectar of health. 34

Who Need Glasses?

2)

Many young people need them, particularly students, stenographers, bookkeepers, dressmakers, milliners, etc., who use their eyes much at close work, to prevent in many cases serious results from eye strain. In such cases we are particular not only to give glasses that will relieve eye strain, but make them so conform to the face, as even to add to the personal appearance. No charge for consultation.

A Gin Pill Reason

Many people are veritable human interrogation points. They invariably want to know why?

They ask why Gin Pills are superior to other Kidney remedies. One reason is that Gin Pills are antiseptic in their action, cleansing, healing, purifying from the start, thereby effecting a speedier and more certain cure. The effect is immediate. How We Cure Weak Men.

Give me a man broken down from excesses, hard work or worry from any cause which has sapped his vitality. Let him follow our advice for three months, and we will make him as vigorous in every respect as any man of his age. We will not promise to make a Hercules of a man who was never intended by nature to be strong and sturdy. Even that man we can make better than he is, but the man who was once strong and lost his strength, we can make him as good as he ever was. We have many testimonials to show any one applying at this store, these are people who do not wish there names made known through the newspapers. Read this,—for a long time I have been a great sufferer from nervous trouble, I was unable to attend to business and could not sleep at night. I tried all the leading doctors in Belleville, but they did me no good. I went away to specialists which gave the same result. By this time I was pretty well discouraged and had almost given up, when my son persuaded me to try the Gilmour Belt, which I did, and after using it for three months began to feel like a new man. Any one who needs treatment for this disease, can make no mistake on this great Belt. I would not take one thousand dollars for mine if I could not get another."

"For many years have had rheumatism very badly, especially before a storm. I would suffer for days at a time with pain I could hardly endure. I tried all the doctors and they gave me up saying there was no relief for me. At last I tried the Gilmour Electric Belt and after using it for a time began to improve, and am today a pretty good man from its use. I can recommend this Belt to any one suffering from rheumatism."

"I have been bothered with kidney and bladder trouble for nearly twenty years I could get nothing to do me any good, I was induced by a friend to try the Gilmour Electric Appliance with the special attachment for treating such cases. After using it for a few weeks, began to feel better and can say am getting better. Any one suffering from this ailment can make no mistake on this appliance."

This is the most powerful Electric Appliance in the world, if there is such a thing as a cure in Electricity, which everyone knows there is, this appliance will surely give it.

SORROW, MY SORROW.

Sorrow, my sorrow, I thought that you would be
My faithful mate, and bear me company
While I should live, but now I find that you,
Like joy, and hope, and love, have left me too.
Sorrow, my sorrow, you have left me more
Forlorn than all the rest that went before;
For you were last to come and longest stay,
And you were dearest when you went away.
Sorrow, my treasured grief, my hoarded pain,
Where shall I turn to have you mine again?

Wherever there are other breasts that ache,
Wherever there are hearts are like to break,
Wherever there are hearts too hard to fear,
Turn and look for me, you shall find me there,
But not to take and have me for your own,
Or keep me, as you thought me, yours alone;
If you would have me as I used to be,
Beyond yourself you must abide with me.

W. D. Howells, in Harper's Magazine.

GOLD MINES.

Some Receipts That Bring Their Owners Great Returns.

The Oxford Press Syndicate value the formula for making the thin, tough paper used in printing their Bibles at a quarter of a million sterling, it having cost them over twenty-five years of hard work and twenty thousand pounds in cash to discover and perfect the process. Even more valuable, probably, is the secret of the manufacture of the paper upon which the notes of the Bank of England are printed, which belongs, as is generally known, to the Portals of Laverstoke, who have accumulated a fortune from it inside of a couple of generations. The brilliant crimson cloth of which the Cardinals' robes at the Vatican are made has been supplied for generations past by the same family of cloth merchants at Burtscheil, near Aix-la-Chapelle, the secret process by which the dye is distilled having been handed down from father to son. The family (says a writer in Chambers' Journal) curiously enough, is of Huguenot descent, and its members are to this day staunch Protestants.

A Wiltshire firm of bacon-curers paid no less than ten thousand pounds for the Brandenburg method of curing hams; while a certain special chutney, or rather the method of mixing it, originally bought for a few rupees from a poor Hindu trader changed hands a few months back for seven thousand five hundred pounds. The famous Worcester sauce is made according to a recipe hundreds of years old, which was bought "for a song" from the butler of a county family by the then head of the firm of Lea & Perrins, of Worcester. To-day the little faded scrap of yellow paper, with its almost indecipherable hieroglyphics, is valued by its owners at many thousands of pounds sterling.

About a hundred and fifty years ago there resided in the town of Doncaster a certain barber named Martin. To him there came one day to be shaved a soldier, who mentioned in the course of conversation that he was obliged to return to his regiment at York on foot, as he had not the wherewithal to pay his coach fare. Mr. Martin, having himself known poverty in his younger days, lent the man sufficient money for his purpose, and a little while later received it back, according to promise; but there was something else in the envelope; a crumpled paper on which was written a recipe for a certain preparation, which, explained the sender in a covering letter, he had long used upon the boots of the men of his corps. The barber at once made a small quantity according to directions, found it excellent, entered into a partnership with a friend of his named Day, a harnessmaker, of Tavistock street, London, and was rewarded for his enterprise by seeing, before he died, the firm of Day & Martin, blacking manufacturers, blossom forth into one of the biggest businesses of its kind in the world.—Glasgow Gazette.

Reversible Snakes In India.

A snake not often heard of, at least in America, is the liver colored snake with two heads, or perhaps they should be called mouths, though it does not have two mouths at the same time. They are reversible mouths, occupying the opposite end every six months. It lies with the two ends crossed on each other, as with folded hands. Every six months the change of the seasons reverses the functions of the two ends, the head becoming the tail and the tail becoming the head. The mouth at one end heals or closes up all but a small opening, while the opposite end becomes the mouth for the next six

Lady Dundonald.

Lady Dundonald, says M. A. P., was Miss Winifred Hesketh, daughter and heiress of the late Robert Hesketh, a rich Welshman, and owner of Gwrych Castle, Debingshire. "In appearance, Lady Dundonald is a tall, fine, handsome woman, with dark hair and a fresh-colored complexion. She has never posed as either a wit or a beauty, but she is an excellent wife and mother, and does some pleasant entertaining at her big house in Portman Square. She has two sons, and three beautiful daughters. The eldest girl, Lady Grizel, is soon to be a bride, and the Ladies Jean and Marjorie Cochrane are two charming children, in what may be termed the chrysalis stage. Lord Dundonald—now in Canada—has soldierly qualities that are known to all the world. But he is also a skilful mechanic and a born inventor. He has designed a new gun carriage, invented a clever little instrument for warming the hand, called an instra, and is said to have thought out a plan for giving a supply of pure water to soldiers on the march. Lord Dundonald is known to have an unbounded admiration for Napoleon, his mind and character."

THE WINTER OF 1861.

Coldest of the Nineteenth Century In New England.

The winter of 1861 was noted for being one of the coldest, and, in fact, it was the coldest one, in the century. The coldest day of the winter was Friday, Feb. 25, and is known as cold Friday. There had been a heavy storm of light, fine snow. It cleared off cold, and the wind blew a perfect gale, thus making the cold more fearful. The air was filled with snow so thick one could see only a rod or two in any direction. Men who were obliged to be on the road perished and were found frozen as hard as marble statues. A very few travelers survived the ordeal. But few had thermometers in those days to tell how cold it really was, but what few there were registered 40 to 50 below zero in Androscoggin, and in Aroostook county it was even lower. Penobscot bay was frozen over so solid that Sam Randall of Vanalhaven took a horse and sleigh and, together with the Hon. Martin Kiff, who was the representative to the legislature from Vinalhaven, cruised from Vinalhaven to North Haven, then to Saddle island, then to Camden and thence across country to Augusta, where he left Kiff and returned to Vinalhaven again safely. Portland harbor and Boston harbor were frozen over solid. Thousands of the Boston people availed themselves of the fact, and the ice on the harbor was covered with skaters.

GRINNING MATCHES.

An Accepted Form of Sport In Early English Days.

That grinning matches were an accepted form of sport in early English days is shown by an advertisement announcing a gold ring to be grinned for by men on Oct. 9 at the Swan, Coleshill heath, in Warwickshire, which appeared in the Post-Boy of Sept. 11 and 17, 1711, supplemented by the suggestion that all the country fellows within ten miles of the Swan should grin an hour or two in their glasses every morning in order to qualify themselves for this extraordinary competition.

Addison gives a detailed account of one of these "controversies of faces," telling us that the audience unanimously bestowed the ring on a cobbler, who "produced several new grins of his own invention, having been used to cut faces for many years together over his last."

His performance was something like this: "At the very first grin he cast every human feature out of his countenance; at the second he simulated the face of a spout, at the third that of a baboon, at the fourth the head of a bass viol and at the fifth a pair of nut crackers." Addison adds that a comely wench, whom he had wooed in vain for more than five years, was so charmed with his grins that she married him the following week, the cobbler using the prize as his wedding ring.

CURED BY SARCASM.

A Lesson In the Use of Simple Terms In Letter Writing.

A few months ago the son of a railway director was through his father's influence given a position of some importance on a large railway. He was fresh from Cambridge, and in the orders which he from time to time issued to the men under him always made use of the longest, most unusual words. This habit led to some rather expensive blunders, and, the matter coming before the general manager, he wrote the young official the following letter:

"In promulgating your esoteric cogitations and in articulating your superficial sentimentalities and amicable philosophical or psychological observations beware of platitudinous ponderosity. Let your conversational communication possess a clarified conciseness, a compacted comprehensibleness, a coalescent consistency and a concatenated cogency. Eschew all conglomeration of flatulent garrulity, jejune babblement and asinine affectation. Let your extemporaneous descantings and unpremeditated expatiation have intelligibility and veracious vivacity, without rhodomontade or thrasonical bombast. Sedulously avoid all polysyllabic profundity, ventriloquial verbosity and vaniloquent vapidity. Shun double entendre, prurient jocosity and pestiferous profanity, obscurant or apparent. In other words, talk plainly, briefly, naturally, sensibly, purely and truthfully. Don't put on airs; say what you mean; mean what you say, and don't use big words."

The young official took the gentle hint and changed his style.—London Tit-Bits.

Mrs. Wolfe, the mother of the great general, kept a comprehensive cookery book, still preserved at Squerries Court, Kent. One of her recipes was for "a good water for consumption." "Take a peck of garden snails," says the prescription, "wash them in beer, put them in an oven and let them stay till they've done crying; then with a knife and fork pick the green from them and beat the snails, shells and all, in a stone mortar; then take a quart of green earthworms, slice them through the middle and straw them with salt, then wash them and beat them, the pot being first put into the still with two handfuls of angelico, a quart of rosemary flowers, then the snails and worms, then egrimony, bear's feet, reddock roots, barberry brake, biloney, wormwood, of each two handfuls; one handful of rue-tumoric and one ounce of saffron well dried and beaten; then pour in three gallons of milk; wait till morning, then put in three ounces of cloves well beaten, hartshorn grated; keep the still covered all night; this done, stir it not; distill it with a moderate fire. The patient must take two spoonfuls at a time."—London Chronicle.

There is an Individuality

About our decorating that you will not find elsewhere

THERE IS originality in our decorating—we do not find it necessary to reproduce your drawing room in your neighbors home. We prefer to give each a change and we have the werewithal to produce that change.

HAVE Firstly

the ideas, a most necessary adjunct to healthy art.

HAVE
Secondly

the materials, the correct papers, the correct mouldings, the styles the new things with which to work out a decorative scheme.

HAVE
Thirdly

The workmen—men experienced in there several branches of workmanship—skilled artizans and craftsmen who can follow mechanically and artistically the drawings and ideas of our decorator.

And there is no mistake about it we are doing today a far superior class of decorating than has before ever been done in Belleville and vicinity.

Just watch the interiors of the best homes in the city if you care to observe our decorative work.

BRONCHITIC ASTHMA A HEAVY BURDEN.

Asthma is bad enough, but when bronchial symptoms are added the poor sufferer has almost an intolerable existence. An absolute specific is found in fragrant, healing Catarrhozone, which cures chronic cases that other remedies won't even relieve. "For years," writes Capt. Macdonald, of Montreal, "I battled with the agonies of bronchitis asthma. Often I couldn't sleep for nights at a time. I spent thousands on doctors and medicines, without relief, but one dollar's worth of Catarrhozone cured me. Catarrhozone can't fail; it's guaranteed. Two months' treatment $1.00; trial size 25c.

APPLICATION TO PARLIAMENT.

Notice is hereby given that an application will be made on behalf of the Corporation of the City of Belleville at the present session of the Legislature of the Province of Ontario for an Act to ratify and confirm and declare valid By-law Number 1137 of the Municipal Council of the Corporation of the City of Belleville finally passed the 25th of January, 1904, in reference to the purchase of the Works, &c., of the Belleville Gas Company, and also to ratify and confirm and declare valid an agreement between the Belleville Gas Company and the Corporation of the City of Belleville, dated November 16th, 1903, and the Conveyances of the said property, and to ratify and confirm and declare valid the debentures issued or to be issued under said By-law Number 1137, and to provide for the payment of the purchase money to the said Company.

Dated February 6th, 1904.

W. C. MIKEL,

Solicitor for the Corporation of the City of Belleville.

Surprise and Presentation.

At Gilead, on Monday evening, Feb. 8, a number of friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Philander Ross assembled to give them an agreeable surprise before taking their departure for their new home in Belleville. After a bountiful repast had been partaken of the evening was spent in games and social chat, and concluded by the company singing "God be with you till we meet again." Mr. and Mrs. Ross and family are highly esteemed among their acquaintances, and carry with them the best wishes of a large circle of friends. Owing to the absence from home of their daughter, Edna, advantage was taken of presenting to her at church on the following Sunday a beautiful gold watch chain, accompanied by an appropriate address, to which Miss Ross made a feeling reply.

WHY BRAIN WORKERS BREAK DOWN.

Man is not a machine that keeps going as long as the steam is applied. He is a creature of blood, nerves and delicately balanced organism. Many don't realize this, but overwork their brains and break down. Brain workers need a strong, bracing tonic like Ferrozone to fortify their nerves and keep the blood pure and rich. Take Ferrozone and you'll do more work. You will have the strength, the ambition and the desire for work, because your system will be in first-class order. For your health and strength take Ferrozone regularly. Price 50c at druggists.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT..

Queen's hockey team has decided to challenge for the Stanley Cup, the matter to be decided by a sudden death game.

The Marlboros are evidently not fitted for hockey as it is played in the east, where the O. H. A. parlor game is not the correct thing. And by the same token the Dukes must have fell against it good and hard on Tuesday night, if there is any truth in the following from the Toronto Star:

"The Marlboros encountered a far different proposition to any they had met in their O.H.A. experience. They were unaccustomed to the style of game that permits downright brutality, cross-checking in the face and neck, tripping, hacking, slashing over the head, and boarding an opponent with intent to do bodily injury. All went unpunished except in glaring instances, and, as a consequence, the light-weighted Marlboros were soon worn down, and the Ottawas were enabled to make a strong enough finish to win the game by a good margin. The fine points of hockey were not altogether overlooked, but the science and skill of the games were dwarfed by the continuous attempts to get the man instead of the puck."

The teams will play again to-night, but judging from the following description of injuries received by the Toronto players they appear to stand a mighty small chance of winning: "Phillips' back and legs are black and blue, and he has a nasty cut on the face, besides a pair of crippled hands. Birmingham and Winchester's hands are also badly cut up, and the latter's shooting arm is out of commission. Charlton is in very bad shape, and may not be able to play to-morrow, due to a fierce check on the boards by Smith. Wright has a gash on his leg, and McLaren is ill as a result of the pummelling he received."

Toronto Telegram: Stratford played up to their reputation last night and Watford are as good as out of the intermediate O.H.A. running. This narrows the contest down to the original three mentioned as likely candidates, viz., Stratford, Midland and Belleville. It will likely be Stratford and Belleville in the finals and Belleville at the finish. That is, unless the O.H.A. executive happen to reconsider Reddy McMillan's rapid transit proclivities.

In the name of all that is fair and honorable, isn't it about time those tin horn enemies of Belleville gave us a rest on Reddy McMillan. Surely fair-minded people everywhere are tired of this persecution.

Teams representing Regiopolis College and Belleville High School will play hockey in the rink here at 5 p.m. to-morrow.

A Pleasant Evening.

On Friday, Feb. 19th, the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Muir, of this city, was the scene of a pleasant time when about forty or fifty of their friends assembled at their home in honor of Mr. J. H. McConnell, of Windsor, who had a pleasant smile and a hearty welcome for all. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Carnochan, of Toronto; Miss McDonald, of Peterboro; Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Monley, of Kingston; Miss Mills, of Havelock; Misses McConnell, of Melrose. After refreshments were served and an enjoyable evening spent, the company dispersed.—Com.

ATTEMPTED BURGLARY OF FRONT ST. STORE

TWO STRANGERS ARRESTED ON SUSPICION — MR. BORBRIDGE'S PRESENCE PROBABLY PREVENTED SERIOUS LOSSES.

On Tuesday night two men, who gave their names as Patrick and Thomas Murphy, aged respectively 28 and 24 years, sought protection at the police station. Last night they were again in the station, but this time under arrest, and, if what the police officers surmise is correct, they will have to answer to a charge of attempted burglary.

It appears that shortly after 8 o'clock last evening, Mr. J. Borbridge was working in Ald. McFee's jewellery store, when he was surprised to hear some party or parties endeavoring to force an entrance through the door in the back of the premises. Mr. Borbridge slipped out of the store and went into Mr. Scantlebury's store, next door, and from a view at the back saw a man hurriedly leaving. When the man came out of the gangway, near by, he was joined by a second party, who was evidently on watch. The two then went up street. The affair was reported to the police and it was suspected that the two strangers who had been about the city all day were the would-be burglars. Later in the night Officers McCrodan and Downs arrested the Murphys and placed them behind the bars. One claimed to be a file maker and the other a machinist.

The two men yesterday spent the greater portion of the day in an uptown hotel. They were in conversation with a young man and asked him if he could tell them of a good jewellery store in the city and he mentioned Ald. McFee's place to them, thinking at first they desired to purchase some article. It is also alleged that they enquired as to a good way to get at the rear of the store, and one of them went so far as to intimate that they had done up a place in the west and escaped detection.

Owing to the Magistrate being absent from the city, Ald. Panter presided at the court this morning. The Chief simply preferred the charge of vagrancy against them, and they were remanded until to-morrow, when a more serious charge will confront them.

Both men are Irish and claim to have been out in this country but a few months. They state that they were working for three or four months at Preston, Ont.

COUNTY COUNCIL'S CASE BEFORE THE PREMIER.

PRESENT ACT APPROVED AND PROPOSED CHANGES OPPOSED.

Toronto, Feb. 24. — A deputation numbering nearly one hundred representatives of County Councils in Ontario, from Carleton to Essex, twenty-three in all, waited upon the Government this morning, in reference to the Act passed last year in amendment of the County Council Act. This provides that when a majority of the municipal councils so decide, the County Council for any county shall be composed of the reeves of towns and villages, and the Mayors of towns not separated from the county, instead of being made up of the elected members for districts as at present.

The Ministers present were: Hon. G. W. Ross, Hon. John Dryden, Hon. J. R. Stratton, and Hon. E. J. Davis. The speakers were introduced by Mr. M. T. Buchanan, Ingersoll, and were W. R. Aylsworth, Hastings; J. Holland, Northumberland; Herbert Duncan, Lambton; Col. Farewell, Ontario; Warden Boyce, Carleton; M. McNeilly, Victoria; Warden Bruce, Simcoe; County Councillors Evans and Lundy, York; Mr. McKay, Elgin, and Warden Kendry, Wentworth.

The speakers approved of the Act as now in force, and opposed the substitution of a council made up of reeves and mayors, arguing that such a body would not take the same broad outlook and general interest as the present councils do. It was contended that the rich townships of a county, which are now fairly represented, would be outvoted by the representatives from the larger number of small and poor townships. Specific cases were given of counties where this would be the result. Special objection was taken to the matter of equalization of assessment, under which it was suggested the larger places would suffer at the hands of the smaller ones.

The Premier reviewed the circumstances under which the present system and the Act of last year were passed. He admitted, however, that the recent Act needed to have one or two defects remedied. In regard to the manner in which the change shall be made, the Government thought that, instead of its being left to the municipal councils, an interested body, the electors should vote on a by-law. Then the recent Act makes no provision for an equalization of assessment, which will prevent small municipalities saddling the larger ones with burdens or ridding themselves of obligations, and this must be attended to later. The present Act would not be changed for two years.

The deputation withdrew after thanking the Premier and his colleagues.

HONORED THEIR SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT.

BRIDGE STREET PRESENTS MR. WILLIAM JOHNSON WITH A TRIP TO JERUSALEM.

A committee of the officers and teachers of the Bridge Street Methodist Church met last evening and completed all arrangements for sending their S.S. Superintendent, Mr. Wm. Johnson, to the World's Sunday School Convention in Palestine. When the date of the convention was fixed, the officers and teachers of the school thought it would be a suitable recognition of Mr. Johnson's 36 years service to present him with this trip. Leave of absence was obtained from the department and steps were taken to carry out the project, a number of old friends of Mr. Johnson's, as well as ex-pupils of the Sabbath School, on hearing of this, asking to be permitted to assist. The berth has been secured and a purse provided for incidental expenses. One class in the school provided, in addition, a purse to enable Mr. Johnson to visit old Ireland, the home of his childhood, while he is away.

As regards the trip itself, a vessel has been chartered to sail from New York and will touch at points of interest in Southern Europe, Northern Africa, Turkey, Egypt and Palestine, and opportunities will be given for the tourists to visit many places of interest. Dr. Potts and Mr. Johnson have been selected as the speakers from Canada, and Mr. Johnson has been requested to take charge of one of the Sabbath School Sessions on shipboard. The school expects that Mr. Johnson will have a delightful trip and that his health will be much improved.

The session of the Bridge Street Sabbath School next Sunday afternoon will be a special one and special music and addresses will be given. A large attendance of scholars, ex-scholars, members of the church and friends of Mr. Johnson's is expected. This school for many years has been considered one of the most progressive in the province and the skill and enthusiasm with which this enterprise has been carried to a successful issue not only gives proof of its excellent organization but is strong evidence of the esteem they have for their superintendent.

Mr. Johnson leaves for New York early next week.

HER HUSBAND WAS A WRECK, NOW A PERFECT MAN.

Montreal.

Dear Sir,—I do not know how to express my gratitude to the Samaria Prescription Co. for the remedy which you sent me about four weeks ago. It produced an astonishing effect on my husband. Pen cannot express the feeling of gratitude I have for you, but, however, accept a thousand thanks.

It is to you that I owe the life of my husband, who was before a wreck in health and business. To-day he is a perfect man, and I can state that he has not been for the last three years, since he had started to drink. Please find enclosed $3.00 more for another treatment for one of my friends, whose husband is in the same condition as mine was. You will address it to me, as she does not want her husband to know she is giving it to him. Yours truly,

RETVIZAN SINKS 2 JAP "FIRE" SHIPS

Russia Deranges Toga's Plan to Block Port Arthur.

LITTLE FELLOWS GO DOWN

Alexieff Reports Early Morning Attack on Battleships in Port Arthur Harbor on Feb. 24—False Alarm of the Japanese "Disaster"—Japs, Moving Toward the Yalu, Favor Guerilla Warfare—A Shrewd Treaty With Corea.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 25, 2.45 a.m.—A telegram from Viceroy Alexieff to the Czar says:

"At a quarter before three in the morning of February 24 numerous Japanese torpedo boats attempted to attack the battleship Retvizan and sink large steamers loaded with inflammables.

"The Retvizan was the first to observe the torpedo boats and opened a strong fire on them. She was supported by the land batteries. She destroyed two steamers near the entrance of the harbor. They were coming directly towards her. One of them went on the rocks near the lighthouse on Tiger Peninsula and the other sank under Golden Hill.

"The Retvizan observed the steamers in a sinking condition and eight torpedo boats departing slowly to join the waiting Japanese warships. A portion of the crews of the Japanese vessels was drowned. The grounded steamer is still burning. The enemy is observed in the offing of Port Arthur in two lines.

"The Japanese saved themselves in boats, and it is possible that some of them were picked up by some of the enemy's torpedo boats.

"I am proceeding to examine the coast. The entrance to the harbor is open. I attribute the complete derangement of the enemy's plan to brilliant action and destructive fire of the Retvizan.

"Floating mines are still visible in the roadstead. I have recalled the three cruisers sent in pursuit of the enemy, in order in the first place to clear the roadstead of floating mines.

"We had no losses."

Explains Earlier Telegrams.

This despatch modifies and explains earlier telegrams from St. Petersburg and Paris reporting an official announcement that four Japanese battleships and two transports had been sunk in a fresh attack on Port Arthur.

4 Steamers With Explosives.

London, Feb. 25.—A despatch to Reuter's Telegram Company from St. Petersburg, sent at 11 o'clock last night, says that on Feb. 24 the Japanese attempted to send four steamers filled with explosives among the Russian fleet in Port Arthur harbor. These fireships did no damage, and were themselves destroyed, two being sunk and two going ashore. Two Japanese boats escorting the fireships were destroyed by Russian ships.

Tried to Block the Harbor.

Paris, Feb. 25.—The Russian Embassy has received a communication to the effect that a Japanese squadron, during the night of Feb. 24, tried to block the entrance of Port Arthur harbor, at the same time attacking Russian warships there with torpedo boats and trying to set them on fire. The battleship Retvizan, supported by the coast batteries, repelled this attack, forced the Japanese to retire, and succeeded in sinking four of their vessels.

An Ineffective Bombardment.

Chefu, Feb. 25.—The bombardment of Port Arthur last midnight was ineffective, but details are still wanting. Regarding the land operations the Japanese military experts are inclined to countenance an extensive guerilla warfare with the object of wrecking the Russian lines of communication and impeding their transportation service. It is freely predicted here that there will be an important land battle in the vicinity of the Yalu River within a week.

Japs Move Toward the Yalu.

Wei-Hai-Wei, Feb. 25.—The Japanese force, which landed at Chemulpo and occupied Seoul, is now moving towards the Yalu River, and the advance is in full swing. Should the Russians resolve to hold the line of the Yalu River an engagement cannot be long delayed. The Japanese suffered terribly during the march on Seoul, but are now eager to encounter the enemy.

Chinese Eager to Nut In.

Shanghai, Feb. 25.—China is becoming more difficult to restrain, and it is feared it will be impossible to prevent the Chinese army from engaging in active hostilities against the Russian forces. The first clash has indeed already occurred, and the Chinese soldiers want openly to take the field in support of Japan. A settlement has been arrived at with regard to the Russian gunboat Mandjur, and she will cease to be actively participant in the war.

A SHREWD TREATY.

Japanese Protectorate Over Corea and Stand on High Moral Plane.

Washington, Feb. 25.—Secretary of State Hay has received information that Japan has negotiated a treaty with Corea whereby she guarantees the independence and integrity of Corea. This treaty is regarded here as one of the cleverest of the many startling diplomatic moves that have been made in connection with the whole eastern question. The effect is to place Japan on a high moral plane, for it is understood here that this treaty is an announcement to the world that even if she prevails in her struggle with Russia, involving military occupation of Corea, Japan will take no advantage of that fact, but will maintain the independence of the hermit kingdom.

The Russian Position.

Paris, Feb. 25.—Information received here through Russian channels leads to the belief that Japan is now seeking to secure the execution of a treaty, by the Emperor of Corea, giving Japan a protectorate over Corea. The prospect of this treaty was the main reason for Russia's protest to the powers against Japan's violating Corean neutrality, as Russia desires to reserve all rights against a Japanese protectorate over Corea, on the ground that it will be of no effect, being executed, while Corea was under duress. The situation from Russia's standpoint is likened to a man's signing a cheque under duress or fear.

Kuropatkin Hurries Away.

Paris, Feb. 25.—A despatch to The Figaro from St. Petersburg says Gen. Kuropatkin has advanced his departure and will leave for the Far East to-morrow.

Russian Fleet Bottled Up.

London, Feq. 25.—Viceroy Alexieff's despatch to the Czar concerning the last Port Arthur affair confirms the opinion that Admiral Togo made a daring attempt to bottle up the Russian fleet at Port Arthur, and although Viceroy Alexieff asserts that the entrance to the harbor of Port Arthur is still free, yet the fact that Admiral Togo's fleet, minus the vessels injured in the courageous exploit, was seen steaming at full speed in a southeast course from Wei-Hai-Wei, is interpreted as an indication of the Japanese Admiral's satisfaction with the accomplishment of his design.

The Troublesome Mandjur.

Shanghai, Feb. 25.—It is reported that the Chinese Foreign Office has agreed to allow the Russian gunboat Mandjur to remain at Shanghai on the condition that she dismantles her rudder and draws her fires. The Japanese cruiser Akitsushima, which has been lying in wait for the Mandjur, proceeded north yesterday.

RUSSIA'S BACK TO THE WALL.

An Extraordinary Proclamation By Alexieff to People of Manchuria.

Yinkow, Feb. 25.—Viceroy Alexieff has caused a proclamation to be issued throughout Manchuria notifying the Chinese that Russia is at war with Japan on account of Japan's treacherous attack on the Russian fleet. This proclamation is under six headings.

The first warns the inhabitants that they must prevent the encroachments of Chinese on Russian boundary.

Second, Russian and Chinese interests are declared to be identical; but, as China says she wishes to maintain neutrality, therefore, all officials in Manchuria, instead of hindering, must assist the Russian army.

Third, the people shall continue their occupations, and shall treat the Russian troops with confidence.

Fourth, the railroad telegraphs are left to the protection of the people, who will be held responsible in case they are injured.

The fifth heading warns the people not to obey the threats of the bandits, but assist the troops to exterminate them; if they do not assist in this, they also will be treated as robbers.

Sixth, if the people antagonize the troops or show them hatred they will be exterminated without mercy. The Government is taking all steps, in any event, to protect its interests.

The proclamation makes an earnest appeal for the sympathy of the people in the present crisis, when, it says, "Russia must put her back to the wall."

Off to the War.

Rome, Feb. 25.—Don Jaimo of Bourbon, son of Don Carlos, the Spanish pretender, having asked the Czar to be sent to the front, has received the Pope's blessing, and his request to do all in his power to protect Catholics in the Far East.

Crowder to See How War Is Made.

Washington, Feb. 25.—Col. Crowder of the general staff, who has been selected to accompany the Japanese army in the field during the war, left Washington yesterday for San Francisco, whence he will sail, on March 5, for Yokahama.

Denmark Accepts.

Copenhagen, Feb. 25.—The Danish Government yesterday announced its acceptance of Secretary Hay's proposal in regard to the neutrality of China.

Where Tolstoi Stands.

Philadelphia, Feb. 25.—In response to a cable request, The North American has received the following from Count Leo Tolstoi:

"Moscow, Feb. 22.—I am neither for Russia nor Japan, but for the laboring people of both countries, deceived by their Governments and obliged to fight against their welfare, conscience and religion.—Tolstoi."

Ontario Land Surveyors.

Toronto, Feb. 25.—The Ontario Land Surveyors had a rich program of technical papers yesterday, the two most important concerning the surveying of Crown Lands in New Ontario and the Trent Valley Canal. In the evening, at the banquet among those who spoke were Hon. E. J. Davis, Commissioner of Crown Lands, Col. Otter, Kivas Tully and Arthur Harvey.

A Pacific Understanding.

London, Feb. 25.—"It is almost certain," cables the Constantinople correspondent of The Daily Telegraph, "that Turkey and Bulgaria are on the point of reaching a pacific understanding regarding Macedonia."

Lake Michigan Is Still Beached.

London, Feb. 25.—The British steamer Lake Michigan, beached after a collision, has been pumped nearly dry, but the tugs at work on her have failed to get her afloat.

PLANS FOR BRITISH NAVY.

$200,000,000 to be Spent to Make It Equal to Facing Navies of Any Two Powers.

London, Feb. 25.—The British naval estimates for 1904-05 total $184,445,000, a net increase of $12,160,000 over the estimates for 1903-04. More than half the increase in the estimates is due to the determination to pay the entire balance due on the recently purchased Chilian battleships, on April 1, and to provide them with ammunition for the next year. The remainder of the increase arises from expansion of the fleet, increase in pay of the personnel and material.

The estimates provide for a total of $58,270,880 for new construction, of which $3,210,415 will be devoted to the commencement of new ships. The admiralty will devote $9,050,000 to the purchase of armor. Orders have already been placed for nine submarine vessels in this year's program, but the preparation of special designs for the tenth submarine has delayed the placing of the contract.

The construction will be begun during the present year of two battleships, four armored cruisers, ten submarine vessels and fourteen torpedo boat destroyers.

In submiting the estimates the Earl of Selbourne, First Lord of the Admiralty, said the admiralty was aware that the estimates were large, but Parliament must remember how great is the responsibility caused the board of admiralty in providing the country with a navy strong enough to sustain a struggle with the navies of any two powers, and to ensure reasonable security for the country's vast seaborne trade and the food supply of the people.

RAILWAYS MAKE MILLIONS.

Gross Earnings For One Year Nearly $100,000,000.

Ottawa, Feb. 25.—The gross earnings of Canadian steam railways in Canada for the fiscal year ending June 30 were $96,064,527, an increase of $12,398,024 over the year previous. The working expenses totaled $67,481,524, an increase of $10,137,932. The net earnings totaled $28,583,003, or $2,260,092 more. There were 22,148,742 passengers carried by steam railways, or 1,468,768 more than the previous year. There were 47,373,417 tons of freight carried, being a gain of 4,996,890 tons. The total mileage on July 1 was 19,077, of which 18,714 miles were in operation. There were 209 miles built during the year.

Gross earnings of electric railways amounted to $7,228,677, a gain of $737,239 over the year previous. The working expenses were $4,472,858, or $670,003 more than for the year ending June 30, 1902. The net earnings aggregated $2,760,819, as compared with $2,683,583. The passengers carried by electric railways totaled 155,662,812, a gain of 17,981,410. There were 371,286 tons of freight carried, an increase of 105,104. The mileage on July 1 last was 729, showing that 201 miles were constructed during the year.

REV DR. HART DEAD.

Founder of Methodist Missions in Western China in 1891.

Burlington, Feb. 25.—Rev. Dr. Hart for many years superintendent of the missions of the Methodist Church in China, died at his residence here last evening at 7 o'clock in his 64th year.

Rev. Dr. Hart was born in the United States, and first went to Wuhu and Tukiang, in Central China, under the auspices of the American Methodist Episcopal Church, 37 years ago. When the Methodist Church in Canada undertook mission work in western China in 1881, Rev. Dr. Hart was here on furlough, having returned practically from the field and he was offered and accepted the superintendency. He went to Szchuan, near the borders of Thibet. After the riots of 1895 he returned to Canada, going back to China in 1897, when he took the first printing press into Western China. During the Boxer outbreak in 1900 he returned home and has since lived in retirement. He was the author of a book on Western China, and another on Confucianism.

Dr. Hart is survived by a widow, four sons and a daughter.

To Revolutionize Salmon Fishing.

Victoria, B.C., Feb. 25.—It was reported here last night that the Dominion Government had at last agreed to allow the erection of fish traps at a point near Victoria. The incoming salmon from the sea to the Fraser strike a point in the Straits of Fuca, near Victoria and could be taken there by fish traps in such numbers as to render useless the traps at the American station. The establishment of traps here would revolutionize the salmon canning industry of the northwest.

No Evidence Was Offered.

Brockville, Feb. 25.—James A. Hutcheson, K.C., who created a sensation about two weeks ago, by a confession of embezzlement and a voluntary surrender to justice, appeared before Judge Macdonald yesterday afternoon. No evidence was offered, and the case was dismissed.

France and the U.S.

Paris, Feb. 25.—It was confirmed in official circles in Paris yesterday, that negotiations were actually in progress between the United States nad France for an arbitration treaty. The Russian-Japanese war, however, tends to cause hesitation on the part of the negotiators.

Six Miners Killed By Snowslide.

Crested Butte, Colo., Feb. 25.—Six miners have been killed by a snowslide near the Augusta mine, nine miles from Crested Butte.

Whole Village in Manchuria Burned—Even Women Killed.

NEW JAP ATTACK REPELLED

Ineffectual Bombardment of Port Arthur on Thursday Reported Through Russian Sources—Islanders Fiercely Determined to Bottle Up the Russian Fleet—Admiral Stark Expects a Third Attack—Gen. Kuropatkin Says: "No Japanese After Having Landed Shall Return to His Country."

Pekin, Feb. 26.—Private advices from Newchwang confirm the reports of the ill-treatment of Japanese refugees at the hands of the Russians while they were journeying through Manchuria, and declare, moreover, that some of the refugees were without doubt cruelly murdered. The Russian soldiery at Newchwang is so undisciplined that that place is unfit for European women.

Even Women Were Killed.

London, Feb. 26.—In a cablegram from Shanghai, a correspondent of The Daily Mail reports the arrival there of the Japanese cruisers Idsumo, Sama and Akitsushima.

The Tien Tsin correspondent of The Standard sends in a report from a native source that the Russians have burned a large village, including the women, in revenge for an attempt to wreck the Sungari bridge.

JAPS REPULSED.

New Attack on Port Arthur Declared to Be Ineffectual.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 25.—6 p.m.—Rumors are in circulation here this afternoon to the effect that a bombardment of Port Arthur is now going on.

Japs Everywhere Repulsed.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 25.—6.32 p.m.—Major-General Pflug (the chief of staff of Viceroy Alexieff) telegraphs as follows under to-day's date: "The enemy again attacked Port Arthur from 1 to 3 a.m. and was everywhere repulsed. Details follow."

To Bottle Up the Fleet.

Following the despatch of Major-General Pflug saying the Japanese has again attacked Port Arthur Thursday morning and had been repulsed, Viceroy Alexieff has sent an identical report to the Czar. The fact that the Japanese have renewed the attack is interpreted here to mean that they are determined to bottle up or destroy the Russian fleet at Port Arthur in order to give themselves freedom for land manoeuvres to cut off or invest the city, or as a feint to cover a movement elsewhere.

Third Attack Expected.

Paris, Feb. 26.—In a despatch from St. Petersburg, a correspondent of The Echo de Paris says the last, or second, Japanese attack at Port Arthur was repulsed brilliantly. He says the Japanese were again obliged to quit the roadstead. It is presumed that the entire squadron joined in the second attack hoping to avenge the repulse of the preceeding day. The Japanese are supposed to have incurred further losses during this long fight. Admiral Stark has telegraphed that he expects a third attack.

War to the Death.

Continuing, the correspondent says that Gen. Kuropatkin had started for his home to take leave of his mother before going to the East, and he quotes the general as having said: "This war may last eighteen months, but every arrangement has been made that no Japanese after having landed shall return to his country."

These reports may safely be taken with much latitude, as they came wholly through Russian sources, and Russian reports of victories have an irritating way of starting off big but being whittled down fine as the days go by.

Admiral Togo Succeeded.

London, Feb. 26.—No further news of an attack at Port Arthur after the engagement in which the Japanese attempted to block the harbor entrance, has reached London. English newspapers, in discussing Viceroy Alexieff's reports, incline to the belief that Admiral Togo succeeded in making the channel impassable for large battleships, even if it is still free to smaller craft, and presume that the reported second attack, if it did occur, was devoted to an attempt to sink further obstacles to navigation.

ESTABLISHING AN ALIBI

Kennedy Not in the Willows at Hour of Irene Cole's Slaying.

Witnesses For the Defence in the Brantford Murder Trial Supply Evidence Tending to Support the Contention of the Accused's Counsel—Mr. Heyd Hopes For Acquittal on Ground That Evidence Is Wholly Circumstantial.

Brantford, Feb. 26.—One of the most singular trials in Canadian jurisprudence will close to-day, when a jury will be asked to impose the death penalty on Joseph Kennedy, a tramp, for the murder of Irene Cole, an eight-year-old child. The Crown and defence have concluded their evidence. The arguments of Messrs. Day, Wilkes and Heyd will probably consume Friday and the jury will receive the court's charge in the evening. The defence is an alibi of considerable strength. Kennedy was not put in the witness box.

Dr. Ellis of Toronto, who examined supposed blood stains on the clothes of the prisoner was the last witness for the Crown yesterday. Pieces of Kennedy's clothing on the day of the murder were sent to Dr. Ellis. The spots he unhesitatingly pronounced to be blood. The prisoner said this was the blood of a chicken he had killed that day. In this case Dr. Ellis thought he could swear that the samples were probably human blood.

Mr. Heyd Confident.

This was the slender thread on which Kennedy's life was hung. Mr. Heyd, counsel for the prisoner, observed to the press men, shortly after his side of the case began, that the jury exhibited signs of sympathy and he felt confident of an acquittal or a disagreement.

Among the witnesses were: Robt. Hunter, Peter and George Scran, John Young, W. Morrow, John Melton, Jarvis Grigg, John Duncan, W. Clement, Charles Preley, Ben Spenser, Chas. Lewis, Clyde Bowman, Frank Fowler, Geo. Synington, W. Heazley, M. J. Lawler, Fred. Webber, D. Gladiator and Jailer Wilson.

An interesting witness was little Mamie Mattice, a child with big brown eyes and bright face, about the age of the murdered girl. She was a belated witness for the Crown. "He is the same man, except his face is not red," observed the little witness, deliberately looking straight at the jail-bleached prisoner.

Proving an Alibi.

Geo. Synington, a cobbler, supplied information tending to establish an alibi. The murder is fixed between 1.30 and 3 p. m. Synington relates that he was in a part of town remote from the scene of crime at 2 p.m. A man was sitting by the roadside reading. Being a cobbler he noticed closely the man's boots. They were of the "old country" pattern. Being from the "old country" he looked the man over more closely—thought he might be an acquaintance. He did not see his face. A pair of coarse, well worn boots were exhibited. The witness said they were the same this man wore that day. They had been taken from the prisoner.

William Heazley, a barber, was certain the prisoner was in his shop between 1 and 2 the day of the crime. At 4 o'clock of that day John Duncan said the man was in his saloon.

Charles Preley saw Kennedy drinking in another saloon between 3 and 4. Wesley Clement verified Preley's statement.

D. Gladiator testified that he had seen and talked with the prisoner at 5 p.m. that day. He exhibited no signs of excitment. There was no blood on his clothing. M. J. Lawler at 4.30 saw the prisoner in a saloon. This must have been less than two hours after the child was killed, but the witness observed nothing unusual in his condition.

J. C. Drummond, caretaker of the Y.M.C.A., said that between 12 and 3 that day Kennedy had been in the rooms and had secured from him a pen and ink. He was there from 1.30 to 2. He was sure of this. This would unquestionably establish an alibi. Drummond made an excellent witness. He is a mechanic. For a week he was confined in jail for fighting. There he met the man whose life his testimony is calculated to save.

Joseph Simpson swore he had seen the man in the Woobine Hotel at 1.30 the day of the murder.

Waved Hand on Dyke.

Frank Fowler testified that he went along the dyke at 1.15 on the afternoon of the crime.

The significance of Mr. Fowler's evidence is that the witness somewhat resembles the prisoner, Kennedy, being similar in features, of florid complexion, but of slightly lighter build. At 1 o'clock, witness left his house on Park avenue and proceeded along Erie avenue and mounted the dyke. Going along he saw Mrs. Page in her yard pulling cabbages, but he did not see her at first. Witness went along to a point in the rear of Cole's yard and then went back and again looked in Page's yard to see if Mr. Page was there. He had just come out of the house. In passing Potter's yard he saw the two Potter children playing together. This was about 1.15, the witness judging the hour by the time it took him to walk from his house. He saw no one else on the dyke.

After the murder witness thought it his duty to report the affair to the magistrate and he did.

The witness touched his hat while on the dyke and when he did so the Potter children stared steadily at him. He had a gun in his hand, but it was hidden by the bushes. He proceeded down the dyke and some distance below met W. Secord.

On the day in question witness wore a black hat with a wide rim, and a brown checkered coat of a darker hue than was found on Kennedy at the time of his arrest.

Canadian Order of Foresters.

Brantford, Feb. 26.—At a meeting of the executive committee of the Canadian order of Foresters yesterday afternoon the following officers were chosen: John A. Stewart, Perth, Ont., high chief ranger; Clevis Laporte, Montreal, high vice-chief ranger; George Faulkner, Ottawa, high secretary. The change was necessitated owing to the death of the late Thomas White, high secretary.

Priest Killed By Electricity.

Montreal, Feb. 26.—Rev. Father Bouchard, a leading member of the Jesuit order, in this city was suddenly killed yesterday afternoon while attempting to arrange some electrical appliances under the platform of the amphitheatre. The shock was a very severe one, and the reverend father was instantly killed. Father Bouchard was 45 years of age.

JUNKETTING MINISTERS.

The following news item recently went the rounds of the press:

"Hon. Clifford Sifton, accompanied by a party of friends, left last night by private car for Texas. They expect to be absent for a fortnight."

Isn't it nice to be a Cabinet Minister? These be the days when the Government private cars, unsparingly condemned by the Grits when the Conservative Ministers used them, are being overworked by the present "economists." Mr. Sifton is the fourth Minister to leave Ottawa within a few weeks "by private car." Sir William Mulock took a run down to Mexico, where he has been having a good time with President Diaz. Mr. Fielding had an outing in the Southern States. Mr. Emmerson has been travelling in the special car built for the Prince and Princess of Wales, and Mr. Sifton is being hauled to faraway Texas, enjoying himself at the country's expense.

What delightful trips these must be. As Mr. Sifton passed through the snow covered fields of Canada, chatting with his friends and contentedly puffing a fifty-cent cigar, with what pity must he have watched some sterling farmer working away in a temperature far below zero, in order to earn the money which goes to pay for those pleasant excursions of the Liberal Ministers.

Perhaps some woodman was seen by the now wealthy Mr. Sifton. If he happens to be a good workman he is paid one dollar per day and found. The ladies in the car probably sympathised with the "poor rough fellow."

But a request to "pass the cigars, porter" quickly banished all thought of the "man who pays for the car, the smokes and the sumptuous dinners," and in a few moments many days pay of the hard working lumberman went up in smoke.

It is true that Mr. Sifton and his fellow-Ministers were at one time hotly opposed to private cars. But it is so different now. And who, when basking in the warm rays of a Texas sun, cares to think of the chap who makes a dollar a day, pays the increased duty which the Liberals imposed on his tobacco and sugar, and incidentally contributes the funds which buy fifty centers for the "democrats to the hilt," and pay their and their friends' railway and other expenses.

For Saturday we will have a splendid display of

The town of Villeray has refused to vote a bonus to an industry, which fact leads the Montreal Gazette to remark:

"If there were more of the Villeray kind of ratepayers, municipal debts might be smaller and industries just as numerous as they are to-day."

Belleville's experience certainly bears out the Gazette's contention, for it is a significant fact that, in this city, hardly any of the industries bonused in the past are now running, while those which came in asking no favors are holding their own and in some cases rapidly going ahead. The day of the bonus-hunter, in this city, has probably gone for good.

What is needed in this city, more than anything else, is a feeling of local patriotism which goes deep enough to penetrate the pocket. Why don't some of our well-to-do people signify their willingness to take stock in the proposed furniture factory? Good judges say it will pay as well as the Lock Factory. That's the way to build up Belleville.

WAS LAST LIVING WITNESS OF 1819 CATASTROPHE.

CORRESPONDENT RELATES INTERESTING INCIDENTS IN CONNECTION WITH LIFE OF LATE MRS. ELIZA LOTT.

An esteemed Sidney Crossing correspondent writes as follows to The Intelligencer:

Dear Sir,—Having noticed in your Wednesday's issue of The Daily Intelligencer an account of the death of our aged neighbor and friend, Mrs. Eliza Lott, I thought, perhaps, as she was the last living witness of the great Adolphustown catastrophe of 1819, a short sketch of her life would be of interest to not a few of the readers of your esteemed paper.

Mrs. Lott was born Dec. 15th, 1807, on the 2nd concession of the Township of Sidney. Her mother, Mrs. Belnap, was left a widow with three small children, of whom Eliza (Mrs. Lott) was the oldest. It was in the year 1819, when the deceased was about twelve years of age, and stopping at Mr. Wm. Cassey's of Cassey's Point (Hay Bay), that she became a witness of that dreadful drowning accident that caused so many homes to mourn the untimely loss of loved ones, and among the victims of which she might have been numbered but for the kindly restraining hand of her friend, Mr. Cassey. It is hardly necessary here to go over the details of that never-to-be-forgotten accident, as it is but a few years since it was reviewed in the Napanee Beaver and also The Intelligencer.

Some time after this Mrs. Lott's mother was united in marriage to Chas. Bonisteel, and moved, with her three children, to the Front of Sidney. In 1828 Eliza was married to the late Andrew Lott and again moved to the 2nd concession, where they lived until 1882 or 1883, when they moved into the Township of Murray, near Trenton. In 1885 Mrs. Lott became a widow and came to live with her daughter, Mrs. J. Carr. She was the mother of four sons and two daughters—Orison, George, Ransom, Mary, Margaret and Philip. Three of her sons, Orison, George and Philip, have long since passed away; the fourth, Ransom, lives on the farm in Murray. One daughter, Mrs. Burt, lives in Chicago; the other is Mrs. Carr, with whom the deceased lived since her widowhood. Byron O. Lott, Liberal candidate for West Hastings, is a grandson.

Mrs. Lott not only lived to see grandchildren, but grandchildren unto the fifth generation. Deceased was a quiet, gentle, amiable, Christian woman, beloved by all who knew her; a member of the Methodist church, to which she was united about fifty years ago, together with her husband, under the pastorate of the Rev. Wm. Bird.

Died in Ogdensburg.

Mrs. Norman Latham, whose home is near Lynn, Ont., died suddenly yesterday whilst on a visit to her daughter in Ogdensburg, N.Y. The deceased was well known in this city, where she spent her girlhood days. She was a daughter of the late Mr. James Blakely and a sister of Mr. E. L. Palen, who resides here. Although Mrs. Latham had been unwell for some time, the end came quickly, she expiring whilst sitting in a chair. Heart disease was the cause. Deceased was about 46 years of age. She was a member of the Methodist Church. A husband and family survive. The remains will be taken to Lynn for interment.

Egg Toast.

Beat an egg with a pinch of salt. Take slices of bread and dip both sides in the egg. Put two ounces of butter in an enameled frying pan and when very hot set the slices of bread in it. Fry to a nice golden brown on both sides. Serve hot with white sugar sifted over.

Bouillon stains can be removed from a delicate silk or other fabric by first sponging with ether, then applying French chalk to the wrong side of the material and leaving it all night.

Do not think the secret of a woman's beauty lies in the use of cosmetics. It is found in resplendent health and a happy mind.

The best evidence that women do not want to vote is found in the fact that they do not vote.—Philadelphia Post.

BRONCHITIC ASTHMA A HEAVY BURDEN.

Asthma is bad enough, but when bronchial symptoms are added the poor sufferer has almost an intolerable existence. An absolute specific is found in fragrant, healing Catarrhozone, which cures chronic cases that other remedies won't even relieve. "For years," writes Capt. Macdonald, of Montreal, "I battled with the agonies of bronchitis asthma. Often I couldn't sleep for nights at a time. I spent thousands on doctors and medicines, without relief, but one dollar's worth of Catarrhozone cured me. Catarrhozone can't fail; it's guaranteed. Two months' treatment $1.00; trial size 25c.

The Hygiene of Perfumes.

Perfumes are not selected for their hygienic value, but such they have. Doctors tell us that a handkerchief may be made antiseptic by the use of perfume. The action of the spirit of the scent and the essential oils can destroy the germs. Lavender is supposed to soothe the nerves. That is why the bed linen is lavender scented. Jasmine induces nerve exhaustion and depression. Don't use strong scent; use delicate, clean perfumes only.

Kisses.

There are three classes of women:
Women who want to be kissed.
Women who do not want to be kissed.
Women who look as though they would like to be kissed, but won't let men kiss them.

The first men kiss, the second they do not kiss, the third they marry.—Life.

WHY BRAIN WORKERS BREAK DOWN.

Man is not a machine that keeps going as long as the steam is applied. He is a creature of blood, nerves and delicately balanced organism. Many don't realize this, but overwork their brains and break down. Brain workers need a strong, bracing tonic like Ferrozone to fortify their nerves and keep the blood pure and rich. Take Ferrozone and you'll do more work. You will have the strength, the ambition and the desire for work, because your system will be in first-class order. For your health and strength take Ferrozone regularly. Price 50c at druggists.

Old Time Carving Terms.

In an old number of a magazine issued more than a century ago we lighted upon a list of different terms used at "tables of elegance" in the days when Queen Charlotte came as the bride of the young and handsome king. From this list it would appear that nothing in the way of game was to be carved. The correct phrase was to "cut up" a turkey, to "rear" a goose, to "unlace" a hare or rabbit, to "wing" a partridge or a quail, to "allay" a pheasant, to "dismember" a heron, to "thigh" a woodcock, to "display" a crane and to "lift" a swan. Beef and mutton were "carved," of course, and the sporting men prided themselves by using appropriate sporting terms when the spoil of their morning's work made its final appearance on the table.—Modern Society.

FOR STOMACH TROUBLES.

"I have taken a great many different medicines for stomach trouble and constipation," says Mrs. S. Greiger, of Dunkerton, Iowa, "but never had as good results from any as from Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets." For sale by all druggists.

NESTLE'S FOOD

TALK IT OVER

Yes, talk over the question of the best food to give your baby with every one who can help you. Especially talk it over with your doctor. You may have been fortunate during the past Summer, but you know of very many mothers who have had serious trouble with their children because the right food could not be found for them. You remember the experiments they made, the constant change from milk to one food or another, and the struggle and danger which it all meant.

We will send you, free of charge, a trial package of Nestle's Food sufficient for eight meals.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

THE LITERAL PIG.

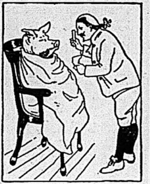
His Attempt to Make a Mother Goose Story Come True.

"Oof, oof!" grunted the literal Pig, gazing intently on a page out of "Mother Goose" which little Bill had dropped into his pen:

> Barber, Barber, shave a pig!
> How many hairs will make a wig?
> Four and twenty; that's enough.
> Give the poor Barber a pinch of snuff.

"What's the use of writing such stuff about what never happened? But never mind; I shall make this literally true by going through the experience. I believe in being literal. Oof, oof!"

Saying which the literal Pig set out for the Barber Shop in the village. The Barber was much amused to see a Pig come into the shop, but his amusement grew into amazement when the literal Pig said in good pig English, "I want a shave."



"WHERE'S THE PINCH OF SNUFF I GET?"

"You?" cried the good man in great confusion.

"Yes, I," said the literal Pig.

When the Barber could control himself he set Piggy in a chair and began to cut his bristles. "Hurt you?" asked the Barber.

"Like fury," said the Pig, "but it must be done to be literal. By the way, how many hairs would it take to make a wig?"

"About a thousand," said the Barber.

"No, no. To be literal, it would take four and twenty. That's enough, don't you know?" droned the Pig.

"Well, to be literal," said the Barber, "where's the pinch of snuff I get?"

"I really forgot it," cried the Pig in dismay.

"Then, to be literal," answered the Barber sternly, "I can't finish the job for nothing. You get out!"

"That's the most literal thing I've learned," grunted the Pig.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

What Boys Should Know.

A philosopher has said that true education of boys is to "teach them what they ought to know when they become men."

First.—To be true and to be genuine. No education is worth anything that does not include this. A man would better not know how to read and be true and genuine in action rather than be learned in all sciences and in all languages and be at the same time false in heart and counterfeit in life.

Second.—To be pure in thought, language and life—pure in mind and body.

Third.—To be unselfish; to care for the feelings and comforts of others; to be generous, noble and manly. This will include a genuine reverence for the aged and for things sacred.

Fourth.—To be self reliant and self helpful even from childhood; to be industrious always and self supporting at the earliest possible age. Teach them that all honest work is honorable; that an idle life of dependence on others is disgraceful.

When a boy has learned these things, when he has made these ideas part of him, however poor or however rich, he has learned the most important things he ought to know.

Barnyard Circus.

Here is a good indoor game for fun which is called "barnyard circus." Some one will tell the girls and boys that she will give each one the name of an animal, and then she will count three, and when she says three each one is to imitate the sound that the animal whose name she has received makes, as, for instance, if one has been given cow he would say "Moo-oo!" or rooster "Cock-a-doodle-doo!" They are told to imitate the sound as loudly and clearly as possible. But whoever gives the names must tell every person except one to keep quiet. Then to the one person whom she has not told to keep quiet she gives the name of an animal, and when she says three the one person only will shout whatever sound he is to make.

My Grandmamma.

Grandmamma wears a soft gray gown;
It's silky when I smooth it down.
I hope I'll wear a soft gray gown
When I am old like her.

Grandmamma's hair is snowy white;
It always sparkles in the light.
I hope my hair will be as bright
When I am old like her.

Grandmamma's smile is very sweet;
My papa says it "can't be beat."
I hope my smile will be as sweet
When I am old like her.

Grandmamma knows I love her well;
I love her more than I can tell.
I hope little girls will love me well
When I am old like her.

—Eva March Tappan in Youth's Companion.

Her Dollies.

"What are you going to do with your dolls, Sallie?"

"I'm going to give them to a poor little girl I know so's papa will buy me some new ones."

THE PREVAILING MODES.

The Short Bolero Effect—Ample Sleeves and Cape Effects.

The short bolero effect with short, wide sleeves is the favorite model just now, and this has a full underblouse of lace and very full lace sleeve puffs. The skirts hang full back and front, with gored or shirred ruffles.

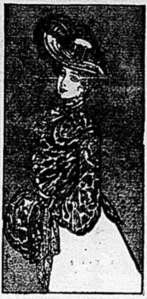
The close fitting small hat is seen alike for dressy and street wear. It is of fine velvet trimmed with a single shaded plume.

Waists of black mousseline de soie trimmed with long fringe and having semitransparent yokes are very dainty for evening wear.

The heavy blouse of cream lace is most effective to wear with tailor made suits.

The broader the shoulders the smarter the gown, and this breadth, together with the fullness of the sleeves, makes the waist line appear very small.

Despite the prejudice against birds they are shown in profusion, the natural feathers in many cases having the additions of patches of bright coloring. The brush osprey is dying out, but the paradise plume remains. Very becoming are the toques made entirely of feathers, and some of the plumage is very lovely and evidently belongs to foreign birds of some rarity. Hats are still large and spreading and project in front, but toques have exceedingly deep brims, especially at the back. Toques are worn in different ways, as some fall low over the forehead and others are raised and show a great deal of the front hair.



COAT OF BABY LAMB.

The illustration shows a baby lamb coat and flat muff. Both are trimmed with handsome yellow lace.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

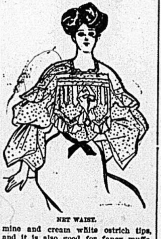
FASHION HINTS.

Fur Stoles Are Becoming More Elaborate and Large.

Fur stoles have become more and more elaborate, and they have also increased in size until they reach the dimensions of little capes and are used to the exclusion of other wraps with tailor made dresses.

One of the smartest of these stole capes seen recently was of moleskin, having a double cape effect and long stole-like ends. Tiny lapels were of ermine, and the ends of the stole had crosspieces of this fur added in.

Moleskin, by the way, makes a charming turban combined with ermine and cream white ostrich tips, and it is also good for fancy muffs, shirred in with a ruffle of yellowish lace.



NET WAIST.

Really good dresses cannot be cheap this year on account of the quantities of material needed and the patient fancy needlework required in the trimmings.

Ready made robes can be made into the prettiest ball and dinner gowns imaginable at one-third of what they would cost all ready made.

The new stoles are so varied that choice becomes a difficult matter. The most decorative and uncommon exhibit a great deal of lace, either in stripes or medallions. Ermine is much used in combination with other furs and bordered with skunk, sable or squirrel. The new plush coats are made with deep tucks or frills and have much silk passementerie and chenille fringe or tassels.

The illustration shows a net waist combined with lace and narrow velvet ribbon. This particular model would be charming in ecru and red.

A Promising Camp.

One of the most promising districts in British Columbia is that lying about the thriving city of Kamloops, B.C. The unlimited resources of the Pacific Province are shown here in all variety: Grazing lands, where thousands of cattle live and grow fat on the nutritious bunch grass; fruit lands in the valleys, farm lands on the benches, and mining lands on the mountains with good transportation facilities; an enterprising community and a glorious climate will make the Kamloops district.

A large amount of progress has been made in all lines, but the riches to be wrested from nature's treasure vaults in gold and silver and copper attract most attention. As a mining camp the district has not been boomed by the unscrupulous promoter but development has gone on quietly until to-day it is proved beyond a doubt that in all the rich sections of the great Dominion, Kamloops is second to none. The Cherry Creek Copper King mines, whose advertisement appears in another column, have secured one of the most promising properties in the camp, which was secured on very favorable terms. John Redman, M.E., in his annual report on the camp, says:—

"This group of claims, which is well known, possess some promising and extensive showings on the continuation of the Iron Mask lead. The following extract from the Company's prospectus fairly describes these, and I believe is a conservative description:

"The veins on the 'O.K.' which have been opened up by surface work and a shaft east and west at the 50-foot level is a true fissure, about 90 feet in width at the shaft. The strike of the lead is northeast and southwest, with a dip to the southeast of about 60 degrees. The ore bodies are lenticular, occurring throughout the vein filling. From these lenses a high-grade pyritic copper ore assaying from 10 per cent. to 10 per cent. copper and from $4 to $8 in gold is taken. A sampling of the fissure where exposed in the shaft gave an average of 12.60 per cent. copper and $6.75 in gold.

"A parallel vein on the Prince Charles has been opened up by a small shaft and a good body of medium grade pyritic ore uncovered. The extent of this body is apparently large but must be proved by further development. Average assays of this body give 70 per cent. copper and $6.75 in gold.

The company embraces some of the most responsible and successful business men of the Interior, and is setting forth its plans with a care and foresight not always devoted to the most prominent mining enterprises."

A perusal of their advertisement will show the plan for securing the shareholders.

When buying clothing, beware of the man who offers you $10 and $12 suits or overcoats for $3.98 or $4.76 Then again, do not be governed too much by the marked price—look to the value, the worth, the texture, trimmings and make of the goods themselves. A comparison thus made will show conclusively that the prices we quote are lower than goods of equal worth or quality can be bought for elsewhere.

Fire did $15,000 damage in St. Stephen, N. B., Thursday morning.

Connor O'Kelly, Nationalist M. P. for Mayo, has sailed for America for a four months' visit.

John Williams' brick residence, near Chesley, was ignited from the furnace; loss, $2,500.

Fire practically wiped out the business centre of Conneaut Harbor, O., at a loss of $100,000.

Three lives were lost in a fire that threatened the business section of Colorado Springs, Col. Loss, $10,000.

Gracie Barber, aged 6, of Oxbow, N.W.T., opened a stove door while in her nightdress and was burned to death.

Labor's difficulties with contractors led to attempted dynamiting of a new railway bridge, near Ansonia, Conn., and the guards have since been fired at in the dark.

LIFE FOR LIFE.

Kittanning, Pa., Feb. 26.—Harry A. Zillafro was hanged here yesterday for the murder of his wife. He was 21 years old.

Pittsburg, Pa., Feb. 26.—John Conroy, convicted of killing his wife while she was asleep, was hanged in the jailyard yesterday.

Wilmington, N.C., Feb. 26.—For the murder of Jesse E. Soles and Jim Stanley at Whiteville, last March, and the burning of their house to conceal the crime, Jabel Rogister was hanged yesterday.

New York, Feb. 26.—Martin Ebolt was found guilty yesterday of the murder of his wife, and sentenced to be electrocuted at Sing Sing during the week of April 11.

Francesco Raffo, convicted of murdering Special Policeman Maurice Ahearn, was also sentenced to be electrocuted at Sing Sing the same week.

Will Memorialize Government.

Toronto, Feb. 26.—The Western Good Roads Association discussed the proposal to introduce wide tires in lieu of the present narrow tires yesterday. It was moved by R. F. Miller and C. E. Lundy that the Western Good Roads Association memorialize the Provincial Government to amend section 132 of the Municipal Act of 1903 by giving power to county engineers, or to a Government engineer, to examine bridges affected by said section from time to time as they require to be built or repaired, and to determine what should be the proper length and that the engineer's award shall be binding upon the township and county alike. The motion was unanimously adopted. Toronto was chosen as the next place of meeting.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The Easter hat jokes are beginning to appear in the newspapers. This, coupled with the fact that boys have been seen playing marbles, is convincing proof that, in spite of the frigid temperature and high snowbanks, spring is not very far away. So cheer up.

We beg to offer our congratulations to our good friends of Bridge St. Church over the fact that they have seen fit to send Mr. William Johnson as their delegate to the Sunday School convention to be held at Jerusalem. It is a fitting testimonial to a man who has spared neither time nor pains to advance the cause of Christianity in general and Bridge St. Church in particular.

• • •

Bon voyage and good luck to Mr. Johnson, may his experiences be as pleasant as they are sure to be profitable, and may he not need the offices of a good Samaritan if perchance he takes the trip from Jerusalem to Jericho.

• • •

He will visit the land of the Pharaohs, too, and oh! won't it be delightful, about a month from now, to see Mr. Johnson, on top of one of the Egyptian pyramids, giving the Chautauqua salute to his fellow-pilgrims!

• • •

We will venture the assertion, just the same, that in all his travels our good friend will come across nothing more impressive or weird than that sacred and neglected spot, the old d.s.b.g.

• • •

It is to be hoped that everybody is bearing in mind the public meeting called for next Monday night. The Trent Valley Canal should certainly be finished, and we all are in duty bound to lift up our voices and shout for it. The meeting was called for the Council Chamber, but as that isn't large enough the place has been changed to the City Hall.

• • •

Success to our hockey boys to-night; they are a dreadful long way from home.

Two young ladies were talking on Front St. last night. "Oh! he's so ridiculously shy," said one, "It took me about a week before I could get a chance to give him a hint that Mommer didn't object to his calling." Evidently that girl realizes that this is leap year.

SLEEP IS PRICELESS.

BUT IT CAN BE OBTAINED BY SIMPLE METHODS.

Are you a hard worker? Are you overcome with fatigue at the end of each day's labor, and instead of retiring to bed with a feeling of satisfaction at the prospect of a night's repose, do you wait the hour of bedtime with dread and shrinking?

Is it your unhappy lot to be awakened every night, just as you have dropped off to sleep, by an intense, uncontrollable itching of the rectum? Do you then endeavor to relieve the sensation by scratching so desperately that the skin becomes raw and lacerated, and you finally sink into the sleep of exhaustion?

If so, you do not need to be told that you are afflicted with itching piles. You have probably tried every remedy you could hear of, with but temporary relief, if any, and have concluded there was nothing left for you but to drag out a miserable existence. As a drowning man grasps at a straw, so should you eagerly devour the words of W. O. Milbury, 70 Pearl street, Reading, Mass.

"I am pleased to state that I bought one fifty cent box of Pyramid Pile Cure at the drug store, and used about one half of it, and it not only cured me of itching piles, but also of constipation, a trouble of about fifteen years standing. I have tried almost everything without any lasting benefit, but I can honestly and truthfully state that Pyramid Pile Cure has entirely cured me, as I have had no return of this terrible itching, which used to keep me awake by the hour, night after night. If the old trouble should ever return I will know just what to do, but I guess it won't for it is now six or seven months since I first used this wonderful remedy."

We vouch for the authenticity of this testimonial, and as Mr. Milbury found relief and a cure, so you may also. Do not delay, but buy a box and try it to-night, and do not allow any dealer to sell you "something just as good." You will do well to write Pyramid Drug Co., Marshall, Mich., for their little book on the causes and cure of piles, which is sent free for the asking.

MILLINERY OF THE MOMENT

Styles and Trimmings Which Are Rather Smart.

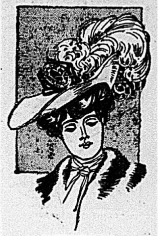
Millinery becomes more and more picturesque as the season advances. The shapes are growing larger and more pronounced. Plumed hats are a necessity for dressy occasions, and the plumes, arranged in a variety of ways so that they droop in the hair, are supposed to match the tints of the gown.

Turbans made of flowers, rough felt or chiffon velvet are very smart and are worn on all occasions. A bunch of cock's plumes drooping over the left ear is a favorite trimming.

The French sailor has graduated into a dressy hat. It even comes made of ermine or sable and trimmed with white ostrich tips.

Rough felts are still popular, and these are prettiest in all black and all white relieved by a small touch of color.

Gainsborough and picture hats are very smart for the few who can wear them. In general the attempt to revive the high crown on other hats proves unsuccessful.



GAINSBOROUGH HAT.

A mixture of royal blue and white is popular in Paris. A charming three cornered white beaver hat had strappings of blue velvet caught by fancy filigree buttons. It is curious that royal blue should die so hard in Paris. It was a favorite color last winter and still holds its own. White, too, is always popular in the winter with dark furs. Of course it is extravagant wear, but nothing looks so well. White corduroy velvets are perfectly lovely and will be a leading feature of the early Monte Carlo fashions. They are softened with lace and panne trimmings and worn with stoles of sable or mink and a brown hat.

The cut shows a Gainsborough hat of pale gray felt trimmed with a deeper gray panne scarf and a shaded feather.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

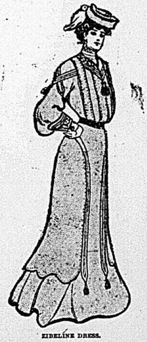
FOR COLD DAYS.

Handsome Fur Coats With Loose Sleeves—Overskirt Effects.

The fur coat is now with us in all its glory. The loose or sack shape seems to be the favorite for beautiful minks and sables. The whole thing gives the effect of a cape with full sleeves. These sleeves are filled in at the lower edge with ruffles of lace, so that when the arm is raised it gives a very dainty effect.

Ruching appears on many of the dressy gowns, and these have pinked edges and are best made of taffeta or some other thin silk.

Borders of fur, particularly mink, are seen on many smart French gowns. A combination of cloth, mink or sable and Irish lace is especially desirable.



ZIBELINE DRESS.

Overskirt effects are appearing on a few of the French gowns, but this is a trying style to all but a few tall, slender women.

Petticoats with heavily shirred flounces are used to wear with the thinner gowns which require holding out around the feet.

There is no doubt about it that wine color and mink or sable are beautiful mixtures and give a cheery touch of color to the somberness of autumn days.

The picture shows a costume of the popular old rose zibeline.

THE YELLOW MAN.

A THRILLING STORY OF THE BOXERS IN CHINA

BY CARLTON DAWE.

Copyright, 1900.
By Paul R. Reynolds.

positively to the lips, the open letter trembling in her hand, her eyes starting with terror.

"Good heavens!" I cried. "What has happened?"

"Nothing," she gasped, "nothing. Let us get back to the ship."

"But you are ill. You are going to faint. You"—

I caught her as she staggered, but with an effort she regained her equilibrium.

"No; I am not well, that is all," she murmured; "a sudden faintness; the heat perhaps. Let us hurry back."

"But won't you sit down and rest or have some refreshment? The ship will not sail for the next three hours."

"No—I know. But she is on board"—

"She?"

"My mother. I am anxious."

"You will take my arm?"

"Thank you."

Near the landing stage we met several other lady passengers going back to the ship, and in accordance with the wishes of my companion I placed her under their protection.

"I would rather go off with you," I said. "You have not yet sufficiently recovered."

"I am quite well, thank you."

She saw the anxiety in my face and smiled a wan, pitiful smile, I thought, but one that brought us nearer to each other than we had ever been.

"That letter had bad news?"

"Very. But you would not understand."

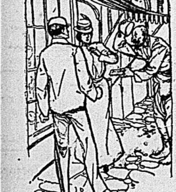
"I would try hard to understand anything that concerned your welfare."

"Thank you, Mr. Gray. This is something quite different from anything you ever heard of or imagined."

I helped her into the boat and stood watching until I saw her mount the ship's gangway and disappear. Then I turned about and retraced my steps toward the shops.

My mind was full of apprehension on her behalf. What did she mean by saying that this affair of the letter referred to something quite different from anything I had ever heard of or imagined? Who was she, what was she, how came she to be mixed up in an affair so full of mystery? What did this mean, this presentation of a letter by an Arab in this desert town? A commercial highway truly, yet in what way could she, a stranger, a woman, be connected with it? Yet how serious it must have been to cause her so much terror! I pictured again the blank look of horror which, spreading from her eyes, whitened her lovely face. I felt again the fierce, nervous clasp of her fingers on my arm, and I listened once more to her gasping utterances as she sought to reassure me. My mind buzzed with strange conjecture. In spite of the knowledge of my own intolerable position and the fact that, situated as I was, I had no right to look too longingly upon any woman I felt myself drawn insensibly toward the girl, and already her sorrow had become mine.

What did that letter contain? I would have given much to know, though from no mere inquisitiveness. Plainly it had thrown her into a state of abject terror, therefore it must have contained information of the utmost gravity. I cursed the shortness of our friendship, which rendered me to her practically an unknown quantity. That it was anything of which she personally had the slightest cause to be ashamed was a thought I never for one moment entertained. You see, I had embarked upon a venture, and I whipped my faith into obedience.



He presented Miss Hurst with a letter, salaamed again and walked off.

PILLS AND PILES.

A prolific cause of Piles is the use of cathartics and pills of a drastic, violent nature.

Followed by a reaction on account of the resinous, drying properties they contain.

There are other causes, but no matter what the cause or what the kind of Piles, Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid can be relied upon to cure—to stay cured.

It's an internal remedy that removes the causes of Itching, Blind, Bleeding or Suppurating Piles.

A guarantee goes with each package containing a month's treatment.

It can be obtained for $1.00 at druggists.

Sold in Belleville by J. S. McKeown.

A little while later on I met my uncle, Major Coghlan and one or two others, who, in the manner of passengers ashore, had taken possession of the street. The gallant soldier's gallant face was redder than ever, and from his exceedingly breezy manner I guessed that the desert sand in his throat had required a lot of moistening.

"The top of the mornin to you," he said. "What have you done with the lady?"

"She has gone off to the ship. Fagged out, I think."

"Aye, to be sure," said he, his eyes twinkling with merriment, or beer, "and mighty provokin weather it is and wants a dale of humorin."

But I felt in no mood for humoring it just then and refused the invitation to an adjacent cafe. I knew that at bottom the major was no friend of mine, and I feared his half drunken jests. On one point I was rather punctilious, and I knew that if he touched it we should undoubtedly quarrel. The fighting spirit of the Irishman is occasionally a thing to be admired, but more often it is one to be deplored. The whirling of shillalahs and the cracking of craniums do not appear to the more sober Saxon such mighty fine sport.

The major protested, but my uncle and I were obdurate, and as we walked along he fired a parting shot at us, upbraiding us for our unsociability. To this we did not reply. As I have said, the major was a privileged person.

"Fancy that brute having the impertinence to bother Miss Hurst with his attentions."

"Yes," answered my uncle dryly. "It is quite remarkable what importance some people seem to attach to themselves."

"The beast! He's half drunk."

"Make it three-quarters." Then, looking round, he said in a lower tone, "Seen anything?"

"No. And you?"

"Nothing. There can be no doubt that we have fairly given the society the slip. Here, which is a renowned hotbed of scoundrelism, we should have had some notification if our enemies had been on the watch."

Some notification. The phrase, striking with singular force, reminded me of Miss Hurst's adventure. Jim's face underwent many changes as he listened.

"Well, that's very queer," he said. "I suppose you have no idea what the letter contained?"

"Not the remotest. I only know that the reading of it gave her such a shock that she almost fainted."

That his thoughts flew at once to the society was painfully evident. I saw it in his face, and it awakened no surprise, for there was no other direction in which they could fly. My own had taken a similar course, only to be brought back with a jerk. What possible connection could there be between this girl and those yellow fiends? Of course it was ridiculous, but my association of the society with everything that was mysterious—and terrifying showed what a hold it had obtained over the imagination.

"Very, very curious," he muttered, but he did not otherwise voice his suspicions. He was as much ashamed as I of admitting the awful power of the society, and it was rather singular how we eschewed that which was uppermost in our minds.

We went aboard as soon as the sailors had finished washing down, and shortly after we had begun our journey through the canal I was pleased to see Miss Hurst come up on deck. My solicitude immediately drove me to her side, where, in answer to my many questions, she informed me that she was now quite recovered from the faintness which had so suddenly assailed her, and she begged me to say nothing of it. And in many ways she sought to apologize for her strange behavior, even going so far as to suggest that the mysterious letter contained nothing which warranted such a complete collapse on her part, to all of which I listened with due deference, but I thought that even her most vehement protestations betrayed her intense anxiety. There was an aftertone of fear in her voice which had almost a shuddering sound.

CHAPTER XIX.

MAN OVERBOARD.

It was the night before our arrival at Colombo. The weather had changed and was somewhat threatening. Dark clouds had begun to pile up from the southwest, and during the early hours of the evening a smart shower of rain had fallen, but otherwise there was nothing alarming in the state of the weather. The ship began to lurch a bit, quickly feeling the movement of the sea. Many predicted a rough night, but we were all thoroughly at home by this time, and a probable tossing caused us no apprehension. Besides, we should be in Colombo on the following morning, and the thought of a run ashore entirely outbalanced the fear of an evil night.

The sea rose somewhat after dinner, though not to any great extent, but the night was intensely dark, and the phosphorus glowed and glimmered about us like white fire. The wake was a wide, blazing road of light and showed up with strange distinctness in the surrounding blackness. But there were ominous murmurings in the wind, and as the ship began to labor somewhat the people retired rather earlier than usual.

After seeing Miss Hurst below I had gone to the smoking room to have a pipe, but finding the atmosphere rather oppressive, for in spite of the change it was still insufferably close below, I went out on the deck to finish my smoke. For a time I lounged against the rail a little forward of midships watching the bubbling phosphorus as it curled and twisted from our sides, thinking vaguely as one will under such conditions, when suddenly I was startled by a piercing shriek which came from away aft. I looked round, but along the dimly lighted decks there was not a soul to be seen. Bewildered, I stood for a moment half wondering if I had heard aright, when once more came the cry. This time there was no mistake, nor was I mistaken in the direction from which the sound came.

Hesitating no longer, I bounded away aft, oblivious of the fact that my footing was extremely unstable, and in my hurry I ran foul of one of the funnel stays, but picking myself up with alacrity, for the cries aft were now more urgent than ever, I dashed on.

Two figures were seen struggling violently against the auxiliary wheel aft, and presently the voice of Miss Hurst rang out clearly and distinctly, "Help! help!"

My heart almost stood still with horror. I felt as though the ship was sinking beneath me, but I cried aloud, what I don't know, and rushed toward her. It seemed to me that my feet dragged heavily, that the ship rolled still more furiously, for with a sudden lunge to port it hurled me into the lee scuppers. Half dazed, I rose to my knees and once more came that awful cry, "Help! help!" But it was muffled as with the terror of death. Scrambling to my feet, I distinctly saw the two figures struggling against the after rail, but before I could reach them one, the woman, was forced overboard and fell with a most awful cry into the sea.

My blood was frozen with horror. The cry of the woman I loved smote upon my heart and for the moment robbed me of energy; but the view of the man scudding across the deck awoke me, and thinking nothing of him I sprang aft and peered into the burning wake.

It may have been only my fancy, but away astern in the broad shaft of bubbling light I thought I saw a dark object, and without a moment's hesitation I sprang upon the rail. Then turning my face forward, where I knew the officer would be on watch, I shouted with all my might: "Help! Man overboard!" and jumped into the sea.

Clearing the screw safely, I came up in a whirlpool of bubbles, and with but a glance about to take my bearings I turned on my side and with a powerful overarm stroke—for I could swim fairly well in those days—tore down the white road of waters. Now, as I contemplate it, it seems as though I willfully courted death, incumbered as I was with clothes, but then I had no thought save that of reaching the woman, who had suddenly grown so dear to me.

I swam on, never giving a thought to the ship or whether my cry had been heard, and presently I saw an object, a round, dark, ball-like thing, dancing on the waters before me. Redoubling my energies, I quickly reached it and to my inexpressible joy found that it was she.

Only a muffled greeting passed between us, for the beaten track of water was quickly giving way to the natural swell of the ocean. But I seized her by the arm as if to support her, when, to my surprise and delight, I found that she was treading water.

"You can swim?" I gasped.

"Yes," she answered.

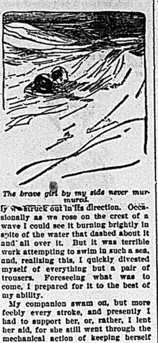
"Good! Courage!"

I turned to look after the ship; but, save for its lights, it was invisible, and those I could only see as I rose on the crest of a wave, for, though viewed from the high decks of a big liner, the sea that night was nothing terrifying, it was a dreadful chaos of waters when one was down in it.

The brave girl by my side never murmured, and, though it was too dark for me to see her face, I thought that the light from the white, curling tips of the waves caught the glow of her eyes, and in them I seemed to see the agony she was suffering. Occasionally I gasped a word of encouragement or asked a question, but the effort of replying was too great and much too dangerous, for every now and again a white monster reared and dashed over us, twisting us round like its own spray.

The lights of the ship grew dimmer and dimmer, and I already began to fear that my cry for help had not been heard, when suddenly as we rose on the crest of a wave somewhat bigger than usual I saw a glare upon the water some distance to the right of us. For the moment I scarcely remembered that ships nowadays use buoys with a flare attached to them and that these things, thrown into the sea, burn brightly and act as a beacon to those in the water and to those on board. I felt overjoyed, for it proved that my cry had been heard and meant that if we could only keep afloat we should stand an excellent chance of salvation.

She, too, had seen it, and instinctively struck out in its direction. Occasionally as we rose on the crest of a wave I could see it burning brightly in spite of the water that dashed about it and all over it. But it was terrible work attempting to swim in such a sea, and, realizing this, I quickly divested myself of everything but a pair of trousers. Foreseeing what was to come, I prepared for it to the best of my ability.



The brave girl by my side never murmured.

My companion swam on, but more feebly every stroke, and presently I had to support her, or, rather, I lent her aid, for she still went through the mechanical action of keeping herself afloat. Feeling her grow heavier every minute, I redoubled my efforts, very wildly, I fear, for the agony of the situation was holding me with a grip of terror. Realizing the futility of such a waste of energy and quickly grasping the fact that my one policy was to remain afloat, I soon abandoned my exhaustive efforts and, with a slower movement, struggled on, on. But the flare danced before me like a will-o'-the-wisp, and ever as I thought I drew nearer the thing, curling on the crest of a wave, seemed to my eyes, half blinded as they were by the spray, as far off as ever.

I felt my strength going. My heart beat ominously. I breathed with the utmost difficulty. The girl, though I could not see, though I dared not look, appeared to be unconscious. I felt one of her hands. It trailed in the water like a dead thing. How I fought, how I struggled to keep myself afloat! I seemed to hear my brain throb, throb, as throbs the propeller of a great steamship. My forehead was bursting with apprehension. I knew that I was surely sinking. The dead weight of the girl had completely paralyzed me on one side. I no longer kept the horizontal or semihorizontal position of the swimmer, but found my weary feet searching the perpendicular for support, the last extremity of the vanquished. Then in a sudden fit of fury I struck out fiercely once more, the last fearful effort of the drowning man, and presently my hand came in contact with something hard.

I drew back in terror, for even half conscious as I was I believed that I had struck some living thing, and the thought of a shark sent a thrill of horror through my enfeebled body. With eyes wildly staring I glared ahead, and as the flare still danced some distance off I felt that my suspicions were realized. But the light rising once more tinted the object with its glow, and a sudden thrill of happiness put new life into my flaccid muscles. It was no shark, but the life buoy to which the flare was attached.

With a few strokes I had reached it, and though the sea tried to tear it from my grasp I clung with the energy of a drowning man, and, though not without some difficulty, I slipped it over the head of the unconscious girl and got her arms above it. Then I breathed a fervent "Thank God!"

It all takes some time to tell, and to me that struggle with the waves seemed, and still seems, like an eternity, but in reality it was a battle of minutes and not many of them, though I am inclined to maintain that under such conditions one would find still fewer more than enough. When I looked round again, I saw the steamer coming up behind me, and presently she lay to, a world of welcome light. I had no fear now, and my eyes stung with something more than sea water as I looked up at the great lights and thought of the brave hearts and the willing hands which were coming to my rescue.

Miss Hurst during all this time remained unconscious, but I had no great difficulty in keeping her head above water, for with the new hope had come a new strength, and I already looked upon the whirling mass of dark sea around me as a monster who had been robbed of his prey. I knew she was not dead, and I wanted to know nothing more just then. If before she had seemed to me charming in every way, she now became the very breath of my existence, and in a mad way I felt glad that this thing had happened and that if I withdrew my supporting arm from her head the beautiful white face would slip through the buoy down, down into the black, bottomless depths of the ocean.

As An Act Of Humanity.

I ask you to tell me a friend who needs help. That is all—just the cost of a penny. Tell me to-day the name of some sick one.

Tell Me The Book to Send.

Then I will do this:—I will arrange with a druggist near him so that he may take six bottles Dr. Shoop's Restorative. He may take it a month to prove what it can do. If it succeeds the cost is $5.50. If it fails I will pay the druggist myself. And the sick one's mere word shall decide it.

It is but a trifle I ask of you—just a minute's time—a penny postal. And I ask it to aid a sick friend.

It is a remarkable thing that I do in return—something that no other physician ever offered. And I do it for a stranger.

Won't you do that little—and to-day—if I will do the rest?

You ask what good it will do.

That month's test will tell. It is true that my Restorative may fail. There is sometimes a cause — like cancer—which medicine cannot cure. But the very fact of my offer must prove that failures are rare, for if they were common the offer would ruin me.

In the past twelve years I have supplied my Restorative to hundreds of thousands on just those terms, and 39 out of 40 have paid gladly, because they got well. I have found that the cured ones are fair—and not a penny is wanted from the rest.

A sick one who neglects such an offer is unkind to himself, for success means health, and 39 out of each 40 secure it. Failure means nothing lost.

My boundless faith in this remedy is born of a lifetime's experience. I have tested it in hundreds of the most difficult cases that physicians ever meet. I have watched it succeed—countless times — when the best of other treatments failed.

I know what it will do.

My success comes from strengthening the inside nerves. I bring back the nerve power which alone operates all the vital organs.

I don't doctor the organs, for the best results of that method are only temporary. I give those weak organs strength to do their duty by restoring the only power that makes them act.

There is no other way. You cannot restore a weak engine by doctoring the machine. You must give it more steam—and inside nerve power is the steam of the body.

Tell me a friend who needs this help. The test will harm no one under any condition. And it may be that the sick one can otherwise never get well.

Presently a boat was lowered from the Omeo, and with intense eagerness I watched it, a small, dark object, come dancing over the waves. A man knelt in the bows waving a lantern above his head, and he it was who presently sang out, "Ahoy, there!"

"All right!" I shouted.

The next sound was the voice of the second mate in the stern as he shouted, "Easy all." It was close work, for it seemed to me that the boat came dangerously near striking us, but she was skillfully maneuvered, and after various futile efforts we were hauled safely aboard.

"A close thing," said the mate grimly as we turned our nose toward the liner.

"Very."

The men pulled in silence, the boat splashing and tossing ominously in the heavy sea. I still supported Miss Hurst's head and perceived with joy the first sign of returning consciousness, but when she attempted to move I bade her lie still, assuring her that all danger was over. She made no response, but I thought that her head nestled in closer against my breast, and I felt neither the wind nor the spray. But upon being raised to the deck of the Omeo she awoke again, and, gazing with wondering eyes upon the kind faces which surrounded her, she said simply, "Don't tell my mother." Then one of the lady passengers led her away, and my Uncle Jim, who was the first man to reach me as soon as I touched the deck, came between me and the crowd of curious but generally admiring spectators, and together we made our way below. Here I was subjected to a good rubbing, dosed with brandy and put between the sheets, and here shortly after I was visited by the captain. But I had nothing to tell beyond the fact that I had heard screams, saw the struggle and jumped overboard. As for the man who had committed the outrage, I had no conception of what he might be like, but I suggested that Miss Hurst might be able to give some information on that head.

"Unfortunately she is in a state of collapse," said the skipper, "and appears to know nothing beyond the fact that the man had a black face."

"Have you any blacks aboard?"

"None. Can't make it out at all. Fear her mind is a bit unhinged, and no wonder. Devilish plucky thing, though, Mr. Gray! I congratulate you. You are a lucky man."

I smiled to myself. Lucky! What irony! And yet it would appear so. If the officer on watch had not heard my cry and acted with the utmost promptitude, there would have been an end of me and my trouble. Once I might have cast a reflection on the wisdom of his promptitude, but latterly my life had been filled with thoughts other than those of self. I could imagine neither prince nor millionaire clinging to this world with a keener zest than that which now animated me.

CHAPTER XX.

A REVELATION.

Fortunately I suffered no ill effects from my immersion. When I awoke the next morning, the strange events of the previous night had left an impression on my mind only. Physically I seemed to have benefited in some extraordinary fashion. My limbs were freer, my spirit keener. I felt that something had happened which had laid open new and happy vistas of the world, and I entered on the journey of life with hope.

The captain visited me early and after once more congratulating me suddenly grew serious.

"I want to ask a favor of you," he said. "We have many nervous people on board, and the knowledge that this was a case of attempted murder would create the utmost consternation. You know what passengers are and to what extent they are likely to carry their fads. Let them once think that the decks are not safe or that they are liable to be murdered in their bunks and I can foresee a voyage unpleasant beyond all record. So I would be much obliged if you would say nothing at all of the attack and just let them think that Miss Hurst fell overboard. Fortunately it was a bad night, and, though they may wonder, they will not be altogether incredulous."

Of course I readily promised. There was nothing to be gained by inaugurating a reign of terror. From the captain's manner I was impressed with the belief that there would not be a repetition of the outrage on board the Omeo.

In reply to my inquiry if he had discovered any clew to the assailant he shook his head.

"No, and what makes the outlook so hopeless is Miss Hurst's insistence that her assailant was black. Now, I have made careful investigation, and I find there is no one on board answering in the least to her description. Indeed, the only person with us who is not white is a Chinaman who works in the galley."

"A Chinaman!"

Jim and I uttered the exclamation as with one breath, and our eyes instinctively sought those of each other. But neither spoke. After all, the mere mention of the word "Chinaman" was enough to set us agog. In what way could Miss Hurst be affected by the Society of the Hidden Meaning?

"Yes," continued the captain, "but he's as inoffensive as the rest of his race and would never dream of coming aft, much less of attacking a saloon passenger."

Inoffensive as the rest of his race! Dear, dear, it was an ironical world!

"The firemen?" I suggested, for they were the only men likely to come up from below with black faces.

"From certain circumstances to which the engineer bears unmistakable witness it could not have been one of his men."

"Then you are at fault somewhat?"

He did not like this, for he answered rather sharply: "I do not claim more than an ordinary share of intelligence. You are sure, of course, that you saw the man run off?"

It was a question full of a particular and not pleasant meaning, but I put it down to a little natural irritation.

"As surely as I see you now."

"Very strange," he muttered. "We must probe deeper into this mystery."

When he was gone, Jim turned to me with an inquiring look.

"Of course, Davie, you retain a vivid impression of the event?"

"My dear Jim!"

"Of course you do. I'm almost as big a fool as the rest of them. It was suggested last night that women have committed suicide before today."

"What a monstrous suggestion!"

"So I said and stopped the tongues from wagging, but the affair is very mysterious, and the story of the black man when there is no such person on board is puzzling to the ordinary mind."

"Black or white or yellow, whatever he may be, I know not, but this I do know, I saw him with my own eyes."

"Then perhaps in the semidarkness she mistook his color."

"It was not dark enough for that. No, no! Let them think what they like. I shall credit her story."

"What do you think of this Chinaman?"

"Naturally my mind at once went to the society, as did yours. But it seems impossible. How can she in any way be connected with it?"

"That, my dear lad, is just what I should like to know. Now, dress yourself and go up on deck and prepare to receive compliments. I'm proud of you, Davie."

"Thanks, old fellow."

We understood each other, Jim and I.

I passed over the congratulations which were showered upon me by the passengers, among whom no one was more demonstrative than the rubicund Major Coghlan.

"The top of the mornin to you," said he. "It's a full blown hero I have the pleasure of congratulatin. You've cut the ground entirely from under me feet, and I haven't a bare inch of it to stand on."

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer Complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

On occasion knowing what one wants is as difficult as getting it.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation.—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED. AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia.

A PORTABLE CHUTE.

How to Make One That Is Serviceable on the Farm.

This chute is very much like any other, except that it is easily portable. It has a movable axle in front and must be well braced, as in Fig 1, to prevent twisting. The rear end is made to rest on wheels while being moved, and on the ground while the animals are being loaded. This arrangement, consisting of an eccentric lever and movable wheelrod, is shown in Fig 2. Another lever and wheel is used on the opposite side.

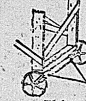

FIG. 1.

The rod on which the wheels run is set in a vertical groove, shown by the dotted line, so that it is capable of 3 to 4 inches' motion. As the lever is in the drawing, the chute rests on the wheels, and the lever is held by the pin near the end. If, now, the lever is thrown upward and backward, the eccentricity of the head lets the chute down to the ground. Thus it rests firmly until it is to be removed, when the lever is again thrown forward.

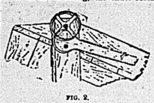

FIG. 2.

Save All Farm Manure.

Farmers waste a great deal of manure every year. A large amount of rubbish is burned, which, if scattered on the land would be worth many dollars. It is not wise to burn anything just to get rid of it. Many men burn a straw stack just to get it out of the way. If the straw had been allowed to rot and had then been hauled to the land, it would be worth several dollars. It is not good practice to rake up corn stalks and burn. Plow them under every time. True, they will bother a little in tending the crop, but only a little.

There is also a great waste in the manure pile on most farms. It matters not how careful we are, there is sure to be a little waste, but if we will, we can reduce this to a small percentage. There is less waste in hauling out manure as fast as it is made, than in any other way. It should be plowed under as soon as possible. When it is plowed under the land has it, and will keep it. Let the solid manure absorb as much of the liquid as possible, and for this purpose provide plenty of bedding. Then follow the above rule and you have the best of it. Some people object to plowing it under. In some parts of the country it may be better not to plow under.

If our farmers were not so wasteful and saved the by-products of the farm, like the people of the European countries, much more profit could be realized. We should be careful in selling feed off the farm, for every time we sell a straw stack, we take just that much fertility from the soil. The up-to-date farmer puts it all back on his land—all the manure and by-products and then he feeds all that is raised, except in extreme cases. Our main object should be to increase the value of our land. Nothing is gained by cheating the soil.

Belgian Hares Meat Producers.

A Belgian hare doe, kindled four times within a year, giving birth to 53 young, of which 41 were raised that averaged over six pounds each at six months old, making a total of 246 pounds live weight. It will do to breed them every 60 days if properly fed and cared for, so it is not at all impossible for a good Belgian hare doe to produce in one year young enough to weigh 300 pounds at six months of age. The quality of the meat is excellent. There is no strong taste, as with the wild rabbit. What is good feed for a sheep is good feed for the Belgian hare.

Heating Milk in Making Cheese.

If an open boiler is used, heat the milk, stirring all the time, until it reaches a temperature of about 84 degrees. It is safest to place the milk in a shotgun can, and put this can into a vessel of water to which the heat is applied. Great care must be used not to scorch the milk, but this is not difficult if the milk is heated as directed. Put in the amount of coloring matter desired, stir carefully, then add the rennet and allow to solidify.

The Best for Horses.

There are all kinds of roads in Canada, but the macadam and telford roads are the best for the owners of horses. They help quicker speed, they seldom get out of order, and a washing rain does not cause ruts to form. Ruts are a serious menace to the owners of horses, because very often a horse is very seriously injured on their account. Bad bridges are another evil of the poorly kept roads of this country, and many a valuable horse has fallen through rotten bridge planks and broken legs, forcing the owner to kill the animal.

Vegetables.

Among those vegetables containing the largest per cent. of starch may be mentioned potatoes, beans, corn, peas, carrots, beets, turnips and parsnips. The pungent vegetable foods, as leeks, onions, garlics, horseradish, etc., increase the saliva and the gastric juices, acting somewhat on the kidneys.

Land Surveyors Officers.

Toronto, Feb. 26.—The Ontario land surveyors closed their convention yesterday afternoon at the Parliament Buildings. After several papers had been read and discussed, C. A. Jones, Petrolea, was elected president; J. W. Tyrell, Hamilton, vice-president; Captain Killaly Gamble, secretary-treasurer; J. F. Whitson and W. A. McLean, auditors. Two members of the council are to be elected by letter ballot, the nominations being P. S. Gibson, E. T. Wilkie, Thomas Fawcett, M. Gaviller, C. C. Fairchild, L. V. Rorke and James Robertson. The other members of the council are: Hon. E. J. Davis, Alex. Niven, A. J. Van Nostrand, G. B. Kirkpatrick and Villiers Sankey.

Two Hotels Burned.

Fort William, Feb. 26.—The Queen's Hotel, McCranor Bros., was slightly damaged, and the Windsor, owned by Mrs. Gorman, was destroyed by fire that broke out at 2 o'clock yesterday morning in the former premises. Both buildings were frame.

TENDENCY OF THE TIMES.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

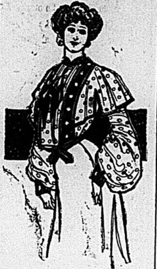
WOMEN'S GOWNS.

Wine Color Popular—Corduroy Velvet Suits For Utility Wear.

Wine color is a very popular shade. Some of the prettiest street costumes show variations of this color. Often a cloth gown will be trimmed with a darker shade of panne and then brightened by a little vest of a more delicate shade.

Corduroy velvet is popular for useful wear, but the attempt to introduce it into finer gowns is a distinct failure because of the more beautiful weaves of velvet which make it seem commonplace. But in shades of gray and myrtle green made into a smart tailor made it certainly has its charms.



A DAINTY WAIST.

The prevalence of fancy buttons is very marked. They are of kid, gun metal, gold, silver and even burnt wood.

Fur toques are made much lighter in weight this year, the crown in many instances being of chiffon velours or tulle.

There is no abating in the vogue of brown, and this ordinarily trying color is most becoming to some women.

Facings and cordings of cloth in pale shades or of darker velvet are quite the most fashionable trimmings for cloth gowns, and a great deal of lace is used for vests and fronts, which can be rendered warm and comfortable by a lining of soft, fine flannel.

The picture shows a net waist having silk embroidered spots.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

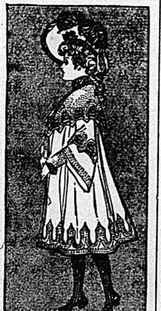
TRIMMINGS OF GOWNS.

Tucks of the Wide Variety a Feature of the New Dresses.

Tucks are a feature of many smart costumes, but not the fine tuck, however. The fold is an inch and over in depth and decorates the bottom of the skirt and the full puffs.

Old fashioned sleeves ruffled to the elbow are seen on some Paris models of silk gowns.

Three-quarter coats of Persian lamb are smart, made with wide collars and revers which fold back flat and blouse in the front. These coats are held in at the waist line by a band of stitched black panne.



CHILD'S COAT.

Chiffon applique is used on many gowns and waists, as the different motifs can be separated and used with very striking effect.

Skirts box plaited all around the back, front and sides are very smart made of supple cloth or thin material.

A triple effect in capes and skirt ruffles is not uncommon on the same gown.

Gray and beaver tones are noticeable in millinery, and a hat of mole plush is turned up with cream colored chiffon elaborately drawn and tucked, and over the chiffon are medallions of gray lace highly embroidered with jet and steel. Large picture hats are much in favor, and lace with a broad binding is much used, and in black there are large shapes of gauged chiffon with black velvet bindings and bold garnitures of colored velvet.

The illustration shows a child's coat of tan cloth having a tan lace collar and brown velvet straps as trimmings.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

Obeyed Instructions.

The city editor summoned the photographer of his staff. "Colonel Welligan's house is burning," he said, "and I want a picture of the fire. Get out there as quick as you can with your camera and take a view of what's left of the building from the inside of the fence corner."

"But," said the photographer, "if"—

"That's the point I want it taken from—right in the corner."

"But I think there's"—

"I don't care whether there's a better point or not. You know what I want. Hurry up. You are losing time."

The photographer took his camera and departed. A few hours later he came in with the proof of a picture he had taken from the desired point of view.

"What is this?" said the city editor.

"That is a photograph of the ruins of Colonel Welligan's house from the inside corner of the fence near the street."

"I can't see anything of the house."

"I couldn't, either," responded the photographer. "I tried to tell you there was a big tree standing between that corner and the house, but you wouldn't let me."

Tibet, the Strange Land.

It is a wonderful country and a strange people. Think of a tract of land where hot springs abound, round which the deposits are of such rainbow tints as blue, purple, green, red and yellow. It is easy to imagine that the landscape effects of such coloring are wondrous. The social customs of the people are scarcely less astounding. Polygamy is common where the men are rich enough, for wives seem to be a question of wealth. When poverty compels them, several men will have one wife in common. Brothers usually enter into those strange partnerships. The people rarely wash, finding it warmer to be dirty. The men anoint their faces with butter, while the women stain their countenances mahogany color with wood chips and lacquer the bridges of their noses jet black. Cleanliness is an unesteemed practice.—London Outlook.

Fatal Precaution.

A farmer in Cumberland county was driving across a railroad track when a train killed both his horses and knocked him about ten rods off his course. In the resulting suit for damages the plaintiff was on the witness stand, making out a good case, when the defendant's lawyer asked him:

"Did you take any precaution before driving upon the track?"

The witness seemed reluctant to answer, but, being pressed to do so, finally stammered out:

"Waal, squire, I took a little—just a couple of swallers, that's all."

This started a new line of defense, and it turned out that the couple of swallows were the last in a pint flask that had consoled the honest old farmer along the road. This put a new face on the situation.

Ruined by a Receding Sea.

Castle Rising is an instance of decay brought about by a receding sea, the town, once a place of considerable importance, giving way to King's Lynn as the waters retired. A memory of the former relative positions of the two places is kept alive by the lines:

Rising was a seaport town
  When Lynn was but a marsh;
Now Lynn it is a seaport,
  And Rising fares the worse.

But, though it lost its commercial value, it retained its political status, returning two members down to the reform act of 1832. At that time it had three voters on its poll list, but the only person legally entitled to exercise the right of voting was the rector.—London Chronicle.

Professional Mourners.

In ancient times funerals were followed by professional mourners, who simulated the appearance of the wildest grief. The custom survives in the valley of Sondrio, in the Alps. There the women do not follow the funeral, but they group themselves at the entrance of the cemetery and burn, in honor of the dead, candles which vary in size, according to the remuneration. They are as prodigal as were the mourners of ancient times in their simulation of excessive grief.

It Rains Every Seven Days.

If it rains on the first Sunday of the month it is morally certain to rain on two or three of the other Sundays. Why it is so no one knows unless it be that rainstorms in this country come at intervals about seven days apart, and if the rain happens to hit the first Sunday the other rainy Sundays follow as a natural consequence. The coincidence has been noted too often to doubt that it really exists.

Evidences of Riches.

"Isn't her display of diamonds magnificent?"

"It is undeniably lavish," replied Miss Cayenne, "and in so much better taste than it would be to ornament herself with real money and government bonds."

Getting Stingy.

Constance—Why so lachrymose, Gertrude? Is there any perceptible diminution of his love?

Gertrude—No, but of late he evinces a disinclination to talk about his money.

His Old Master.

He (showing his country cousin a portrait in his art gallery)—What do you think of my old master?

She—Pleasant face the old gentleman has. How long did you study with him?

Physically, Not Financially.

She—I thought you said your father was a big contractor.

He—So he is. He weighs 325 pounds.—Chelsea Gazette.

There is an Individuality

About our decorating that you will not find elsewhere

THERE IS originality in our decorating—we do not find it necessary to reproduce your drawing room in your neighbors home. We prefer to give each a change and we have the werewithal to produce that change.

HAVE

Firstly

the ideas, a most necessary adjunct to healthy art.

HAVE

Secondly

the materials, the correct papers, the correct mouldings, the styles the new things with which to work out a decorative scheme.

HAVE

Thirdly

The workmen—men experienced in the several branches of workmanship—skilled artizans and craftsmen who can follow mechanically and artistically the drawings and ideas of our decorator.

And there is no mistake about it we are doing today a far superior class of decorating than has before ever been done in Belleville and vicinity.

Just watch the interiors of the best homes in the city if you care to observe our decorative work.

A Ponderous Success

Is this HALF PRICE Wall Paper Sale of ours.

Just think of everything of 1903 Wall Papers going at Half Price.

It's our determination to open fire in March with nothing but 1904 Wall Paper stock.

We have the reputation of having everything new each spring in Wall Papers and we mean to retain that reputation, and in so doing we give our customers the bargains at an opportune time.

And just think of the stock of new 1904 papers behind us—one hundred thousand rolls and over—and this is no reckless assertion, as anyone who cares to do so can step in our warehouses any day and make estimate. Do you suppose we purchase this stock to look at, you know better, you know right well as we do that we have a steady output that will close out every roll before another twelve months has flown.

It is not visions we are working on it is on actual past results, results of twenty years Wall Paper experience.

Public Meeting.

At the request of the Board of Trade, I hereby call a public meeting in the City Hall for Monday evening, February 29th, at 8 o'clock, to consider the Trent Valley Canal and Water Power scheme.

Mr. Gilmour and others, of Trenton, will be present to address the meeting. All merchants specially invited to be present.

W. W. CHOWN,
Mayor.

Belleville, Ont., Feb. 25, 1904.

An Enjoyable Evening.

A most enjoyable evening was spent last night at St. Andrew's Sunday School, when the children of the Mission Band gave an entertainment. Rev. Mr. Maclean occupied the chair, which he filled most suitably. After a few recitations by a number of the pupils a selection was given by an orchestra of three boys, which was much enjoyed by all present. After a few more recitations and songs by the little ones refreshments were served. The scholars and teachers are to be complimented on taking so much pains in putting on such an entertainment. There was a large crowd in attendance.

YOU TAKE NO CHANCES.

All druggists guarantee every bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and will refund the money to anyone who is not satisfied after using two-thirds of the contents. This is the best remedy in the world for la grippe, coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough and is pleasant and safe to take. It prevents any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia.

TRAINING MILITIA OFFICERS.

A SCHEME FOR THEIR BETTER EDUCATION AND QUALIFICATION—INCREASE OF PAY FOR PRIVATES.

Lord Dundonald has worked out his scheme for the better education and qualification of militia officers. Recognizing that good volunteer officers are generally poor men who cannot spare from their civil occupations long continuous periods for military work, he has devised a plan by which the busiest man can make use of his holidays to acquire an adequate knowledge of his military duties. All militia organizations for promotion will be divided into five classes. Each class will be carried on throughout the year, divided into four courses of twelve, (except for special arms). Each course will begin and end on a definite date, published long before hand, so that candidates for promotion will know exactly when the course takes place in the class which concerns them. The first class will be for the appointment of lieutenant, the second class for promotion to captain, the third class for promotion to major, the fourth class for promotion to lieutenant-colonel commanding, and the fifth class for promotion to staff and higher command. When an officer wishes to qualify for the command of his regiment he will go, not to one of the smaller schools of instruction, but to the central camp of instruction. Here he will be put through a thoroughly tactical training and given constant practice in the actual handling of bodies of troops under service conditions. When after holding the command of his regiment he wishes to qualify for the staff, he will go once more to the central camp and pass through a higher tactical training in which he will handle mixed bodies of troops and work out tactical schemes over all sorts of ground.

Lord Dundonald's care is not merely for the officers. He is desirous of increasing the pay of privates who are called out for twelve day's training each year. He thinks that they should get at least 75c a day, and that the pay should increase in proportion to the length of efficient service.

GREAT FIRE RAGING IN ROCHESTER, N.Y.

Loss Said to Exceed Eight Million Dollars and Fire for a Time Beyond Control.

Scene of Conflagration in Heart of City's Business Section—Outside Aid Asked.

At 10 a. m. it Was Thought Entire City Would Be Wiped Out—People in a Panic

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

Rochester, N.Y., Feb. 26. — A great fire here is beyond control. The losses, according to the Rochester Times, already exceed eight million dollars.

Mayor Cutler has asked Buffalo and Syracuse for help. It looks like another Baltimore affair.

The fire started at 4.50 a.m. in the Beadle-Sherbourne company's six-story building in Main street, near St. Paul street. It is a departmental store and burned rapidly. The flames spread to the Sibley, Lindsay and Kerr premises. They occupy five floors of the 11-story granite building, the other floors being for offices. This block is at East Main and St. Paul streets. The boilers blew up in this block. The flames next spread to the six-story department of the Rochester Dry Goods Company, there jumping to the wholesale house in the rear in Division street. Here the fire gained great headway and got beyond control of the Flower City's excellent fire department.

Mayor Cutler at 8 a.m. wired to Buffalo and Syracuse for help.

Many buildings have been consumed and several were blown up to stop the spread of the flames. The fire is in the heart of the city's business section, about four blocks east of the Powers Block.

A MORE HOPEFUL VIEW

Rochester, Feb. 26.—The Chief of the Fire Department at 8.55 o'clock said he believed the fire could be kept within the block extending from St. Paul to North streets unless the wind should change and set fire to the buildings on the south side of Main street. In this event, a large part of the residential section would have to go.

The fire is reported to have started in the basement of the Rochester Dry Goods Company. A fuse connected with the electrical motor that runs the elevator blew out, and the next moment the flames were rushing up the elevator walls. In a few minutes after the building was wrapped in flames.

THE WORST NOW FEARED—CITY IN STATE OF PANIC.

Rochester, Feb. 26, 10 a.m. — The fire is beyond control. The flames are spreading rapidly. The firemen are having some trouble now in getting water. The flames are eating up the business district.

At this time it looks as though the fire would spread over the entire city.

Excitement reigns supreme. Men and women are rushing about panic-stricken.

Unless the flames are checked shortly Rochester will be compelled to ask for more help.

FIRE UNDER CONTROL AT 11:15 O'CLOCK.

Rochester, N.Y., Feb. 26.—At 11.15 o'clock the Commissioner of Public Safety announced that the fire was under control. The fact that there was no wind accounts for the speedy mastering of the flames.

The burned district runs from a point in Main street east, midway between Clinton Avenue and St. Paul street, then east to Division street and half way to Mortimer, the fire wall of the Cox building stopping the flames on the north side up Division.

The total area burned covers about three acres.

Estimates as to the number of persons thrown out of employment by the fire place the number between 2500 and 3000.

No lives are reported lost.

The total loss is estimated at seven million dollars.

TO CURE FEVER CHILLS

And such complaints as "Shivers" and ague we recommend Nerviline very highly. Twenty drops of Nerviline taken in hot water with a little sugar three times daily not only stops the chills, but knocks out the disease completely. Nerviline has a direct action on fever chills and removes the conditions causing them. In stomach and bowel troubles Nerviline never fails. It's pleasant to the taste, quick to relieve and always cures permanently. Get a 25c bottle to-day.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

The second game for the Stanley cup came off last night, and the Ottawas gave the Marlboros a trouncing they are not liable to forget in a hurry, 11-2 being the score. The Toronto papers, of course, will say that it was rough play which defeated their pets, and it may have been, but the fact remains that if the O.H.A. champions were not able to play hockey as it is played in the east and west it is the officials of the O.H.A. who are to blame. They have insisted on making hockey a sort of cross between croquet and ping-pong, instructing their referees to rule men off for what is considered perfectly fair in other associations, and, as a consequence, when the O.H.A. champions, trained to the parlor game, went up against men trained to play strenuous hockey, they were outclassed. It may be put down for a certainty that no O.H.A. team will ever lift the Stanley cup while O.H.A. referees rule men off for fair body-checking, for the O.H.A. players will never learn the very things that are necessary in order to meet eastern and western players on even terms.

Kingston Beechgroves and Listowel will play off for the junior O.H.A. championship in Toronto on Monday night.

There's one thing about hockey, it makes a lot of people study up geography a bit. Some folks in this city thought that Midland, where the Bellevilles play to-night, was somewhere between Madoc and Bobcaygeon. As a matter of fact it is about 25 miles from Orillia, and borders on the Georgian Bay. Several Belleville people have lately gone there to live, so the boys will be sure of a little encouragement to-night from the spectators. The Midland team, down this way, is practically an unknown quantity, but it would appear that the Midlanders grade as No. 1 hard—hard to reach and hard to beat after they are reached.

Stratford beat Watford 6-4 last night, and are now in the finals.

The report was current in the city that the Belleville team had not yet reached Midland at 2 o'clock this afternoon. At 3 o'clock this morning the boys were at Orillia, and it is believed that the line between Midland and Orillia is blocked by snow. Rumor says that Belleville's enemies are again at work against the team, and that the whole aggregation are ordered to appear before the O.H.A. executive in Toronto to-morrow night.

A message from Midland at 3 o'clock this afternoon said the boys had not reached there yet, but were expected about 4 o'clock. They will certainly be in great shape for the game to-night.

SCIENCE, NATURE, VIEWS AND MUSIC TO-NIGHT.

The powerful electric lantern of the Deaf and Dumb Institute has been kindly loaned for the lecture of the Graduates' Course to be given to-night at St. Agnes' School Hall. The reputation as a lecturer of Professor Ramsay Wright, who (with Principal Hutton) is the oldest and best known of the Toronto University staff, assures a large attendance and an interesting and instructive hour and a half, while the added pleasure which the audience will have of listening to Mrs. Grant's kind contributions to the attractions of the evening, will round out a most satisfactory programme—both popular and educative.

Married at Tuftsville.

Our Tuftsville correspondent writes: A pretty home wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McMullen, Tuftsville, on Jan. 27, it being the marriage of their only daughter, Bertie, to Geo. Cook, of Regina, formerly of this place. The nuptial knot was tied by the Rev. Mr. Bell, of Stirling, in the presence of a few of the nearest relations of the contracting parties. The bride was handsomely dressed in a blue skirt, white waist, trimmed with applique. She looked charming. She was assisted by Miss Florence Cook, sister of the groom, who was attended by Mr. Bert Juby, of this place. The bride was the recipient of many costly and useful presents.

ALLEGED WOULD-BE BURGLARS ON TRIAL.

EVIDENCE GIVEN WAS AGAINST THE MURPHYS — CASE ADJOURNED FOR A WEEK.

The two men, Patrick and Thos. Murphy, who were arrested on Wednesday night on suspicion of attempting to burglarize Ald. McFee's store, were this morning brought up before Magistrate Flint. The charge of attempted burglary was read to them, and they pleaded not guilty. Mr. W. P. McMahon volunteered to defend them and did so. Mr. Anderson represented the Crown.

William Green, jr., was the chief witness. He testified that the men enquired of him as to the whereabouts of a good jewellery store, and how to reach the rear part. One of them also asked for a small iron bar to help in breaking into the premises. They also promised the witness that if he assisted in the burglary they would give him some of the plunder. During their recital to Green they informed him that they had "done up" a jewellery store in Hamilton and escaped detection.

Mr. J. Borbridge identified one of the prisoners as being in Mr. McFee's store on Wednesday looking at jewellery.

After some further evidence the case was adjourned for a week.

ALLEGED BREAKERS OF LOCAL OPTION BY-LAW.

WERE ON TRIAL IN STIRLING YESTERDAY — ADJOURNED TILL NEXT MONTH.

At Stirling on Wednesday Magistrate Flint was occupied all day in hearing evidence in relation to a number of liquor cases. Some fifteen parties were charged with breaking the Local Option By-law, which is in force in the Township of Rawdon. The evidence in some cases was so conflicting that they were dismissed, but in the majority of cases argument was adjourned to take place in this city on Tuesday, the 8th of March. Much interest was manifested in the proceedings. Mr. Anderson represented the Crown and Messrs. J. E. Halliwell and G. G. Thrasher defended the accused.

CITY MISSION'S TWENTY-FOURTH ANNIVERSARY.

WAS FITTINGLY COMMEMORATED LAST EVENING — GOOD WORK IS PROSPERING.

The twenty-fourth anniversary of the establishment of the City Mission here was commemorated last evening. The anniversary services were held at the Mission and the attendance was good. Mr. A. G. Northrup was Chairman and gave an address referring to the inception of the Mission and the good work which had been accomplished by Mrs. Schuster and those associated with her.

Dr. Morrison, who was for some time connected with a Mission at Winnipeg, gave an address, which was much appreciated. He spoke of the excellent work which was being done in the metropolis of Manitoba along the line of Mission work.

Rev. Dr. Crothers also gave an address, commending highly the work of Mrs. Schuster among the poorer classes of the city.

During the evening various reports were presented which were highly encouraging and showed advancement in all branches of the work.

Solos were given by Misses M. Vermilyea and L. Holton which were much enjoyed. Appropriate hymns were also sung by the children of the Mission School. Miss G. Webster played the accompaniments.

Lecture on Municipal Institutions

W. C. Mikel, City Solicitor, delivered an address on Municipal Institutions at the Y.M.C.A. last night. He traced their development from 1788, when Lord Dorchester divided the territory which is now Ontario, into the four districts, Lunenburg, Mecklenburg, Nassau and Hesse, down to the present time, and described the powers and obligations of the hamlet, police village, township, county, village, town and city as they exist at the present time, and showed that the Municipal Councillors of the province raised more taxes than the Dominion Parliament and Ontario Legislature combined. The lecturer was listened to by a large audience. After the lecturer had answered a number of questions on Municipal law, a vote of thanks was tendered to him for his really interesting and clever effort.

Dwellings In Which Ladders Took the Place of Stairways.

Years ago a story was told of a naval officer who wanted a house built to please his own taste in every detail. He drew the plans himself, placed them in the hands of a builder and instructed him to see that they were carried out in every detail. Then he went to sea for a year's cruise. When he returned home the house had been completed with the utmost regard for the plans and specifications left by the officer. He was taken through the first floor and expressed the utmost pleasure in everything he saw.

"Now," he said, "we will go upstairs and see the second floor."

"Come right out this way where we have a ladder," replied the builder.

The seafaring man was astonished. He had planned the house with the greatest care, but forgot to provide for a stairway.

The story of the naval officer has never had a certificate of genuineness attached to it, but an actual case in which a house has been built without a stairway is on record in Washington. It finally became the home of the late John Boyle, who was for many years chief clerk of the navy department and who died in 1854, leaving a large estate. The house in question stood on the site now occupied by a brewery below the naval observatory. It was a pretentious old mansion, located in what was a very stylish section during the days of the elder John Boyle, who came to this country in the early years of the nineteenth century. The record is not clear as to why the house was constructed without a staircase, but there is no doubt about the fact.

A Statesman Who Was Made and Unmade by Newspaper Men.

A certain young man was sent to congress. He delivered a clever maiden speech. The correspondents liked him. They wrote him up in their dispatches. His pictures were printed in the newspapers, and anecdotes of his life appeared in many journals. He was alluded to as a prospective speaker of the house, and it was generally agreed that he would do great things—after he had been elected for the second term.

One day a correspondent called upon the young statesman. He was engaged with some constituents; so the newspaper man sent in his card. When it was handed to the embryo speaker his constituents offered to excuse him.

"Oh, no," he said, with affected carelessness. "It's only one of those penny a liners outside. He can wait until I get ready to see him."

The door was ajar, and the correspondent heard the remark. He had met such men before. He hastened back to his office, and that night there was a meeting of correspondents.

"What do you want us to do," asked one of the men—"roast him?"

"Oh, no," was the reply; "not that."

"What, then?"

"Why, simply ignore him."

He was ignored. And his first term in congress was his last.

Unique Family Circle.

A small town in Bavaria can boast of what may be described as a unique family circle. A shopkeeper resident there includes among his household three living mothers-in-law, each with a mother of her own; his own mother, his third wife and four daughters in their teens. The twelve women are reported to live on terms of the greatest amity, and the shopkeeper himself, who is fortunately in good circumstances, professes to be perfectly contented notwithstanding that he is thus the thirteenth of his family. The incessant banter to which he is subjected he philosophically welcomes as tending toward the better advertisement of his business.

Farmer's Sudden Death.

Newtonville, Feb. 26.—A sudden death took place Wednesday near Port Hope when John Brightwell, jr., a prosperous farmer of this place, who, in company with a neighbor, was driving cattle to Port Hope, after running quite a lot, suddenly dropped dead.

BUDGET DEBATE ENDED.

The Government Scored Its Stationary Majority of Three—Six Members Absent, But No Pairs Were Made.

Toronto, Feb. 26.—The budget debate was resumed yesterday by Mr. Milton Carr (Nipissing), and he was followed by Mr. Foy, who moved the following amendment:

"That this House approves of the payment, under the authorization of the Government of the Province, of the wages owing to foremen, mechanics, workmen, clerks and laborers and the other working men in the employment of the Consolidated Lake Superior Company of Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, in order to prevent distress and avoid disturbance, but disapproves of the payment under such of the following amounts: The amounts paid to President Shields, lawyers and other officials are named."

Mr. Gibson, the Attorney-General replied, and Mr. Whitney, the leader of the Opposition, closed the debate in an excellent review of the subjects discussed by the various speakers during the debate on the budget. Mr. Whitney made the "Soo" payments by the Government the basis of a vigorous attack. He said he would have drawn the line where public opinion and the statutes would define it. The statute provided for the payment of arrears of wages to foremen, mechanics, workmen and laborers, and he asserted that there could be no doubt that the Government should have confined its bounty to these people, who were actually in need owing to the sudden stoppage of the works.

Mr. Foy's amendment was defeated on a vote of 44 yeas to 47 nays, and the budget was sustained by that vote reversed.

While in committee the House passed an item of $3,640 for Government House and adjourned.

PREMIER "JIM'S" PROGRAM.

No New Policy, But Agriculture Will Be His Main Feature.

London, Feb. 26.—(C.A.P.)—Premier Jameson of Cape Colony, speaking at a Cape Town banquet said that agriculture would be the main feature of the Government program. The Government were not creating anything in the nature of a new policy, but were following in the footsteps of the late Cecil Rhodes.

Uncle Sam Would Quit.

The Morning Post says that despite Mr. Hay's diplomacy it is doubtful whether the United States would go to war in defence of their Far East interests over which Americans are not aroused, as they are over the Monroe doctrine, the Alaska case, and the Canadian fisheries.

Negotiations Pending.

St. John's, Nfld., Feb. 26.—The Colonial Legislature met yesterday. Governor Boyle, in a speech in which he urged the renewal of the French shore modus vivendi, said that negotiations were now pending between the Colonial and Imperial Ministries for a settlement of the entire French shore problem, which would render a renewal of the present measure needless after this year.

Yankees Know a Good Thing.

London, Feb. 26.—American business houses apparently fully realize the value of the facilities accorded by Lord Strathcona's office in introducing new business. Recently applications have been received asking the intervention of the London office in their behalf.

$20,000,000 Coming Due.

Ottawa, Feb. 26.—The Deputy Minister of Finance, J. M. Courtney, is on his way to England to arrange for meeting Dominion 4 per cent. loans that are falling due on April 1 and May 1. The aggregate amount of these loans is in round numbers $20,000,000.

Investigation to Resume.

Toronto, Feb. 26.—The civic investigation will be resumed this morning. Mr. Justice Britton has decided that Richard Lane's objections to the enquiry were not of sufficient importance to warrant the granting of an injunction, and the motion was dismissed with costs.

The Children's Medicine.

A CURE FOR COUGHS, COLDS, CRAMP, BRONCHITIS AND WHOOPING COUGH WHICH CHILDREN DELIGHT TO TAKE.

It is impossible to be too careful in selecting the children's medicine.

Many cough mixtures contain powerful drugs and opiates which should never be allowed to enter a child's stomach.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine was especially prepared for the children by one of the most skilful and conscientious doctors that has ever practised medicine.

Experience taught Dr. Chase that some of the simple products of the vegetable kingdom possessed most extraordinary curative properties and he succeeded in so combining those in Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine as to make a medicine that is at once pleasant to the taste and wonderfully effective.

Croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, asthma, severe chest colds and painful coughs yield to this great medicine when ordinary treatments have no effect.

You can learn of the splendid results of this treatment in nearly every home.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 25 cents a bottle, family size (three times as much) 60 cents, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

JAPANESE NEAR VLADIVOSTOCK

Strong Force Occupies Hunchun and is Aiming at Mukden.

LANDED NEAR POSSIET BAY

Marching on Kirin, 150 Miles South of Harbin, They Will Attack City of Mukden in Co-operation With the Main Army Now Approaching the Yalu River—No Russian Force West of the Liao River.

Newchwang, Feb. 26.—A strong Japanese force is reported to have landed near Possiet Bay, about twenty miles south of Vladivostock, and to have occupied Hunchun, a town twenty miles inland. The Japanese are now marching on Kirin, 150 miles south of Harbin, and the terminus of a branch railway from the Manchurian main line. Should the movement be carried out effectually it will result in the cutting of the Russian line of communication through Manchuria, but it is considered here that the real objective is Mukden, and that the movement will develop into a flank attack on that city in co-operation with the advance of the main army now approaching the Yalu River. In view of the risk attending the advance of a flanking force at such a distance from the main field of operations it is believed that the Japanese intelligence department discredits the strength of the Russian forces in Northern Manchuria, and is possessed of secret information which justifies the bold movement now being made and the result of which may have an important influence on the land campaign.

Possiet Bay is in Russian Manchuria, about 70 miles southwest of Vladivostock. Hunchun is on the left bank of the Tumen River and about 40 miles to the west of Possiet Bay. Kirin is a big Manchurian town, and lies about 220 miles inland and to the west of Possiet Bay. Kwangchengtsi is about eighty miles west of Kirin. Khabarovsk is about 400 miles to the north of Vladivostock, with which port it is connected by a railroad.

No Russians West of the Liao.

Yinkow, Feb. 26.—Foreign engineers on the Shanhaikwan-Newchwang railway say that according to their information their is no Russian force west of Liao River, with the exception of a guard of 25 Cossacks at Koupantzou.

60 Days Suffering.

Tokio, Feb. 26.—Storms are interfering with naval operations. The Yellow Sea is being swept by gales, heavy snow is falling, and the weather is bitterly cold. The forces of Japanese are going to the front splendidly equipped to withstand the cold, but despite their preparations, both sides will suffer much during the next 60 days.

Russians North of the Yalu.

Tien Tsin, Feb. 26.—A detachment of three hundred Russians, with two guns, is outside of Shinmingtung, which is a few miles north of Mukden, and considerably north of the Yalu River.

Two Hundred Russian Cavalry.

Pekin, Feb. 26.—The Director-General of Chinese railroads reports that 100 Russian infantrymen, an officer, a gun and a large supply of ammunition at Yaoyangho, and that 200 Russian cavalrymen and two guns have arrived at Liulichang. These towns are both on the west side of the Liao River. The Director-General reports that the Manchurian railroad is guarded by detachments of Cossacks of 30 men each, who occupy high watch towers at intervals of a mile.

Russian Bureau Withdrawn.

Yinkow, Feb. 26.—It is reported that the Russian Government Bureau at Vladivostock has withdrawn to Khavarovsk.

REMAINS UNSETTLED.

Russian Gunboat Mandjur Still Remains at Shanghai.

Tokio, Feb. 26.—The question of stay of the Russian gunboat Mandjur at Shaghai remains unsettled. Paul Lessar, Russian Minister to China, is said to be trying to intimidate the Chinese Government in the matter, declaring emphatically that Japan has little chance of victory against a Russian army 500,000 strong. The court at Pekin is oscillating on this question. Russia is also pressing China to declare the neutrality of that portion of the Empire, which Russia also occupies.

Russian Baltic Squadron.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 26.—It is now said that the Russian Baltic squadron, comprising eight battleships, two armored cruisers, three protected cruisers, two large transports, and thirty torpedo boats, will leave for the Far East at the end of June. It is added that it will be commanded by Rear-Admiral Rojestvensky.

HAD AUDIENCE WITH CZAR.

Russian Ambassador to Great Britain Sees His Imperial Master.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 26.—Count Benckendorff, Russian ambassador, to Great Britain, who returned here a few days ago from London, had an audience yesterday with the Czar.

Manchuria Is Rising.

New York, Feb. 26.—According to a cable from Che Foo to The World, Manchuria is rising against the Russians. Five thousand Russian troops have been moved from Mukden to Sunnintung because in the villages along the west side of Liastung Peninsula the natives are making active preparations to cut off small bodies of Russian troops there. Ten thousand Manchurians have already enrolled in the movement, which is spreading. Volunteers are plenty; there is no lack of ammunition or money, for the patriotic rich are subscribing.

LYING ABOUT BRITAIN.

Lord Selborne Says Some Enemy Is at the Work of Misrepresentation.

London, Feb. 26.—Replying to Earl Spencer, the leader of the Liberal party in the House of Lords yesterday afternoon, the first Lord of Admiralty, Lord Selborne, categorically denied the numerous stories recently printed of British partialty to Japan as against Russia. He said he feared there was some influence at work endeavoring to misrepresent the attitude of this country and to show that the British navy was not preserving the strict neutrality in regard to the war.

Russians Detained at Ceylon.

London, Feb. 26.—Asked in the House of Commons yesterday by what authority it was proposed to detain at Ceylon the 325 Russian sailors rescued after the fight off Chemulpo, Premier Balfour said the Japanese Government had now intimated that it was willing the sailors should return to Russia on giving their parole not to participate further in the war. British Government was now in correspondence with Russia with the view of settling the question on this basis.

BALFOUR DENIES REPORTS.

Spain and Great Britain Are on Most Friendly Terms.

London, Feb. 26.—Premier Balfour on his first appearance yesterday in the House of Commons since his illness, was greeted with warm cheers. Replying to a question, he confirmed the statement that there was no truth in the reports that Great Britain intended to seize certain points on the Spanish coast in the event of a continental war. He said:

"I am glad to say that the relations between this country and Spain are, and are likely to remain, of a most friendly character."

War Office Denies This.

London, Feb. 26.—The War Office says there is no truth in the rumor published by The Manchester Despatch that the first (British) army corps had been ordered to hold itself in readiness to depart for India within a few days.

Jail Breaker Hillis Recaptured.

Hamilton, Feb. 26.—William Hillis, the jail breaker and desperado, has been re-captured in Flint, Michigan. Hillis sawed his way out of jail here in a highly sensational manner.

Hungarian Army Estimates.

Vienna, Feb. 26.—The Hungarian delegation passed the ordinary and extraordinary army estimate yesterday, as well as a credit of $375,000 for the purchase of new field guns.

THEY ACTUALLY DO THE WORK

FOOD EATEN IS WORTHLESS UNLESS DIGESTED—SOME STOMACHS MUST HAVE HELP.

Food taken into the stomach which from the nature of the food or the condition of the stomach, is not digested, is worse than no food at all. This is a true statement as far as it goes and a great many dyspeptics go only this far with their reasoning. They argue with themselves that because their stomachs do not do the work given them they must be given less work; in other words, they must be starved. It would be just as sensible for a business man who is unable to do all his own work to cut down his business to his own capacity as it is for a man to starve himself to relieve his stomach. The sensible business man employs help and goes forward with his business. Likewise the sensible dyspeptic will employ help for his stomach and give his body proper nourishment.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets actually do the work assigned to them. They relieve weak and overburdened stomachs of a great portion of digestive action. Their component parts are identical with those of the digestive fluids and secretions of the stomach and they simply take up the grind and carry on the work just the same as a good, strong, healthy stomach would do it.

On this account Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are perfectly natural in their action, and effects. They do not cause any unnatural or violent disturbance in the stomach or bowels. They themselves digest the food and supply the system with all the nourishment contained in what is eaten and carry out Nature's plans for the sustenance and maintenance of the body.

How much more sensible is this method than that employed by many sufferers from weak stomachs. By this means the body and brain get all the good, nutritious food they need and the man is properly nourished and equipped to carry on his work and perform his duties. He could not possibly be in proper working condition by starving himself or employing some new fangled, insufficient food that does not contain enough nutriment for a year old baby. A strong man doing strong work must be properly fed and this applies to the brain as well as the body.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, by relieving the stomach of its work, enable it to recuperate and regain its normal health and strength. Nature repairs the worn and wasted tissues just as she heals and knits the bone of a broken limb, which is of course not used during the process of repair.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale by all druggists at 50 cents a box and they are the one article that the druggist does not try to sell something in the place of that's "just as good." Their unqualified merit and success and the universal demand for them has placed them within the reach of every one.

BODY-SNATCHING FINER

Than Delivering Paupers' Bodies Over to the Medical School.

So Declared Mr. Sam Clarke During the Discussion of Mr. Hislop's Bill to Change the Present Law—The Doctors in the Legislature Were All Against the Bill—Answers to Questions.

Toronto, Feb. 27.—The disposal of the bodies of indigent persons formed the only topic of discussion in the Legislature yesterday. It was introduced by Mr. Hislop, who asked for the second reading of his bill to amend the Ontario Anatomy Act, which provides that in case of the death of an inmate of a house of refuge the body shall not be delivered to the inspector of anatomy without the consent of the warden or other head of the municipality and the inspector of the house of refuge and these officers may, in lieu of delivering the body to the inspector of anatomy, make an order for the burial, and the costs shall be paid by the county or municipality. Mr. Hislop briefly explained the provisions of the amendment, and asked for its adoption.

Doctors Against It.

Dr. Willoughby, in opposing the bill, said it would necessitate medical schools resorting to the old practice of procuring subjects for the dissecting room. No hardship resulted from the present practice.

Hon. Mr. Stratton said he had a good deal of sympathy for the bill, but if it went into effect the medical colleges would be deprived of 50 per cent. of their subjects for dissection. When a request was made by an inmate of a house of refuge that his or her body be not sent to the School of Anatomy that request was respected.

Dr. Barr thought the bill ought to be withdrawn, and the Attorney-General, while agreeing that the discretion should not be given to the warden, said the committee might be able to get some valuable ideas from the bill.

Dr. Reaume advised the House to drop the sentimental aspect of the question, and Mr. Sam Clarke thought body-snatching was better than the present method, because the subject stolen from the grave had no previous knowledge that he would not be decently buried. He had not heard of any doctors bequeathing their own bodies to medical schools in the interest of science.

The bill went to the committee.

Two other bills were given a second reading, one by Mr. Dickenson, to amend the Statute Law Amendment Act; the other, also by Mr. Dickenson, "respecting innkeepers." The latter provides that every keeper of a livery or boarding stable shall have a lien on every horse or vehicle left with him for his reasonable charges for board and caring.

Common School Lands Receipts.

In reply to a question of Mr. Reid, as to the receipts from common school lands since Confederation, Premier Ross gave the following information: Total receipts, 1867-1903, $1,383,849, the amount retained for management, $83,030; distributed to municipalities re. land improvement fund, $240,021; of the $124,685 held by the Dominion in trust for the land improvement fund, $123,368 had been paid out to the municipalities between 1882 and 1887, and interest was also paid in 1886-7 to the amount of $94,475.

Interest Withheld By Dominion.

Premier Ross replied in detail to Mr. Foy's request for information as to the amounts of interest withheld by the Dominion Government 1900 to 1903. These were: 1900, $31,827; 1901, $90,499; 1902, $92,200. For 1903 and up to the present in 1904 the interest had been paid in full. The amounts so withheld had been applied by the Dominion in diminishing the debt owed by Ontario.

Mr. Backus' Associates.

In reply to Col. Matheson, Hon. Mr. Davis said the department had received no official knowledge as to the parties associated with E. W. Backus of Minneapolis in the purchase of the water power at Fort Francis on the Rainy River for $5,000. The department had no knowledge of any member of the Legislature being interested in the agreement.

Foul Brood Act.

In reply to Mr. Eilber the Minister of Agriculture said the department had received from the secretary of the Ontario Bee-Keepers' Association a copy of suggested amendments to the Foul Brood Act, but no decision has yet been reached. Complaints had been received of a lack of enforcements of the present law, notably in the Counties of Norfolk and Simcoe.

No Change in Pulp Agreements.

Mr. Foy asked: Has the Lieutenant-Governor in Council fixed any price to be paid, by any person or company, for spruce, poplar, whitewood, and Banksian or jack pine, different from the sums named in the pulpwood agreements entered into by the Crown, during the past three years? If so, what was the price so fixed, and when.

The Premier said: No change of rates has been made with respect to any pulp concessions which have been granted.

Mr. Davis told Mr. Foy that $1,500 had been received by the Crown in 1903 on account from pulpwood under agreements made with various persons or companies.

Hon. Mr. Davis replied to Mr. Hendrie showing the amount of timber cut in 1900, 1901, 1902 and 1903 by the Lake Superior Power Co. or its allied or subsidiary companies on lands in Algoma.

The House went into committee on several private bills.

A number of bills were read a first time.

Hon. Mr. Stratton presented reports of the inspector of prisons, the inspector of insane asylums and the game warden.

Mr. Gamey secured an order for a return of correspondence with the Government, or other person, relating to the appointment of one Kelly, as constable or peace officer, in and about Killarney, together with copies of all correspondence between the Government and one Charles Noble in connection therewith.

Mr. Ross moved the appointment of a committee to control the library. It is the same committee as last year.

NOT GUILTY OF MURDER

Joseph Kennedy Goes Free of the Killing of Irene Cole.

Brantford Jury Acquits Him After Being Out Nearly Four Hours—Prisoner Received the Verdict With a Faint Trace of Contentment But Remained Cool—Mr. Justice Street Charged Neither For Nor Against.

Brantford, Feb. 27.—Joseph Kennedy, charged with the murder of Irene Cole, and who has been on trial for his life since Tuesday last, was last night found not guilty by the jury at 10.15 o'clock.

Mr. Justice Street had finished his charge to the jury at 6.15. The jury retired shortly afterwards. A little after 10 o'clock Kennedy entered the court room, walking directly to the prisoner's box. The nerve-racking trial of the week had begun to tell on him. His face was pale and careworn, yet he stepped briskly and with the usual erect military bearing. His lips were tightly drawn and he appeared ready for any emergency.

Mr. Justice Street entered shortly afterwards, the jury being already in the box. The silence was intense.

"Gentlemen of the jury, have you arrived at a verdict?" asked the clerk.

"Not guilty," returned the foreman.

All eyes immediately turned toward the prisoner. A faint trace of contentment spread over his face, but he otherwise remained cool and collected.

His Lordship then addressed a few words to Kennedy, telling him that he was now a free man. He warned him against the evil of drink, saying that the present trouble ought to be a lesson to him in future.

Mr. Heyd opened his address at 10 o'clock yesterday morning. He spoke for three hours and forty minutes and made a powerful appeal for the prisoner Kennedy.

Jas. E. Day, the Crown Counsel, spoke for one hour and twenty minutes. He pointed out the duty of jurors in simple language.

At 5.15 yesterday afternoon Mr. Justice Street commenced his charge, and spoke for a full hour. In closing, His Lordship said that if, after consideration, the jury had any reasonable doubt that the prisoner did not commit the crime, he should receive the benefit of it. His Lordship made little or no comment on the evidence and neither charged for or against the prisoner.

It is not likely Kennedy will take advantage of his liberty for a few days, as there is still much strong sentiment against him.

MORPETH THE VICTOR.

The Liberal-Unionists Retain South Birmingham—Largest Majority on Record.

London, Feb. 27.—(C.A.P.)—The Conservative press glows to-day over the victory of Lord Morpeth in the South Birmingham bye-election. The main issue of the election was a preferential tariff to the colonies. The Morning Posts calls attention to the fact that majority of 3,076 is the largest on record.

The London Daily News and The Chronicle say there is no denying that the influence of Mr. Chamberlain won the election.

South Birmingham has been represented by a Liberal-Unionist since 1886.

Once Lived in Canada.

London, Feb. 27.—(C.A.P.)—Major the Hon. Henry James Anson, was found dead at St. Helena yesterday with a bullet wound in his head. He had been lately undergoing medical treatment. Major Anson was a son of the second Earl of Lichfield, was A.D.C. to the Governor-General of Canada from 1883 to 1888 and served in South Africa 1899-1901. In 1902 he married Lady Adelaide Audrey Ryder, daughter of the Earl of Harroway.

Good For Pianos.

London, Feb. 27.—(C.A.P.)—British piano manufacturers say that the Canadian and the New Zealand preferences have resulted in the best season they have ever had.

Not Scarce in B.C.

London, Feb. 27.—(C. A. P.)—Hon. J. H. Turner has an article in The Daily Mail stating that game is not scarce in British Columbia, in spite of the fact that English and Hungarian partridges are being sent there.

GOOD FOR DRUNKARDS.

Quebec Inaugurates and Will Try the Approbation System.

Quebec, Que., Feb. 27.—Hereafter a new system will be practiced in connection with drunkards frequently brought before the recorder's court. An approbation system has been adopted, which will offer one a cure for drunkenness at no cost, the expense being borne by the Provincial Government. A prisoner before the court for drunkenness will be offered a treatment for the drink mania and an officer appointed to see that the directions are followed. The patient may take the cure while at work, sentence being suspended by the court in the meantime. The system has worked successfully in the United States and other countries.

Daily Intelligencer.

TIMELY TOPICS.

It is again alleged that Hon. Mr. Stratton purchased stock in the Crossin Piano Factory. How can the public "forget some things" while they are being dragged into prominence like this all the time?

• • •

The Orillia Packet mentions a kind-hearted landlord in that town who, in consideration of the very severe winter, and high price of fuel, has made each of his tenants a present of a month's rent. Perhaps a mention of the fact may stimulate others to do likewise.

• • •

"Do you think March will be a healthy month?" said The Intelligencer to a medical man.

"March will be healthy," was the reply, "and live as long as any month in the year," and he walked off laughing as heartily as though he had just cut a man's leg off.

• • •

The people of Great Britain drank 35,889,000 barrels of beer during the past year, which shows that they are not quite so ripe for prohibition as the inhabitants of the township of Huntingdon, Hastings county.

• • •

The Intelligencer last night had an interesting conversation with Ald. Sulman, Chairman of the Water Committee, in connection with the proposed filtering basin on Zwick's island. The project, Ald. Sulman said, has not by any means been dropped, and, but for an unforeseen circumstance, would have been at once proceeded with. The unforeseen circumstance is this: It has been supposed for some time that the city owed the Water department $3,500, the same being a half-year's hydrant rental. Now the auditors find that the city owes the Water department nothing at all. How this matter will affect the Zwick's island plan is thus explained by Ald. Sulman: "The cost of the Zwick's island filtering basin," he said, "is expected to be about $8,000. We intended to take the $3,500 which we supposed the city owed us, together with about $500 we had left from last year, making in all about $4,000, and go on with the scheme at once. We are pretty sure to have a balance on the right side of at least $2,000 this year; that would account for $6000 of the $8000 needed, and the intention was to carry the remaining $2000 over to next year. Now, however, the matter is blocked by the auditors' discovery that the city owes us nothing. The only way we can go on with the scheme now is by submitting a by-law to the people. For my part I think this should be done at once. It may cost a little more to lay the new pipes after the ice has gone, but not much more, and I believe the people would sanction it. We have a chance to secure a water supply second to none in Canada, and I would like to get an expression of opinion from our prominent citizens on the subject."

• • •

Ald. Sulman certainly states the case clearly and concisely. It would, perhaps, be well to obtain an expression of opinion from prominent citizens before any further action is taken in the matter, and The Intelligencer will gladly publish letters on the subject. It must be borne in mind that, if the use of city water is to become general in this town the supply furnished must be the best obtainable, and the best, there is no doubt, can only come through the Zwick's island filtering basin.

• • •

Up to the hour of going to press the backbone of winter was still doing business at the old stand.

• • •

The City Council held a secret session last night. Can it be that they took some action in regard to the proposed Old Boys' Reunion.

• • •

The flag is flying on the City Hall to-day, in honor of the brave deeds of our Canadian volunteers, who, on Feb. 27, four years ago, were largely instrumental in forcing Cronje, the "Lion of Africa," to surrender at Paardeberg. May the bright laurels won on that day never fade.

• • •

Kennedy has been acquitted at Brantford, and it looks as though another horrible crime is to go into the list of mysteries which will never be solved.

• • •

The Rochester losses have dwindled to four millions, but that's bad enough.

• • •

The South Birmingham election, which was fought out on the issue of a preferential tariff to the colonies, was won by a supporter of Mr. Chamberlain, the majority being the largest on record. That doesn't look as though "Joey's" star was on the wane.

CHARTER DAY AT ALBERT.

SOME STRENUOUS AND INTERESTING DOINGS AT THE COLLEGE YESTERDAY.

Yesterday was Charter Day at Albert College, and was celebrated with the usual half-holiday. In the afternoon an exciting game of hockey was played between a team representing the faculty and a team captained by John Morris. The hockey played was of the most scientific (?) description and bordered often on the spectacular. After a hard and exciting game the faculty won by 5 goals to 3. Referee George Purchase proved an able and impartial official. Principal Dyer, Hillis and Morris were ruled off for brief periods for rough play and disorderly conduct. It was rumored after the match that the faculty would challenge for the Stanley Cup, but Principal Dyer declares this rumor without foundation.

In the evening the annual Charter Day concert took place in the college chapel. It was well attended and proved altogether one of the best concerts held at Albert.

The programme consisted of a piano duet by Misses Frances Williams and Effie Esmond; vocal solo by Mr. Jas. Dyer; monologue by Miss J. L. Badgley; organ solo by Miss Theresa Young; vocal solo by Miss Frances Manning, with violin obligato by Miss Stella Pringle; reading, with musical accompaniment, by Miss Gertrude Trotter; piano solo, Miss Jessie Elliott; vocal duet, Misses Mabel Limbert and Edna McNeal; reading, Miss Gertrude Trotter; vocal solo, Mr. Dan. A. Cameron; piano solo, Miss Agnes St. Charles; ladies' quartette, Misses Limbert, Brereton, McLeod and McNeal; tableaux, national, Rose, Thistle, Shamrock, Maple Leaf, English Maypole Dance; Scotland, Mary Queen of Scots leaving her chamber to go to execution; Ireland, "The Top of the Mornin'!"

The vocal and instrumental selections and the readings were all exceedingly well presented. Miss Trotter scored a distinct triumph in her two readings, as also did Mr. Dan. A. Cameron in his vocal selections. The tableaux were prettily conceived and well portrayed. It was a satisfied audience that departed last night with the singing of the National Anthem.

PROF. RAMSAY WRIGHT'S INTERESTING LECTURE.

"MICROSCOPIC LIFE OF THE SEA" PROVES TO BE A FASCINATING SUBJECT.

Prof. Ramsay Wright, of the Biological Department, University of Toronto, lectured last night, in St. Agnes' School lecture hall, on "Microscopic Life of the Sea." There was a fair audience present, mostly ladies (no pun intended). Mr. F. E. O'Flynn was chairman.

The lecture proved to be highly interesting, and Prof. Wright showed a wonderful grasp of his subject. He told of the work being done by the fisheries departments of various nations, that of Canada, of course, being most enlarged upon. The Canadian fisheries, he said, amounted, in round figures, to $20,000,000 per year. Nova Scotia enjoyed the largest revenue from that source, and Ontario the smallest. It surprised not a few to hear the Professor declare that the lobster was the greatest money-maker for Canadian fishermen, the figures being 3.7 for the lobster, against 3.1 for the salmon, the next on the list. Getting down to his subject, "Microscopic Life of the Sea," Prof. Wright showed how all sea and lake water is full of vegetable life, not visible to the naked eye, but which, when placed under the microscope show wonderfully varied forms. Drawings of the different specimens, enlarged about a thousand times, were shown by means of lantern views. They ran to all sorts of shapes, from a balloon to a saw horse and piano stool. This vegetation was fed on by fish life, also invisible to the naked eye, but microscopic views of which were shown. These little things were absorbed by other and larger animals of the sea. The invisible vegetation spoken of by Prof. Wright is to be found wherever there is light, as it draws its sustenance from the rays of the sun, which generates carbonic acid. Thus it will be seen that, indirectly all fish life is practically dependent on the sun. The practical side of the matter was pointed out by Prof. Wright in the fact that the invisible vegetable life referred to is more abundant around the U.S. and Canadian coasts than almost anywhere else in the world. The richness of the invisible vegetation referred to was computed by the Professor to be fully equal to that of first-class pasture, acre for acre. The rate of propagation of the small animals which feed on the invisible vegetation is, according to the Professor, truly marvellous. They double themselves every five days, by the simple process of breaking in two, so that, starting with one of the animals, and doubling it and its offspring every five days, it would be found, at the end of 100 days, that the one had developed into a million. The time when the invisible vegetable was most prolific was when the water was termed "in blossom." The Professor showed plates marking the dissection of an oyster, which lives on the small animals fed by the invisible vegetation. He showed a plate illustrating the contents of an oyster's stomach. The articles, of course, were magnified about a thousand times, and appeared to comprise different curious things, differing in shape from a snow shovel to a dry goods box. The lecture throughout was most original and entertaining, and hearty applause greeted the Professor at its close.

A vote of thanks was moved by Mr. E. G. Sills, seconded by Mr. J. W. Johnson, and the latter took occasion to ask Prof. Wright if the "blossom" he had spoken of in connection with water at a certain season of the year, was at all deleterious. This question, Mr. Johnson said, was of particular interest to Belleville people. Prof. Wright gave the same answer as that given by the Toronto scientist who analyzed the bay water last year, namely, that the "blossom" was not at all injurious.

At the conclusion of the lecture the audience was favored with three songs by Mrs. James Grant accompanied by Mrs. (Col.) Campbell, which were greatly enjoyed.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

Will positively cure sick headache and prevent its return. Carter's Little Liver Pills. This is not talk, but truth. One pill a dose, See advertisement. Small pill, Small dose Small price.

Much talk, many lies.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation.—Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

Seven hundred British subjects are yearly born at sea.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alternative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia. (Signed),

T. S. McINTEE.

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kimloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I knew of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption."

Holloway's Corn Cure is the medicine to remove all kinds of corns and warts, and only costs the small sum of twenty-five cents.

If you have a good business, it is always better to stay where you are.

THIS VETERAN'S FIGHT

In the days of the Revolution he was on the side of victory, in later years surrendered to disease, but South American Kidney Cure gave him his liberty.

Mr. A. Williamson, of Kincardine, Ont., a veteran in the American war, and now customs officer, town clerk and a prominent citizen, says of South American Kidney Cure:—"I have found it a wonderful specific in my case. I suffered a great deal from Bladder and Kidney troubles, and one bottle entirely cured me. I think it a boon to mankind." Cures in all stages and gives relief in six hours. 88

THE BABY.

Where did you come from, baby dear?
Out of the everywhere into the here.

Where did you get your eyes so blue?
Out of the sky as I came through.

What makes the light in them sparkle and spin?
Some of the starry spikes left in.

Where did you get that little tear?
I found it waiting when I got here.

What makes your forehead so smooth and high?
A soft hand stroked it as I went by.

What makes your cheek like a warm white rose?
Something better than anyone knows.

Whence that three-cornered smile of bliss?
Three angels gave me at once a kiss.

Where did you get that pearly ear?
God spoke, and it came out to hear.

Where did you get those arms and hands?
Love made itself into hooks and bands.

Feet, whence did you come, you darling things?
From the same box as the cherubs' wings.

How did they all just come to be you?
God thought about me, and so I grew.

But how did you come to us, you dear?
God thought of you, and so I am here.

—George Macdonald.

MOTHER AND CHILD.

Suggestions How to Entertain and Teach the Little Ones.

"Happy is the child whose nurse is its mother!" It is not realized by many how capable a child is of ennui, "even as you and I," the grown-ups, and also how incapable the average nurse is of giving intelligent amusement to her charge, and how limited her opportunity in the confines of the nursery, even were she capable. Hence the adage, "Happy is the child whose nurse is its mother."

How full of interest and adventure life may be to the little one who follows the mother in her round of duties! He will dust and sweep, try to make beds, and set the table, sew when she does and fetch and carry to some purpose, perhaps, says a writer in Toronto Star. What delight could be greater than to help at the weekly baking, to be allowed a little wad of dough, which he may knead and make into pies and cakes just as mother does? It will be grey before he is done with it; it will probably have been picked up from the floor more than once, and for the first few times will not be fit to eat, but what of that? Does the mother realize that besides amusing her little one in this way she is developing his faculties, teaching him all sorts of necessary lessons; that the play is, though without any label, the best and most desirable kind of kindergarten? She will soon find, if she take the trouble to impress on the little scholar that there is a right way of doing all these things, yet without making a task of the play, that he is really of much assistance. It is wonderful what a little child of 4 or 6 can accomplish after a year or two's companionship with the mother.

A little game which a mother may play, while sewing perhaps, is one of buying and selling, and it will be of the intensest interest, because played with real money. Let the child buy from the mother a spool, a package of needles, and yard or a package of tape—anything the work-basket may contain or the mind suggest. For these he must pay in actual cash ten and 5-cent pieces and coppers and count his change carefully. Or he may be the vendor, with a little basket of articles for sale and must make the change. It is a lesson in arithmetic, in addition and subtraction, multiplication and division, that will be a most exciting adventure of the greatest possible use.

All this means a certain amount of time and trouble expended, and there may be mothers who cannot be bothered, so they say; they cannot have the children "round under their feet." This is a world where we never get something for nothing, and no mother can expect the best from a child to whom she has not given her best, towards whom she has not shown a wise unselfishness.

WHY BRAIN WORKERS BREAK DOWN.

Man is not a machine that keeps going as long as the steam is applied. He is a creature of blood, nerves and delicately balanced organism. Many don't realize this, but overwork their brains and break down. Brain workers need a strong, bracing tonic like Ferrozone to fortify their nerves and keep the blood pure and rich. Take Ferrozone and you'll do more work. You will have the strength, the ambition and the desire for work, because your system will be in first-class order. For your health and strength take Ferrozone regularly. Price 50c at druggists.

HER HUSBAND WAS A WRECK, NOW A PERFECT MAN.

Montreal.

Dear Sir,—I do not know how to express my gratitude to the Samaria Prescription Co. for the remedy which you sent me about four weeks ago. It produced an astonishing effect on my husband. Pen cannot express the feeling of gratitude I have for you, but, however, accept a thousand thanks.

It is to you that I owe the life of my husband, who was before a wreck in health and business. To-day he is a perfect man, and I can state that he has not been for the last three years, since he had started to drink. Please find enclosed $3.00 more for another treatment for one of my friends, whose husband is in the same condition as mine was. You will address it to me, as she does not want her husband to know she is giving it to him. Yours truly,

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN

When buying clothing, beware of the man who offers you $10 and $12 suits or overcoats for $3.98 or $4.76 Then again, do not be governed too much by the marked price—look to the value, the worth, the texture, trimmings and make of the goods themselves. A comparison thus made will show conclusively that the prices we quote are lower than goods of equal worth or quality can be bought for elsewhere.

THE BRITISH ELECTIONS.

Dissolution Predicted Within Six Weeks and Appeal to the Country.

London, Feb. 27.—The Associated Press is in a position to declare that there will be a dissolution of Parliament within six weeks, and if, as it is expected, the Liberals are returned to power, King Edward will summon Lord Spencer (Liberal leader in the House of Lords) to form a Cabinet.

The Toronto Scandal.

Toronto, Feb. 27.—The confession of Samuel Thompson of ballot stuffing in sub-division 9, Ward 4, for Controller Richardson, Ald. S. A. Jones and S. W. Burns, in the last elections, and of similar practices in the interests of C. C. Robinson, Ald. Hubbard and S. W. Burns, the year previous; the sudden termination of the investigation in the afternoon through the absence out of town of George Maguire and a notice of motion to serve a certiorari on Col. Denison, by counsel for Maguire and his poll clerk, W. Loudon, were the developments yesterday in the election frauds investigation.

Train Crashes Into Central Prison.

Toronto, Feb. 27.—While the G. T. R. train of three coaches from North Bay was coming into the city yesterday morning a misplaced switch sent it rushing on a spur line into the Central Prison grounds, the engine crashing through the staunch oak gates and the train bringing up finally in the centre of the yard. The passengers were shaken up a bit. Every car was searched by officials before leaving the precincts, as the prison yard was full of convicts.

Workman Instantly Killed.

Niagara Falls, Feb. 27.—A fatal accident occurred at the Jenckes Machine Works yesterday. Several men were working on a derrick swung with a large piece of steel, placing it in position in the Ontario Power Company's water conduit, when something went wrong with the boom. It gave way, falling with its load to the ground, catching one of the men, William Flynn, from St. Phillipe, Que., crushing his head, and killing him instantly.

Murder and Suicide.

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 27.—Henry L. Schwartz of the law firm of Baker & Schwartz, was shot and fatally wounded in his office yesterday by H. A. Knowles, a well-known business man, who, ten minutes later, shot himself dead in the presence of Chief of Detectives Taylor and Detective Sergeant O'Connor. The shooting is said to have been the culmination of business troubles.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Don't forget the public meeting in the City Hall on Monday night. Mr. R. B. Rogers, of Peterboro, will lecture on the Trent Valley Canal, and he is credited with knowing more about it than any man alive, and, inasmuch as he was chief engineer of construction the claim would appear to be a good one. Mrs. Rogers' lecture will be illustrated by maps, charts and limelight views, and should be highly interesting as well as instructive.

* * *

The Trent Valley Canal, it may be remarked, has nothing to do with the Trent Valley Hockey League, so don't imagine you're going to a sporting event.

* * *

The idea seems to be abroad that the Trent Valley Canal will never be finished, and that it will be kept, by whatever Government is in power, as a kind of a bait for the constituents of their supporters. Speaking with a gentleman who is well posted on the matter, we are informed that such a view is entirely erroneous. Conditions have changed greatly in recent years, and the country now needs the Trent Valley Canal, and needs it badly. It must be finished, and that before long, in order to give a water route for grain from the Northwest. After lying quiescent for a long time the matter has now become a live question. Inasmuch as the completion of the canal would mean much to Belleville in the way of getting cheap electric power, it behooves all our citizens to attend the meeting on Monday night and hear the project, from beginning to end, discussed and explained by Mr. Rogers, who has all the details at his fingers' ends.

Canadian Conductor Hurt.

Plattsburg, N.Y., Feb. 27.—A telephone message from Fort Covington, N.Y., states that a Grand Trunk passenger train was wrecked between Bombay, Franklin County, and Helena, St. Lawrence County, yesterday by spreading rails. Eleven passengers were injured, two, Mrs. Beron of Hogansburg, N.Y., and Conductor Frank Larierd of Montreal, Que., very seriously.

Bishop Operated On.

Montreal, Feb. 27.—Bishop McDonald of St. John, N. B., underwent a successful operation yesterday at the Hotel Dieu Hospital, and Sir William Hingston has every hope of his patient's recovery.

Kidney Disease May Last for Years

CAUSING MUCH PAIN OR SUFFERING OR IT MAY SUDDENLY PROVE FATAL.

Pains in the small of the back, scalding, burning sensations when passing water and gradual loss of flesh and weight are the unmistakable symptoms of kidney disease.

If you would prevent Bright's Disease, rheumatism, stone in the bladder and other dreadfully painful developments of kidney disease, you must act promptly.

If you choose Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills the treatment will not long be pursued before you will find yourself greatly benefitted.

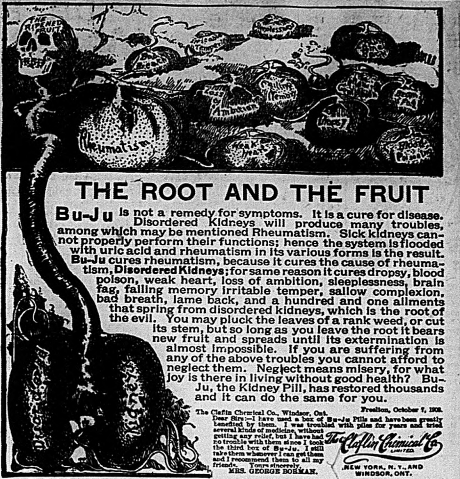
The grand reputation which this great kidney medicine has made for itself is due to no small extent to the wonderful promptness with which it brings relief and cure to the sufferer from backache.

Backache, lumbago, rheumatism, aching sides and limbs result from poisons in the blood, which are entirely eliminated by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

It seems rather unwise to experiment with untried remedies, when you can rely absolutely on this famous prescription of the great receipt book author.

Mrs. F. Henthorn, whose husband is of the firm of Marsh & Henthorn, founders and machinists, and who lives at 286 Ann street, Belleville, states:—"Some years ago I was taken with a pain across the small of my back, caused no doubt from deranged kidneys and my system generally was run down. I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I must say I found relief from my trouble at once. They proved thorough and effective in action and soon brought about a complete cure. We have always used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in our family and found them very helpful."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25c a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author are on every box of his remedies.



THE ROOT AND THE FRUIT

Bu-Ju is not a remedy for symptoms. It is a cure for disease. Disordered Kidneys will produce many troubles, among which may be mentioned Rheumatism. Sick kidneys cannot properly perform their functions; hence the system is flooded with uric acid and rheumatism in its various forms is the result. Bu-Ju cures rheumatism, because it cures the cause of rheumatism, Disordered Kidneys; for same reason it cures dropsy, blood poison, weak heart, loss of ambition, sleeplessness, brain fag, failing memory irritable temper, sallow complexion, bad breath, lame back, and a hundred and one ailments that spring from disordered kidneys, which is the root of the evil. You may pluck the leaves of a rank weed, or cut its stem, but so long as you leave the root it bears new fruit and spreads until its extermination is almost impossible. If you are suffering from any of the above troubles you cannot afford to neglect them. Neglect means misery, for what joy is there in living without good health? Bu-Ju, the Kidney Pill, has restored thousands and it can do the same for you.

The Claflin Chemical Co., Windsor, Ont.

Dear Sirs:—I have used a box of Bu-Ju Pills and have been greatly benefited by them. I was troubled with piles for years and tried several kinds of medicine, without getting any relief, but I have had no trouble with them since I took the third box of Bu-Ju. I still take them whenever I can get them and I recommend them to all my friends. Yours sincerely,

THE YELLOW MAN.

A THRILLING STORY OF THE BOXERS IN CHINA.

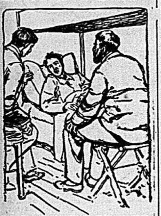
BY CARLTON DAWE.

Copyright, 1900.
By Paul R. Reynolds.

Of course it was very nice for a young man to hear the pleasant things, but it was none the less embarrassing. Judged by the calculating light of cold philosophy, I had been guilty of an egregious blunder, and I owed more to the officer on watch than people seemed to imagine. But it's all well that ends well, and I bore my blushing honors with the best grace I could command.

Fortunately about this time the land began to open up, and the thought of a trip ashore so engrossed the minds of my fellow voyagers that I was left in peace.

My anxiety, I need hardly say, was centered in the welfare of Miss Hurst, and I never missed an opportunity of sending a message to her or following the doctor up for information. Happily she was in a fair way of canvalescence. The shock to her system had been very great, but the symptoms of fever had abated, and now the man of medicine declared that all she needed was rest. With that end in view he had requested her to keep in bed for that day, and also with the further view, I thought, of baffling the curiosity of the passengers. However, just as we were creeping up to an anchorage he came to me and said that if I would wait until the people had gone ashore Miss Hurst would like to see me for a minute or two. Naturally her wish was a command, and, informing my uncle of the circumstance, we bided our time.



"A Chinaman!" Jim and I uttered the exclamation.

Her mother, with outstretched hand and a white, pathetic face, met me at the door of the cabin.

"Mr. Gray," she said, and the false name struck me as contemptible under such conditions, "I thank you with all my heart. My daughter is all the world to me, and you have brought her back from the grave. God bless you!"

She drew me to her and kissed me on the forehead, and I was seized with a great longing to throw my arms about her and kiss her as I would have kissed my own mother. But I drew back, mumbling stupidly that it was nothing, that she was to think it nothing I had done, that I was glad I had been of service—a mixture the idiocy of which appealed to me even in the midst of my embarrassment, for embarrassed I was, and deeply, for over the mother's shoulder two great gray eyes set in a sweet, pale face were watching me from the top berth. People had spoken of my courage in jumping into the sea. Well, it may have seemed a bold thing to do, but I certainly hadn't the courage to face the wide, inquiring eyes of this delicate girl.

"Mr. Gray," she said, "I hope you do not think me unkind or remiss. I wanted to send for you before, but I am supposed to be under the doctor's orders, though why I can't imagine. Believe me, I am perfectly well, but he orders rest, and my mother wishes it. Let me thank you now."

She held out her wee white hand, which I pressed with a nervous clasp, and I looked into her face, right into her eyes, and I knew that this pale girl held my destiny in her hands.

"Don't thank me," I mumbled, scarcely knowing what I was saying. "Don't say anything more about it. It is enough for me to know that I have been of service to you."

"And it is enough for me to know," she repeated slowly, a world of meaning in her look and tone, "that you have saved my life."

"I am glad," I said.

"And I," she answered in a low voice.

I looked her straight in the eyes, and she returned the look frankly, without flinching, and I believe we each strove to read the deeper thoughts that lay behind. To me she seemed a living piece of pale perfection, for whom I would have leaped into 50 raging seas or the deadly maelstrom itself.

The doctor appearing at that moment and cautioning me not to excite his patient, we talked but a little while longer, and as I shook hands with her she said, "I suppose you are going ashore?"

"It is very probable."

"You will be careful?" There was almost a tone of entreaty in her voice.

"I promise you."

They were only little common words, but they were full of meaning. I knew now that there was some one who took more than a passing interest in me.

Well, nothing of any moment happened at Colombo, and the next day when we were well at sea once more Miss Hurst came up on deck and duly received the congratulations of the passengers. Naturally people expected to see me monopolize the greater part of her time, but in this I think they were disappointed. Indeed I purposely kept aloof from her, though it might have been an act of charity if I had stood by to warn off some of the more foolish people. However, in the afternoon she sent for me to come and take tea with her and her mother in their cabin, and my reply to the invitation, which was as delightful as it was unexpected, was a hasty brush up and a flurried appearance. I thought it hard that poor old Jim should have been left out in the cold, and I apologized to him before going; but, dear old fellow, he never looked for the slight and consequently failed to find it. Moreover, they had not seen much of him, and they were quite ignorant of the fact that Mr. George Carter was the uncle of Mr. Frederick Gray, who was not Mr. Frederick Gray at all.

I was received with the utmost courtesy by the widow and her daughter, and though we strove hard to talk of many things I knew we were rigidly eschewing that subject which of all others was the most interesting. Indeed during my previous visit to this cabin I had been struck by the fact that neither mother nor daughter had referred in any way to the assailant or the attempted murder, but instead indulged in vague generalities, as though the lamentable occurrence had been the result merely of accident. From a perhaps mistaken sense of modesty I also refrained from directly broaching the subject, but at the time I thought it strange, and I almost thought it stranger now.

We solemnly drank our tea and made a pretense of eating biscuits, but all the time there was a feeling in the air of an impending outbreak, and presently it came.

"Do you know, Mr. Gray," Miss Hurst began, "my mother and I have been greatly impressed with your goodness to us. I myself can never sufficiently thank you, though perhaps you won't think me ungrateful if I say that I fear your heroism will in the end avail me nothing."

"No, no, Cecil!" cried her mother. "It is wicked of you to say such things in the face of God's goodness."

"And your courage," said she, turning toward me with a sad smile. "But I cannot expect always to have this gentleman near me in the hour of danger."

It was an opening of which I dared not avail myself, but I managed to say something not entirely unsuited to the occasion. And then I boldly asked what this danger was which seemed to threaten them, for already I seemed to think that her joys had become mine, her sorrows mine also.

"I think we owe you an explanation," began the girl, "and with your permission I will begin at the beginning and make you acquainted with what no one on board for a moment suspects. Hurst is not our real name. A short time ago my father was murdered in London under conditions of horror and mystery which excited considerable public interest, and as a protection against the curious and the inquisitive we adopted another name."

"Perhaps I recollect the occurrence," I replied, feeling a deeper interest than ever in these two poor women who, like myself, were forced to such a contemptible subterfuge. "In what part of London was the crime committed?"

"At the Hotel Victoria. We had just arrived from Australia, with every prospect in view of a happy time, when this cruel deed plunged us into the very depths of grief and despair."

"Pardon me," I said, for now my pulse was going like mad, worked by the thoughts which rushed tumultuously through my brain, "but your name was Hilbury?"

"Yes, Hilbury. You remember the murder?"

"Only too well. And now," I continued, warming to my subject, "it is only right that I should return confidence with confidence. Not alone do I remember the murder, but I know who committed it."

"You know?"

Both women uttered the exclamation in the selfsame breath, and as I looked at their white, scared faces I saw that the Terror had as strong a grip upon them as it had upon my father in his worst days.

"Yes, I know. The mark upon his forehead was that of the Society of the Hidden Meaning."

The ladies rose panting from the settee and confronted me with faces which were now ghostly in their pallor.

"How do you know? How do you know?"

"I will tell you. I saw it once upon my mother's forehead, I saw it later upon my father's. It would have been seen upon mine long before this but for the love of Providence. It is called the writing of Kung and is the symbol of death."

"How do you know? Who are you?"

The girl pronounced these words tremblingly and yet defiantly, as though even I were not above suspicion. I thought, though it might have been only my fancy, that she even, perhaps unconsciously, crept nearer the door. Certainly she eyed me in a way that was anything but complimentary. Her mother, poor soul, sat pale and trembling, too much amazed to speak.

"I will tell you. My name is not Gray at all, but Kingston, and I changed it for precisely the same reason that you changed yours. I look upon myself as a marked man, and I fear that if any one heard my name he might remember the great Windsor mystery or the Chichester outrage. They killed my mother first, then my father, and they have followed me with a like intent ever since. That is why I am here aboard this ship under a false name."

"So you are the son of Captain Kingston?"

"Yes. You knew him?"

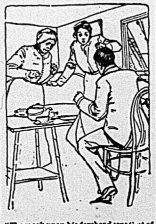
"He was an old friend of my husband. They first met each other in China many years ago. He was mixed up with the— Well, well, how very strange it all is!"

Then we went into explanations, and I learned how among the late Mr. Hilbury's papers letters were found which connected him with the society. He, it seems, like many other men in this world, had had a strange, eventful history of his own, and no doubt he and Bob Kingston had indulged in many a weird carouse on the China coast. They were wild days 30 years ago, and men led strange lives in those outposts of civilization. But it seemed strange above all things that my father and the father of this girl should have met and caroused, walked the same path and died the same death.

We talked for some time longer, I telling succinctly much of what had befallen me, and at length we touched upon the letter which had been delivered to Miss Hilbury (for of course the name Hurst had now become a thing of the past) in the streets of Port Said. She at once opened her dressing bag and, extracting an envelope therefrom, handed it to me.

"Look!" she said. "See if you recognize anything familiar."

Though I knew what was coming I nevertheless opened it hastily, and my eyes instantly devoured the one line of writing which was scrawled across the sheet. It simply said, "Your father's friends are watching over you." There was no signature, no other word, but in the left hand corner, drawn with a vermilion pencil, the color of which I had learned so to fear and to detest, was the fateful elliptical sign of the Hidden Meaning.



"The mark upon his forehead was that of the Society of the Hidden Meaning."

"If I had only known of this sooner," I said as I handed it back to her, "we might both have been spared so much, at least we should have laid our hands on the assailant. Now, unless he is the most reckless man in the world, he has surely given us the slip."

"How? What do you mean? My assailant was a black man. I have been assured that there is no such person on board."

"Your assailant may have been black for the occasion only. Unknown to you, unknown to me, there has been a Chinaman in the cook's galley all along. I only knew this the night of the attempt upon your life, which I regarded as one of those brutal outrages which mad, bad men sometimes commit. How could I possibly guess you were Miss Hilbury or connect you with the society?"

"Then this Chinaman, if it be he, is still on board?" She grew white at the mere thought of his proximity, while Mrs. Hilbury began visibly to tremble.

"We shall soon see, but if he be what I suspect he will have left us at Colombo."

"You will go and see?" she said.

"At once. In five minutes I will return."

Without more ado I made my way to the main deck and then forward to the galley. I peered in at the door, but not seeing any one at all resembling a Chinaman I beckoned to the chief cook.

"You know who I am, of course?" I said.

"Oh, yes, sir," and he smiled good naturedly. "A plucky thing, too, sir, and no mistake."

"Thanks," I replied. "But can you tell me where your Chinese scullery-man is?"

"I wish I could, sir. But, to tell you the truth, I haven't seen the varmint since we left Colombo."

"Do you mean he is not on board?"

"Well, sir, if hunting high and low and not finding him is any proof I should say decidedly he is not on board."

"You have searched"—

"Everywhere, sir. The slit eyed rascal went ashore at Colombo and evidently forgot to come back."

Seeing the look of intense disappointment in my face, his eyes quickened.

"Why, sir," he began, "do you suspect"—

"Well, yes, I do—rather. But it's too late now to fuss. You might keep it to yourself."

"Certainly, sir. I only wish I'd known."

"So do I."

"Do you know, sir, now you've come to mention it, I've heard of him prowling and prowling like an evil spirit, and I know that Quartermaster Jessop found him late one night on the after deck and kicked him forward and that one of the stewards while on night duty caught him in one of the saloon alleyways. Lost himself, he said. It all looks mighty queer, sir."

"It is. I would have given £1,000 to have known of this before."

"Sorry, sir," said the cook, with a smile. "You could have had the information and the man himself for half the price."

I gave the good fellow a present and wended my way aft to the ladies, to whom I had such little consolation to offer. Yet, meager as it was, the thought that their enemy had quitted the vessel seemed to cause them infinite relief. They were not vengeful. They had no wish to cut, torture or hang. Like myself at one period of my existence, they longed for nothing but peace, peace.

CHAPTER XXI.

THE GREAT AUSTRALIAN BIGHT.

Judging from the foregoing revelation, it was fairly evident that we had really succeeded in outwitting Woo-ching and his miscreants. That we should join the very ship in which Miss Hilbury was going home was a coincidence somewhat singular, but that she should be pursued by a creature of the society was not singular at all. The mere changing of the name was not meant as a trick to blind the society—such a feeble subterfuge would have been equivalent to the head burying policy of the ostrich—it was merely a cloak to conceal the identity of a timorous individual from prying and curious eyes. As a matter of fact, neither mother nor daughter knew that she had incurred the wrath of the society until the presentation of that letter in the streets of Port Said. The choosing of the name Hurst had no meaning beyond that. Beginning with the same letter as their real name, it suited the marks on their baggage and on their linen.

Will You Help a Sick Friend?

Get My Book For Him Now.

Which shall I Send?
Book 1 on Dyspepsia.
Book 2 on the Heart.
Book 3 on the Kidneys
Book 4 for Women.
Book 5 for Men (sealed)
Book 6 on Rheumatism

Send me no money.

Only tell me which book to send.

You certainly know of some one who is sick—some sufferer who will be grateful for the help my book offers.

And that book tells of a way to help. Tells of a way so certain that I, as a physician, offer that help on trial. The book tells how, for 30 years in hospitals and at bed sides I searched for a way to cure deep-seated and difficult diseases. It tells how I perfected my prescription—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. How by scientific experiment I traced out the causes that bring on chronic diseases.

I found invariably that where there was a weakness, the inside nerves were weak.

Where there was a lack of vitality, the vital nerves lacked power.

Where weak organs were found, I always found weak nerves.

Not the nerves commonly thought of, but the vital organs' nerves. The inside, the invisible nerves.

This was a revelation.

Then my real success began.

Then I combined ingredients that would strengthen — that would vitalize these nerves.

That prescription I called a restorative. It is known the world over now as Dr. Shoop's Restorative. After that I did not fail to cure one case in each hundred. In the extremely difficult cases, my failures for five years were one in each forty treated. I found cancer incurable. Cancer is for surgery not medicine.

Then how to get this prescription to the sick ones everywhere was my thought.

I must announce it in the public press. But, thought I, will they realize the real truth of my discovery — the real power of Dr. Shoop's Restorative? Then a way came to me—like an inspiration.

"I will offer it to the sick on trial." Then they will know that I am sincere —that my prescription is unusual."

I wrote a reliable druggist in each city and village in America.

They agreed to co-operate with me. Now by any sick one

Dr. Shoop's Restorative

Can be taken at my risk. For a full month I will let you use it entirely at my risk.

Send no money. Just write me for the book you need. When I send it I will tell you of a druggist near you who will permit the month's trial. Use the Restorative a month. Then decide. If you say to the druggist, "It did not help me," that will relieve you of any expense whatever. He will bill the cost to me. This is my way of clearing your mind of all doubt as to what Dr. Shoop's Restorative can do.

No matter how prejudiced, you cannot dispute this absolute security I offer. You cannot resist an offer like this if you are at all sick. If you have a weakness, write me. If you can't do things like you used to do them, tell me about it. Write in confidence. As a physician I will tell you a way to help.

Get my book now—to-day. Address Dr. Shoop, Box 69, Racine, Wis.

Mild cases, not chronic, are often cured with one or two bottles. At druggists.

Keep the Children Healthy.

THE CHRISTIAN LIFE.

Whole Work of a Disciple of Christ Consists in Establishing Most Christian Relations With the World.

The term and conception, the perfectionment of one's self, does not please one because he finds the word perfectionment too vague and too large. I have thought precisely this, and there is a connection between this and the question on forms of life.

True life is given to man on two conditions—the first, that he do good to his neighbor (and there is only one good—to increase love among men—to feed the hungry, visit the sick, etc.; all this only to increase love among men); the second, to augment the power of love given to him. One of these conditions is necessary to the other. Good acts which increase love among men are only such when I feel in performing them that love increases in me when I do them lovingly, tenderly. And love increases in me (I am perfected) only when I do good acts and excite love in another. Hence, if I do good acts and remain indifferent, or if I am perfected and think that I increase love within me without exciting love in another (sometimes this again excites evil), I fail.

I succeed only when I know with certainty—and we all know it—that I love and that men are becoming more loving. This, among other things, is a proof that love is an integral substance. God is the same to us all. In discovering him within us we discover him in others, and inversely.

To live on the top of a pillar, to withdraw into the desert or to live in a community—all this can be provisory, necessary to men, but as definite forms it is evident error and unreason. To live a pure and holy life on a pillar or in a community is impossible, because the man is deprived of half of life—communion with the world.

To live always thus one must deceive oneself. It is evident, indeed, that just as it is impossible in the current of an impure river to seperate a little circle of pure water by some chemical process, so it is impossible to live alone or in a society with some as saints in a whole world which lives in violence for money. Ground and cattle must be bought or rented; relations must be entered into with the exterior, the non-Christian world. We cannot liberate ourselves from it, and we ought not to, except that in general we ought to abstain from those things which we need not do. We only deceive ourselves. The whole work of a disciple of Christ consists in establishing the most Christian relations with this world.

The people who have not attained the perfection of a new life are always uniquely occupied with preparations for life, but the life itself does not exist for them. They are only occupied with eating, sleeping, study, rest, the perpetuation of the race, education. They lack but one thing—life, the development of life.

Our work is a work of good from childhood, to increase what is intrusted to us—our life—and not to repeat the customary commonplace that to develop one's own life is egotism. To develop one's own life is to serve God.—Count Leo Tolstoi.

Geese Raising for Farmers.

If there is abundant pasturage, little feed is required during the summer months, as geese depend almost wholly upon grass. In winter, provide an enclosure or protection and feed some grain, shredded silage or hay twice a day. If too much grain is given, laying will be induced too early and the eggs will not be fertile. Geese seek mates in February. A profitable cross for market purposes is obtained by mating an Embden gander with a Toulouse female. The green goose, as styled by the English, is marketable at about four months, although they are placed upon the market at two months if large and well fatted. Young goslings should be given warm quarters, not allowed to get chilled, and much the same treatment given as to ducklings, until strong enough to follow the mother.

While plenty of drinking water must be provided, and a bath occasionally is beneficial, yet it is not essential that ponds be prepared, nor that geese should dabble in water at all times.

The First Sunday School.

In 1775 James Hay, familiarly known as "Old Jemmy o' the Hey," opened a Sunday School in a neighbor's cottage at Little Lever, in Lancashire, summoning his scholars by the rattle of a pestle in an old brass mortar.

In such primitive and humble forms did the great Sunday School idea assume shape in the remote byways of England, Ireland and Wales before Robert Raikes arose to collect these scattered links and to begin the great work of forging the chain which was to girdle the whole earth. Under the stimulus and infection of his zeal Sundays schools began to spring up in marvelous fashion. A second school was opened in Gloucester at a house at the corner of Grey Friars and Southgate street, a third in Newgate street, and in an incredibly short time the town, which will be known forever as the nursery of one of the most beneficient of all enterprises, was "punctuated with Sunday schools."

Qualification of Candidates.

It was, says London Tit-Bits, in an English bye-election.

The first candidate rose and said: "I fought for you, my friends, and to-day the bones of my right arm are bleaching among the hills of Africa!"

The second candidate followed with: "My left leg, friends, lies lietless in the shadows of Spion Kop!"

Both my legs," said the third candidate, "are in Mafeking!"

Then the fourth man rose and said: "I went through the war without a scratch. Here are two strong arms to uphold your rights, and two live legs to kick with till you get 'em!"

Bad Day For Rochester—Retail Drygoods District Razed to the Ground By Fire.

Rochester, N.Y., Feb. 27.—The sun set last night, with ten engines pouring streams of water on the ruins of what was practically the retail drygoods district of this city, for three out of five of the department stores were consumed in yesterday morning's disastrous fire, the largest of which was the Sibley, Lindsay & Curr Co.

Insurance men are still figuring on the loss, which they now place at $4,000,000. Of this amount, $750,000 represents the loss on buildings and the balance the loss on stocks of goods and to occupants of offices. In addition, it is estimated that 2,500 people are thrown out of work, temporarily at least.

The burned district lies on the north side of Main street, between St. Paul street and Clinton avenue, north, running from St. Paul street almost the entire length of the block. The fire started on the eastern end of the block, in the store of the Rochester Drygoods Co., and worked west, taking but one store east of this establishment, that of the Walkover Shoe Co., before its progress was checked in that direction. Next west was the store of the Beadle Sherburne Co., which was destroyed; then the Marble block, occupied by the Lindsay, Sibley & Curr Co., also destroyed; and finally, the 13-storey granite building, the lower part of which was occupied by the Sibley, Lindsay & Curr Co. and the upper part by offices. Only the front wall of the Marble building was standing last night. The shell of the Granite building is intact, and the floors are in place, but the building was gutted.

Assistant Chief Frank A. Jaynes was struck by a flying nozzle and received some bruises.

The following is a table of the losses:

Granite building, $300,000; Marble building, $75,000; Buell estate, $20,000; Cornwall building, $60,000; Kirley building, $35,000; Walkover Shoe Co., $10,000; Sibley, Lindsay & Curr Co., $250,000.

The loss on the stock was as follows:

Sibley, Lindsay & Curr Co., retail, $250,000; wholesale, $1,250,000; tenants in Granite building, $200,000; Beadle & Sherburne Co., $350,000; Rochester Drygoods Co., $150,000.

The smaller losses foot up to $80,000.

SUNLIGHT SOAP

With ordinary soap a woman has to work so hard and so long on wash day she has no time for preparing any of the family meals. Wash day is a trial, and the good wife faces each with a sigh of despair.

Sunlight Soap makes all the difference in the world. No toiling—no rubbing—no boiling—less than half the labor with much better results. Most women are all through their wash by twelve o'clock when they wash with Sunlight Soap the Sunlight way. It makes child's play of work.

There is an Individuality

About our decorating that you will not find elsewhere

THERE IS originality in our decorating—we do not find it necessary to reproduce your drawing room in your neighbors home. We prefer to give each a change and we have the werewithal to produce that change.

HAVE Firstly

the ideas, a most necessary adjunct to healthy art.

HAVE
Secondly

the materials, the correct papers, the correct mouldings, the styles the new things with which to work out a decorative scheme.

HAVE
Thirdly

The workmen—men experienced in there several branches of workmanship—skilled artizans and craftsmen who can follow mechanically and artistically the drawings and ideas of our decorator.

And there is no mistake about it we are doing today a far superior class of decorating than has before ever been done in Belleville and vicinity.

Just watch the interiors of the best homes in the city if you care to observe our decorative work.

Alleged Cruelty to Animals.

Yesterday afternoon Wm. Milne was tried on a charge of cruelty to a horse. Robert Burris was the complainant and alleged that Milne bought from him a horse and returned it. Instead of placing the animal in a stable it was tied to the barn door on the outside. From the evidence it was clear that Burris was at fault, and the case was dismissed. The question of costs was deferred. Mr. McMahon appeared for the defendant.

Great Naval Fight Said to Have Taken Place at Port Arthur—Several Japanese Vessels Alleged to be Sunk.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

London, Feb. 27.—St. Petersburg sends a report to the effect that the Japanese minister at Seoul has requested the Corean Government to hand the French minister his passports.

Harbin, Feb. 27.—Only fifteen inhabitants remain in Dalney.

It is stated that the Japanese intend to bombard the city.

The Chinese who remain at Port Arthur are starving.

After the bold attempt of the Japanese to block the channel at Port Arthur, a great naval fight took place. It is stated here that 28 fighting vessels were in the Japanese fleet.

The attack lasted fourteen hours, but the Japanese failed to achieve their purpose, being repulsed by the forts.

Several Japanese vessels were sunk.

Sports and Pastimes

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

It would appear that our Belleville boys struck something fast and clever when they bumped up against Midland last night. To be sure the locals had been a long time on the train and could hardly have been in shape to do themselves justice, but there is no doubt at all that the Midlanders have the real goods concealed about their persons. The Collingwood team played the Barrie seniors on their own ice and were only beaten 4-3, while the Midland team afterwards trimmed the Collingwoods, so it will be seen that the Reds were were not up against the easiest game in the world last night.

The game, according to a telephone message from one of the team, was fast and rather rough. The score at half-time was 8-7 in favor of Midland. In the last half Midland scored twice, while Belleville didn't find the net at all, the final score being 10-7. The Midland rink, it seems, is long and narrow, which fact interfered a good deal with our lads' shooting. Mr. Roy Thomas, of Barrie, was referee.

A lead of three goals is by no means a small one, but the Reds, on their own ice, have a trick of scoring very fast sometimes, and it won't surprise us very much if they send the Midlanders home next Wednesday morning with the short end of the score on the round. If they don't, you can bet your trusty snow shovel they will know the reasons why.

It appears that the case against Reddy McMillan is to be reopened tonight in Toronto before the O.H.A. executive. This prosecution, or persecution, is enough to make the average decent sportsman sick. It appears to be a case of "anything to beat Belleville." However, Mr. E. Guss Porter, M.P., Belleville's representative on the executive, will be on hand to see that we get a fair shake, and the Hon. Guss will jar somebody pretty forcibly before Manager Truaisch and his merry men go down and out. People who ought to know say that "Reddy" will come out with flying colors, with the laugh on all his enemies. Here's hoping he does.

The championship of the Trent Valley League appears to lie between Napanee and the T.A.S. of Peterboro, with the chances strictly in favor of the "Tarriers."

Teams representing the High School and O.B.C. played yesterday afternoon, the former winning by 8 to 6.

Now it is said that, with the exception of Phillips and Geroux, the Marlboros "quit cold" in the last game with Ottawas. They were afraid to tackle their checks.

And it is pretty hard for the Toronto people to admit that about the only man in their town who can play senior hockey was imported from Montreal. Sad! Sad! But nearly true.

"What do we care for the cup?" says the Toronto Telegram, "we're fostering hockey in the rural districts of Ontario. That's glory enough for us." And that seems about all the glory the O.H.A. is likely to get for a long time to come, in the way of Stanley Cup honors.

Toronto Telegram: Stratford are fairly into the finals and the ease with which they have wiped opposing towns off the hockey map indicates that even Belleville will have to hurry some to beat the grown-up midgets. Belleville will have the advantage of size, but Stratford have the speed and the advantage of having played together all their lives. It will be a pretty contest when the two clash—always providing Midland does not force a change in the programme.

TWENTY-FOURTH ANNUAL REPORT OF AN EXCELLENT AND BENEFICENT INSTITUTION.

The twenty-fourth annual report of the Belleville City Mission has been handed us for publication, as follows:

Another year marked by many manifestations of God's goodness has passed. While many times almost discouraged, he has cheered our hearts by permitting us to see fruits from our labors and trusting His word "That all things work together for good to those who love Him," we have gone steadily on, and as ever we have found his promise true in our personal experience. We will trust and not be afraid, for God is our helper.

G. WEBSTER,
Treasurer.

We have a small balance on hand. The services Sabbath morning and evening and the Thursday evening prayer meeting are conducted by Messrs. Northrup, Graham, Chown, Hunt, Deacon, Elvins and Wilkie.

We have made arrangements for having a minister every other week on Thursday night. Up to this time we have had Dr. Crothers, Rev. Mr. Elliott, Rev. Mr. Martin and Rev. Mr. Gilliland.

On Friday night the Teachers' Bible Class is held at Mrs. Schuster's for the study of the Sunday School lesson, led by Mr. Northrup.

The Sabbath School is one of the most important departments of the mission work. We have a staff of faithful teachers, Mr. C. Clapp, Supt.; teachers, Mrs. Clapp, Miss Webster, Miss Reeves, Miss Holton, Miss Ethel Johnson, Miss Vermilyea, Miss Alford, Miss McCutcheon, Mrs. Schuster and Mr. Yourex. Miss Alford has charge of the primary class.

The Sewing School has not been opened since the holidays, owing to the cold weather.

Our picnic was held last summer at Rednersville, per Annie Lake.

A supper was served a few weeks ago for the scholars. The teachers contributed towards the supper. Mr. Wilkie entertained the children with his phonograph.

Christmas Gifts.

We take this opportunity of thanking Mr. Whiteside, of Little Britain, for the generous gift of 240 lbs. of honey, about 50 lbs. more than last year. I presume Mr. Whiteside thought this winter would be a hard one for the poor. We sent 10 lbs. to the hospital, 10 lb. can to the S. Army, and all who called received a supply. We are thankful to all who so kindly assisted in the work by their contributions of money, Christmas gifts, toys, clothing, etc.

Mr. Whiteside, 240 lbs. honey; the Sewing Society of Avondale, a number of pieces new underwear, three nice heavy quilts, coats, stockings, etc.; King's Daughters, Bridge St. Church, 10 pieces new underwear, waists, stockings, mittens, two night dresses, etc., per Mrs. Lake; Mr. J. FOR ENERGY AND STRENGTH—ANTI-PILL Prevalent conditions that go to make people look old and fasten age marks before their time are described in the following letter from a woman who received immediate relief from a sample of ANTI-PILL.

"I would wake in the morning feeling tired. My feet and ankles would swell. I had a horrible dragged sensation. My head ached as though it would burst. My bowels were never regular. I had a disagreeable feeling of overfulness after eating. Food would not digest, and caused great distress. Was nervous. I was treated for dyspepsia and constipation with little or no relief. A sample of Dr. Leonhardt's ANTI-PILL did me so much good I followed up its use, and two boxes has entirely cured me."

ANTI-PILL is sold by druggists, 50 cents, or mailed by addressing WILSON-FYLE CO., Niagara Falls, Ont. Free sample mailed to any address.

Sold in Belleville by J. S. McKeown.

Rheumatism

Ought to be called by its right name—Kidney Disease. Uric Acid gets in the blood, because the Kidneys are too weak to filter it out. "Blood purifiers"—"salts"—only relieve temporarily. Strengthen the kidneys to do their work, and there will be no more excruciating rheumatic pains. And until you do cure the kidneys you will suffer with Rheumatism.

GIN PILLS

cure Uric Acid Rheumatism by curing the Kidneys. They clean and purify the Kidneys—make them strong enough to do nature's work as it should be done.

We have such implicit confidence in the remarkable virtues of GIN PILLS that we authorise druggists to refund the money if they fail to cure.

SENT THE RUSSIANS INTO HARBOR SHELTER

Japanese Again Bombard Port Arthur in the Morning.

SHELL RUSS TORPEDO BOATS

Alexieff Sent Troops to Pigeon Bay to Oppose Japanese Creeping Up By Sea—Admiral Togo Really Failed in "Bottle" Trick—17,000 Corean Soldiers to Join Japs, By Order of the Government, to Fight Against Russia.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 27.—(2 a.m.)—A copy of a telegram from the Viceroy of the Far East, Admiral General Adjutant Alexieff, to His Majesty the Emperor, has just been given out. It is dated Feb. 25. The place whence it is sent is not stated, but it is supposed to be Mukden. The message is as follows:

"A squadron of the enemy's vessels, numbering sixteen, approached the fortress at about 11 o'clock this morning and opened a bombardment on the cruisers Askold, Bayan and Novik, which were in the outer harbor, and also on the fortress. The firing continued for half an hour. Then our cruisers went into the harbor. The enemy fired for several minutes on one of our batteries and then began to leave. They stopped within sight of the fort, but out of range of fire.

"At this time four of the enemy's cruisers detached themselves from the squadron and proceeded to Pigeon Bay, where they quickly opened fire on our torpedo boats that were cruising there. They directed also a strong cannonade against the shore. The commandant consequently sent troops to Pigeon Bay. The firing there lasted for thirty minutes, but no landing was made. The Japanese cruisers then departed. Several measures have been taken to oppose a possible effort on the part of the enemy to creep up by sea.

"Our losses this day were one man wounded at the battery.

"I respectfully report the above to your Imperial Majesty.

"(Signed) Alexieff."

Jap Torpedo Boat Sunk.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 27.—Viceroy Alexieff again reports to the Czar concerning the attack on Feb. 24. He then adds: "On the night of Feb. 25 our torpedo boats proceeded seawards. The same night the Japanese torpedo boats again reappeared in the roads, and the battleship Retvizan and the fort batteries opened fire on them. Battery No. 18 reports having sunk one of the enemy's torpedo boats."

17,000 Coreans to Join Japs.

Seoul, Feb. 27.—The Corean Government has decided to order the Corean troops to join the Japanese forces in the field. The port of Wiju was opened to foreign trade last night. The limitations to be placed on trade and other matters will be passed later. The action necessitates a harbor. Yongampho has been decided upon. There are 17,000 of troops in the Corean standing army, 8,000 of them in Seoul, 5,000 on the northern frontier, and the rest are scattered throughout the country. They are well armed with 10,000 of the latest pattern Japanese rifles, 10,000 Gras rifles, and an equal number of an older pattern Russian rifle.

Landing Expected Soon.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 27.—A despatch received here from Port Arthur, dated Feb. 26, says: "At 1 o'clock yesterday morning several Japanese torpedo boats were sighted from here with their sails set for the purpose of disguising their character. The battleship Retvizan and the shore batteries opened fire on them, and continued firing until daybreak without any visible results. After daybreak a Japanese squadron, apparently convoying transports, were sighted at 11.15. This squadron came nearer, and an engagement, which lasted forty minutes ensued. There was no damage, few shells fell in Port Arthur. It is expected here that the Japanese will attempt a landing soon."

Pending the receipt of the official report of Vice-Admiral Togo, the navy declines to make any announcement regarding the affair. The five merchant vessels which were prepared for sinking were the Jinseu Maru, 7,331 tons; the Tien Tsin Mari, 2,193 tons; the Hokoku Maru, 2,776 tons; the Buyo Maru, 1,609 tons, and the Bunshik Maru, 1,399 tons. Each carried five men, two steering and three firing and running engines.

FAILED IN "BOTTLE" TRICK.

Russians Saw Jap First But No Lives Were Lost.

Tokio, Feb. 27.—Vice-Admiral Togo's attempt to bottle up the Russian fleet at Port Arthur by sinking a fleet of stone-laden merchant steamers in the mouth of the harbor, evidently failed, though the venture caused no loss of life, and the vessels lost were of no great value.

Five ships were prepared by Vice-Admiral Togo for the attempted blockade. Four are reported to have been sunk, but the fate of the fifth is unknown here. It is presumed that it withdrew with the other Japanese vessels. The five vessels were filled with stones, so as to make the obstruction permanent, and were manned by volunteer merchant crews.

Accompanied by four battleships, nine cruisers and numerous vessels of the torpedo flotilla, the stone-laden steamers reached Port Arthur on Wednesday. While the fleet engaged the shore batteries, the steamers made a dash for the mouth of the harbor, directly under the Russian guns. Details of the attack have not been received, but it is evident that the Russian's fire sank the steamers before they reached the points planned for their foundering by the Japanese.

It is said that all the crews of the four vessels escaped in boats and were picked up by the Japanese torpedo boat destroyers. The report that two of the torpedo boat destroyers were sunk by the Russians is denied. The naval department has received a brief despatch from the commander of one of the torpedo boat destroyers, saying that no lives and no warships were lost, and that no damage was inflicted by the Russians.

Loaded With Kerosene.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 27.—An inspection of the Japanese fire-ships sent into this harbor, Feb. 24, shows they were loaded with coal and kerosene, and that electrical infernal machines had been placed in the midst of their cargoes.

Russians Stopped a British Boat.

Aden, Arabia, Feb. 27.—A Russian torpedo boat destroyer stopped and boarded the British India Company's steamer Mombassa in the Red Sea, Feb. 22. The destroyer fired a gun, which the Mombassa disregarded, but a second shot caused the liner to stop. A Russian officer boarded the Mombassa, and examined her papers, after which she was allowed to proceed.

North Squadron Moves.

Paris, Feb. 27.—The Times' St. Petersburg correspondent telegraphs that the warships Poltava, Novik, Askold and Diana have completed the repairs necessitated by the injuries they sustained in the first battle off Port Arthur. He adds that all the ships damaged are now available for active service, and that the Vladivostock squadron makes frequent sorties from that port, which remains open. Admiral Makaroff is expected to arrive at Port Arthur about March 1.

Czar to Kuropatkin.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 27.—A stirring manifesto to the army was issued by the Czar yesterday in the form of a message to Gen. Kuropatkin, the commander-in-chief of the Russian army in the Far East.

Business Portion Wiped Out.

Scranton, Feb. 27.—Fire yesterday destroyed the business portion of the town of Nicholson, 20 miles west of here. Seventeen buildings, all of them frame structures, were burned, causing a loss estimated at $40,000. An overheated stove was the cause of the fire.

Infant Was Burned.

Bracebridge, Feb. 27.—The home of E. A. Pelletier, the oldest building in town, was burned yesterday. Two were saved, but an infant, two months' old, was burned to death. The loss is placed at $2,000.

Two Burned to Death.

Sherrington, Que., Feb. 27.—E. Beaudin, aged 75, and his brother, aged 83, were burned to death here Thursday.

Assaulted and Robbed.

Toronto, Feb. 27.—Robert Hayes of Mt. Albert came to town yesterday. He had with him a car load of hogs and cattle. He sold his live goods, and, according to his own story, he had $780 in his trouser's pocket. With William Feaster he went out to see the sights and on Adelaide, east of York, they met their Waterloo. Hayes did not know whether the ground flew up and hit him or whether he was sandbagged, but when he woke up his $780 roll was missing. This happened at 10 p.m. The police are now investigating.

SOO REORGANIZATION.

Province Guarantees Loan of $2,000 000—Starts With $9,000,000 Capital—Will Have $1,000,000 Cash.

Toronto, Feb. 27.—By an arrangement with the Ontario Government, the Consolidated Lake Superior Company will emerge from its financial troubles within a very few days, and by the opening of navigation the rehabilitation of the vast industrial enterprises at Sault Ste. Marie will be an accomplished fact. This eminently satisfactory statement was made last night by the gentlemen connected with the reorganization.

The Government has decided to guarantee a loan of $2,000,000 for two years, and to this end Premier Ross will introduce a bill in the Legislature on Monday or Tuesday "to aid the Algoma Central and Hudson Bay Railway." Notice of the bill was given by the Premier in the Legislature on Friday.

Have $9,000,000.

This will give the reorganized company $9,000,000 to put the concern on its feet again. In order to lift the Speyer loan about $5,500,000 will be required. This provides for the original $5,050,000 and the accrued interest. The capitalization of the rehabilitated organization will be as follows: Capital stock, $40,000,000; income bonds, $3,000,000.

The company will start afresh with a cash working capital of $1,000,000; materials on hand, $1,000,000; first mortgage bonds in the treasury, $2,000,0000.

All debts will be funded with fixed charges of about, annually, $600,000.

MILITIA PEACE FOOTING.

Canadian Authorities Approve New Scheme With strength at 47,258.

Ottawa, Feb. 27.—(Globe Special.)—The new establishment on a peace footing of the militia has been approved. It provides for a total strength, including all arms, of 4,824 officers and 42,334 non-commissioned officers and men, or a grand total of 47,258. This, compared with the former establishments, gives an increase of 1,475 officers and 3,021 men, or an aggregate increase in the force on a peace footing of 4,496. The following are the details:

—Former Establishments—

	Officers.	N.C.O. Men.

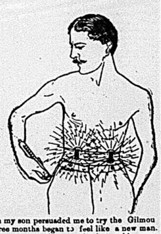
How We Cure Weak Men.



Give me a man broken down from excesses, hard work or worry from any cause which has sapped his vitality. Let him follow our advice for three months, and we will make him as vigorous in every respect as any man of his age. We will not promise to make a Hercules of a man who was never intended by nature to be strong and sturdy. Even that man we can make better than he is, but the man who was once strong and lost his strength, we can make him as good as he ever was. We have many testimonials to show any one applying at this store, these are people who do not wish there names made known through the newspapers Read this,—for a long time I have been a great sufferer from nervous trouble, I was unable to attend to business and could not sleep at night. I tried all the leading doctors in Belleville, but they did me no good. I went away to specialists which gave the same result. By this time I was pretty well discouraged and had almost given up, when my son persuaded me to try the Gilmou Belt, which I did, and after using it for three months began to feel like a new man. Any one who needs treatment for this disease, can make no mistake on this great Belt. I would not take one thousand dollars for mine if I could not get another."

"For many years have had rheumatism very badly, especially before a storm. I would suffer for days at a time with pain I could hardly endure. I tried all the doctors and they gave me up saying there was no relief for me. At last I tried the Gilmour Electric Belt and after using it for a time began to improve, and am today a pretty good man from its use. I can recommend this Belt to any one suffering from rheumatism."

"I have been bothered with kidney and bladder trouble for nearly twenty years I could get nothing to do me any good, I was induced by a friend to try the Gilmour Electric Appliance with the special attachment for treating such cases. After using it for a few weeks, began to feel better and can say am getting better. Any one suffering from this ailment can make no mistake on this appliance."

This is the most powerful Electric Appliance in the world, if there is such a thing as a cure in Electricity, which everyone knows there is, this appliance will surely give it.

There is no specific for consumption. The nearest approach to a cure is right living and Scott's Emulsion. No matter what the treatment may be Scott's Emulsion will prove a valuable addition. It has often turned the scale of health the right way. Because Scott's Emulsion contains the pure cod liver oil it furnishes heat and fat. The hypophosphites provide tissue-food, blood-food and marrow-food. The combination of the two represents a wonderful form of nourishment and one that can be readily taken and retained at any stage of the disease. Scott's Emulsion gives best results when used most regularly. Made a part of the consumptive's regular diet it will invariably afford relief. Occasional use of Scott's Emulsion is a test unfair to the Emulsion and the patient.

LIFE BOATS CAPSIZED

14 Persons, Passengers on Str. Queen, Sink in Angry Waters.

'Twas a Choice of the Method of Death, Fire or Drowning, and Those Who Chose the Latter Were Drowned—List of Dead Who Got Away From Burning Ship Only to Find a Watery Grave in Heavy Seas.

Port Townsend, Feb. 29.—After suffering the most harrowing experiences from fire and storm, the steamer Queen yesterday put in here to report the loss of 14 lives. The dead:

First-class passengers—Miss Steiner, Clellum, Wash., drowned; Mrs. Adams, died from exposure.

Second-class passengers—D. Newsbury, Texas; S. Buckley, both drowned.

Crew—A. Neilson, J. Neilsen and H. Preitus, stewards; F. H. Eneman, M. Somers, H. Douglas, A. Donnelly and —. —. Raymond, engineering department; Peter Mullin and M. Flynn.

Fire in Saloon.

About 3.45 Sunday morning, while off the mouth of the Columbia River, fire broke out in the after saloon. The cause of the blaze is not known. The fire gained headway rapidly, and soon threatened to envelop the whole ship.

The heavy seas meant death to any passengers sent away in the lifeboats. The flames became more and more threatening until, when it seemed but a choice of death either by fire or drowning, Captain Cousins ordered the lifeboats launched. They were manned and a number of women and children were lowered into them. Hardly had the boats been cast loose than two of them were capsized by huge waves. Those of the passengers and crew who remained on board continued their fight against the flames with increasing success until at 7.40 a.m. the blaze was brought under control. When it was seen that the danger from fire was past, Capt. Cousins recalled the lifeboats and their occupants were taken on board.

Sighted a Steamer.

The Queen was headed for the mouth of the Columbia and about 9 o'clock the steamer Santa Monica was sighted. The Queen signalled, and asked the vessel to stand by until temporary repairs could be made. When everything had been made safe, the Queen continued on to the mouth of the Columbia, only to find the seas too rough to allow passage in. The distressed craft was pointed toward Puget Sound, when bad fortune still pursued, and when she rounded Cape Flattery she encountered a terrific electrical storm. With difficulty she weathered the gale, reached here without further mishap and proceeded to Seattle, where she arrived about nightfall.

Soo Train Went Off.

Montreal, Feb. 29.—According to advices received by the C.P.R., the Soo train, which left Montreal Saturday night, left the track as it was nearing Spanish Station, but was quickly stopped, and, owing to the large amount of snow, the passengers escaped serious injury. Those reported to have been injured are:

J. B. McMillan, Peterboro, Ont.
Wm. Connors, Sault Ste. Marie.
Mrs. John Connors, Sault Ste. Marie.
Mrs. Pere Cudding, Duluth.
Thales Mead, dining car conductor.
H. F. Swanson, Minneapolis.

The cause of the accident was the large amount of ice on the track.

After the steamer docked, Miss Martin, an English woman, one of the matrons in charge of the immigrant children bound for the west, fell into the hold of the steamer and was instantly killed.

Young Girl Killed.

Wiarton, Feb. 29.—A sad and fatal accident occurred at Lake Charles yesterday, by which Susan Spicer, a young girl of 18 years, was killed. She was in the barn pulling on a rope attached to a loose piece of timber overhead, used as a hoist, when the beam fell, crushing out the girl's life almost instantly.

ARMY CORPS DISAPPEAR

Give Way to Brigades in Reorganized British Army.

BRODERICK SYSTEM IS GONE

Second Report of Army Reform Commission Makes Important Recommendations—Five Generals Commanding-in-Chief, Commanding Troops in Five Districts, to Be Appointed—They Will Be Freed From Routine Work.

London, Feb. 29.—(C.A.P.)—The second report of the Lord Esher commission has been issued and gives details of the proposed war office reforms. The most important recommendation of the committee is the creation of a general staff, which, in the words of the committee, "consists of a department devoting undivided attention to military problems in the widest sense and a body of officers occupied in time of peace in training all ranks of the army, and prepared to direct operations in the field."

Other important recommendations are the organization of the army by brigades instead of army corps, the creation of five "generals commanding-in-chief," commanding troops in five districts, freed from routine work which henceforth will be entrusted to eight administrative districts under major-generals and the abolition of the linked battalion system.

With a view to insuring the infusion of new blood the committee urges four years as the maximum period during which an officer shall serve as a military member of the army council. He should then resume active service or at least one year before again serving in the council. The same rule, the committee urges, should be enforced throughout the military staff of the war office.

In order to emphasize the allegiance of the army to the King, the committee recommends that nobody except the King or his representatives abroad, should hold levees, and the committee also urges that no levees should be held excepting by royal command.

The feature of the report which meets with general approval is the final disappearance of the Broderick system involved in the abolition of the army corps, with the exception of the first or expeditionary army corps, at Aldershot, which is still retained.

They Agree on 9 Points.

London, Feb. 29.—(C.A.P.)—Right Hon. Sir John Brodrick, Secretary of State for India, speaking at Manchester, objected to the fiscal question being the only question before the country. He regretted that men in agreement on nine points with the Unionist party should band themselves with the Duke of Devonshire on the tenth point. The issue was not free trade against protection, but the policy of not lying down under protection. The conduct of the Unionist party in connection with John Morley's amendment would have the sure result of the defeat of the party at the polls. He protested against the fiscal question being made a test question by any section of the Unionist party.

Let the Majority Rule.

London, Feb. 29.—(C. A. P.)—Sir John Forrest, Minister of the Interior for the Commonwealth of Australia, speaking at Melbourne, said he wanted an electoral law allowing Government by majorities instead of as at present by minorities.

Colliers Strike.

London, Feb. 29.—(C. A. P.)—The colliers at Newcastle, New South Wales, have struck work. The question of a wages scale will be submitted under the Arbitration Act.

London Dailies.

London, Feb. 29.—(C.A.P.)—The Daily Mail and Daily Express refused to insert the advertisement of the reduction of the price of The Daily Chronicle to one cent. The Daily News declined unless it was permitted to revise the advertisement but The Morning Leader published the full announcement.

Sees Chamberlain Premier.

London, Feb. 29.—(C. A. P.)—A writer in The Fortnightly Review says that the break in the Tory ranks has only occurred among the leaders. Mr. Chamberlain's coffers are full, and his wonderful organization will draw the Conservatives and secure him the Premiership. The colonial preference is doomed through the action of the landowners, led by the Duke of Devonshire. The colonial Governments will never consent to let their budgets depend on the varying moods of the British electorate. Nor will the British people tie their hands by having to consult half a dozen colonies whenever any fiscal changes have to be made.

Temporary Aberation.

London, Feb. 29.—(C. A. P.)—The Hon. Henry James Anson's suicide was attributable to temporary aberration, supervening an attack of influenza.

Where Australia Stands.

London, Feb. 29.—(C. A. P.)—Sir Josiah Symon, the leader of the Opposition in the Australian Senate, says that Australia is not extending her arms to welcome any trade proposals or preferences which would likely involve reductions in her own protective duties in favor of England.

LIBERALS STICK BY CORRUPTION.

Liberals are firmly convinced that political corruption is essential to party success. During the last session of Parliament every possible obstacle was placed in the way of a bill to deal more stringently with violations of the Dominion Elections Act. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. W. S. Fielding, after pledging their support to a measure calculated to suppress election crimes, flatly refused to keep their promise and repudiated the work of a special committee named by the Government to enquire into the whole question.

The reason for this course was made clear during the recent bye-elections. Money was used extensively, and public works were promised without any regard to their ultimate usefulness. In the city of St. John, where the Liberal candidate was snowed under, the Conservative party offered to give a bond signed by ten reputable party men that no money would be used for corrupt purposes. They requested the Liberal leaders to do the same, but the commendable offer was promptly rejected. The Government managers, at the head of whom was Hon. H. R. Emmerson, declined to run a pure campaign. Their case was hopeless and money alone could change public opinion. The Liberals thus lost a golden opportunity to elevate Canadian politics. With the example of Sir Wilfrid and Mr. Fielding to guide them, perhaps the St. John followers should not be too severely blamed.

Tomorrow, Tuesday morning, we will receive from Toronto another large shipment of NASMITH'S

TIMELY TOPICS.

Many times in recent years we have heard it said that the day of the local fire insurance company had dawned, and had come to stay. There was no reason, it was said, why people should continue to pay exorbitant rates to to the big companies; co-operation and cheaper rates was to be the motto in future. This kind of talk, no doubt, has been heard in many other places, certainly it had in Baltimore, where the recent great conflagration took place. To people who believe in co-operative fire insurance companies, the following, from the Insurance and Finance Chronicle, of Montreal, should prove of interest:

"The British and Canadian fire offices have each arranged to have the Baltimore claims settled with all promptitude. The principal American companies who are interested have, also taken steps to effect as early settlements as the situation will permit. It is anticipated that several of the local companies will be wiped out and not a few wildcats fatally injured or driven away without paying their obligations.

"It is alleged that most of the local companies of Baltimore will not be able to pay more than 50 cents on the dollar of the claims caused by the conflagration. A Receiver is stated to have been appointed for the Home, of Baltimore, which, we need hardly say, has a name similar to that of one of the strongest American Fire Companies, which has a net surplus of nine millions of dollars in excess of its Baltimore losses.

"Application has been made for appointment of Receiver for the Old Town Fire Insurance Company, of Baltimore. The Peabody Fire Insurance Company, of Baltimore, is in the hands of a Receiver, who has announced that the Company will pay 40 cents on the dollar.

The Grand Trunk Railway has been hit hard by this good old-fashioned winter. Mr. F. H. McGuigan, of the G.T.R., in conversation with a reporter the other day, said:

"Never in all my railroad experience did I witness anything like the present. True, we have had cold days, but never have we had it 18 weeks on a stretch before, and I hope it will be a long time again before we get such a dose."

"What will the cost be to the G.T.R. for the extra expense?" asked the scribe.

"I cannot say," was the reply. "The truth is we have not thought about that; but this I do know, the loss in revenue to the G.T.R. at the end of this month will be over one million dollars, and then some people will say the railroad don't care whether they run trains on time. I tell you every official and employee on the system has been working day and night, and it is most surprising to me how some of the men can endure it. I have nothing more to say for them than that they gave ample proof of their loyalty to the company and their desire to serve the public."

SAID GOOD-BYE TO MUCH LOVED SUPERINTENDENT

BRIDGE ST.'S FAREWELL TO MR. WM. JOHNSON, WHO SOON GOES TO JERUSALEM.

Yesterday was a special day at Bridge St. Methodist Church. In the afternoon the officers, teachers and scholars of the school, with many friends of Mr. William Johnson, numbering about eight hundred, assembled at the school room at 2.30 o'clock to join in a farewell service. Mr. H. J. Clarke, Assistant Superintendent, occupied the chair. A presentation address was given by Mr. J. T. Luton, after which Miss Mary Yeomans and Master Harold Reid, two of the members of the primary class, came forward and presented Mr. Johnson with a handsome bouquet, the ticket for the trip to Jerusalem and a purse for incidental expenses. Farewell addresses were delivered by the representatives of the different branches of the church and school, Rev. Mr. Kenney, of Millbrook, representing the old boys of the school; Mr. Henry Pringle on behalf of the Trustee Board, and Mr. C. M. Reid, on behalf of the Official Board, also gave addresses.

Mr. G. H. Hope represented the officers and teachers of the school, Mr. Hopkins, the intermediate department, and Mr. O'Flynn read extracts from some of the many letters received in connection with the project and gave a farewell to Mr. Johnson on behalf of the Senior and Home departments of the Sunday School. Solos were sung by Miss Mabel Vermilyea and Mr. McKay. The meeting was closed with the hymn "God be with you till we meet again," after which Mr. C. P. Holton, who has been in the Sunday School with Mr. Johnson during his long services, offered the closing prayer.

After the services Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were invited to the class room of Mr. O'Flynn's young men and presented with an address of farewell and purse to enable Mr. Johnson to visit his old home in Ireland, he having the privilege of leaving the vessel at Villafranca, and coming back on another vessel of the same line. The addresses by Mr. Johnson in reply were very much appreciated, and the waving of handkerchiefs and farewells given him made a scene which will never be forgotten by those present. All join in wishing him a happy and prosperous voyage, and the farewell meeting was considered by those present as one of the most enthusiastic farewells ever attended.

Mr. Johnson is expected back in three months.

AN ARISTOCRATIC SALVATIONIST HERE.

LADY SARAH SLADEN TELLS "WHY I BECAME A SALVATIONIST."

A fair-sized audience gathered in the City Hall yesterday afternoon to hear a celebrated and aristocratic lady, Lady Sarah Sladen, lecture on "Why I Became a Salvationist." It is now some years since the nobility of England were rather taken back to hear that one of their number had joined the Salvation Army. The fact created a sensation at the time, as it was not often that the daughter of a "Belted Earl" was seen with the "Army bonnet" on. Lady Sarah Sladen is noted throughout England as a hard and fearless worker in the cause of Christianity; naturally, then, when it was advertised that she was making a tour of Canada, and was to appear in the City Hall, Belleville, yesterday afternoon, many people resolved to go and hear her. Lady Sladen, it may be as well to remark, is a daughter of the Earl of Cavan, whose title is an Irish one, but the family have for a long time lived in England.

There was a large attendance of "Army" people on the stage when proceedings began, the first part of the programme consisting of the usual S. A. exercises. Mrs. Brigadier Turner conducted the meeting. The interest, of course, chiefly centred in Lady Sladen, who began her address by singing, in a sweet and exceedingly well cultivated voice, "Only Jesus," to the air of "When the Swallows Homeward Fly." During the solo people gazed at her curiously. Here was one who had dared to face the sneers and laughter of the world for a principle, and who, though "born in the purple," willingly mixed with the humblest and lowliest in order to tell the "old, old story." A sweet, peaceful face looked out from the Salvation Army bonnet, and her attire was of the plainest. Scarcely a mechanic's wife in Canada to-day but is more richly dressed than was this Earl's daughter. The audience listened with absorbed interest as the earnest lady told of the causes which brought about her choice; of how she, a weakly child, was brought out to Canada for her health at the age of 12 years, her father and mother at the time visiting the Marchmont Home, Belleville, she staying in Montreal, and being deeply touched by "Holiness meetings" held by Evangelist Varney. She had been brought up in an established church and loved it, but after hearing Mr. Varney felt that her salvation was not complete and there was something lacking. Returning to England she met a Church of England minister, Rev. Mr. Moore, who endorsed the work of the Salvation Army and was turned out of his church for it; he soon got another, however, which was regularly filled to overflowing, and where many souls were saved. Through this minister she and her husband were brought into contact with the Salvation Army. Lady Sladen told of attending meetings at Exeter Hall, London, and the Salvation Army conference at Edinburgh, where there were 300 regularly ordained ministers present. She was asked to lead in prayer at that convention, but refused. Then saw where she had failed in faith, and afterwards resolved to place all she had, position, life and all, at the service of God. She gave up her feathers and finery and jewellery, though it was rather a hard wrench to do the latter. Considerable amusement was created as Lady Sladen described how she used to turn the stones of her rings inside when visiting the poor people, but she felt that this was a subterfuge, and the rings had to go. Then came the crisis when she felt that she had to do either one thing or the other. She was not yet a member of the Salvation Army, but felt that God was calling her to it. Her son (she had twelve children) resolved to become an officer in the Army, asked her to join, and her husband, an officer in the Artillery, threw no obstacles in the road, but, himself a God-fearing man, rather encouraged the idea. So she and her children joined the army, she was appointed sergeant-major, they had their open air meetings and parades and were very happy. After the first step all was easy. In conclusion Lady Sladen made an earnest appeal to her hearers to give themselves to the service of God, and many a heart was touched as the gentle accents implored them to give up the world and the flesh and tread the strait and narrow path.

Another meeting was held in the evening, which was of the usual Salvation Army character. Lady Sladen will speak again at the S. A. Hall to-night.

Mr. Wm. Grills has purchased a farm in Thurlow, and is removing his family there. He has been a resident of this place for sixteen years and he and his family are held in high esteem by the people here. On Friday night about sixty of them invaded his house in the form of an old fashioned surprise party and spent an enjoyable evening. At the close speeches expressing the esteem in which the family is held, were made by several and a nice easy chair was left as a memento for them to carry to their new home. ✓

There is nothing equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

A long portage makes a heavy canoe.

Some persons have periodical attacks of Canadian cholera, dysentery or diarrhoea, and have to use great precautions to avoid the disease. Change of water, cooking, and green fruit, is sure to bring on the attacks. To such persons we would recommend Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial as being the best medicine in the market for all summer Complaints. If a few drops are taken in water when the symptoms are noticed no further trouble will be experienced.

On occasion knowing what one wants is as difficult as getting it.

For coughs, colds, bronchitis and all lung and throat troubles, there is no preparation of medicine can compare with Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It never fails to afford prompt and permanent relief. It removes all soreness, and heals the diseased parts. It immediately soothes the most troublesome cough, and by promoting expectoration, removes the mucus which stops up the air tubes which causes difficulty in breathing, thereby gives relief to that depressing tightness experienced in the chest. Public speakers and singers will find Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup of inestimable value, as it speedily and effectually allays all irritation, and huskiness in the throat and bronchial tubes, and gives power to the vocal cords, rendering the voice clear and sonorous. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of "Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup," and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness, give the Syrup according to directions.

The average watch represents but 12 hours of human labor.

Will positively cure sick headache and prevent its return. Carter's Little Liver Pills. This is not talk, but truth. One pill a dose. See advertisement. Small pill, Small dose. Small price.

Much talk, many lies.

To Those of Sedentary Occupation —Men who follow sedentary occupations, which deprive them of fresh air and exercise, are more prone to disorders of the liver and kidneys than those who lead active, outdoor lives. The former will find in Parmelee's Vegetable Pills a restorative without question the most efficacious on the market. They are easily procurable, easily taken, act expeditiously, and they are surprisingly cheap considering their excellence.

Seven hundred British subjects are yearly born at sea.

A Sure Cure for Headaches. — Bilious headache, to which women are more subject than men, becomes so acute in some subjects that they are utterly prostrated. The stomach refuses food, and there is a constant and distressing effort to free the stomach from bile which has become unduly secreted there. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills are a speedy alternative, and in neutralizing the effects of the intruding bile relieves the pressure on the nerves which cause the headache. Try them.

The biggest brave does not always make the best chief.

UNTOLD MISERY — WHAT A WELL-KNOWN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLER SUFFERED, AND HOW HE WAS CURED.—Gentlemen, About five years ago I began to be troubled with Dyspepsia, and for three years suffered untold misery, from this terrible complaint. I was at that time travelling for Messrs. Walter Woods & Co., Hamilton, and was treated by some of the best physicians in the country, but to no purpose. I continued to grow worse, one day I was induced to try a bottle of Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery, and to my great surprise and joy, I soon began to improve. I continued using this medicine and when the third bottle was finished, I found I was entirely cured; and as a year has elapsed since then, I feel confident that the cure is complete and permanent. To all afflicted with this distressing complaint I heartily recommend Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery believing that the persistent use of it will cure any case of Dyspepsia.

When one gets hopping mad his reason goes on a crutch.

He Has Tried It.—Mr. John Anderson, Kinloss, writes: "I venture to say few, if any, have received greater benefit from the use of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, than I have. I have used it regularly for over ten years and have recommended it to all sufferers I knew of, and they also found it of great virtue in cases of severe bronchitis and incipient consumption.

LIKE THE MILLENIUM

After the tortures Mr. Norton passed through to have the absolute release from suffering that South American Rheumatic Cure afforded him —it relieves in six hours.

"For three weeks I lay in bed suffering most terribly and utterly helpless from Inflammatory Rheumatism," says Mr. E. H. Norton, of Grimsby, Ont. "When all that the doctors could do failed me, I was induced to try South American Rheumatic Cure. After taking one bottle I was not only able to leave my bed, but surprised my friends by walking down town. I think it a wonder." 36

SHOES THAT SQUEAK.

A Church Incident of Toronto That Has Some Humor in It.

Cyrus Kilborn, a deacon in the Beverley street Baptist Church, is eighty-four years of age, and is one of the senior deacons, in point of years, not only of Toronto, but throughout the Baptist churches of the Dominion. Deacon Kilborn is not of the sad-faced variety of churchmen, however, and enjoys a good joke even if the laugh is against him. He and Deacon Pease, a former member of the Beverley street church, were fast friends.

One Sunday as Deacon Kilborn took in his rounds with the collection plate, he created much hilarity among the youthful members of the congregation by the exercise he gave a pair of very squeaky boots.

After the service Deacon Pease jocularly remonstrated with him for disturbing the service.

"Well," replied the elder deacon, "if you are not satisfied with my squeaky shoes, just buy me a new pair that won't squeak and I will wear them."

"All right," replied Mr. Pease.

Christmas came, and with its coming a large and impressive box, securely nailed, was left at the home of Deacon Kilborn, Spadina crescent. After considerable trouble the box was opened, to find it contained another box within. This explored, it was found to contain another. Curiosity is stronger than nails, even if the latter are clinched, and after much work the final box was opened. In it, carefully wrapped in tissue paper, were a pair of shoes. However, they were made of chocolate, and not more than two inches long.

Deacon Pease had broken into broken metre with the sending, for the following verse was enclosed with the shoes:

A Christmas gift I send to thee;
A promise now I keep, you see;
I honor the deacon so grave and meek
Who ambles the aisles with shoes that squeak;
So accept this gift so freely proffered
And wear the slippers that now are offered.

Deacon Kilborn read the poetical effusion, thought a while, wrote a rhyme and enclosing the chocolate shoes in a still larger box, and fastening it very securely, he returned it to the donor.

The verses were:

Your letter gave me to understand
That we have poets in the land
To charm the ear, the sense please,
And far surpass Demosthenes,
Cicero, with all his sense,
Could not compete in eloquence.
But what of this? It is absurd
So long as you keep not your word;
The slippers they are far too small
And plainly will not do at all.
One look would surely let you know
That corns they'd make on every toe.
You thought you'd slip out mighty slick
And show a Canuck a Yankee trick.
Go down to a store—you'll see a sign—
And there enquire for number nine;
Pay down your cash, and be a man—
Redeem that promise as quick as you can,
Or the poor old deacon, so grave and meek,
Will have to wear the shoes that squeak;
And if the annoyance is the same
You are the man who is to blame;
Yours truly, as now you see,
In faith and hope and charity.

Next Sunday, when Deacon Kilborn took up the collection, his feet were enclosed in squeakless shoes.—Charles F. Raymond, in Toronto Star.

Afternoon Tea.

"High tea" is said to be of American origin. The earliest mention of it, according to Dr. Murray, goes no further back than 1856. In fact, tea as an afternoon meal is not much older. It is thought to have originated in 1837 in the house of Mme. de Circourt, a Russian lady, whose salon in Paris was at that time much frequented by the most intellectual society of the day. The fashionable dinner hours were then getting late, and she introduced a 4 o'clock light meal, at which tea was served. Fanny Kemble in "Records of a Girlhood" attributes the introduction of the afternoon meal into this country to the then Duchess of Bedford. Fanny Kemble paid a visit to Belvoir castle in March, 1842, and she relates how a mysterious invitation was received to the duchess' private rooms, where she found a small group of friends partaking of tea in a private and rather shamefaced way, and dates the 5 o'clock meal from this time. But it was several years later that the practice became general.—London Chronicle.

Drivers Who Throw Their Horses.

"There ought to be a license system or some scheme to prevent such a fellow driving a horse," declared a lover of horses as a heavy truck horse fell in Broadway the other day. "That ignorant blockhead made that horse fall. He turned the animal so quickly that he simply threw it off its feet. Now several score of trucks will be blocked until the horse gets on its feet, and then the driver will take it out of the poor animal by jerking at the bit or beating it.

"A man wouldn't trust an automobile to a fellow who didn't know how to run the machine, and the law would not allow him to, but he will trust his horse to a boy who hasn't the first idea of handling a horse. Half the drivers of trucks and delivery wagons need some elementary lessons in how to drive, and most of the accidents on the streets are due to their ignorance and stupidity."—New York Press.

An Ultra Modern Child.

Margaret's mother numbers among her friends several schoolteachers, and, although she is not yet five, Margaret has observed some things. Not long ago a family of kittens made an entree into Margaret's home, and she was most anxious to keep them all. Her mother objected on the ground that they were all girl pussies and would eventually grow up into mother cats.

"No, they won't, mother," said Margaret very earnestly. "I won't let them be mothers. I'll train them to be teachers."

The Gracious Woman.

The gracious woman is so rare that once encountered she is never forgotten. There is an air of ease about her that is most restful in this bustling age. Her soft, low voice, uttering the usual inquiries, seems more musical than any one has heard in years, while even the trivial commonplaces are interesting from her lips. Modern women are more alert to possibilities and undoubtedly much more progressive, but there is ever that air of nervous tension wearing alike to both speaker and listener. More leisure for nerve rest is a plea that should receive some degree of consideration in every home before the time for such a possibility has passed, and instead of the request there will be heard the command that must be obeyed.

Her Indispensable Work.

Looking about in the world, we see hundreds of thousands of women earning their living, doing useful work and drawing wages. They and their labors could very ill be spared, but after all earning wages is not the indispensable office of women in the world, writes E. S. Martin in Harper's Bazar. The indispensable women have scant time to earn wages. They are too busy, and their work is too important. They are keeping house and raising families. We could make shift to rub along somehow if all the wage earning women in the world quit work, but if the women who are making homes and bringing up children retired from their business the shop would close.

The Return of the Pillow Sham.

Pillow shams are coming into fashion again, not the beruffled affairs so popular a few years ago, but dainty ones made out of pretty handkerchiefs. It is a charming idea to use one for the center, basting it on a square of white paper the size of the sham, diamond shape. Then cut the handkerchief in quarters, using one for each quarter. Join with beading and finish with beading and a ruffle of valenciennes edged footing. Run ribbon through the beading. When completed remove the paper foundation.

Blessings of Aridity.

The orange, tawny waste of the range country, so desolate to the uninitiated, is being converted to a blessing by the art of man. It is not less true in agriculture than in other industrial pursuits that progress is measured by the skill of man in controlling and manipulating the forces and resources of nature rather than in his contenting himself with nature's gifts. The conservation of the available water supply of a country should be a national care. Already in the semi-arid west it is being utilized by individuals and corporations to force the yield of the soil away beyond its productive power under natural rainfall. Instead of passing by the dry lands at a glance, the settler is taking them in hand, and is so far from murmuring that he talks rather of the blessing of aridity. What does aridity mean? Almost constant sunshine, and so the quick maturing of crops. It also means the absence of destructive tornadoes that belong to humid areas. It means the conservation of soil fertility by the absence of floods that wash away the best part of the soil, and, with its necessary adjunct of artificial watering or irrigation, it means enough of water at the right time and not too much at any time. This is why the settler speaks of the blessings of aridity, and this is why the prairie country of Canada, humid and dry together, is called the better half of our Dominion.

Generous Utah Woman.

A woman doctor went to Utah to practice. She was a pleasant lady as well as skillful, and her patients were very fond of her. "How I wish," said one of them, "that I could convert you to our religion! If you would only marry my husband and come and live with us"—

The doctor fled in horror to another friend to whom she told the story. Her self respect began to revive and she felt comforted, seeing how the eyes of her listener blazed.

"I don't wonder you feel as you do," replied the friend indignantly. "The idea! Why, that Mr. —— is perfectly horrid! What you want to do is to marry my husband and come and live with us."—Plattsburg (N. Y.) Tribune.

The following remarkable essay on the horse is said to be from the pen of an Indian student: "The horse is a very noble quadruped, but when he is angry he will not do so. He is ridden on the spinal cord by the bridle, and sadly the driver places his foots on the stirrups and divides his lower limbs across the saddle and drives his animal to the meadow. He has four legs; two are on the front side and two are afterward. These are the weapons on which he runs. He also defends himself by extending these in the rear in a parallel direction toward his foe, but this he does only when he is in an aggravating mood. There is no animal like the horse. No sooner they see their guardian or master than they always cry for food, but it is always at the morning time. They have got tails, but not so long as the cow and such other like animals."

KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN

When buying clothing, beware of the man who offers you $10 and $12 suits or overcoats for $3.98 or $4.76. Then again, do not be governed too much by the marked price—look to the value, the worth, the texture, trimmings and make of the goods themselves. A comparison thus made will show conclusively that the prices we quote are lower than goods of equal worth or quality can be bought for elsewhere.

VEGETABLE PORCUPINE.

Wild Cattle Eat Its Sharp Spines as With Ironclad Mouths.

The best hated cactus in America is the cholla. The Mexicans say that if you go near a cholla joint it will jump at you. Certainly if you touch one it will stick, and when you try to free yourself it will pierce your other hand as well. Each pendent joint seems to reach out for the passerby, and the ground beneath the broad cholla trees is strewn with fallen fragments, many of which take root and grow.

After one has felt the sharp spines through heavy boots and seen their needle points it is a source of continual wonder to see the wild cattle of Arizona quietly browsing on chollas. The phrase "cactus fed" as applied to Arizona is not a figure of speech. During the years of drought thousands of cattle carry themselves over until the next grass by eating chollas. With their leathery tongues and lips they strip the spiny joints from the trunk and leave the wide spreading cactus a bare and woody skeleton. It is only the range cattle, whose mouths have been hardened on the thorny mesquite and ironwood browse, that will undertake to eat cactus, and cattlemen therefore often burn the thorns from chollas and nopals in order to tempt their more fastidious animals to eat.

MYSTERIES OF SAP.

How the Circulation From Roots to Leaves Is Maintained.

To illustrate the modern view of sap circulation, which is not thoroughly understood, it is necessary to explain that the chief food of the plants, consisting of inorganic salts dissolved in water, is absorbed from the soil by the roots. The root consists of a hollow tube or cylinder lined with several cells, the outer layer of which contains certain hairlike processes.

The water in the soil, containing the salts in solution, is absorbed by these root hairs and passes by filtration into the cells and capillary vessels. The activity of these root hairs and the concentration of fluid in the adjacent cells create what is called "root pressure," and this forces the sap into the general vascular system of the plant and up to its furthest extremities, or leaves.

This "root pressure" is further supplemented by "transpiration," or loss of vapor from the leaves under the influence of heat and light. Plants may be said to breathe or respire by their leaves, and this abstraction of water by transpiration creates a fresh demand for the vital fluid supplied by the roots. In this way the circulation, or "rising of the sap" from root to leaves, is maintained.

This has been a hard winter on everybody, but hardest of all, perhaps, on the milkmen, who, between extreme cold weather and inability to secure a full supply of the lacteal fluid, have surely had their own troubles. "If I thought," said one knight of the can and pump, "that next winter would be of the old-fashioned variety I would get into some other business before next October." And one could hardly blame him. We were told of one milkman who has to drive his cows three-quarters of a mile to water, night and morning; he must be a hard-hearted customer, indeed, who could complain if the gentle bovines lingered too long at the stream and thus caused it to appear that there was water in the milk.

We wanted the championship, but we didn't want it bad enough to do dirty things for it.

Kidney Disease May Last for Years

CAUSING MUCH PAIN OR SUFFERING OR IT MAY SUDDENLY PROVE FATAL.

Pains in the small of the back, scalding, burning sensations when passing water and gradual loss of flesh and weight are the unmistakable symptoms of kidney disease.

If you would prevent Bright's Disease, rheumatism, stone in the bladder and other dreadfully painful developments of kidney disease, you must act promptly.

If you choose Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills the treatment will not long be pursued before you will find yourself greatly benefitted.

The grand reputation which this great kidney medicine has made for itself is due to no small extent to the wonderful promptness with which it brings relief and cure to the sufferer from backache.

Backache, lumbago, rheumatism, aching sides and limbs result from poisons in the blood, which are entirely eliminated by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

It seems rather unwise to experiment with untried remedies, when you can rely absolutely on this famous prescription of the great receipt book author.

Mrs. F. Henthorn, whose husband is of the firm of Marsh & Henthorn, founders and machinists, and who lives at 286 Ann street, Belleville, states:—"Some years ago I was taken with a pain across the small of my back, caused no doubt from deranged kidneys and my system generally was run down. I began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and I must say I found relief from my trouble at once. They proved thorough and effective in action and soon brought about a complete cure. We have always used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in our family and found them very helpful."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25c a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author are on every box of his remedies.

Not Needed. Stranger—Is there a paper published in this town? Native—No; we don't need any. We have two barber shops and a sewing club.—Melbourne Weekly Times.

Water on Battleships.

As nearly as possible 8,000 gallons of fresh water are used in a large battleship daily. About two-thirds of this is taken up by the boilers, and the remainder is used for drinking, washing, cooking, etc. When the store which she has taken out with her from port has been used up a vessel has to depend upon her evaporators for further supplies. Every modern warship is fitted with evaporating machinery to distill the salt sea water.

No Harm Done.

Foreman (explaining the accident to the owner of the building)—Barney was working on the roof, sir, and he slipped and fell the whole four stories, bringing the cornice down with him, sir, and breaking both his legs and half his ribs.

Owner—Oh, well, never mind! I intended that cornice to come down in any case.

Charity Begins at Home.

Wealthy Merchant (at an evening party)—Gentlemen, we will not allow this festive occasion to pass away without remembering the poor. In one of my houses there lives a poor clerk whom I shall have to evict tomorrow unless he can pay his arrears of rent by then. Fritz, hand a plate around.—Dorfbarbier.

THE YELLOW MAN.

A THRILLING STORY OF THE BOXERS IN CHINA.

BY CARLTON DAWE.

Copyright, 1900.
By Paul R. Reynolds.

Over a pipe Jim and I thrashed the matter out, and as to him I no longer made a secret of the affection I bore Miss Hilbury he recognized that their destiny had become indissolubly bound up with ours, and though he candidly confessed that he had no liking for the increased responsibilities I felt sure that he had no intention of shirking them. His was not that kind of nature. This I knew, and so I let him grumble as befitted a man who had reached a privileged age. But I knew that his real fear was that my lovesickness would undermine my resolution. I could not tell him so then, but I had every reason to believe that it would have just a contrary effect.

For the rest of the voyage we four—that is, Mrs. Hilbury and Cecil (or so I called her in the privacy of my own heart), Jim and I—were on terms of the most excellent friendship. We called ourselves the outcasts, the black sheep of the fold, the knowledge that we were marked men and women creating an intimacy between us which no outsider could share.

As we sailed farther and farther south the new heavens opened and showed their new wonders, and night after night, the Southern Cross pointing the way, we sailed on a sea of sapphire beneath a jeweled dome. Stars! The sky was full of them. They hung in clusters as though they had burst through the blue gates of heaven. Sometimes Cecil would point to the cross and say: "When I am at home, I can see it quite plainly from my bedroom window," or "Many a night I've sat and watched it and thought no end of foolish things. I remember once driving home with father. It was a beautiful night, just like this, and he told me such a pretty story about it. Poor father! He will never see it again!"

It was on such a night in the warm Australian waters that I told her for the first time of our expedition to China. We were sitting away aft, well out of earshot of the other passengers, and the gentle throbbing of the screw and the lapping of the waters sounded a soft accompaniment to our talk.

"You mean to say," she said, "that you and your uncle intend to penetrate the very stronghold of these terrible men?"

"That is our intention. It is for that purpose we shall go to China. As for penetrating their stronghold, that's as heaven may direct. We are going to try."

"But they will kill you."

"Undoubtedly—if they can."

"But—but—it's too horrible!"

"It is horrible, but what are we to do? Don't you see with Kung and Wooching alive we can never enjoy one moment free from alarm. It was not without some hesitation that my uncle and I accepted the inevitable. It is to be a battle to the death, and we do not shut our eyes to the fact that there are frightful odds against us, but it is possible that the society also has many enemies, and help may come from some unexpected quarter. I admit that our arrangements are extremely vague and from the practical point of view most unsatisfactory, but we shall not be altogether groping in the dark. In Hongkong, according to my father's statement, we must find a carpenter by the name of Koon-Si. From him we shall learn the latest intelligence, and with him we shall lay our plans."

"You are very daring," she said, "to take such an awful step in the dark. I fear you underrate your task."

"No; not in the least. If anything, we have overrated it all along. We have waited and hoped that peace would come, but I am convinced that it cannot be gained without war. War, then, it must be, for now," and here I think my voice took a somewhat softer tone, "peace is more necessary to me than it ever was before."

She did not answer for a moment, and then, mingling with the sound of the sea, came a soft "Why?"

"Because it will insure your peace, and that to me has grown dearer than my own."

"There can be no peace for me," she answered in a low tone, a tone which the sea and the night rendered ineffably sad. "If it were not wicked, I could almost wish that you had let me drown that night."

"Hush! You must not talk like that. Do you know, even in our darkest hour, when you lay unconscious on my arm, when the sea hissed and tore about us and I thought every moment would be our last, I was almost happy."

"Happy?"

"Yes, because through the gloom and the spray I saw a future, a future which was blessed with your love—with you."

"It is very late," she said, her voice trembling with emotion. "My mother will wonder what has become of me."

But she did not go just then, not for some time after, for I had much to tell, though to other ears it might have seemed but a wearisome repetition of the same old story. But the stars looked down and smiled, and the great diamonds of the cross beamed with a tenfold radiance; and the air, tempered, so it seemed to me, by the breezes from the land which lay to our north, was full of the sweetness of life and hope. It was a new delight to me, this wonderful thing called love, and for some time I was too timid to avail myself of the prerogatives of the lover. Even when I held her face up to mine and pressed my lips to hers I marveled that she did not resent the liberty.

There was very little sleep for me that night, and long after she had gone below I paced the deck burning pipe after pipe of tobacco, thinking, dreaming, hoping. Now more than ever it was necessary that I should settle accounts with the society, now more than ever was life precious, the future a thing to be fought for and secured. I had always hated the task that was allotted me. I hated it more than ever now. But I had grown to regard misfortune as a part of my heritage, and a fatalistic indifference, born of too close an intimacy with despair, had robbed it of much of its terror.

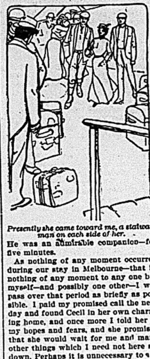
The next day I sought out Mrs. Hilbury, told her of my love for her daughter, of my hopes and fears, but I promised that I would not bind my sweetheart to any hard and fast engagement. I had work to do, and I meant to accomplish it. If I came back and Cecil still thought of me kindly I would strive to prove by my devotion the depth of my affection; if, on the contrary, she had changed her mind, as girls will, I would go away knowing that she could live in peace.

Once we had entered Australian waters the days flew with inconceivable rapidity, and I thought with regret of the quick ending of my too brief holiday. It had been a happy time, the happiest I had ever spent, a gleam of sunshine in the dreary fog of my existence. Every revolution of the screw drove us so much nearer the goal, and, leaning over the side, I watched the water bubble by, regretful, grudging the mighty vessel her awful speed. Like the condemned criminal, I watched the days come and go, and the fatal morrow at length arrived, and we safely made the port of Melbourne. Then there were many meetings, hearty handshakes, embraces and tears of joy and the sullen stupor of the stranger who has left all he loves behind, who feels no welcoming handshake, who enters the new land alone, a melancholy figure.

Though I stood back and saw many people come forward to greet Cecil and her mother and though my heart was hungry and I felt sad and lonely, I was glad to see her so warmly welcomed. She was among her own people, the people who loved her, but not more than the lonely young fellow who stood back and watched and thought.

Presently she came toward me, a stalwart man on each side of her, and introduced them to me as her cousins, and each in turn shook me by the hand, a sturdy, honest grip, and they were honest men, too, with eyes as frank and fearless as their own sun. Then I was led away aft, where Mrs. Hilbury stood, the center of a kindly, sympathetic circle, and I was introduced to each in turn with due formality, and from Mrs. Hilbury's lips I received an invitation to call upon her at the earliest opportunity. Next one of the aforementioned stalwarts, a huge fellow with kind gray eyes and a formidable fair mustache, took me in charge and informed me that he had already secured rooms for me and my uncle. At this I was not a little astonished, but he only smiled and said Cecil had telegraphed from Adelaide to that effect, and he hoped I'd find them suitable.

In five minutes I was thoroughly at home with this big, handsome man, and no longer a stranger in a strange land. And presently, when Jim joined us, we chatted away as though we had known each other for years. Then gradually the ship began to clear, even those who were bound for Sydney going up to town with us by the same train. Major Coghlan, no longer a rival to be feared, bade the ladies an effusive goodby and expressed the hope that they should all meet again soon, but I do not think Mrs. Hilbury took the hint. At any rate, I have no recollection of the major ever visiting them.



Presently she came toward me, a stalwart man on each side of her.

He was an admirable companion—for five minutes.

As nothing of any moment occurred during our stay in Melbourne—that is, nothing of any moment to any one but myself—and possibly one other—I will pass over that period as briefly as possible. I paid my promised call the next day and found Cecil in her own charming home, and once more I told her of my hopes and fears, and she promised that she would wait for me and many other things which I need not here set down. Perhaps it is unnecessary to add that she endeavored to persuade me against setting out on such an adventure. She pictured and in no feeble colors the uncertainty and the peril which confronted Jim and me in such an undertaking; begged me to give it up, to stay with her. It was a sweet temptation and one to which my inclinations would willingly have succumbed had not a sterner sense of duty bound me honorably to my uncle. Moreover, it was folly, madness to think of living in peace while Kung and Wooching were at large. There could be no peace, no hope of it with them in power; and sad and desperate as was the remedy, I think her reason saw the efficacy of it.

CHAPTER XXII.

KOON-SI, THE CARPENTER.

From the advertisement columns of a newspaper we learned that the steamer Airlie would leave Sydney for Hongkong at a certain date, and, that vessel being one of a regular line, we decided to go by her, believing that the sooner we got under weigh with our task the better chance we might have of successfully accomplishing it. The date of sailing was extremely close at hand, some three days off, but it gave us ample time to make our preparations, which were not extensive, and to reach Sydney as well.

The night before our departure we dined with Cecil and her mother, and though the stalwart cousin, Jack, did his best to enliven the proceedings I fear it was a somewhat lugubrious affair. Like a dark cloud or curtain our thoughts hung before us, and no ray of light seemed capable of piercing it. I admit that I was anything but pleased with the circumstance. Things might so easily have been different. Why had not my lot been cast in the ordinary groove? Why had I not been permitted to enjoy the peaceful, uneventful life of the many? And then I looked across the table and saw her who had come to me in the long polar winter of my life, and I could have cried with the Mussulman, "God is great!" But for my flight from death I should never have met her. Therefore fate laid me under an obligation, and I could not quarrel with it, for though it had treated me so cruelly, yet was I recompensed with the love of this woman. It was destiny. God is great.

When the wrench came, philosophy proved but a broken reed. We wandered round and round the garden, sometimes strangely silent for long intervals, at others voicing with no uncertain tongue our hopes and fears. And when I pointed out to her how absolutely necessary it was for us that the power of Kung should be curtailed her wisdom strove hard with her woman's fears, and eventually I wrung from her a heartbroken consent. Sometimes I thought this setting out on such an expedition was the acme of folly. Why not let things go, why not seize on happiness when it was within my grasp and leave the future in the hands of the gods? I admit it was a great temptation and one that sore beset me, but Jim was by when I wavered, and reason told me that this apparently foolish endeavor was in reality the only right one.

I will pass over the rest of that scene and the subsequent train journey to Sydney, where we caught the steamer Airlie. Nor is there anything of importance to relate during our voyage northward. We had half a dozen agreeable passengers in the saloon and some Chinese coolies forward, and though on principle we distrusted them, their behavior was circumspect in the extreme. Nevertheless I never neglected the least precaution, eschewing the deck after nightfall, unless in the company of Jim or one of the other passengers, and avoiding open hatches and the less frequented parts of the vessel. And so one day the peak of Hongkong opened up, swiftly we approached the Ly-ee-Moon pass, slipped through, and presently we were swinging at anchor opposite the town.

The sampans crowded with innumerable yellow folk told us that we were in China at last, and it was not without some little apprehension that I surveyed the shrieking and gesticulating throng. Here were yellow men with a vengeance, and at first I experienced some slight scruple in trusting myself to them and their frail sampans, but realizing that, though generally dishonest, all these people could not be in the employ of the society, we left the ship and went ashore.

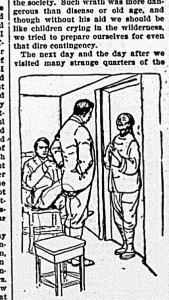
We had been recommended to go to the Hongkong hotel, it being at that time, whatever it is now, the only first class house in the place, and thither we proceeded and were duly installed in a room on the second floor. Now it was Chinamen, Chinamen everywhere, and we seemed to realize for the first time what a task this was which we had set ourselves to accomplish. And yet in the multiplicity of pigtails there was some assurance of safety. At close quarters the yellow man was not the terrible being as pictured in my heated imagination.

I must say that my Uncle Jim shared none of my scruples or alarm. The moment he set foot on Chinese soil he seemed another man. The lethargy and indifference which had characterized him during the voyage to Australia and the supplementary journey to Hongkong vanished now as if by a stroke of magic. It was as though he had said: "At last I am here! Now to work." A new energy took possession of him. His wits sharpened themselves upon the whetstone of his desires. A determination to act and act quickly was in everything he said and did. He was as one suddenly gifted with the powers of a born leader of men, and I seemed to see him as chairman of a board meeting curbing the refractory members with the mere force of will. There was something in that man which the city and the soot could not subdue, and it seemed to me as though it was going to have a fair trial at last.

Naturally our first endeavor was to discover the man of whom my father had spoken, Koon-Si, the carpenter, but at the first glance such a task appeared appalling. As well, to use a Chinese proverb, search for a needle at the bottom of the ocean. Amid these countless thousands, of whom each one seemed but a mere hideous replica of an ugly original, how was it possible to strike the one particular, solitary unit? Such was the problem, and at the first glance it seemed somewhat difficult of solution. And yet I sometimes think that obstacles are created merely for the pleasure of surmounting them. Koon-Si, according to my father, was a man whom one might distinguish by the slit in his left nostril, and I take it that such a man would not be entirely overlooked in a crowd. Moreover, he followed a profession which would, so to speak, localize him. He was a carpenter, and if in the land of the living it would be in the neighborhood of some carpenter shop that we should find him.

If he were living? The doubt was not palatable, but it had to be faced. My father had said nothing of the man's age, or of his physical condition; though even that was as nothing to the fact that he had incurred the wrath of the society. Such wrath was more dangerous than disease or old age, and though without his aid we should be like children crying in the wilderness, we tried to prepare ourselves for even that dire contingency.

The next day and the day after we visited many strange quarters of the town, and peered somewhat impertinently into many carpenters' shops, but without catching a glimpse of the man with the slit nostril. Sometimes we were greeted with courtesy, but more often with black looks and a sullen superciliousness which is peculiar to the oriental. And so at dinner that night we decided to intrust the mission to other hands; for our peregrinations, coupled with the inevitable query, "Koon-Si?" were such as to cause some speculation among certain classes, and this was exactly what we did not want.



"What for you make two piecee dollar?" he asked.

Through the police we might have found our man, but we did not wish to lay bare our story or our identity. Moreover, the police had no jurisdiction out of the island, and Kung was hardly likely to take up his residence in Hongkong. So casting about for an agent, we mentioned the affair to one of the lesser officials of the hotel, who, through the instrumentality of some one beneath him, succeeded in getting us the person we desired. We did not engage the man outright as valet or personal attendant, but we promised him good payment if he should succeed in finding the carpenter, Koon-Si.

The fellow answered glibly enough in pigeon English and seemed to make light of his task, declaring with no little confidence that if the carpenter was on the island he should be found. So Jim gave him a dollar as an earnest of our intention to do the right thing, and away he went on his quest, promising to report that night. He was an active, eagle eyed man of some 35 and possessed a ready confidence in himself which was reassuring. I was not a little taken with his shrewd, intelligent face, and I felt convinced that we had intrusted our mission to the right person.

However, that night he had nothing to report, and against all reason Jim gave him $2 to quicken his intellect and his feet. The fellow was much astounded at this unexpected display of generosity and honored my uncle with a doubtful, inquiring look, just as a child might who having done wrong receives a kiss instead of a beating.

"What for you make two piecee dollar?" he asked, a characteristic utterly un-Chinese.

"Why, you poor beggar," said Jim, "if you have been everywhere you say you have fairly earned it."

A curious smile stole over the Chow's yellow face, a deep, meaning smile, I thought, and though I said nothing I was angry with Jim for so cheapening our wits. But the smile quickly passed away, and something very different took its place.

"My allee same makee t'ank you," he said. "Walk welly much more 'ard tomollow moinin."

When he was gone, I turned to Jim, who met my inquiring glance with a smile.

"I don't think it's so foolish as it appears," he said, "and anyway his look of astonishment was worth the extra dollar. Poor beggar, he doesn't seem to possess too much of this world's goods. What's more, Davie, you know as well as I that in every country allegiance may be bought. We are strangers in a strange land, watched, for all we know to the contrary, by those who do not love us. Ah Yon may prove of use. Unless I am greatly mistaken, he is a shrewd fellow."

Almost too shrewd, I thought, and I mentioned the curious smile which I had seen play across his face, and cast some doubt upon the genuineness of Mr. Yon's endeavors.

"So, so," muttered Mr. Jim quietly, "but I am not blind either. If Ah Yon fails in his search tomorrow I shall double his present."

I admitted that this was the most extraordinary method of procedure of which I had ever heard.

Jim smiled. "Perhaps, but we are in China, the land of inverted notions. If he fails a third time I shall raise the $4 to $6."

"And so on," I said rather mockingly. "Mr. Yon has only to fail to earn a comfortable competence. What will be the reward for the fourth failure?"

"I shall add to the dollars a sound thrashing, and then—well, I may hand him over to the police for obtaining money under false pretenses."

But Ah Yon, great as may have been the temptation, for some inexplicable reason failed to succumb, and just before lunch of the following day he informed us that he had discovered Mr. Koon-Si. Jim patted him on the shoulder and gave him a couple of dollars for his good news, and we arranged to set out for the abode of the esteemed carpenter as soon as we had finished luncheon.

Calling a couple of rickshaws, we, under the guidance of Mr. Yon, who trotted beside my uncle's carriage, were run out almost to the extremity of the native quarter, and at the bottom of a narrow, dark looking street our guide called a halt. Here the rickshaw men were discharged, a proceeding which might have been fraught with some trouble had not Mr. Yon, who seemed little inclined to bandy words, hit one of the presumptuous coolies a severe blow on the side of the head. This effectually silenced the fellow's garrulity, and he took the proffered fare with an idiotic grin.

We were then led up the above mentioned little dark street, and presently we stopped before a low, wide doorway and window combined which opened upon a room some three or four feet below the level of the road. Here the smell of freshly sawed wood immediately assailed us, and after infinite peering we at length made out the figures of two men working in the interior gloom.

Ah Yon said something in Chinese, and presently one of the figures looked up from his work, dropped his saw and then came slowly toward us. Naturally my anxiety was very great, for it was highly probable that this poverty stricken carpenter, living this wretched life in this vile den of a cellar, was the man we had come so many thousands of miles to see, the man who might possibly be our salvation.

Therefore I scanned him closely, and a dirty, ugly, almost repellent face it was, but I saw with joy, with a joy which was not unmixed with horror, that his broad left nostril had been slit in two.

"It's he," said Jim.

"Yes."

The carpenter looked up, and his eyes were black and beady like a rat's.

"What seeks your honorable condescension?" he asked in very good English.

Jim looked about him before speaking. Then leaning forward he lowered his voice and whispered, "The writing of Kung is once more seen in the land."

The carpenter bowed so low that I could not see what effect these words had on him, but from that moment his manner became one of intelligent consideration, and with many gracious excuses he begged us to enter his contemptible hovel. This we did carefully, for the little stair which led down to his workshop was badly conditioned throughout, while its base was lost in gloom. Our esteemed Ah Yon was somewhat peremptorily ordered by the carpenter to remain out in the street, a command which he obeyed without the least demur. Indeed, poor and ragged and ugly as he was, Koon-Si was a man of an indefinable presence, and one instinctively felt its influence. He may have been only a carpenter, but he was a master among carpenters.

He led us through his dingy workshop to a stair at the back, and bowing low, motioned for us to mount. It was but a makeshift of a stairway, straight almost, and entirely free of a hand rail, but notwithstanding such slight deficiencies we succeeded in mounting with safety to the room above. This, though not in any way elegant, was a welcome contrast to the shop below, and though an abominable smell pervaded the atmosphere, it was the one thing which is inseparable from a Chinese house and may to a certain extent be obviated by a free use of tobacco. We begged permission of our host to continue our cheroots.

This he graciously granted, declaring that we honored his degraded dwelling by smoking in it, after which piece of politeness he carefully closed the trapdoor through which we had ascended and then beckoned us to seats at the other extremity of the room. Here the light was somewhat better than in the shop below, but it did not add an additional luster to Koon-Si. If in the semigloom he was ugly, in the light he was, if anything, more hideous and dirty than I had at first conceived. Truly my father had kept strange company.

"Be seated, excellencies," said he. "Now we can talk in peace. The writing of Kung is once more seen in the land?"

"Yes," replied my uncle, "and we have come to you to help us blot it out."

"I have waited long for this day," he said, "very long. But to me you are strangers, and though you know so much you are not the one for whom I have waited."

"For whom have you waited?" asked Jim. "Tell us. Perhaps we know something of him."

"Like you, he was an Englishman, but unlike you he wandered over the face of the waters. A tall man and a brave in his day."

"His name?"

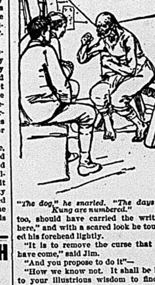
"Kingston."

"Know you not that the writing of Kung has been seen upon his forehead?"

"Nay," he gasped, "I know not. Then the blow has fallen?"

"Heavily."

"So shall it always be until the curse is removed. But for my ignominious life, which so far has shielded me, I, too, should have carried the writing here," and with a scared look he touched his forehead lightly.



"The dog," he snarled. "The days of Kung are numbered."

"It is to remove the curse that we have come," said Jim.

"And you propose to do it"—

"How we know not. It shall be left to your illustrious wisdom to find a way. Go to Hongkong, said one who has carried the writing of Kung into eternity, and find Koon-Si, the carpenter."

"And how know you that I am he? Koon-Si is not writ upon the board above my workshop."

"You shall know him by the slit in his left nostril. Those were the words."

The man touched his nose quickly and then with a diabolical scowl muttered: "Aye, aye, the slit in his left nostril. It is the handiwork of him who would have a more fearful writing here," and he tapped on his forehead with his thin yellow fingers. "But so far he and his have passed me by, and I think Kung's day of reckoning has come."

"You don't love him, eh?"

"The dog," he snarled. "He has mutilated me as you see and forced me to dwell in this ignoble manner. For my opposition to him my house was burned, my people destroyed, for in our Chinese way he not alone punishes the guilty, but all those who are connected with him. So was it in my case. I was forced to fly my part of the country and seek refuge here with strangers, and here I have lived for many years, fearing each day that Kung would find my hiding place. But, blessed be the gods, things are working out as I have dreamed. I have lived long and patiently for this. The days of Kung are numbered."

"Indeed, I hope so," was Jim's devout exclamation. "It is full time that the handwriting of Kung ceased."

"It shall cease," said Koon-Si impressively, "and I will show you how."

CHAPTER XXIII.

SOME ARRANGEMENTS AND A PROPOSAL.

We sat still more erect and eyed the speaker intently. An unprepossessing man truly, yellow, dirty, bare armed and barelegged, but withal a man in ten thousand for us. He was not Koon-Si, the cooly, who laboriously worked the day from end to end for a scanty pittance, but rather the man in whom lay the hope of our future happiness, in whom we saw the avenger—vengeance personified. With this man we might hope to do much; without him ours was likely to prove a dangerous and an evil plight.

"I will tell you how it shall cease," he repeated, "for it has been nothing but the hope of revenge which has kept me alive in the midst of this wretchedness. But first, confidence for confidence. In what manner has Kung harmed you?"

"He has slain those who were nearest and dearest to us."

"Enough. And your names?"

"Mine," said Jim, and I wondered at this strange way of repaying confidence for confidence, "is of no importance, neither is his," pointing to me. "Yet such as they are you are welcome to them. I am called George Canter, and this is my friend, Frederick Gray."

"Good," said the Chinaman. "I know not the names, but it is enough. And you come as the avengers of"—

"Those whom we love."

Koon-Si bowed. He was a wise man and respected our reticence.

"Enough. You are the men for whom I have waited so long. Kung shall die."

He filled his brass bound pipe, drew in a deep, full breath, knocked the ashes out on the floor, and then, after apparently swallowing the smoke, ejected it in a dense volume from his nose. This he did again, consuming, amid a strange silence, at least half a dozen pipes. Then Jim, who was beginning to get restless, spoke:

"You have information? You know of Kung's whereabouts?"

"Ah," replied Koon-Si, rapping his pipe on the floor, "to gain intelligence of such a man as Kung is, as you may imagine, a feat not easy to achieve. For years I have vainly hunted, for I have a great wish to meet him once again, but it was not until a few months ago that I received reliable information of his whereabouts."

"And he is now"—

"Where he is now I cannot say, for as I have told you, Kung is everywhere, even as his influence is felt beyond the big seas, but when last I heard of him he had set up as a boat builder at Ching-hi."

"And where is Ching-hi?"

"In the Yang-tse-Kiang. It is a small island some miles below Hankow in the province of Hu-Peh."

The information, which was apparently most precise, still left much to be desired. Of course we had heard of the Yang-tse river, but through what provinces it ran, what they were like and in which was situated Hankow, we had not the faintest conception.

"And we can get there?" asked Jim.

"Easily, excellency, by steamer to Hankow."

"Good. When shall we start?"

"I am a poor man, excellency. It will cost money."

"I will see to that. You take us there."

"It shall be as you wish."

"And now," said Jim, "how had we better set to work?"

"There is no difficulty at all, excellency, if you have money. I let my shop or shut it up. It matters nothing. Then we go to Shanghai. From there to Hankow is nothing. Your excellency has money. We shall procure assistance, and Kung"—

"Well?"

"Kung is your excellency's, to do with him what you will."

It sounded simple enough, and Koon-Si had arranged an admirable little plan, but to me there seemed to be something wanting in the story, and I said, addressing the Chinaman, "Kung is a great political plotter?"

"The greatest, excellency."

"And no doubt the government would liberally reward those who captured him?"

"They would pay much, excellency. There never was one whom they feared so much as Kung."

"Then why have you not betrayed his hiding place to the government? It would relieve you of much responsibility."

I expected the man to show some sort of confusion, were it ever so little, at this direct thrust, but instead his equanimity appeared not in the least disturbed. He smiled with apparent complacency, but to my thinking his face looked infinitely diabolic.

"True, excellency, I might have done as you suggest. But you forget I am a Chinese, and I have been personally mutilated. Unlike you Christians, we Chinese do not forgive our enemies. It would not please me to hand Kung over to the government. It would not be satisfaction enough merely to know that he was punished. I want to see APPEAL AGAINST THE EVILS OF RACE AND SOCIAL PREJUDICE.

WITH JESUS THRO' SAMARIA

Candid and Friendly Dealings With Each Other in All the Relations of Life Inculcated—Value of Travel in Broadening the Man's Horizon Beyond the Purely Personal Aspects of Things.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1904, by William Baily, of Toronto, at the Dep't of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 23.—In this sermon the preacher makes a strong appeal against the evils of race and social prejudice and in favor of candid and friendly dealings with each other in all the relations of life. The text is John iv, 4, "And he must needs go through Samaria."

No man's education is complete unless he has traveled. There is a higher diploma than that of Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Oxford, Cambridge, Heidelberg or the University of Paris. The rough diamond must be cut and polished before it can sparkle and glitter and flash. The scholar's ragged metal edges should be smoothed off by personal contact with those peoples whose histories he has been studying as a recluse and as a delver in musty tomes.

To fully realize this scene in which our Lord's interview with the woman took place one "must needs go through Samaria." I remember well that hill once crowned with the capital of Samaria at the foot of which still grow the descendants of those far famed olive groves, and whose pathways are still resonant with the personal histories of an Omri, an Ahab, a Ahaziah, a Jehu, a Jehoahaz, a Joash, a Herod Antipas, a Herodias, a John the Baptist and the evangelist Philip. I cannot portray that scene so grand and majestic in its lonely beauty, but I would have you realize some of the circumstances which gave special significance to that momentous journey of our Lord and present some of the reasons why "He must needs go through Samaria."

One reason, I think, was that Jesus wished to reprove racial antipathy. The Samaritan colonists were interlopers. They were not indigenous to the soil. After the Shalmaneserian conquest the Assyrian king carried away ten out of the twelve Hebrew tribes into captivity. Then the eastern conqueror, having depopulated the best part of the land "flowing with milk and honey," he repeopled it with his own followers. In other words, the Assyrian king gave to his own followers a right to settle upon and cultivate and own that land, just as King James I. gave a charter to William Penn for the American tract of land now called Pennsylvania and Charles I. gave a charter to Lord Baltimore to take possession of the present state of Maryland, to be settled by him and his Catholic friends. After the Jews had returned from the Babylonish captivity and had rebuilt the Jerusalem walls and temple they wanted to drive out these foreign colonists from the garden spot of Palestine. But they could not. Year after year, decade after decade and century after century the Samaritans held on to the region lying directly between Judaea or northern Galilee, and the Jerusalem, capital. There they dwelt, ready to slay any Jew or collection of Jews who attempted to molest them. There they continued to dwell. Each year the hatred between the two races grew more bitter and mortal.

Though the Samaritan and the Jew for centuries had lived side by side, yet they hated each other only as a Carthagenian could hate a Roman, a Moor could hate a Castilian, a Turk could hate an Armenian, a Mexican Aztec could hate a Spaniard. These two peoples hated each other unto death, yet when Jesus, with the object of setting at rest the invidious comments of the Pharisees on his rivalry of John the Baptist, left Judaea for his home in Galilee he decided to pass through Samaria. He did so, though he was fully aware of the fact that every man, woman and child in Samaria hated the Jew as every Jew hated the Samaritans.

By that journey Jesus said to all mankind: "The man with the flattened nose and the thick lip of the negro and with the aquiline nose of the Hebrew and with the low forehead of the Australian aborigines and with the calveless limb of the Bengali and with the stunted stature of the Eskimo and with the herculean form of the Saxon and the gigantic Slav are all brothers. The Jew has no right to hate the Samaritan; neither has the Samaritan a right to hate the Jew."

But through the Samaritan should love the Jew and the Jew love the Samaritan, just study how the old racial prejudices against the Hebrew race, as a venomous serpent with its slimy coils, has come wriggling down through the ages. Why is that finely dressed and courteous gentleman refused admittance into some of the leading hotels of Saratoga and New York? He is a Jew? Why was Alfred Dreyfus sent to Devil's Island to be more inhumanly treated than any Government would allow any man to treat a dumb brute? He was a Jew! Why the clannishness of the ghetto? Because the gentile by sneers and scoffs refuses to associate with the Jew, therefore the Jew finds most of his associations with the Jew. Why the public ridicule against a class of men who are the greatest financiers and masters of barter and gain of the world? Because for centuries the Jew had no way of making a living except through barter and gain and as a money lender. He could not hold land, for the princes and the people would rob him of his land. He could not go into statecraft or into the army, because there he was not allowed to go. Though social recognition in certain regions is now accorded to the Hebrew race, as the British House of Lords has been opened to them, yet even to-day a strong barrier to social preferment is the fact of a man belonging to that race, a representative of which Shakespeare immortalized in Shylock, the cruel and remorseless creditor.

I contend that racial prejudice is opposed to the spirit of Christ and Christianity, and I base my belief, first, on this journey that our Lord took through Samaria; secondly, on account of the lesson which Christ taught in the parable of the "good Samaritan," which he spake unto the shrewd lawyer who was trying to entrap him by a series of catch questions. Thirdly, I plead for this obliteration of social prejudice because the Jew is not only as honest as the gentile, but mentally, morally and physically is in every way his equal, if not his superior.

Equal is the Jew to the gentile in the sweetness and purity of his domestic life. Not only are they faithful as a race as husbands and wives, but they are also irreproachable in their relations as parents and children. You never hear a Hebrew girl insulting her mother. You never see a Hebrew son sitting in the presence of an old father when that father has to stand. Filial duty is always practiced in the Hebrew home. The Hebrew fireside is as pure and noble as any gentile fireside.

A second reason, I think, why Christ must needs go through Samaria was that he wished to reprove a social prejudice. He held converse on that journey with a notorious female outcast. She was not a "respectable" sinner. By that I mean she was not one of those able to travel forbidden paths and yet cover up her sinful tracks so that the world's prying eyes did not see them. She was not a hypocrite, living two separate lives—one life which made her outward reputation good and another life which showed her inner character to be bad. She did not sin in secret. She sinned openly. She was one who not only openly sinned, but boastfully and defiantly seemed to glory in her sin. To show her that he knew how stained was her life Christ said unto her: "Thou hast well said, I have no husband. For thou hast had five husbands, and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband." She was a woman at that time living in open adultery. Yet it was to such a social outcast as this that Christ offered the "water of life." It was to such a human being as this that Jesus revealed himself and permitted her to become a gospel messenger to summon her people to hear his discourse.

O ye evangelists and gospel preachers, why do we spend most of our time trying to offer the "bread of life" only to the "respectable" sinners of society, who will not receive it? Why do we not do as Christ did—go into the enemy's country and talk with the outcasts by the Samaritan well, who are willing—oh, so willing, to receive the gospel if we only go to them in Christ's name? Like the Samaritan woman, have not the greatest sinners believed in Christ and sometimes become the greatest of his disciples and martyrs? Have not the Peters who denied him thrice and the Pauls who were once the greatest persecutors of his followers been willing to seal their testimony for Christ with their lifeblood? Who was Richard Baxter, who wrote "Saint's Rest?" Once a notorious sinner. Who was John Bunyan, the dreamer of immortal dreams? Once a notorious sinner. Who was Father Taylor, the great sailor preacher of Boston? Once a notorious sinner. Who were Harry Munroe and Jerry McAuley and Peter Cartwright and John Somerville and John B. Gough? All once notorious sinners. Ah, it is worth while for us to take a long journey if we can only send forth a "woman of Samaria" as a messenger of Jesus Christ. It is worth while to go long distances—aye, a very long distance—if, like the good Ananias, we can only say to the chief of sinners, "Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me that thou mightest receive thy sight and be filled with the Holy Ghost." It is far easier for Jesus Christ to save a seventy deviled sinner who knows that he is all wrong than to save a so-called "respectable" sinner who thinks that he is all right.

Christ was the Saviour of the social outcast at the Samaritan well. Yet the strange fact remains that most Christian evangelists seem to act upon the supposition that it is easier to save the so-called "little" sinner than the big. We seem to be unwilling to reach out after the outcasts.

Another reason why Christ "must needs go through Samaria" was that he wanted to reprove ecclesiastical and religious prejudice. The disciples of John the Baptist and of Jesus were antagonistic and jealous of each other, just as the Episcopalians and the Puritans were bitter during the third year of the Plymouth settlement. The disciples of John the Baptist angrily declared that John had baptized more followers than Jesus Christ, while the followers of Jesus angrily replied that Christ had baptized more disciples than John. It was in order to stop this bitterness that Jesus left Judaea and started north toward Lake Galilee and went by the way of Samaria. Christ was ready to do almost anything to stop the internal dissensions among those who would ultimately accept him as their Saviour and their Christ. Cannot we all realize that no church can rightly accomplish a sanctified glorious work for the Master unless that church has complete gospel harmony within its own ranks?

Absolutely necessary is it for Christian people to love one another before they can as a church welcome the man of the world into their midst with the "everlasting peace of the gospel." And yet, my brother, there are scores and hundreds of churches in this land which are practically a source of dissension to the world instead of a Christian harmony. They are rent and torn into factions by internal strife. The Young People's Society is pulling against the session; the session is finding fault with the board of trustees; the Ladies' Aid Society is sulking because its members do not like the minister's wife. Instead of the Christian people of the church getting together and praying for each other and trying to help each other for the good of the church they are now magnifying each other's faults and minifying each other's virtues.

Want of gospel harmony in a church, although it be composed of only a long series of little frictions and disturbances will after awhile suck out the life's blood and kill the usefulness of a church. Indeed, the little church disturbances, like the little sins of life, are more to be dreaded than the great church tornadoes, which may arise and subside in a day. In church work, the little frictions, the little bitternesses, the little "fault findings," like the fatal leeches of the Teester Valley, can destroy the spiritual life of any church. Christian friends, as with Christ when he took his Samaritan journey, pray hard, sacrifice, plead, apologize, overlook fancied insult, do anything and everything in your church family that is honorable rather than have one pew unChristianly find fault with another pew. A forgiving layman bowing at the mercy seat is just as essential for church harmony as a forgiving minister breaking the bread and pouring out the wine at the table of the holy communion.

Lastly I think Christ took this Samaritan journey to prove that the shortest way in life's work is generally the best way. This is not absolutely an invariable rule, but it holds good in nearly every case. The country of Samaria lay directly between Jerusalem and Galilee. It was as much between these two regions as the States of Indiana and Ohio lie in the direct line between New York and Chicago. But because the Jew hated the Samaritan he would not go through the Samaritan land. Therefore he made a big detour. In one sense he made as big a detour as the traveler coming from New York to Chicago would make if he went by the way of Louisville, Ky., instead of by the way of Buffalo or Pittsburg. Christ in journeying to Galilee simply took the straight path. He went as a bird would fly overland. He went to Galilee through Samaria.

The straight path is nearly always the right path. When that young man comes into your store and asks for a position, if you have not any vacant place for him tell him so. Do not say to yourself, "Now I do not want to hurt that young man's feelings, therefore I will tell him to come back next week or next month." By such an answer you are doing an injustice to the young man, and you are doing an injustice to yourself. The shortest way out of a difficulty is generally the right way. Even for a surgeon it is never a pleasant act to drive a knife into the quivering flesh to cut out the virulent cancer. Neither is it always a pleasant task to tell a person of his faults. But when that young girl who is doing wrong comes to you for advice tell her the truth. Warn her as you would like some one to warn your morally endangered child. The direct way out of a difficulty is generally the right way. So, my brother, when you yourself have done wrong—wrong to your fellow men and wrong to God—be a Christian man and straighten out the wrong and make restitution for your moral deficiencies. Confess your sins to God. The shortest way out of a difficulty is generally the right way—the Christian way. Therefore, O man, O woman, will you not to-day at the Samaritan well seek Christ and ask his pardon for your sins? Will you not do as did the social outcast who at the Samaritan well found there her Saviour many centuries ago?

The word "Samaria" as a Christly refuge in all probability will always mean more to me than to any one else gathered to-day within these walls. On the afternoon of Oct. 26, 1894, with a brother minister, G. B. Trost by name, I was resting among the Palestine hills. Our dragoman had left us some two hours before to hunt up a saddle-bag which had fallen from my horse. While there, alone and unarmed, we were attacked by the eastern bandits. We were attacked in almost the identical place where, three weeks before, two English travelers had been slain. We were driven back and back to the edge of the precipice. I saw the club raised to strike down my companion and knew that my turn was to come next, when succor and rescue suddenly came to hand. That night was dark when we ended our journey in Samaria, but, oh, in the darkness what joy and peace came to us both when, by the Samaritan well, we knew that we at last had safety! As we found physical refuge in Samaria on that October night so may you find spiritual safety. O man, O woman, for you, too, Christ "must needs go through Samaria!" Not for that degraded woman alone was that journey taken. The revelation of himself that he made by that well is an eloquent invitation to all in every age to come to him for the "water of life." Are you weary with the troubles of the way? Are you athirst for the water that will satisfy the longings of your soul? Are you fearful of the grave and the judgment of God? Come to the well and hear him say that to all who come he will give living water, whereof if a man drink he shall never die.

Two Professionals.

When Professor Rokitanski of Vienna was asked if he had any sons he answered, "Four."

"And what professions have they chosen?"

"Two howl and two heal," was the laconic reply.

A couple of his sons were preachers and the other two were doctors.

Webster and Jenny Lind.

The following quaint story of Daniel Webster and Jenny Lind is told in "Washington, the Capital City:"

It chanced that on the day of Jenny Lind's appearance several members of the cabinet and senate were the guests at dinner of the Russian minister, and the concert was half over when Webster and the other members of the party entered the hall. When the applause with which they were received had subsided the second part of the concert was opened by the gifted Swede with "Hail, Columbia!"

Deeply moved by the patriotic air, Webster at the close of the first verse rose and added his rich, sonorous voice to the chorus. His wife, who sat behind him, pulled at his coat tail to make him stop singing, but at the close of each verse the volunteer basso joined in, and none could tell whether Lind, Webster or the audience was most delighted.

As the last notes of the song died away Webster, hat in hand, made a profound bow to the singer. Jenny Lind, blushing at the honor, courtesied, while the audience applauded to the echo. Webster, not to be outdone in politeness, bowed again. Again Lind courtesied, the house applauded, and this was repeated nine times.

The Meaning of Mess.

The use of the word mess for dining room is a remnant of a custom quite common in Anglo-Norman times. Mess, from the French mets (meat or a dish of food) and the Latin mensa (a table), was the meat prepared in common (compare the collegiate word "commons") for four persons sitting at a separate table. Guests at dinners and other ceremonial occasions were divided for general convenience into such groups.

From this the word came to be used as equivalent to four in other matters. Shakespeare speaks of Henry's four sons as a mess, "Where are your mess of sons?" and in "Love's Labor's Lost" we find, "I confess that you three fools lacked me to make up the mess."

From the fact that soldiers and sailors are always catered for in companies, according to rank, the survival of the word among them is quite natural. The same practice is still maintained in the London inns of court.

The Lemon as Medicine.

The value of lemons in the treatment of both rheumatism and consumption is now known to be very great. The treatment is to begin with one or two a day and gradually increase the number. In one case of rheumatism twenty-five lemons a day were the dose for a time. As a preventive of illness, however, a half a lemon a day is all that should be taken—that is, if taken every day year in and year out. A half a lemon in a cup of hot water taken an hour before breakfast (without any sugar) will annihilate the darkest of dark brown tastes in one's mouth. If you make a practice of eating more butter and sugar than is good for you take lemon and hot water every morning.

Life and the Sun.

All the energy of life is derived ultimately from the sun. A little of this comes indirectly through lightning which in passing through the air forms ammonia and oxides of nitrogen. These being carried by rain into the ground, are the constant source of nitrogen for vegetable and indirectly for animal life. A much larger quantity of energy is well known to be taken direct from the sunshine by plants and used in their anabolic processes. This energy is appropriated by animals in their food, and whether in the vegetable or in the animal it assists in any alternations of the system before it is completely dispersed.

Food and Nervous Troubles.

I have the privilege of knowing many eminent men in the medical profession, and their advice in nine cases out of ten is to eat and take as much nourishment as possible. Numbers of cases of nervous breakdown are entirely cured by what your correspondents would call "overeating." In all nervous disorders, from which so many suffer in this age of keen competition, the chief remedy is eating more than is seemingly required.—London Telegraph.

Excursionists For Revenue.

Some years ago a British warship visited St. Kilda in exceptionally calm weather. As the natives of the place had never seen a steamer, the captain good naturedly offered to take them for an hour's cruise, which was readily accepted by a great many. On their return the captain, seeing them all standing in rows on the quarter deck, asked the cause. He was at once informed that they were waiting to be paid.

He—We had best elope about 2 in the morning. I will bring my motor to the next corner, and—

She—Oh, couldn't you make it a little earlier, dear? Pa and ma do so want to see us off, and I don't like to keep them up so late.

New Definition of Principle.

"I fought the case not because I cannot pay, but on principle," explained a defendant in the Southwark county court recently. "Yes, I know," said Judge Addison wearily. "In these courts principle is another word for temper."

Didn't Take the Hint.

"No, mum; he took the pianny."

There is an Individuality

About our decorating that you will not find elsewhere

THERE IS originality in our decorating—we do not find it necessary to reproduce your drawing room in your neighbors home. We prefer to give each a change and we have the werewithal to produce that change.

HAVE
Firstly
the ideas, a most necessary adjunct to healthy art.

HAVE
Secondly
the materials, the correct papers, the correct mouldings, the styles the new things with which to work out a decorative scheme.

HAVE
Thirdly
The workmen—men experienced in there several branches of workmanship—skilled artizans and craftsmen who can follow mechanically and artistically the drawings and ideas of our decorator.

And there is no mistake about it we are doing today a far superior class of decorating than has before ever been done in Belleville and vicinity.

Just watch the interiors of the best ones in the city if you care to observe our decorative work.

Wanted Them Searched.

On Saturday Chief Newton received a message from the Chief of Police of Hamilton in reference to the two Murphys, who were arrested here and are held on the charge of attempted burglary. It was to the effect that their belongings be thoroughly searched for jewellery. As the Chief had not at that time communicated with the Hamilton police in reference to the men it is surmised that their statement about entering a place in the Ambitious City and escaping detection is true. Something of their past record will probably be secured before the continuation of their trial on Friday next.

O. H. A. TYRANTS WIELD THE AXE.

And Off Goes the Head of "Reddy" McMillan for Alleged Professionalism.

All Belleville Games Cancelled and Peterboro Ordered to Take Her Place

Against Midland—Writ May be Issued—O. H. A. Has Fight On Its Hands.

If the ears of certain members of that august body known as the O.H.A. executive did not burn yesterday and to-day there is no truth in a certain old saying, for assuredly some of the remarks that have been made about them in this city were couched in very vigorous Anglo-Saxon.

It was reported on the streets yesterday morning that the O.H.A. executive had reconsidered the McMillan case on Saturday night, that the matter had gone against us, and that Belleville was once more thrown down and out just when they were in sight of the finals. The story seemed hard to believe, but it turned out to be only too true.

It has been known for some time, of course, that certain enemies of McMillan and Belleville were working hard against us, but the news of the rank injustice done for the second time came as a heavy shock to everybody's feelings of fair play, and indignant expressions have been made by citizens of all ranks and conditions of life, many of them not at all interested in hockey, but all fighting mad to think that rank injustice has been done Belleville. Offers of financial assistance to fight the case legally are numerous.

The Intelligencer this morning had an interview with Mr. E. Guss Porter, M.P., who was at the executive meeting on Saturday night, and from him learned the following facts:

The first charge made against McMillan on Saturday night was that of non-compliance with the residence rule, which the executive had no moral right to adjudicate upon at all, inasmuch as they had long ago decided that, according to the evidence submitted, he did not need a permit to play with Belleville. The charge of non-compliance with the residence rule fell through, however.

Then the charge of professionalism was made against McMillan of Belleville. To support this charge the prosecution submitted declarations from Ed. Gilroy and F. S. Purdy, of Smith's Falls. Gilroy, a player on the Smith's Falls team, who works in the store of Evertts (a man who claims that McMillan owes him $80 and wanted the Belleville club to pay it, threatening to "get even" if they didn't), swore that Trualsch of Belleville offered him (Gilroy) money to play in Belleville and that McMillan told him (Gilroy) that he (McMillan) had been offered $15 per week to play in Belleville, and said further that McMillan had told him (Gilroy) that he (McMillan) had had letters and telegrams from Trualsch offering him inducements to go to Belleville. The declaration from Purdy said that McMillan had told him that he (McMillan) had been offered $15 a week to play in Belleville. This was all the evidence against McMillan. Against that Mr. Porter submitted the declaration of McMillan, who swore that he had never received or been offered a cent to play in Belleville, and the declaration of Trualsch, who swore that he had never paid McMillan a cent or offered him a cent, and furthermore had nothing to do with the financial end of the Belleville Hockey Club. Mr. Porter argued that, as the prosecution submitted merely hearsay evidence, and as his evidence was straightforward and to the point, the case against McMillan should be declared not proven and he be declared O.K. To this eminently fair contention the majority would not listen, a motion prevailed that McMillan be disqualified and declared a professional, and that all games won by the Belleville club, in which McMillan played, be cancelled. This motion was made by Mr. McPherson, Peterboro's representative on the O.H.A. executive. It was afterwards moved that the whole Belleville team be suspended, but the motion failed to carry. The boys still have the right to play exhibition games this season, without McMillan.

Then came the motion in which the real old cloven foot was displayed. It was moved that the Peterboro club be ordered to take Belleville's place as champions of this district, and play off with Midland. To this Mr. Porter objected strenuously on the ground that the Peterboro club had no right to claim precedence over Picton, Brockville or the Marlboros, as those clubs, according to the executive's ruling, had not been beaten by a properly qualified team. The chairman said that the O.H.A. secretary had received a letter from the manager of the Picton team stating that it had disbanded, "and anyway," the chairman said, "if the Picton team does get together again I have evidence enough to disqualify them on the grounds of non-compliance with the residence rule and professionalism."

The motion carried, and the Peterboro team was ordered to take Belleville's place in the semi-finals.

Then Mr. Porter said he proposed to protest the Peterboro team on the ground of professionalism, and requested that the executive defer action till he could submit his evidence. He pledged his standing as an executive officer that he would undertake to prove that Belleville players had been offered, by people acting on behalf of the Peterboro team, one $500 and another $300 to throw the game against Picton, played in Belleville, and would also submit other evidence of an incriminating nature, but the executive refused to allow of any postponement of the last motion.

The motion to disqualify McMillan for professionalism was carried on this division:

Yeas—Nelson, Hewitt, McPherson, Cox and Darroch.

Nays—Wyndham, Adams, Jamieson and Porter.

It was peculiar, Mr. Porter thinks, that Vice-President Nelson, who had resigned, withdrew his resignation on Friday night, so as to preside at the meeting, after having several times before refused to do so.

The matter, however, is not yet ended, and Belleville will not quietly submit to being made a doormat of by a few officials of the O.H.A. Mr. Porter informed us that it was his intention to this morning issue a writ against the Ontario Hockey Association to restrain them from enforcing the resolution professionalizing McMillan.

The charge of professionalism against the Peterboro club will, we are told, be pressed to the fullest extent.

Mr. Porter says he was rung up a dozen times yesterday morning by citizens offering to contribute towards legal costs in order that Belleville's claims might be properly looked after.

All the motions against Belleville were moved by McPherson, of Peterboro.

A word of praise is due the fair-minded gentlemen, Messrs. Adams, Wyndham and Jamieson, who supported Mr. Porter. One of them went so far as to say that "he would not professionalize a yellow dog on the evidence submitted."

A significant fact is that, just before the meeting closed, and it sat till well into Sunday morning, Mr. Nelson proposed, and Mr. Hewitt supported him, that the members pledge themselves to keep all the proceedings secret. To this Mr. Porter demurred. "If you pass a motion like that," he said, "here is my resignation as a member of the executive. I propose to show the people of this province just what an injustice has been done to Belleville." And the motion was not passed.

THE LATEST.

At a meeting of the Executive of the Belleville Hockey Club, held this afternoon in Mr. Porter's office, it was resolved that no legal proceedings be taken against the executive of the O.H.A., but that a request be sent to that body that the case of McMillan be reopened.

What the outcome will be remains to be seen.

LATEST WAR NEWS.

THE INTELLIGENCER'S AFTERNOON DESPATCHES ARE TWELVE HOURS IN ADVANCE OF THE TORONTO MORNING PAPERS.

Russians Defeated in Corea and their Demoralization Alleged—Chinese Sympathy for Japan Strongly Shown—First Japanese Land Victory Will Sweep Away Chinese Neutrality.

(Special to The Intelligencer.)

Shanghai, Feb. 29.—It is reported here that a Japanese force has routed the Russian garrison at Kurchun, on the northeast frontier of Corea, and is now marching on Kirin.

The Russians at Mukden and Kirin are said to be demoralized. Most of the Russian troops are concentrated on the Yalu river.

A Russian force is near Simmintinig and threatens to seize the Chinese branch of the railway.

The Russian minister at Pekin has threatened to ignore China's declaration of neutrality unless China controls the mounted bandits in Manchuria.

The Japanese have destroyed a large Russian store of provisions and forage at Kenchan, thirty miles from Port Arthur.

Chefoo, Feb. 29.—There is great excitement among the Chinese here because of an unconfirmed report that Port Arthur has fallen. The Chinese show the wildest joy and permit no doubt of their sympathy for Japan.

The foreign consuls here, in discussing this, are of one mind in saying that the first land victory for Japanese arms will sweep away Chinese neutrality.

A telegram from Tien Tsin says 10,000 Chinese soldiers have passed through by rail, bound for western Manchuria, and it is predicted here that troops will be in conflict with the Russians at the first provocation.

SPORTING NOTE AND COMMENT.

Going to the hockey match in Peterboro to-morrow night? Sure, Mike!

Of all the "funny" actions of the O.H.A executive, this last is certainly the worst. They calmly accept hearsay testimony in preference to sworn statements of fact, throw out a club which has worked its way up to the semi-finals, and call in a club which has no proof to show that it is superior to either the Brockvilles or Marlboros, both of whom are deliberately ignored.

This iniquitous action of the O.H.A. executive may stand, and it is even possible that Peterboro may win the intermediate championship, but the "honors" will be soiled, sadly soiled. It is one thing to win fairly and another thing to crawl in through the cellar window. If Belleville cannot win honorably, on the ice, she is satisfied to stay out. Peterboro has no such squeamish notions.

However, there are a few matters the Peterboro club will be called on to explain which may put a different complexion on things. For instance the alleged letter offering a Belleville player a stated sum to play with them—but that's another story.

As an instance of the O.H.A.'s unjust treatment of Belleville it may be pointed out that twice in succession this city's team was ordered to play the first games of home and home series abroad; Peterboro, after unjustly taking Belleville's place, is given the first game with Midland at home.

The thanks of every lover of fair play in Belleville are due Mr. Porter for the splendid way in which he has looked after the rights of our team. But neither he, nor anyone else, could win against the methods which seem to prevail in the O.H.A.

BIRTH.

DOXSEE—On Sunday evening, Feb. 28, to Professor and Mrs. E. R. Doxsee, a son.

DEATHS

HELLER—At Belleville, on Feb. 29, 1904, Andrew Heller, aged 85 years.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon at 3 p.m. from the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Walter Strong, Albert St. Services at the house at 2.30.

This Will Remind You that the pain of strains, bruises and sprains, common incidents of active out-door life, is drawn from aching bodies by Perry Davis' Painkiller, as a magnet draws bits of iron from sand.

MR. ANDREW HELLER DEAD.

HAD BEEN A RESIDENT OF BELLEVILLE FOR OVER HALF A CENTURY.

On Saturday Mr. Andrew Heller, a well-known resident of this city, was stricken with pneumonia and heart failure, which resulted fatally at an early hour this morning. Deceased, who was 85 years of age, was born in Prussia in 1819. He came to this country when about 30 years of age and has lived in Belleville for over half a century. For over 40 years he had been engaged in the dyeing business. Mr. Heller was much respected. He was a member of St. Andrew's Church. A widow and one daughter, Mrs. Walter Strong, who resides here, survive.

DIED AT COBOURG.

FORMER RESIDENT OF THIS CITY MEETS DEATH AS RESULT OF ACCIDENT.

Mr. Charles Digweed, eldest son of Mr. David Digweed, of this city, died at Cobourg last night. The deceased some two months ago sustained injuries by falling on an icy walk, which caused his death. He was about 35 years of age. Mr. Digweed was a member of Oxford Lodge, Sons of England. The remains will be brought here for interment.

TENDENCY OF THE TIMES.

The tendency of medical science is toward preventive measures. The best thought of the world is being given to the subject. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. It has been fully demonstrated that pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, can be prevented by the use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of influenza (grip), and it has been observed that this remedy counteracts any tendency of these diseases toward pneumonia. This has been fully proven in many thousands of cases in which this remedy has been used during the great prevalence of colds and grip in recent years, and can be relied upon with implicit confidence. Pneumonia often results from a slight cold when no danger is apprehended until it is suddenly discovered that there is fever and difficulty in breathing and pains in the chest, then it is announced that the patient has pneumonia. Be on the safe side and take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the cold is contracted. It always cures. For sale by all druggists.

Adventure With an Octopus.

Captain S. F. Scott of British Columbia was yachting off Victoria with a party of friends, and while alone one evening in a rowboat a mile from the yacht, got into a school of blackfish, which struck the little boat with such force that its occupant was sent flying into the water. Captain Scott continues:

It seemed a joke to be upset like that, and I laughed. But just as I had swum back to the boat and laid my hands on the upturned keel I felt myself seized halfway below the knees—seized with such strength and suddenness and pulled down with such tremendous force that the boat was jerked clean over, and came down on the top of my head.

Like lightning came the truth. I was in the arms of a devil-fish.

There is no mistaking the grasp. Every one of the devil-fish's eight powerful arms closes upon his prey, and he pulls down, down, until he drags it to the bottom. With a desperate kick I freed myself from the creature below me. Seizing the boat, I had my arm under one of the thwarts when the devil-fish caught me again.

I felt his grasp tighten. The pain was excruciating. With every movement that I made my flesh was lacerated. I began to grow weak from loss of blood. But I never relaxed my hold of the boat.

The agony must have lasted for only a few minutes in reality, but it seemed an eternity before I felt that clutch on my legs loosen. I kicked with all my strength, struggled, twirled, and then felt myself free. I think my solid boots must have injured the arms of the octopus and compelled him to let go.

It was not until an hour and a half later that my friends noticed that my boat was motionless on the water, and came out to see what was the matter. They found me more dead than alive. The skin was nearly all gone from my feet to my knees, and above that it remained for weeks as black as a man's hat. For two months afterward I lived only on milk. Altogether, I was laid up for seven months as the result of my encounter.

The First Ice Cream.

A French chef, who prepared the dish for the Duc de Chartres in 1774, is said to have made the first ice cream. Lord Bacon was aware of the process of congelation by means of snow and salt, but to him it was a scientific fact of greater or less interest, and he had no idea of the delightful possibilities of this process on various eatables.

Iced drinks and water ices were known to the Parisian epicures a century and a half earlier, the dainties having probably come from the far east by the hand of some traveler who had tested sherbet. The English knew or cared nothing for such artificial refreshment till the present century. Even now they do not regard the "iced pudding" with especial favor.

London, Feb. 29.—The income of the ecclesiastical commissioners from rents in 1903 shows the Church of England's rent roll to be £1,517,000. The chief items are, rent of lands, £262,000; houses in London and the suburbs, £153,000; tithe and corn rent charges, £218,000; mining royalties, £389,000; ground rents, £439,000.

Six Rounds to a Draw.

Philadelphia, Feb. 29.—Tom Sharkey, the sailor, and Jack Monroe, the Butte miner, fought six rounds to a draw in the Second Regiment Armory here Saturday night and Champion Jim Jeffries will have to pick the man he will meet in San Francisco some time before June 1, in a 20-round contest for the world's championship.

JAPANESE FLEET RUSSIAN CAVALRY

First Blockades Vladivostock, Second Compel Japs to Flee.

HORSES SEIZED BY COSSACKS

Gen Linevitch Has Sent a Whole Army Corps of Infantry to Support the Cossacks Across the Yalu River—Japanese Beaten in Several Skirmishes—Nineteen Japs Captured and One Coal Hulk Sunk at Port Arthur.

London, Feb. 29.—Vladivostock has been blockaded by a Japanese fleet since Thursday, according to a Daily Mail despatch from Hakodate, which adds that incoming steamers report Russian cruisers on the east coast of Kinkwasan, in the Bay of Sondai, Japan. Japanese warships have been reported in the vicinity of Vladivostock, but this report of a blockade, although considered probable, has not yet been confirmed from other sources.

Corean Soldiers Beaten By Russians.

Tokio, Feb., 29.—Corean soldiers on the Hamyeng frontier have been attacked and dispersed by Russian troops.

Japs Compelled to Flee.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 29.—A despatch from Liaoyang, dated Feb. 28, says that Chinese on the Yalu River report that an advance guard of Russian cavalry, which has penetrated Corea for a distance of about 200 versts (150 miles) across the river had an encounter with a detachment of Japanese and that the Japanese were compelled to retreat and fled, leaving their horses, which were seized by Cossacks. Gen. Linevitch despatched cavalry and a body of infantry in pursuit with an order to occupy Northern Corea.

Getting in Touch.

London, Feb. 29.—The following official despatch was received at the Japanese legation here: "Tokio Feb. 28.—(9 a.m.)—A number of the enemy's cavalry appeared at a point 700 metres north of Pingyang, Corea. Our infantry firing on them, caused them to retreat."

At Over 1,000 Yards.

Seoul, Feb. 29.—Details of a skirmish at Pingyang last Friday, show that fifty Russian cavalrymen approached the north gate of the Japanese camp and fired at a distance of 1,000 metres. A sharp fusilade took place, and the Russians retired. All foreigners are safe.

Fight News Expected.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 29.—The official announcement by Major-Gen. Pflug, chief of staff to Viceroy Alexieff, that Russian cavalry has crossed the Yalu River, is expected to be followed shortly by news of rather heavy land fighting, as according to seemingly trustworthy reports, Gen. Linevitch has sent a whole army corps of infantry to support the Cossacks, who have penetrated to a point below Anju, and who are reported to have beaten the Japanese in several skirmishes.

PORT ARTHUR NOW QUIET.

Sea Very Rough Sunday Made Attempts to Land Impossible.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 29.—An official despatch, dated yesterday, from Major-General Pflug, Viceroy Alexieff's chief of staff, says:

"The night of Feb. 27 passed quietly at Port Arthur. The enemy's squadron keeps in this vicinity. Reports are coming in of movements of Chinese troops west of the Liao River, and, according to rumors, about 10,000 Chinese troops, under Gen. Ma, are on the road between Tungchu and Choajan. The military guard on the Sinmintu Railway has been reinforced, from 50 to 60 Chinese soldiers having been placed at each place. Our mounted troops have entered Corea, and the attitude of the population is friendly toward us."

There has been no change in the situation here during the past two days. A gale blew from the north yesterday, accompanied by thunder and lightning. The sea is very rough, rendering attempts to land impossible.

Landing Not Confirmed.

Tientsin, Feb. 29.—Chinese officials say that the reported landing of Japanese troops at Possiet Bay has not been confirmed.

Japs in Corea.

London, Feb. 29.—The Times' Chemulpo correspondent, under date of Feb. 27, via Wei-Hai-Wei, via wireless telegraphy, says that the Japanese disembarkations of the last few days were confined to supplies for transports corps and to 4,500 ponies. The total number of troops landed is 20,000, including the twelfth division and a portion of the second division. The guards have not yet arrived. The artillery consists of six batteries, belonging to the twelfth division. Another disembarakation, believed to be on a smaller scale, is occurring immediately south of Haiju, whence the troops will advance parallel to the Pekin road, joining those in the neighborhood of Hwangja, thus effecting a gain of five days on the march. It is supposed, says the correspondent, that 8,000 troops with a few guns, are now advancing beyond Seoul toward Pingyang.

30,000 Russians There.

Paris, Feb. 29.—A despatch from St. Petersburg says that every day and night 5,000 men are traveling toward Port Arthur. The garrison at that point is said now to number 30,000.

Chinese Troops Move.

Pekin, Feb. 29.—Since Feb. 23 four troop trains have left Paotingfu for the northwestern frontier. The last contingent left yesterday on two trains, completing the force of 10,000 men. These troops are all regulars, and their equipment is excellent. They will be replaced by troops from Shantung Province.

Expelled From Port Arthur.

Yinkow, Feb. 29.—Four trains of Russian refugees from points south of Taschischias went north Saturday. One American and two British subjects who were expelled from Port Arthur without being given the right to remove their property declare they were expelled because of alleged relations with newspaper correspondents, which charge, they say, was unjustifiable.

The authorities say that they are justified in expelling all civilians who are not required for defence. The authorities have refused to permit the British Captain Riddell and his ship, Foxton Hall, to sail for Che Foo. It is understood that if the ship is released a Russian skipper will be sent with her for the purpose of preventing intelligence of the Russian operations being given to the Japanese blockaders.

19 JAPS CAPTURED.

One of Their Coal Hulks Sunk—The Russian Retvizan Can't Be Raised.

Yinkow, Feb. 29.—The first reports by eye-witnesses of the engagement at Port Arthur in the early morning of Wednesday last have been received here. They say one Japanese coal hulk was sunk and one was beached near the Retvizan, and that nineteen Japanese in civilian clothes escaped ashore, where they were afterwards captured. The Askold and Bayan approached the Japanese fleet, and then returned, being unable to entice the enemy to engage them. From long range two shells struck in the city.

The Retvizan is serviceable as an auxiliary fort, but the foreign engineer, who has been at work on her, has abandoned the hope of raising her, as the patching on the forty-foot cleft made by a Japanese torpedo has given way, and because the Russian engineers have interfered with the original plans for raising the vessel. The Czarevitch is kept afloat by constant pumping, the Novik has been repaired, and the Pallada has been docked.

Repeated attacks by the Japanese during the past week have resulted in the constant shifting of the troops, including the naval contingent organized from the crews of the disabled and idle warships, to all parts of the defences and also to the hinterland. Refugees arriving here Saturday report that the Russians momentarily fear land invasions of Port Arthur from Pigeon Bay.

One Russian Boat Sunk.

Tokio, Feb. 29.—The official report of the attempt made last Tuesday night to block the entrance of the harbor of Port Arthur reached Tokio last night (Friday). The report was written by Vice-Admiral Kamimura, division commander under Admiral Togo.

The Japanese cruiser squadron discovered two Russian torpedo destroyers at the foot of Lactche Hill and gave chase. One of the destroyers escaped, but the other was pursued into Pigeon Bay, where it was sunk. Vice-Admiral Kamimura reports that the Japanese fleet sustained no damage and did not lose a single man.

Took Three British Ships.

Paris, Feb. 29.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Figaro telegraphs that the Russian cruiser Dmitri Donskoi has captured three steamers flying the British flag, which were taking 15,000 tons of coal to Nagasaki. The Russian cruiser has been in the Red Sea since the war began. The correspondent further assets that Russia's plan for campaign contemplates the retirement of Russian troops without opposing the Japanese landings; and, when sufficient reinforcements arrive, the offensive will be taken and Port Arthur will be relieved.

Mysterious Shot Fired.

Harbin, Feb. 29.—Everything is quiet here and at Pogranstchnaya.

Signals made with red and white lights have been seen on the hills near the Gherountschou line, but they disappear upon the approach of Russian scouts.

It is reported from Nadachi that a Russian sentinel stationed near a small tunnel was fired upon. He returned the shot, but did not hit his man.

Armed persons in disguise have appeared near Datsan, just over the frontier.

Will Wait For Russians in Corea.

Paris, Feb. 29.—The Matin yesterday publishes information which it declares to be reliable, to the effect that the recent Japanese attacks at Port Arthur were preliminary to the execution of a plan which includes the investment of Port Arthur, the repewal of the attack by land and sea until the place is reduced, the occupation of Corea and the erection of fortifications there. The Matin continues, Japan will await operations on the part of the Russians. In any event the Japanese will not venture into Manchuria, but await their adversaries in Corea.

One Jap Was Lost.

Che Foo, Feb. 29.—Japanese soldiers, who landed here Sunday, are from the Jinsen Maru, and the Bushiu Maru, two of the merchant vessels with which Vice-Admiral Togo attempted to block the entrance to Port Arthur on Feb. 24.—Lieut. Saito, commanded the Jinsen Maru, and Lieut. Tarisaki the Bushiu Maru. Each steamer was manned by 30 men, 29 of whom are here. One man of Lieut. Saito's command was killed while lowering a boat on the Jinsen Maru.

Russians Interfering.

Tien Tsin, Feb. 29.—Russians are interfering with the Imperial Railway telegraphs. On Feb. 27 they demanded that they be allowed to read the telegrams received at Tien Tsin station, where the Chinese authorities have now placed a sentry.

The Silence of Togo.

Tokio, Feb. 28.—Lack of details of formations, firing ranges and evolutions prevents a full appreciation of Vice-Admiral Togo's tactics at Port Arthur. Vice-Admiral Togo's reliance on gunnery, however, is fully warranted, by his gunners clearly outshooting the Russians.

200,000 Volunteers.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 29.—Over 200,000 Osetines from the Caucasus have volunteered for service. A locomotive broke through the ice on Lake Baikal and sank near the shore, but no loss of life is reported.

600 Japanese Refugees.

Nagasaki, Feb. 22.—The British steamer Kwangping has arrived here from Chingwantao, on the Gulf of Liaotung, with 630 Japanese refugees, mostly women, from Manchuria. Many of the women claim they were maltreated by the Russian soldiers at Harbin.

Horse Shipment Stopped.

Libau, Russia, Feb. 29.—A shipment of 600 horses was about to be loaded into a steamer here when it was stopped by the authorities. The horses are believed to have been bought by British agents for Japan.

Verasehagin, War Painter, Will Sketch.

Irkutsk, Feb. 29.—The movement of troops on the Trans-Siberian Railroad has attained unprecedented proportions in both directions. Trains going east are filled with troops. All trains from Manchuria are crowded with women and children, and the station here is filled with refugees. The painter, Veraschagin, is going to the front in a few days to make sketches.

Britain's Army Estimates.

London, Feb. 29.—War Secretary Foster's explanatory statement of the army estimates was issued Saturday night. The estimates for the coming year will be $144,500,000, against $172,500,000 last year. The principal reduction is in this year's statements for South Africa, which total $3,070,000. Secretary Forster's estimates make no provision for expenditures in Somaliland, owing to the impossibility of forecasting the duration of operations there. He announces that it has been decided to concede the priority of India in the supply of new pattern rifles and quick-firing equipments for horse and field artillery. The equipment of the whole army will be completed in March, 1907.

Two Years For Machen.

Washington, Feb. 29.—August W. Machen, formerly general superintendent of the free delivery postal service; Dr. George E. Lorenz of Toledo, once postmaster of that city, and Diller B. Groff of this city, all of whom were convicted of conspiracy against the Government in connection with the supply of the Groff fasteners to the postoffice department, Saturday were sentenced by Judge Pritchard to two years imprisonment in the Moundsville, W. Va., Penintentiary, and a fine of $1,000 each. The defendants gave notice of appeal, and were released on $20,000 bond each.

Kruger Slowly Dying.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 29.—A letter received in this city by Gen. Benjamin Viljoen, formerly of the Boer army, announces that former President Paul Kruger of the Boer Republic, is slowly dying as an exile at Mentona, France, and that Dr. Reitz, State Secretary under Kruger, is an exile in Holland, a constant sufferer from nervous prostration. Gen. Viljoen says Kruger's mind is failing, and that he lives in seclusion, rarely conversing with anyone.

Mystery Cleared Up.

Winnipeg, Man. Feb. 29.—The mysterious disappearance of a St. Louis hardware merchant was cleared up here Saturday, when it was learned that Henry E. Meyers, who was found dead in a shanty near Parkdale, Feb. 18, was Henry E. Jasper of St. Louis. Jasper came here last fall for some reason unknown and secured a job as cook, under the name of Meyers, with the Parkdale Lumber Company.

Heaviest Briton Dead.

London, Feb. 29.—The heaviest man in the British Empire died yesterday at Dover from cancer. He was Thomas Longley, a giant, who earned the reputation of being His Majesty's heaviest subject. Longley weighed over 600 pounds was six feet one inch in height and had a chest measurement of 70 inches.

To Save a Russian Jew.

Boston, Feb. 29.—To save a Russian Jew from exile to Siberia, Immigration Commissioner Billings has forwarded to the Russian Consul at New York affidavits to prove that Rachel Snyder has not been murdered by her father, David Snyder.

Reyes By 3 Votes.

Colon, Feb. 29.—Confirmation of the election of Gen. Raael Reyes to the Presidency of Venezuela, by a majority of three electoral votes, has just reached here. It has given rise to the conclusion that Colombia prefers peace to war.

Collingwood Mill Burned.

Collingwood, Feb. 29.—The Northern flour and grist mill was burned to the ground Saturday night at 12 o'clock. It was owned by John Brackenridge and contained 5,000 bushels of wheat and was valued at $10,000.

Loss Will Be a Million.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 29.—It is stated that the loss incurred by the burning of the State capitol buildings Saturday will be $1,000,000, exclusive of the relics. Parts of the buildings may be rebuilt.

Want Duty Reduced.

Sarnia, Feb. 29.—A delegation of Sarnia's citizens will ask the Government to reduce the tariff on American crude oil so as to keep the Canadian refineries going.

Wash Girls to Walk.

Paris, Feb. 29.—Fifteen hundred wash girls have entered for a walking match for a prize of $100.

Legs and Oratory.

In the "Souvenirs de Mme. Recamier" there is a pleasant description of a scene which took place during her exile at Lyons in 1813. Almost every cultivated or fashionable individual who passed through that city was sure to be attracted to her house. Talma, the tragedian, happened to be giving some representations in the Grand theater and was dining with Mme. Recamier when the bishop of Troyes, better known as the abbe of Boulogne, was announced. This celebrated preacher, though devoted to literature and familiar with the works of the great playwrights, had never seen a play performed.

After dinner Talma was persuaded to recite, to the intense gratification of the abbe, parts from his principal roles. In return Talma begged the ecclesiastic to repeat some passages of his sermons. When he had done so, "It is splendid, monseigneur, as far as this," exclaimed Talma, touching the chest of the preacher, "but the lower part of your body is deplorable! Clearly you have never bestowed a thought upon your legs!"

Stanley as a Fighter.

A thoroughly good man was Henry M. Stanley, whom I first met in the Ashanti expedition. No noise, no danger ruffled his nerve, and he looked as cool and self possessed as if he had been at "target practice." Time after time as I turned in his direction I saw him go down to a kneeling position to steady his rifle as he plied the most daring of the enemy with a never failing aim. It is nearly thirty years ago, and I can still see before me the close shut lips and determined expression of his manly face, which, when he looked in my direction, told plainly I had near me an Englishman in plain clothes whom no danger could appall. Had I felt inclined to run away the cool, firm, unflinching manliness of that face would have given me fresh courage. I had been previously somewhat prejudiced by others against him, but all such feelings were slain and buried at Amoaful.—"Lord Wolseley's Recollections."

Irving Improved.

"Now tell me what you can about Ichabod Crane," said the teacher as she took up the "Legend of Sleepy Hollow."

The little pupil described Ichabod's personal appearance and concluded with, "And he carried home the palm that belonged to the parson."

The teacher gasped. "What are you talking about?" she demanded.

"Well, it said so in the book, and I'l find it for you," said the pupil excitedly, and she turned the pages until sh found a certain paragraph which sh triumphantly pointed out. And th teacher read, "It was a matter of n little vanity to him on Sundays t take his station in front of the churc gallery with a band of chosen singers, where in his own mind he completel carried away the palm from the parson."

Umbrellas and Religious Services.

Umbrellas have always been intimately associated with religious services in Catholic churches. They wer introduced in the church services of th Byzantine church, are borne over th host in procession and form part of th pontifical regalia as well as that of cardinal. It is quite likely that the cardinal's hat is derived from the umbrella.

In Italian heraldry a vermilion umbrella in a field argent signifies dominion. The Harleian manuscripts hav at least one drawing of an Anglo-Saxo gentleman whose servant shades hi with a sort of umbrella having a curve handle and evidently not meant t close.

The Tone of Machinery.

Engineers judge of the condition o their machinery by the tone it give out while running. Every engin whether stationary or locomotive, ha a particular tone of its own. The engineer becomes accustomed to tha and any departure from it at once excites a suspicion tnat all is not righ The engineer may not know what i the matter. He may have no ear fo music, but the change in the tone o his machine will be instantly perceptible, will be instantly recognized an will start him on an immediate investigation.

Electricity Among the Japanese.

The Japanese understood electricit as an attractive force, of which the were very secret. The Greeks and R mans also knew something of the ma net as an attractive force known modern science as an electrical attra tion, something like the loadstone the Chinese. They are supposed to ignorant of its popularity, though their secret records there are mention of sacred forces which none but G knew and must not be tampered wi by man.

Proofs of Affection.

She—You don't know what it is love.

He—I don't, eh? Haven't I been every play, read every popular novel the last six months, got into debt hop lessly and cut off my mustache, and for your sake?

Reflex Intimidation.

Eleanor—I've refused Edgar fi times.

Dorothy—Well?

Eleanor—Here's a note saying lends me this lovely diamond ring wear until I accept him.
